PLAINTIFFS' SUGGESTIONS IN SUPPORT OF THEIR MOTION FOR SUMMARY JUDGMENT

TABLE OF CONTENTS

I. INTRODUCTION 1

II. STATEMENT OF UNCONTROVERTED MATERIAL FACTS 5

MSPD's Workloads Are Extraordinarily High, Well Exceeding Any Nationally Accepted Limit. 7

Thanks to Their High Workloads, MSPD Attorneys Are Unable to Advocate for Each Defendant in the Manner that Prevailing Professional Norms Require. 18

MSPD Attorneys Are Forced to Triage Cases, Pitting One Defendant's Interests Against Another's. 20

MSPD's High Workloads Prevent MSPD Attorneys from Performing Even the Most Basic Tasks of Legal Representation. 23

This Inability to Advocate for Defendants Has Dramatic Consequences on the Outcomes of Cases 44

Missouri's Indigent Defense Deficits Have Reached a Crisis Point 47

III. SUMMARY JUDGMENT STANDARD 56

IV. ARGUMENT 56

A. The Uncontroverted Evidence Demonstrates that Missouri's Public Defenders Are So Hamstrung by their Workloads that They Are Unable to Meaningfully Serve as an Adversary to the State, Constructively Depriving Plaintiffs of Counsel. 58

B. There Is No Dispute that MSPD Attorneys Labor Under an Actual and Perpetual Conflict of Interest, Constantly Triaging Cases and Taking Time from One Defendant to Represent Another. 63

C. Plaintiffs Have Produced Uncontroverted Evidence of Specific Deficits in Representation that Render MSPD Attorneys' Representation Unreasonable Under Prevailing Professional Norms. 66

D. Because Plaintiffs Seek Only Injunctive Relief, They Need Only Show a Risk of Prejudice, Which the Uncontroverted Evidence Easily Establishes. 75

E. Defendants Do Not Dispute that Some Plaintiffs Are Denied Counsel Altogether at Critical Stages and that These Deprivations Cannot Be Rectified Without Reductions in Workloads. 77

F. The Sixth Amendment Must Allow for Prospective Relief. 81

G. Plaintiffs Are Entitled to Summary Judgment on Their Claims Under the Due Process Clause, the Missouri Constitution, and Various Missouri Statutes. 84

I. INTRODUCTION

Missouri's indigent defense system is a sinking ship.

The attorneys of the Missouri State Public Defender ("MSPD") are "drowning in cases." Ex. A (Carver Dep.) at 71:25-72:23. Each member of Plaintiffs' putative class (indigent defendants in Missouri who have not yet been convicted and sentenced) must share the attention of her MSPD attorney with, on average, hundreds of other defendants—caseloads that, as one MSPD attorney put it, have "blown all of those [national standards] out of the water." Ex. A at 165:4-17. MSPD's workloads are so high that even if every single one of MSPD's attorneys worked 100 hours per week, with zero time off for vacation, illness, or training, MSPD would still not be able to provide minimally adequate representation to Plaintiffs, as measured by the key metric of prevailing professional norms presented in this case. Ex. B (Missouri State Public Defender Cumulative Caseload Metrics); Ex. R (American Bar Association and RubinBrown, The Missouri Project (2014)) at 23. Infra, ¶¶ 11-43.

As a result, MSPD attorneys do not have the time to perform the most basic tasks of representation. They must triage their cases, knowing that minutes spent interviewing a key alibi witness on one case are minutes taken away from another case, such that they will be unable to visit a client for many months or perform even a perfunctory review of discovery. They must "tread[] water," Ex. C (Hackathorn Dep.) at 73:10-22, taking continuance after continuance while their clients remain behind bars, evidence disappears, and memories fade. And they must negotiate plea agreements essentially blind, with virtually no information about their clients or their clients' cases. The experts in this case all agree that MSPD attorneys fail to live up to the basic expectations of an attorney—and that caseloads are so high that even the most competent attorney could not meet those expectations. Infra, ¶¶ 44-118.

The consequences for indigent defendants are dire. Without adequate investigation, prosecutors have no incentive to offer better pleas. Without consistent client communication, Plaintiffs are forced to make life-altering decisions about their cases without the guiding hand of counsel. And without adequate time to prepare for court hearings and trials, MSPD attorneys leave key defenses and evidence on the table. Infra, ¶¶ 119-123.

In recent months, in the wake of a Missouri Supreme Court opinion disciplining one of their colleagues for failing to meet his professional obligations in part due to his excessive workload, MSPD attorneys have started to take drastic measures to secure their own law licenses, all at the expense of Plaintiffs. Some MSPD offices have instituted "waitlists" for counsel, as though Plaintiffs were seeking admission to a selective college, not standing on their constitutional rights. Other jurisdictions have unilaterally decided not to appoint counsel in whole categories of cases, an effort that one MSPD attorney likened to "tak[ing] an ice cream scoop to the iceberg that sank the Titanic"—"the ship is still probably going to go down." Ex. A at 49:20-50:10. And one judge has even floated the idea of a "pro se felony docket," in which indigent defendants would face off against the State without even an attorney in name. Infra, ¶¶ 124-54.

The evidence for every chapter of this remarkable story is uncontroverted. It shows astronomical caseloads that surpass any nationally accepted measure of an acceptable caseload. Infra, ¶¶ 11-43. It shows that those caseloads hobble MSPD attorneys, rendering them unable to provide meaningful representation and forcing them to ration justice, picking and choosing which clients will receive even pro forma investigation. Infra, ¶¶ 44-118. It shows that this deficient representation leads to worse outcomes for indigent defendants in Missouri, who are deprived of any leverage with which to negotiate with prosecutors and who sit behind bars for weeks, months, or even years waiting their turn for attention from an attorney. Infra, ¶¶ 119-23. And it shows that the situation in Missouri has reached a crisis point, as MSPD attorneys worried about their bar cards turn away the very indigent defendants they are professionally obligated to serve. Infra, ¶¶ 124-54.

Defendants have not adduced any evidence that would undermine these conclusions. They have not deposed Plaintiffs' expert witnesses, produced their own expert witnesses, or supplied any reason to doubt Plaintiffs' experts' conclusions. They have not supplied any alternative to Plaintiffs' measure of prevailing professional norms, a study relying on the judgment of expert criminal defense lawyers in Missouri. They have not elicited any testimony that would call Plaintiffs' deposed witnesses' assertions into question. Named Defendant Michael Barrett has even admitted, time and again, that his office is unable to provide representation to indigent defendants that complies with the requirements of the Constitution. E.g., Ex. G (Barrett Dep.) at 98:19-99:2.

Only systemwide, prospective relief can right the ship in Missouri. Dkt. 69, at 34-37. Any effort to require any one deficient MSPD lawyer to devote more time to a single defendant's case ensures that the same lawyer will shortchange other indigent defendants still further. And the deficiencies in MSPD's representation are clear from the outset of a case, such that waiting until after conviction to right the Sixth Amendment wrong in this context would be to condone an ongoing constitutional violation that is impacting indigent defendants statewide. The safety valve of Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984)—which provides a mechanism for relief, but only on an individual basis and only after a defendant has already been convicted—is simply inadequate to this task, as this Court recognized in denying State Defendants' motion to dismiss. Dkt. 69, at 34-37.

The undisputed evidence in this case entitles Plaintiffs to summary judgment. Specifically:

- System-wide constraints ensure that even where a lawyer is nominally appointed to represent a member of Plaintiffs' class, she is unable to subject the prosecution's case to meaningful adversarial testing, constructively denying indigent defendants their right to counsel. § IV.A.
- Virtually every MSPD attorney operates under an actual and perpetual conflict of interest, triaging cases such that providing constitutionally adequate representation to one client necessarily means providing constitutionally deficient representation to another. § IV.B.
- MSPD attorneys routinely fail to perform the basic functions of representation, including but not limited to interviewing potentially exculpatory witnesses, communicating with defendants about their cases, preparing adequately for a trial or hearing, reviewing discovery in a timely manner, and securing essential expert witnesses. § IV.C.
- Plaintiffs face a serious risk of conviction of a harsher offense or service of a longer sentence as a direct result of MSPD's deficiencies—a risk serious enough to warrant injunctive intervention by this Court. § IV.D.
- New MSPD policies, such as refusing appointments and placing indigent defendants on waitlists until an attorney becomes available, combine to ensure that Plaintiffs are deprived of counsel—both constructively and actually—during critical stages of their criminal cases. § IV.E.

Any one of those showings alone would entitle Plaintiffs to summary judgment on their state and federal constitutional claims.[1] Taken together, the undisputed material facts reveal an alarmingly dysfunctional system for providing representation to indigent defendants in Missouri—a system that the Constitution requires repairing.

[1] For similar reasons, Plaintiffs are entitled to summary judgment on their Due Process Clause, Missouri Constitution, and Missouri statutory claims. See infra, § III.G.

II. STATEMENT OF UNCONTROVERTED MATERIAL FACTS

1. The State of Missouri relies virtually exclusively[2] on local MSPD offices to provide indigent defense services across the State. Ex. D (Missouri Public Defender Commission, Fiscal Year 2017 Annual Report) at 1.
2. MSPD is composed of the Trial Division, at issue in this case and subdivided into 33 district offices; the Appellate/Post-Conviction Division; and the Capital Division. Id.
3. About 52 percent of the Trial Division's cases are felonies. Ex. D at 16-17. The rest are misdemeanors, juvenile cases, probation violation cases, or petitions for release from civil commitment. Id. at 15.
4. Each of the 33 Trial Division district offices serves between one and 11 counties and is headed by a "district defender"—a senior attorney who supervises the other attorneys and support staff. E.g., Ex. D at 17; Ex. E (Crowell Dep.) at 10:4-11.
5. Each of the 33 district offices draws from a single pool of funding, which must be allocated by the Central Office to district offices around the State; each district must make requests to the Central Office for litigation expenses of over $500. Ex. F (Lear Dep. Day 1) at 16:12-24:15; Ex. E at 15:1-21.
6. The uncontroverted evidence in this case comes from three sources.
7. First, Plaintiffs present evidence from 18 depositions.

[2] Ninety-five percent of cases in Missouri in which defendants are indigent are handled by MSPD. Ex. D at 66. The remainder are handled by conflict counsel, who are paid from the same source of funding as MSPD lawyers. Ex. G (Barrett Dep.) at 21:5-24; Ex. F (Lear Dep. Day 1) at 18:11-17.

a. Among Plaintiffs' deponents were 10 district defenders from district offices around the State, including rural,[3] urban,[4] and suburban[5] jurisdictions.

b. Six of the district defenders that Plaintiffs deposed supervise offices that are less overloaded than the median office. Ex. B. Four of those district defenders supervise offices that are more overloaded than the median office. Id. Plaintiffs' uncontroverted facts do not include testimony from attorneys in any of the three most overloaded offices in the State and do include testimony from the head of the least overloaded district office in the State. Id.

8. Second, Plaintiffs present unrebutted expert testimony from three witnesses. Defendants have not identified any expert witnesses, nor did they seek to depose Plaintiffs' experts.

a. Bob Boruchowitz, Professor from Practice and Director of the Defender Initiative at the Seattle University School of Law, led The Defender Association—a public defender in Seattle—for 28 years; has represented criminal defendants at every level of state and federal court; and has led various American Bar Association and Washington State Bar Association committees, including, most recently, the Washington State Bar Association Council on Public Defense. Ex. H (Expert Report of Robert C. Boruchowitz, Oct. 16, 2017) at ⁋⁋ 18-39.

b. Rodney Uphoff is an Emeritus Professor of Law at the University of Missouri School of Law and has taught criminal defense clinics for 30 years. Mr. Uphoff has been active in the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers and the American Bar Association Criminal Justice Section and is a member of the Missouri Supreme Court Criminal Procedure Committee. Ex. O (Expert Report of Rodney J. Uphoff, Oct. 16, 2017) at 1-2.

c. Stephen Gillers is the Elihu Root Professor of Law at New York University School of Law and has spent 39 years teaching, speaking, and writing about the ethical obligations of lawyers; his publications include many editions of a widely used casebook on legal ethics. Ex. P (Expert Report of Stephen Gillers, Oct. 16, 2017) at 1.

9. Finally, Plaintiffs present documentary evidence obtained in discovery and from publicly available sources.

10. Taken as a whole, Plaintiffs' evidence paints a portrait of a dysfunctional public defender—one in which workloads are astronomical, high workloads lead to unreasonably deficient advocacy, and deficient advocacy leads to systemically worse outcomes for indigent defendants.

MSPD'S WORKLOADS[6] ARE EXTRAORDINARILY HIGH, WELL EXCEEDING ANY NATIONALLY ACCEPTED LIMIT.

11. In Fiscal Year 2017, MSPD's Trial Division provided representation on 79,714 new cases, plus 30,611 cases carried over from the previous year. Ex. D at 4.

[6] Plaintiffs distinguish between caseloads, which refer only to the raw number of cases on a public defender's docket, and workloads, which provide a broader and more accurate view of a public defender's competing responsibilities by taking into account the complexity of the cases, the defender's skill and experience, the support services available to the defender, and the defender's other duties, among other factors. Ex. Q (Statement of Interest of the United States, Wilbur v. City of Mt. Vernon, (W.D. Wash. Aug. 14, 2013)) at 9.

12. Of those newly opened cases, 334 were murder or homicide cases, 6,349 were A/B felonies other than sex felonies, 35,284 were C/D felonies other than sex felonies, and 993 were sex felonies. Ex. D at 20.

13. In Fiscal Year 2017, MSPD employed 384 attorneys, 320 of them in the Trial Division. Id.

14. In FY2017, an average MSPD attorney handled 350 cases in total; she would have started the year with 73 felonies pending and had 183 new felonies added to her desk during the year. Ex. D at 21.

15. These workload numbers well exceed, by any metric, the number of criminal cases a public defender can carry while still providing effective representation to each of their clients. Ex. A at 165:4-17 ("[M]y caseload was not in compliance with what I felt like it ought to be with any of our ABA, NAC standards, RubinBrown metric, whatever. I mean, I had kind of blown all of those out of the water.").

    a. The National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals recommends that an attorney carry no more than 150 felonies per year, and no other cases. Alternatively, an attorney may carry 400 non-traffic misdemeanors, 200 juvenile court cases, or 200 Mental Health Act cases per attorney per year, and no other cases. This recommendation has been endorsed by the American Council of Chief Defenders and adopted as a legal limit on workload caps by several states, including New York. Ex. H at ¶¶ 142-91.[7] [7] In recent years, experts in the field have suggested that the National Advisory Commission standards are outdated and fail to account for the added complexities that have been infused into criminal defense practice over the last 40 years. As such, commentators have argued that the caseload recommendations allow for far too many cases. See Norman Lefstein, Securing Reasonable Caseloads: Ethics and Law in Public Defense 43–48 (2011).

b. A 2015 report by Texas A&M University recommended that a public defender carry no more than 77 Felony 1, 105 Felony 2, 144 Felony 3, 174 State Jail Felony, 216 Misdemeanor A, or 236 Misdemeanor B cases. Ex. H at ¶ 186.

16. Over the past 25 years, report after report has found that MSPD's workloads are too high to allow for constitutionally adequate representation. See e.g., The Spangenberg Group, A Report on the Operation of the Missouri State Public Defender (1993); The Spangenberg Group, Assessment of the Missouri Public Defender System Final Report (Oct. 26, 2005); The Missouri Senate Interim Committee, Report of Senate Interim Committee on the Missouri State Public Defender System (January 2007); The Spangenberg Group & Center for Justice, Law and Society at George Mason University, Assessment of the Missouri State Public Defender System (Oct. 2009); National Juvenile Defender Center, Missouri: Justice Rationed (Spring 2013); American Bar Association and RubinBrown, The Missouri Project (2014); U.S. Department of Justice, Civil Rights Division, Investigation of the St. Louis County Family Court, St. Louis, Missouri (July 31, 2015).

17. The "watershed moment" came in 2014, with the release of The Missouri Project, a report drafted by the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on Legal Aid and Indigent Defendants and RubinBrown, a certified public accounting firm. Ex. R.

18. The Missouri Project had two components. First, every attorney employed by MSPD entered time into an MSPD database during the 25-week period. Missouri Project at 16. Time was recorded across eight different types of cases and 19 different types of tasks. Ex. R at 14-15.

19. Second, the study used a well-respected and often-duplicated forecasting process, known as the Delphi method, in order to provide a consensus estimate on the amount of time defense counsel should expect to spend on a case in order to provide representation in accordance with prevailing professional norms. Ex. R at 17-21; Ex. E at 142:18-143:7. The method combined multiple surveys and in-person focus groups with both private and public criminal defense lawyers across the State (including public defenders). Id. Ultimately, the researchers were able to compare the estimates from the Delphi study to the actual hours logged by public defenders during the 25-week period in question. Ex.R at 17-21.

20. The methodology used in The Missouri Project has been widely recognized and replicated. The Texas legislature mandated a similarly structured study be conducted in that State. See http://www.tidc.texas.gov/media/31818/150122_weightedcl_final.pdf. The president of the American Bar Association said, "It can now be more reliably demonstrated than ever before that for decades the American legal profession has been rendering an enormous disservice to indigent defendants and to the criminal justice system in a way that can no longer be tolerated." Id.

21. The results of The Missouri Project were startling. In 97 percent of cases, MSPD attorneys spent fewer (sometimes far fewer) hours than the Delphi panel agreed were necessary to provide minimally adequate representation. Dkt. 1, Exh. 1 (Complaint), Exh. 10 at 2-4.

22. The panel of expert criminal defense attorneys estimated that, to provide adequate counsel, a lawyer would need to spend the following number of hours on each phase of a case of a given type:

	Client Communication[1]	Discovery/Investigation[2]	Case Preparation[3]	Total
Murder/Homicide	34.6	33.5	38.5	106.6
AB Felony	13.1	18.3	16.2	47.6
CD Felony	6.3	8.4	10.3	25.0
Sex Felony	22.5	17.8	23.6	63.8
Misdemeanor	3.5	4.1	4.1	11.7
Juvenile	5.4	6.8	7.3	19.5
Appellate/PCR	20.3	31.5	44.7	96.5
Probation Violation	2.9	2.6	4.2	9.8

23. By contrast, MSPD attorneys spent the following number of hours on each phase of a case of a given type:

	Client Communication[1]	Discovery/Investigation[2]	Case Preparation[3]	Total
Murder/Homicide	14.8	33.5	36.2	84.5
AB Felony	3.0	2.1	3.6	8.7
CD Felony	1.8	0.8	1.7	4.4
Sex Felony	6.0	7.3	12.4	25.6
Misdemeanor	0.9	0.4	0.9	2.3
Juvenile	1.4	1.0	2.1	4.6
Appellate/PCR	3.1	7.5	19.6	30.3
Probation Violation	0.7	0.2	0.5	1.4

Given current workloads, if MSPD were to spend the number of hours per case required to provide adequate assistance per the Missouri Project study, and even assuming every attorney spends 2,080 hours per year just investigating and preparing cases (and no time on, for instance, administrative tasks), MSPD would need a total of 347 additional attorneys to provide representation consistent with the prevailing professional norms in Missouri. Ex. S (Missouri Public Defender Commission, Budget Request Fiscal Year 2019) at 4.

24. According to the Missouri Project estimates of how many hours each case type minimally requires, every district office in Missouri is far over capacity. Ex. B; Ex. T (Missouri Public Defender Commission, Fiscal Year 2018, Draft Legislative Budget Request, Sept. 21, 2016 (Lear Dep. Ex. 33)) at 14. The district offices are operating at between 153 and 340 percent of their capacity. Ex. B. The average MSPD lawyer is operating at 248.5 percent of her capacity. Id.

25. Per the Missouri Project numbers, an individual attorney in a given office might be operating at as much as 500 percent of her capacity, and lawyers are often operating at between 300 and 400 percent of their capacity. Ex. C at 73:2-9; Ex. U (Missouri Public Defender Commission, Fiscal Year 2018, Approved – October 25, 2017, Supplemental Legislative Budget Request, Oct. 25, 2017 (Hackathorn Dep. Ex. 50)) at 7.

26. The Missouri Project estimates are borne out by the real-life experiences of district defenders across the state. District defenders testified that their offices were well over capacity—at least as over capacity as The Missouri Project numbers suggested. E.g., Ex. C at 124:20-125:10; Ex. M at 50:23-52:16 ("sure feels like a lot more than that" when told his office was operating at 253 percent capacity); Ex. L at 34:21-35:8; Ex. II at 34:7-36:5, 47:4-48:8 (agreement with Missouri Project conclusions based on 45 years of experience with public defender system); Ex. Y (Reynolds Dep) at 43:2-45:18; Ex. E at 63:2-7; Ex. A at 159:24-160:9; Ex. L at 35:21-36:8, 188:4-19. Most of the district defenders estimated that they would need to roughly double their current legal staff to effectively handle their workloads. Ex. M at 21:3-12; Ex. C at 131:10-14; Ex. A at 146:7-21; Ex. E at 71:9-22.

27. Using the time estimates given by the Missouri Project study and assuming that MSPD attorneys are able to spend 2,080 hours per year on case-related tasks to calculate the above capacity numbers likely far underestimates how overloaded MSPD district offices are:

    a. First, the Missouri Project numbers do not account for administrative tasks, which could constitute a sizable fraction of a public defender's day, and they assume no attorney (not even the district defenders) spends any time on supervising other attorneys. Ex. A at 63:9-25; Ex. E at 64:1-17; Ex. J at 40:22-43:10; Ex. Y at 27:11-21, 162:4-24, 169:5-12.

    b. Second, a 2,080-hour year assumes no vacation time, no medical leave, no training, and no time spent on non-case duties. Ex. F at 45:15-46:8.

c. That's even though MSPD attorneys, as state employees, are entitled to three weeks per year of vacation time, plus paid holidays. Ex. E at 64:10-12; Missouri State Public Defender, Benefits, http://www.publicdefender.mo.gov/employment/benefits.htm (accessed Feb. 7, 2018).

d. Estimates more in line with what public defenders would be expected to spend on case-related tasks range from 1,662 hours per year (the estimate used by a study for the Massachusetts Committee for Public Counsel Services) to 1,800 hours (one expert's opinion). Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 192-94.

e. Third, the panel of criminal defense attorneys were told to assume "adequate support staff." Ex. R at 39. As several district defenders testified, MSPD does not have adequate support staffing. E.g., Ex. L at 97:10-21, 99:5-22 (insufficient number of investigators and insufficient administrative staff); Ex. E at 71:23-72:19 (office needs at least double the number of investigators to have sufficient support); Ex. C at 132:3-21, 125:4-13 (office needs triple number of investigators and double the support staff); Ex. M at 24:11-21, 25:16-26:13, 27:1-19, 33:3-34:24 (insufficient support staff, including investigators, legal assistants and clerks); Ex. J at 35:6-39:8; Ex. K at 39:22-43:9; Ex. Y at 24:4-23, 29:25-30:19.

f. Fourth, the estimates do not account for MSPD's high turnover rate. For instance, the Area 25 district office's capacity was calculated assuming 14 attorneys; in 2017, 10 of those attorneys were replaced, and each required a ramp-up time until they were carrying a full workload. Ex. E at 64:18-66:1.

g. Fifth, the Missouri Project estimates for each case type struck many MSPD attorneys as too low.

i. To take one example, the Columbia Police Department mandates body camera usage for its police officers. Assuming three officers go out to respond to an average misdemeanor assault, and it takes one hour to clear the case, simply watching the body camera footage should take a reasonable attorney three hours in that type of case. Ex. N at 24:2-16. But the Delphi panel accorded only 4.1 hours to review of discovery and investigation in a misdemeanor case.

ii. The expert panel also gave a time per case estimate assuming one charge—an A/B felony, for instance—and did not account for the fact that many cases feature four, five, or six counts, each of which may require independent investigation. Ex. L at 179:3-180:7.

iii. Finally, District Defender Crowell testified that he was among the least experienced individuals in the Delphi group. Ex. E at 155:9-156:3. Accordingly, the Delphi group's recommendations reflected the time that an experienced attorney would spend on a particular task.

iv. But the MSPD attorneys—on average, less experienced than Crowell, see infra, ⁋⁋ 101-13—would, if anything, require more time per case task than Crowell and his more experienced colleagues.

28. MSPD attorneys must also travel extensively, due to the geographic size of their districts. Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 7, 185, 218-20; Ex. C at 22:4-7, 31:3-18; Ex. E at 38:16-39:4; Ex. M at 14:19-15:4, 18:25-19:6; Ex. I at 15:12-16:12.

29. Until recently, MSPD's policy on handling conflicts exacerbated the travel problem: Where two indigent co-defendants were appointed counsel in one district, an MSPD attorney from a second district would represent one of the co-defendants, to avoid a conflict of interest. Ex. G at 21:5-24.

    a. This necessitated extensive travel not only within geographically large districts, but across several such districts. Id.

    b. Although MSPD currently receives funding to send such cases to private conflict counsel for a flat fee (exclusive of mileage and litigation costs), such funding has been inconsistent and was withheld for two legislative cycles recently. Id.; Ex. F at 19:10-15; Ex. V (Elmer Dep. Day 1) at 21:24-22:5; Ex. J at 12:12-13:11 (does not expect funding to be renewed next fiscal year).

    c. Flat fees range from $375 for a misdemeanor to $10,000 for a first-degree murder case, with an average of $700 per case—nearly twice the amount MSPD spends on each case. Ex. F at 19:10-15; Ex. V at 17:8-16, 76:15-22.

30. Two factors govern MSPD's workloads. The first is the number of prosecutions in Missouri, which determines how many cases MSPD must handle. Missouri has the eighth highest number of prosecutions per capita of any State in the country. Ex. D (unnumbered page, A Message from the Director). The number of prosecutions is to some extent correlated with the number of prosecutors in a given office. Ex. C at 131:2-9.

31. The second is the funding allocated to MSPD, which in turn governs how many attorneys MSPD can hire.

32. In FY17, a total of $42.9 million was allocated to the MSPD, of which $39.4 million was released to the office ($3.5 million was withheld by Governor Nixon). Ex. D at 8.

33. That budget covers salaries, conflict counsel (private attorneys who take on cases where MSPD is representing a codefendant), statewide expenses, litigation expenses (such as expert witness payments, depositions, and so on), and local offices' operating expenses. Ex. F at 16:12-17:13.

34. In total, MSPD spends $325.13 per case in the Trial Division. Ex. D at 13.

35. In FY15, MSPD was 49th out of 50 States in the per capita funding it receives for indigent defense. Ex. W (Missouri State Public Defender System – By the Numbers) at 1.

36. MSPD stretches every dollar it receives, saving money in every conceivable way so as to hire as many MSPD attorneys as possible. Ex. F at 105:20-108:11.

37. MSPD salaries are very low, starting at $39,708, even though many of its lawyers graduate with significant student debt. Ex. D at 7.

    a. A lawyer with 20 years' experience may make only $63,912. Ex. A at 31:2-32:1 ("They could have tried a hundred murder cases, and we'll still pay them $65,000 a year or whatever it is."); Ex. X (Letter from Michael Barrett, Missouri Public Defender, to Hon. Eric Greitens, Governor of Missouri, Mar. 15, 2017) at 1.

    b. MSPD attorney salaries are so low that they lead to high turnover rates, as attorneys quit because they cannot afford to remain public defenders. Ex. II (Lear Dep. Day 2) at 16:13-18, 17:4-8, 24:7-27:24, 29:23-24, 70:8-15; see also infra, ¶¶ 101-13.

    c. For comparison, an elected prosecuting attorney in Missouri is required by state statute to earn $136,402; a District Defender, of equivalent stature in the public defender's office, will earn $79,601. Ex. D at 7.

    d. Given the number of hours MSPD attorneys usually work, one district defender calculated that the salary amounted to $15.00 per hour. Ex. E at 159:6-160:18.

38. The public defenders are incredibly dedicated and resilient. Ex. I at 23:23-24:13; Ex. M at 57:25-58:5. They often work nights and weekends without overtime pay. Ex. L at 32:5-15; Ex. A at 235:22-236:13; Ex. N at 21:8-22. An "alarming percentage" of MSPD's attorneys routinely forfeit their vacation time in order to do more work on cases. Ex. X; Ex. L at 32:5-15. And MSPD has chosen not to extend paid parental leave to its attorneys, because so doing would further exacerbate an "impossible workload burden." Ex. X.

39. MSPD also limits the amount it spends on contracting with private conflict counsel—its rates are so low as to be "kind of a joke." Ex. E at 93:9-15.

40. MSPD keeps its operating expenses to a shoestring.

    a. MSPD's Internet bandwidth is so low that attorneys cannot download and view police videos. Ex. G at 50:5-11.

    b. Many district offices are so loathe to buy new furniture that their chairs and other equipment are filthy from years of overuse. Ex. F at. 107:14-17.

41. MSPD is sometimes forced to save money in ways that harm its clients.

    a. For instance, attorneys are often encouraged to find an expert who is located nearby or who charges less, rather than the best expert for a given case. Ex. C at 47:12-24; Ex. L at 59:11-23.

    b. Sometimes, attorneys, anxious to conserve limited dollars, are encouraged to take depositions only when an investigator cannot interview a witness. Ex. A at 211:25-213:16.

42. As MSPD's comptroller summarized: "You know, we're running with copy machines that are ten years old. We're running with laptops that are seven years old. We hold a lot of things together with spit and glue just to make them last longer. I think public defender mentality is that if it's—if it's not total trash, make do with it. I mean, I'm appalled when I go to some of the offices and they're sitting in chairs that really I want to towel before I sit down. They're that nasty." Ex. F at 107:4-17.

43. Since every office and every lawyer is incredibly overextended, reallocating resources among the 33 MSPD districts would be akin to "rearranging the deck chairs on the Titanic." State ex re. Mo. Pub. Defender Comm. v. Waters, 370 S.W.3d 592, 599 n.10 (Mo. 2012); see also Ex. A at 102:11-103:2 ("Every office is underwater; it's just a matter of how far underwater they are.").

THANKS TO THEIR HIGH WORKLOADS, MSPD ATTORNEYS ARE UNABLE TO ADVOCATE FOR EACH DEFENDANT IN THE MANNER THAT PREVAILING PROFESSIONAL NORMS REQUIRE.

44. Expert testimony establishes that MSPD attorneys routinely represent defendants in a manner that is not professionally competent. Plaintiffs' experts—whose testimony was undisputed—found that MSPD attorneys:

    a. Work "in circumstances such that even where counsel is nominally available, the likelihood that any lawyer, even a fully competent one," could provide effective assistance is small. Ex. H at ⁋ 5; see also Ex. E at 61:2-20; Ex. A at 85:1-21 ("[R]ight now, my knowledge of criminal law on your average day is generally useless because I don't have time to -- I don't have time to pursue it."). They consistently fail to subject the cases against indigent defendants to "meaningful adversarial testing," and their workloads make it impossible to provide constitutionally effective assistance of counsel. Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 6, 131.

b. Operate under an actual and perpetual "conflict of interest because [t]hey can only provide competent representation to some of their existing defendants by neglecting other defendants." Ex. O at 32.

c. Are unable to comply with a variety of professional rules, including MSPD's own guidelines, the American Bar Association standards, ethical norms, and Missouri's Rules of Professional Conduct, violations of which can result in disbarment. Ex. H at ¶¶ 210, 370-71, 396, 428.

d. Admit their inability to consistently provide professionally appropriate representation to defendants. Ex. H at ¶¶ 72, 76-79, 84, 92 (citing letters from district defenders and MSPD publications); Ex. S ("Unfortunately, the Missouri State Public Defender is not currently able to meet many of these standards because it is staffed to handle only a percentage of the total workload assigned to it this last year.").

e. Do not devote enough time to interview defendants, do not conduct necessary investigations, do not prepare sufficiently for hearings and trials, do not conduct sufficient legal research, and do not prepare adequately for hearings. Ex. H at ¶ 212.

45. In short, MSPD attorneys do not consistently provide effective assistance of counsel as required by the Constitution. Ex. O at 31; see also Ex. K at 174:12-24.

46. These failures stem directly from MSPD's high workloads and not from any operational inefficiencies. Ex. O at 31 (failures "stem from the MSPD's systemic deficiencies, which in turn result in Missouri public defenders having insufficient time, too many cases, too few resources, too much travel, and too little supervision to comply with their own Guidelines, the American Bar Association (ABA) Standards, ethical norms, or the Missouri and U.S. Constitutions"); Ex. H at ¶¶ 7, 131 (failures have numerous "structural and systemic causes," primarily "inadequate and inconsistent representation funding" and "excessive workloads"); see also Ex. E at 60:21-61:1; Ex. C at 74:25-75:3; Ex. M at 35:6-16, 54:2-20, 162:5-8; Ex. I at 77:17-21; Ex. A at 104:3-19.

47. The undisputed facts documented below buttress Plaintiffs' experts' conclusions that MSPD's high workloads have had a devastating impact on MSPD's ability to represent indigent defendants across the State.

MSPD Attorneys Are Forced to Triage Cases, Pitting One Defendant's Interests Against Another's.

48. The most immediate consequence of these high workloads is that MSPD attorneys must choose which defendants will receive constitutionally adequate counsel. MSPD attorneys around the State agree that, for them and for other attorneys in their offices, providing the constitutional minimum to one defendant means that another defendant will receive constitutionally deficient representation. Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 174 (MSPD attorneys must "pick and choose" which cases they will spend time on), 198-209; Ex. E at 22:25-23:5, 120:18-121 ("[W]hen you're prioritizing, you're cutting corners"; triage occurs "every day"); Ex. C at 103:11-16 ("doing less on one case so they can do enough on another . . . happens every day"); Ex. M at 177:1-15, 177:22-179:25, 206:3-207:3, 209:9-14; Ex. J at 83:16-85:12, 85:19-86:10 (describing triage as "shortcuts"); Ex. K at 55:1-4; Ex. N at 44:5-9; Ex. I at 44:3-18, 79:20-80:23.

49. Choosing which defendants' cases to pursue fully at the expense of other defendants' cases creates a conflict of interest and is in violation of the ABA and Missouri Rules of Professional Conduct. Ex. O at 32; Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 146, 206-08; see also Ex. E at 30:25-31:7, 91:1-18 ("[E]verything you do is sacrificing time for another client"; requests that waitlist cases be assigned to conflict counsel because accepting these cases would violate ethical rules); Ex. C at 85:3-4; Ex. PP (Missouri State Public Defender Commission, Notice Pursuant to 18 CSR 10-4.010 of Pending Certification of Public Defender Limited Availability, Dec. 20, 2017 (Hackathorn Dep Ex. 52)) at 1 (every attorney in office has workload that creates conflict of interest with existing defendants "because they are forced to choose effective representation of one defendant to the detriment of other defendants"); Ex. K at 55:1-4; Ex. A at 88:4-9; Ex. I at 44:3-18, 79:20-80:23; Ex. BB (Motion to Withdraw Due to Excessive Caseload, Woodham v. Missouri, No. SD35211, Nov. 6, 2017).

50. Attorneys "triage" their cases—that is, decide which clients will receive constitutionally adequate assistance at any given moment—in different ways.

    a. In some offices, attorneys focus on preparing cases that are going to trial, while entirely ignoring their other cases in the meantime. Ex. C at 58:18-59:2, 59:3-60:1, 103:6-10; Ex. E at 120:4-17; Ex. H at ¶ 293 (attorneys must choose between preparing for trial and conducting regular jail visits).

    b. In other offices, defendants charged with more serious crimes, like rape and murder, are "neglected"—"the defendants don't get visited, discovery doesn't get reviewed"—in favor of defendants charged with low-level felonies. Ex. Y at 31:1-32:6.

    c. And in still other offices, district defenders, in an effort to avoid violating their ethical obligations by assigning line attorneys more cases than those attorneys can competently handle, take on enormous workloads, even though they will not be able to do any work on the vast majority of those cases. Ex. A at 74:4-12, 103:21-104:2, 140:3-24 ("As between all of us practicing ineffectively or just me, I'd rather it just be me."); see also Ex. E at 12:9-15; Ex. M at 44:1-21 (caseload of 400, ranging from speeding cases to murder cases; not realistic to give to other attorneys in office because of inexperience); Ex. I at 48:4-10, 59:15-60:18, 74:14-75:3.

51. Though every office handles their case overload differently—there are no rules or policies about how to triage cases, see Ex. M at 207:4-209:14 ("[b]y definition, triage is without any rules, so there's no policies")—every office must cut corners as to some defendants' cases if they want to ensure that other defendants receive adequate representation. This "Catch 22" puts MSPD attorneys in the untenable position of robbing Peter to pay Paul, stealing hours they should spend on one defendant's case for another defendant's. E.g., Ex. A at 170:6-171:14; Ex. E at 120:18-121:1; Ex. M at 177:1-15, 206:3-209:8.

52. As one of Plaintiffs' experts noted, the use of the word "triage" to describe day-to-day practice in Missouri is "jarring"—"triage" is a word more appropriately reserved for the battlefield than for the constitutional guarantee of the assistance of counsel. Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 206, 208-09; see also Ex. M at 177:22-179:25 (comparing triage in office to "a MASH unit").

53. MSPD attorneys have been engaging in these sorts of triage efforts for decades. Ex. AA (The Spangenberg Group & Center for Justice, Law and Society at George Mason University, Assessment of the Missouri State Public Defender System, Oct. 2009) at 8 (2009 report that high workloads "require[] public defenders to divvy effective legal representation to a narrowing group of clients" and individual public defenders are "forced to choose among clients as to who will receive effective legal assistance"). More recently, several attorneys and offices, rather than violate their ethical duties to avoid conflicts of interest, have filed motions to withdraw from cases, turned down new cases, or reported themselves to the Office of the Chief Disciplinary Counsel, the agency of the Missouri Supreme Court charged with investigating misconduct by lawyers. Ex. A at 165:4-17 (self-reported to Office); Ex. K at 117:16-118:18 (self-reported to Office); Ex. BB; Ex. CC (Letter from Justin Carver, Missouri Public Defender, to Office of the Chief Disciplinary Counsel, Oct. 30, 2017); see also infra, ¶¶ 124-54.

54. MSPD is not forced to triage because attorneys are inefficient. Ex. O at 32 (former Air Force officer and MSPD attorney explained that applying efficiency skills learned in military service did not make a dent in workload). Instead, triaging is a product of multiplication: By any measure, MSPD attorneys have more cases than they can provide minimally adequate assistance on, so even the most efficient attorney would have to triage cases with MSPD's workload. See supra, ¶¶ 11-43, 48-54.

MSPD's High Workloads Prevent MSPD Attorneys from Performing Even the Most Basic Tasks of Legal Representation.

55. As both Plaintiffs' experts and MSPD attorneys from around the State testified, MSPD attorneys are routinely unable to engage in the basic functions of representation, lacking the time to communicate with defendants, investigate cases, review pretrial discovery, or file motions. They negotiate and advise defendants on pleas with virtually no information about their clients or cases, and on the rare occasions when they go to trial, they are unable to adequately prepare. They are unable to even be present at key stages of the trial process, let alone get ready for those key stages. Coupled with a lack of training and supervision, and massively high turnover, these failings ensure that indigent defendants do not receive representation that accords with prevailing professional norms. In each instance, deficits in representation exist across the class and are directly traceable to the high workloads.

56. Defendant Communication: MSPD attorneys and expert witnesses agree that public defenders in Missouri are unable to communicate with their clients to the extent each case necessitates. Ex. H at ¶¶ 94, 291-301; Ex. E at 22:10-23:5, 27:20-28:9, 28:17-20, 76:14-77:4; Ex. C at 23:9-24:5, 35:22-24, 132:22-133:4; Ex. M at 81:5-11, 82:25-83:3, 83:12-16; Ex. K at 61:5-62:3; Ex. A. at 78:22-79:11, 183:9-24; Ex. Y at 62:11-13; Ex. J at 83:2-8.

57. Indigent defendants routinely go many days after they are assigned a public defender without meeting their attorney.

    a. MSPD's guidelines state that each attorney should meet with her assigned defendant within seven days if the defendant is in custody—a number that one district defender noted was significantly higher than what he would want were he being represented. Ex. E at 76:14-77:4 ("The idea that I could be sitting in jail for seven days and not be – not see an attorney, that's crazy. That's absolutely crazy, but that's what we have accepted as okay."); Ex. V (Elmer Dep. Day 1) at 102:1-11.

    b. Nevertheless, MSPD attorneys routinely violate the seven-day rule, waiting longer than a week to meet with most of their clients. Ex. C at 26:14-24; Ex. E at 76:14-77:4; Ex. H at ¶ 294 (rarely saw within 7-10 days).

    c. Many MSPD attorneys do not meet with defendants prior to key preliminary hearings. Ex. C at 19:21-20:4.

    d. In some cases, more than a month will lapse before an MSPD attorney finally meets her client. Ex. Y at 58:6-12 (six weeks); Ex. DD (Appraisal Form for Dawn Calvin, Nov. 7, 2016 (Hackathorn Dep. Ex. 48)) at 1 (102 days).

    e. Sometimes, these initial meetings take place in or just outside of a courtroom right before a hearing. Ex. E at 22:10-24; Ex. I at 37:22-38:13; see also Ex. M at 69:9-72:14 (because more hearings are occurring by video, attorneys lose even in-court opportunities to communicate with clients).

f. In some counties, no initial meeting ever takes place if a defendant is not in custody. Ex. C at 18:1-13.

58. After the initial meeting, MSPD attorneys are unable to communicate with their clients with any degree of regularity.

a. Although MSPD's guidelines require attorneys to meet with their clients every 30 days, very few attorneys in the MSPD system are able to do so. Ex. C at 26:10-24; Ex. EE (Email from Joel Elmer to Service List, Oct. 13, 2002 (Petsch Dep. Ex. 1)); Ex. Y at 59:18-60:9 (difficult to meet even every 60 days); Ex. E at 76:14-77:4; Ex. H at ¶¶ 295, 301; Ex. V at 111:7-16.

b. Many offices have decreased their expectations, such that attorneys are required to meet with their clients less frequently than every 30 days, but MSPD attorneys still have trouble complying. Ex. C at 14:13-15:1, 37:10-22; Ex. Y at 164:22-165:13.

c. Gaps of between three and 13 months between communications are routine, and in egregious cases, a defendant may wait three or four years with no word from her attorney. Ex. FF (Performance & Issues Entry Form, Mar. 2, 2017 (Hackathorn Dep. Ex. 49)) at 1; Ex. C at 37:23-38:4; Ex. Y at 87:8-88:3, 88:13-89:24; Ex. A at 71:25-72:23, 74:13-76:19, 77:12-78:21 (one indigent defendant sat in jail for three years with no contact from attorney; another sat in jail for four years with only one attorney contact, then had his case dismissed after five years and nine months of custody).

59. Even when MSPD attorneys do communicate with their clients, they are not always able to do so confidentially.

a. Sometimes, MSPD attorneys are forced to talk to their clients in courthouses or courtrooms. Ex. Y at 88:13-89:24; Ex. E at 22:10-24.

b. Sometimes, MSPD attorneys must visit their clients in jails that do not have private, soundproof rooms. Ex. E at 24:25-26:4 (visitation rooms in Phelps and Dent counties are private only if both parties whisper; in Pulaski County, visitation is by phone, which may be recorded); Ex. L at 44:12-45:18 (one jail has visitation rooms where either defendant or attorney can be heard; another places a correctional officer within earshot of attorney-client conversation); Ex. O at 23.

60. Perhaps as a result, MSPD attorneys' communications with their defendants tend to be perfunctory.

a. Though experts recommend at least one hour for an initial interview with a new client, MSPD attorneys rarely spend that time (and, in fact, would not have time to do such an interview with each defendant even if they did nothing else). Ex. H at ¶¶ 91, 94 (noting that MSPD attorneys spend, on average, only .9 hours in total on defendant communication, including an initial interview, in a misdemeanor case); Ex. E at 27:20-28:9; Ex. DD at 2; Ex. M at 102:8-104:11.

b. Conversations are often snatched in the back hallway of a courthouse or the back of a courtroom. Ex. E at 22:10-24; Ex. I at 37:22-38:13; see also Ex. M at 69:9-72:14 (because more hearings are occurring by video, attorneys lose even in-court opportunities to communicate with clients).

c. Even those courthouse conversations may not be with the same attorney each time; because MSPD attorneys frequently cover each others' pretrial appearances, a defendant's appointed lawyer may not meet her until shortly before trial. Ex. H at ¶ 296.

d. One former MSPD attorney noted that, in private practice, he will spend more time on a free consultation for someone who is not yet his client than he spent at MSPD on interviews with his actual clients. Ex. H at ¶ 298.

e. Qualifying contacts—actual, substantive conversations that do not take place in a courtroom—do not occur in all MSPD cases. Ex. E at 28:13-20 (qualifying contacts in only 25 percent of cases); see Ex. C at 36:21-37:1 (defining "qualifying contact").

61. These deficits in defendant communication are largely due to MSPD attorneys' workloads. Ex. Y at 165:7-13; Ex. E at 27:5-28:9, 76:14-77:4; Ex. J at 47:9-51:5, 83:2-8; Ex. A at 71:25-72:23.

62. Because many defendants are incarcerated, a single visit takes far longer than if a defendant were able to come to the MSPD office to meet with her attorney.

a. MSPD attorneys must work around jails' and prisons' limited hours of operation. Ex. Y at 63:16-64:6; Ex. C at 23:8-24:5.

b. In some cases, the only confidential spaces available are difficult to schedule. Ex. C at 22:10-20; Ex. M at 102:8-104:11.

63. MSPD attorneys' inability to communicate consistently with defendants negatively impacts those defendants' cases because MSPD attorneys are unable to build trusting relationships and therefore cannot get information that may be crucial to making informed decisions about how to litigate a defendant's case. Ex. C at 132:22-133:13; Ex. K at 62:4-12; Ex. A at 71:25-72:23, 77:12-78:21; Ex. Y at 59:17-60:9, 62:2-64:6; Ex. H at ¶¶ 291-301; Ex. I at 81:22-82:21, 83:2-8.

64. Investigation: Across the State, MSPD attorneys confirm that only a fraction of their cases receive any investigation at all, let alone meaningful investigation. Ex. E at 28:21-29:22 (attorneys in district conduct adequate investigation in less than 25 percent of cases); Ex. Y at 69:13-71:23; Ex. C at 41:17-24, 48:3-6 (attorneys in district investigate in "around maybe ten percent" of cases); Ex. K at 69:14-71:3; Ex. O at 28-30; Ex. H at ¶¶ 15, 305-315 (MSPD attorneys "rarely investigate the facts in their cases"); Ex. Y at 59:17-71:5; Ex. I at 83:9-15.

65. Misdemeanors and low-level felonies rarely receive any investigation, and virtually all investigation ceases when defendants show any willingness to plead guilty. Ex. O at 28-29; Ex. K at 88:9-18, 93:5-19. See also Ex. B, at 23-24 (finding that MSPD attorneys spend only 0.4 hours on all investigation and discovery for misdemeanor cases, 0.2 hours for probation violations, and 0.8 hours for C/D felonies, in each case less than one-tenth of the recommended number of hours; spend 2.1 hours, less than one-eighth the recommended time, on investigation and discovery in A/B felonies; and spend less than half the recommended time on discovery and investigation in sex felonies and juvenile cases).

66. Ultimately, MSPD attorneys rely largely on the prosecution's version of events to shape their defense strategy and rarely have the time or resources to call that recitation of the facts into question. Ex. N at 14:17-15:3 ("We rely almost entirely on police reports and body cam videos that are provided to us to conduct an investigation or, at least, to steer it in the way we want it to go."); Ex. L at 54:21-55:3 (MSPD identifies witnesses not mentioned in police report in only 25 percent of cases that go to trial).

67. Experts confirm that MSPD's slapdash investigatory efforts are well below prevailing professional norms. Ex. O at 28-30; Ex. H at ¶¶ 305-315.

68. MSPD attorneys rarely have time to even identify what investigation needs to be done.

a. Attorneys do not have enough time to talk in any depth with their clients, meaning that defendants are unable to supply leads regarding key witnesses and evidence. Supra, ⁋⁋ 56-63; Ex. Y at 173:23-174:8.

b. They do not have the bandwidth to issue spot and identify evidence that ought to be collected. Ex. E at 23:6-24:9, 28:25-29:15.

c. Sometimes, they are too busy to even supply enough detail to request the necessary investigation from staff investigators. Ex. Y at 173:23-174:8.

69. Even when MSPD attorneys can identify what investigation needs doing, they are rarely able to actually conduct that investigation. Ex. A at 73:17-23("[E]ven when I can get to talk to a client, commonly, I will identify work that needs to be done on the case, investigation, things to pursue. Actually doing it is a whole other matter.").

a. Witnesses—even witnesses specifically identified by the defendant, and even complaining witnesses—routinely go uninterviewed. Ex. L at 54:21-55:3 (complaining witness interviewed 30 percent of time; other witnesses, less than 30 percent); Ex. C at 42:18-43:14; Ex. N at 14:17-15:3; Ex. K at 64:13-65:7; Ex. M at 84:19-85:21; Ex. GG (Performance & Issues Entry Form, Mar. 13, 2017); Ex. Y at 59:17-71:5.

b. Crime scenes are rarely visited. Ex. L at 54:18-20 (crime scene visited in fewer than 20 percent of cases); Ex. K at 67:16-68:9; Ex. N at 14:17-15:3; Ex. M at 84:19-85:21; Ex. Y at 59:17-71:5; Ex. O at 29.

c. Depositions, to which defendants are entitled by right in Missouri, are rarely taken, even when the case demands it; in particular, this means police conduct is rarely questioned. Ex. M at 87:20-90:7; Ex. K at 65:8-67:14; Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 281, 314-15 (one former MSPD attorney "can count on one hand" the number of depositions she took in 3.5 years); Ex. O at 30; Ex. A at 243:3-25; Ex. C at 47:25-48:6 (depositions in roughly 10 percent of cases); Ex. L at 56:18-23, 195:24-196:21.

d. And mitigating evidence is virtually ignored, even though such evidence may make the difference between probation and a long term in prison. Ex. O at 30; Ex. N at 28:4-29:3; Ex. E at 55:15-57:18 (consulted with mitigation expert twice in career).

70. On the rare occasion where an MSPD attorney is both able to identify the need for investigation and has the time to perform the requisite investigation, the investigation is often too late to be of use. Ex. O at 29.

a. Surveillance videos, for example, are often deleted before attorneys can secure and review them. Ex. Y at 29:7-22; Ex. A at 121:16-123:9.

b. Witnesses become less credible the later they are interviewed. Ex. M at 87:7-19. Depositions are most effective when a witness' memory is fresh, but MSPD attorneys rarely have time to do depositions until a month or two before a trial date. Ex. C at 48:7-19; Ex. Y at 67:14-68:11.

c. Sometimes, witnesses become unavailable before they can be interviewed. E.g., Ex. I at 92:16-93:5.

d. Physical evidence, such as blood, can deteriorate to the point where it is no longer testable or becomes stale. Ex. A at 121:16-123:9; Ex. N at 50:1-3.

e. And sometimes, a witness is interviewed too late to be called at trial—with devastating consequences. Ex. H at ⁋ 286 (describing incident where MSPD attorney did not interview alibi witness until morning of trial and was not allowed to call witness; defendant sentenced to life without parole).

71. Attorneys also do not have the requisite support staff to whom they can delegate investigative tasks. Ex. J at 35:6-39:8; Ex. Y at 21:17-22, 22:18-20, 27:22-29:6, 171:9-14; Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 309-310. Across the State, attorneys must either "get in line" to utilize investigators, Ex. M at 27:1-19, 33:4-34:24, or else the office's policy limits those cases on which investigators are able to work, Ex. Y at 171:9-14.

72. In Plaintiffs' expert's undisputed opinion, the rate of expert usage at MSPD is "far too low." Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 316, 323-336; see also Ex. L at 195:24-196:21; Ex. V at 37:6-38:11 (availability of funds affects expert witness usage).

73. Because MSPD attorneys are unable to identify key investigative points or conduct investigation early in a case, they are also unable to utilize expert witnesses, because they do not recognize the utility of an expert until too late in a case, because they do not have the time to find an expert or to gather salient evidence to present to an expert witness, or simply because they do not have the travel time to work with an expert. Ex. M at 28:9-15, 28:23-29:6, 213:11-214:10; Ex. C at 45:12-23 (no expert request except in most complicated cases); Ex. A at 185:19-186:7, 244:7-20, 245:2-5; Ex. E at 34:17-35:9; Ex. J at 89:6-19; Ex. K at 71:22-73:7, 74:11-19; Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 283, 318-321.

74. Discovery Review: Expert witnesses who have reviewed the evidence and public defenders around the State agree that MSPD attorneys are unable to review discovery to the extent each case requires and that this inability is directly traceable to a lack of time. Ex. A at 185:6-18; Ex. L at 61:22-62:15; Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 200, 212, 251, 280, 427; Ex. O at 29; Ex. M at 93:21-94:1; Ex. Y at 186:23-188:25.

75. In some offices, attorneys are not able to file even basic requests for discovery in a timely fashion. See, e.g., Ex. C at 54:22-56:1, Ex. FF at 2.

76. Even in offices where discovery is routinely requested, attorneys are sometimes unable to file follow-up motions to obtain missing documents, generally limiting their discovery practice to a "one-time, formal boilerplate request." Ex. O at 29; see Ex. E at 31:11-13 (discovery-related motions are "rarely" filed).

77. Even when attorneys obtain complete discovery, they are rarely able to review it in any depth, let alone to issue-spot and track evidentiary leads in a way that would allow development of a robust defense. Ex. C at 43:18-45:3 (95-99 percent of the time, pretrial discovery in misdemeanor or probation violation cases is being reviewed on the day of the hearing; C or D stealing or tampering offenses are given "one quick reading and that's about it"); Ex. L at 60:24-61:9 (attorneys do not have time and resources to obtain and review discovery in the manner each case requires).

78. And even when discovery is reviewed carefully, it is often not reviewed until late in the life cycle of a case, too late to file suppression motions, for instance, or to use the discovery as a basis for a trial defense. Ex. A at 118:12-18 ("On my desk, I've got a stack of CDs and DVDs that have been sitting there for a couple of weeks; haven't looked at them, don't know what's in them. Not going to have a chance to look at them anytime soon. I mean, any of the substantive legal work that I should be doing, right now, there isn't time to get it done."); Ex. Y at 73:6-20 (attorneys worry they plead defendants to charges without adequately reviewed discovery); Ex. O at 29 (conversely, attorneys who wait to fully review discovery before pleading defendants often consign defendants to unnecessary jail time); Ex. K at 79:6-82:4 (suppression motions may not get filed because review of discovery that could reveal suppression issues is untimely); Ex. L at 146:14, 147:4-23 (MSPD attorneys must routinely continue cases because they have not reviewed discovery); Ex. H at ¶¶ 319, 321 (discovery materials are often reviewed on "the eve of trial" and don't allow MSPD attorneys time to hire an expert witness).

79. Legal Research and Motions Practice: Experts and district defenders around the State agree that MSPD attorneys should be doing far more legal research and filing far more pretrial motions than their workload currently allows. Ex. C at 50:24-51:13, 52:20-53:10 (attorneys in district file pretrial motions in only 10 percent of cases); Ex. FF at 2; Ex. M at 106:20-108:9; Ex. A at 186:8-22; Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 302-04.

80. Where pretrial motions are filed, they are usually boilerplate motions with little case-specific information or motions that rely on an attorney's experience, rather than legal research. Ex. C at 50:24-51:13, 52:20-53:10; Ex. E at 40:5-41:1.

81. Time constraints are the primary reason so few pretrial motions are filed. Ex. C at 51:6-13; Ex. E at 40:22-41:1, 42:18-28; Ex. M at 106:20-108:9; Ex. K at 79:6-82:4.

- a. Because MSPD attorneys don't have time to investigate cases or review discovery, they often do not learn of the facts that should trigger, for instance, a motion to suppress. Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 305-306, 310-15.
- b. Even where MSPD attorneys identify the need for a pretrial motion, they sometimes do not have time to draft the motion. Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 302-04.
- c. And even where MSPD attorneys are able to draft motions, they frequently do not have time to do the legal or factual research to support such motions. Ex. C at 50:24-51:13, 52:20-53:10.

82. Plea Negotiations and Counseling: MSPD attorneys are unable to either negotiate pleas or counsel defendants on whether to accept pleas in the manner each case demands. Ex. C at 60:17-20, 61:24-62:2; Ex. E at 49:23-51:19; Ex. A at 187:7-21; Ex. H at ⁋ 8; Ex. O at 27.

83. A defendant's plea offer will often improve if an attorney investigates a case, helps the defendant obtain pretrial release, asks a social worker to assess sentencing alternatives, and communicates adequately with a defendant—all tasks MSPD attorneys rarely have time to do. Ex. A at 187:22-188:13; Ex. H at ¶ 16; Ex. O at 29.

84. First, because MSPD attorneys have not spoken with defendants about their cases and have not adequately investigated those cases, they have very little leverage and give prosecutors very little reason to fear going to trial. Ex. C at 61:24-62:2; Ex. H at ¶¶ 97, 279; Ex. Y at 145:6-21.

85. Defendants who remain in custody have even less leverage, as they must remain behind bars until trial, meaning that a failure to get a defendant out of custody may result in her taking an inappropriately harsh plea deal. Ex. H at ¶¶ 8, 168, 272; Ex. I at 92:16-93:5 ("[E]motionally, it's not good for the clients to have these cases hanging over their heads for long periods of time.").

86. Second, absent sufficient information about a case, a trusting relationship with a defendant, and the time to talk a defendant through the consequences of a plea, plea counseling is ineffective; high workloads foreclose MSPD attorneys from having any of those three prerequisites. Ex. C at 24:6-25:17, 60:17-20 ("The majority of our clients are uneducated. A lot of them have difficulty reading and writing. Many of them have mental health issues. It takes so much more time to explain complex legal matters to them. Sometimes you need to reexplain, reexplain, and reexplain to them, and they deserve that kind of attention and they do not – they do not get it."); Ex. H at ¶¶ 94, 136, 313; Ex. O at 6, 24, 30.

a. In particular, MSPD attorneys do not have the time to identify and make sure their clients understand the collateral consequences of a plea deal. Ex. N at 49:7-25; Ex. C at 24:6-25:17; Ex. O at 27, 30.

b. Because MSPD attorneys do not have time to acquire immigration expertise, consult with immigration experts, or even identify which of their clients may have immigration status concerns, MSPD attorneys frequently cannot adequately counsel defendants as to the immigration consequences of a plea agreement. Ex. C at 63:23-64:11; Ex. E at 53:8-55:11; Ex. A at 187:22-188:13, 188:20-24; Ex. H at ¶ 97.

87. This deficient representation during plea agreements is compounded by the fact that MSPD attorneys must plead out the vast majority of their cases, as they do not have the bandwidth to take many cases to trial. Ex. N at 49:7-25; Ex. H at ¶¶ 14, 287-90; Ex. C at 56:2-57:2, 122:16-123:4; Ex. E at 40:1-44:16; Ex. J at 90:13-19, 92:1-16; Ex. K at 82:5-19. One percent of MSPD's cases go to trial, as compared to six percent of state-court cases nationwide. Ex. G at 43:13-18; Missouri v. Frye, 132 S. Ct. 1399, 1407 (2012).

88. Preparation for trial and hearings: As a result of high workloads, MSPD attorneys are unable to prepare for trials and hearings in the manner those court appearances warrant. Ex. C at 57:3-12; Ex. E at 46:21-47:1 ("not enough hours in the day"); Ex. K at 83:23-84:1; Ex. M at 116:6-117:10 (there may be outlier trials for which an attorney is prepared, but that preparation comes at the detriment of all other defendants); Ex. A at 186:23-187:6.

89. The sheer number of cases that MSPD attorneys must prepare for trials or other hearings—even if those cases wind up in plea agreements before the court appearance—would alone foreclose adequate preparation. Ex. L at 69:2-21, 92:12-19 (prepared 20 felony cases for trial and tried 18); Ex. H at ⁋ 203 (one MSPD defender's eight weeks of back-to-back jury trials required extensive triage.).

90. On top of the cases that are set for trials or hearings, of course, MSPD attorneys must juggle hundreds of other court appearances and client meetings, meaning that one or the other will get neglected. Ex. C at 57:3-12; Ex. M at 116:6-117:10; Ex. L at 69:2-21.

91. MSPD attorneys attempt to ameliorate this dilemma by taking continuance after continuance; at a certain point, however, continuance motions become ineffective, as MSPD attorneys worry about the time expenditure of preparing a continuance motion or about how much longer they can shortchange their other cases. Ex. M at 100:6-101:10; Ex. N at 30:19, 30:23-31:17; Ex. E at 37:17-38:15.

92. MSPD attorneys spend very limited time preparing a direct and cross examination, an opening and closing statement, or voir dire. Ex. E at 47:2-18.

93. However little time they spend preparing themselves for trial, MSPD attorneys spend even less time preparing their clients for trial, sometimes preparing a defendant to testify in just one conversation. Ex. C at 58:5-17.

94. Even with adequate time to prepare before a trial or hearing, however, MSPD's cases suffer from pretrial investigative deficits:

a. By the time MSPD attorneys are preparing for trial, they should have completed all their investigation and depositions. Ex. E at 47:2-18. But because of their caseloads, they are unlikely to have done so. See infra, ⁋⁋ 64-73.

b. And the deficits in investigation described supra mean that MSPD attorneys are hamstrung at trial—they can't do an effective cross-examination because they haven't gathered impeachment evidence, or they must overcome inadmissible and prejudicial evidence because they haven't filed motions to suppress in time. Ex. O at 30.

95. In some districts, these failures of preparation are still more acute in less serious cases. Ex. C at 79:22-80:5 (for misdemeanor and probation violation defendants, no "real attention"; "basically a warm body in there making an off-the-cuff argument").

96. Absence at Key Stages: Public defenders in Missouri are routinely absent during important stages of their clients' proceedings. Ex. H at ⁋ 8; Ex. J at 54:25-55:25; Ex. E at 18:10-18, 19:10-20; Ex. M at 64:21-66:25.

97. MSPD attorneys often are not appointed until after a defendant is brought before a judge for the first time. They miss counsel status hearings, bond hearings, and arraignments. Ex. J at 54:25-55:25; Ex. L at 51:7-18; Ex. E at 18:10-18, 19:10-20; Ex. J at 52:10-53:5; Ex. K at 49:24-52:9; Ex. A at 182:3-183:4; Ex. H at ⁋⁋ 271-76.

98. The consequences of being unrepresented at these initial appearances can be significant for defendants:

    a. Sometimes, defendants waive defenses available to them, such as the right to a change of venue or the right to remain silent. Ex. M at 64:21-66:25; Ex. E at 18:18-19:20.

    b. Even where a defense is not waived as a procedural matter, a defense may be effectively waived by the passage of time, as witnesses disappear and memories go stale before an attorney is appointed to a case. E.g., Ex. M at 64:21-66:25; Ex. A at 79:1-80:24, 81:13-17, 82:8-14; Ex. N at 50:1-3; Ex. I at 89:16-90:5.

c. In egregious cases, defendants will even plead guilty before seeing an attorney—a phenomenon that has become more common since the implementation of waitlists. See infra, ⁋⁋ 124-54; Ex. E at 18:18-19:20; Ex. A at 123:20-124:11.

d. Since the institution of the waitlists, defendants sometimes must attend court hearings before an attorney is assigned to their case. Infra, ⁋⁋ 124-54; Ex. C at 92:23-93:7.

e. Defendants will sometimes say things in open court that they should not have and that will hamstring their case at a later date. Ex. E at 14:24-15:11.

f. Without an attorney to advocate for them, defendants are often detained pre-trial or face exorbitant bond requirements. Although such detention could theoretically be remedied in some cases by a bond reduction motion, MSPD attorneys rarely have time to seek such a remedy, thanks to their high caseloads, and even where they do seek such a remedy, they don't have time to paint a full picture about a client's flight risk by interviewing family members, gathering records, and so on. Instead, MSPD attorneys often just make "very quick off-the-cuff arguments" and "just a paragraph that kind of references the law." Ex. C at 133:14-134:14; Ex. E at 44:17-45:20, 46:11-47:18; Ex. M at 76:25-77:3, 78:18-79:5; Ex. J at 56:1-58:3.

99. Even after an MSPD attorney is appointed to a case, she may not have time to attend all of the important proceedings that comprise a criminal case.

a. In some districts, attorneys do not attend all psychiatric evaluations. Ex. M at 142:11-13.

b. In other districts, attorneys do not attend crucial interviews that will produce sentencing recommendations. Ex. M at 145:14-147:24; Ex. L at 73:5-20.

c. In juvenile cases, MSPD attorneys do not attend lineups, and MSPD attorneys are not assigned counsel for the period between certification of a juvenile as an adult and their first appearance, even though that time period is crucial for investigation. Ex. JJ (Johnson Dep.) at 129:25-130:16.

100. In order to continue moving caseloads, judges sometimes force whole categories of defendants to proceed without counsel at any phase of their trial. In Cole County, for instance, there is an unwritten rule that criminal nonsupport cases—for which a defendant might face between four and seven years in prison—do not get assigned counsel because the judges are wary of further overburdening MSPD. Ex. A at 51:10-52:3, 59:13-60:22, 60:23-61:2.

101. Turnover, Training, and Supervision: MSPD has unusually high turnover that is due primarily to massive caseloads and low salaries. Ex. II at 16:13-18, 17:4-8, 29:23-24 (exit interviews always focus on caseloads and salary); Ex. V at 92:13-93:5; Ex. Y at 136:3-15; Ex. M at 21:24-22:4 ("Every day that no one leaves is a good day."); Ex. J at 15:23-17:12 (lose one attorney out of eight every nine months); Ex. D at 7; Ex. I at 62:23-63:7 (four out of five line attorneys have changed recently); Ex. A at 26:17-19, 27:5-12, 27:21-28:3 (five out of seven left within last year).

102. The upshot is that many district offices within MSPD are staffed primarily with inexperienced attorneys. E.g., Ex. L at 83:6-23 (half of lawyers in office have been practicing law one year or less); Ex. E at 66:2-16 (a "senior" lawyer would be one with a year of experience and would be expected to mentor more junior lawyers); Ex. Y at 135:12-21 (between five and seven of 20 attorneys in district are new hires); Ex. E at 13:17-14:6, 64:23-65:3 (eight or nine attorneys in district have less than one year of experience; office has made 10 new hires in last 18 months).

103. Turnover has gotten worse in recent years. Ex. E at 68:21-69:6; Ex. Y at 136:3-4; Ex. A at 25:2-3.

104. Many MSPD attorneys leave the office to become prosecutors, because they are burnt out from being public defenders and crave a job where they are respected and can control their caseloads. One district defender even said that he feels like he is training young MSPD attorneys to become prosecutors and hopefully become "a little more human in the process." Ex. E at 144:13-23; 69:7-70:18, 159:6-160:18 ("You don't get paid very well for what you do and you lose that fire that you had when you were in law school about wanting to help people or fight injustice or defend the constitution or whatever it was that motivated you to become a public defender in this first place."); Ex. A at 27:5-12.

105. The consequences of an attorney's departure for members of the Plaintiff class are legion.

a. The departing attorney's cases must be reassigned to others within the district, each of whom is likely already overwhelmed with her own cases. Id.; Ex. M at 23:5-13; Ex. K at 21:24-22:4; Ex. N at 40:14; Ex. A at 28:16-29:4, 82:1-7 ("train wreck" when multiple lawyers leave office and cases must be redistributed); Ex. E at 106:3-108:4.

b. Many cases—particularly serious cases—are thus handled by four and five attorneys sequentially, as the original attorneys assigned to the case leave; this kind of turnover makes it virtually impossible to build a trusting client relationship. Ex. E at 106:3-108:4; Ex. A at 28:16-29:4, 29:5-23, 34:3-9.

c. Every time an attorney leaves MSPD, the next attorney assigned to a case must get up to speed on the case, further delaying progress. Ex. E at 106:3-108:4; Ex. I at 64:8-15; Ex. A at 29:5-23 ("[Y]ou know, frankly, if it were my kid who kept getting a new lawyer every two or three months and the lawyer says, Look, hey, give me some time; I've got to get up to speed. You know, I'll look at the thing, I'll come talk to your child in jail, and they get up to speed, and they go talk to the child in jail, and then they leave, and then the case gets reassigned -- I mean, if that had been my child, I would be furious.").

d. In addition, the replacement attorney must duplicate all the work that the departing attorney performed, further stretching the office's bandwidth. Ex. A at 29:24-30:12.

e. Several attorneys, including the district defenders themselves, must take time out of their schedules to interview and hire replacement attorneys, further reducing the number of hours spent on actual case work. Ex. E at 106:3-108:4.

f. Positions often remain open for many weeks or months, which means that MSPD must operate with even less manpower and must lower its standards to make new hires. Ex. C at 12:4-14; Ex. E at 106:3-108:4, 108:24-109:8, 121:24-123:7, 124:25-125:15; Ex. L at 95:5-19; Ex. V at 79:7-14.

106. Although MSPD attorneys are often inexperienced, they are frequently placed on cases that call for more seasoned attorneys, with negative consequences for their clients.

a. Because there are so few experienced lawyers, inexperienced lawyers are often assigned complex rape and murder cases. Ex. A at 86:9-87:17; Ex. L at 95:15-96:7.

b. Inexperienced lawyers have very little leverage in plea negotiations, in part because they do not know what would qualify as a good plea and in part because prosecutors know that these new attorneys are afraid to go to trial. Ex. E at 56:21-58:4.

c. An inexperienced lawyer is less likely to identify a key issue—such as a motion to suppress—in a case. Ex. L at 66:8-15.

107. Even the most passionate, committed, and experienced in MSPD's ranks are considering leaving public defense. Ex. A at 85:22-86:8 ("2017 has certainly made me consider other employment options. Yeah. I mean, I'm not – I'm certainly not practicing the way I want to be. My clients are given the short end of the stick. It's not fair to them. I would not want me as a lawyer right now. And – I'm not sure how long I'm going to do this. Give me a rational caseload, I'll retire with the agency. 200 cases, I don't know how much longer ...")

108. The frequent turnover in MSPD's ranks is exacerbated by a lack of training and supervision.

109. MSPD attorneys have a difficult time carving out the hours for formal training, so much of the job entails learning on the job (and therefore at the expense of actual clients). Ex. E at 66:2-68:1; Ex. M at 90:8-91:5, 139:7-13.

110. MSPD attorneys must ramp up quickly, rapidly going from a low initial caseload to a caseload fit for a far more seasoned attorney. Ex. Y at 17:14-18:1; Ex. A at 46:16-47:6.

111. Even the most talented attorneys come in with a knowledge deficit about how the system works—which courtrooms are which, how to handle procedural issues, and so forth. Ex. E at 66:24-68:1.

112. In part because there are very few senior attorneys and in part because the district defenders do not have the bandwidth to do so, new attorneys receive very little mentorship or supervision. Ex. C at 80:17-20; Ex. M at 47:7-17; Ex. K at 23:9-24:21, 28:1-15; Ex. E at 66:2-68:12.

113. Finally, it is difficult to justify the investment in training, since constant turnover means that as soon as a new attorney is trained, it's time to train another. Ex. E at 66:24-68:1; Ex. A at 28:16-29:4.

114. Juveniles: MSPD also represents juvenile defendants in both juvenile and criminal proceedings, pursuant to Missouri Revised Statutes § 211.211, which provides indigent youth with the right to court-appointed counsel "prior to the filing of a petition" and "for all stages of the proceedings" thereafter. In Fiscal Year 2017, MSPD was appointed to represent juveniles in 1,556 cases, including violent, non-violent, and status offenses. Ex. D at 20.

115. As recently as 2013, the National Juvenile Defender Center (NJDC) deployed dozens of experts in Missouri to study its juvenile court system and assess the extent and quality of representation being provided to children in the State. Ex. KK (National Juvenile Defender Center, Missouri: Justice Rationed, Spring 2013 (Johnson Dep. Ex. 22)). The NJDC Report concluded that, after "endur[ing] at least two decades of crushing caseloads and inadequate resources to provide its mandated services," Missouri's juvenile indigent defense system is "broken" and is improperly "forced to ration services." Id. at 7.

116. Moreover, like their adult counterparts, juveniles accused of crimes in Missouri often go unrepresented at critical stages of their cases. Ex. JJ at 80:12-81:5 (describing lack of representation for juveniles in co-defendant cases in the days/weeks following initial detention hearing). The report concluded that nearly 60 percent of court-involved children in Missouri go without a public defender entirely. NJDC Report at 35. MSPD's Director of Juvenile Defense and Policy testified that she did not disagree with any of NJDC's findings. Ex. JJ at 32:18-22.

117. Several districts do not have any attorneys with specialized training in juvenile proceedings. E.g., Ex. E at 53:10-16; Ex. K at 108:22-109:5 (decision to close juvenile office was based solely on money).

118. Many of the same time constraints that hamstring MSPD attorneys in representing adults also hamper their ability to represent juveniles; these issues are exacerbated by the facts that, first, juveniles who are "certified" (tried as adults) are often placed in custody quite far away from the MSPD office that represents them, and second, communicating with juvenile clients requires more time. Ex. E at 59:17-60:20; Ex. M at 154:6-23, 155:1-24.

THIS INABILITY TO ADVOCATE FOR DEFENDANTS HAS DRAMATIC CONSEQUENCES ON THE OUTCOMES OF CASES

119. Perhaps unsurprisingly, expert witnesses and MSPD attorneys around the State agree that these deficits in representation have a dramatic impact on the outcomes of cases, routinely resulting in MSPD attorneys overlooking evidence, legal theories, or witnesses and defendants taking pleas to harsher sentences or more serious charges or missing a chance at exoneration as a result. Ex. H at ¶¶ 187, 190; Ex. J at 96:1-9; Ex. K at 191:18-192:1.

120. Deficits in representation at every stage of the process often turn out to be outcome-determinative. For example:

a. MSPD's absence at an initial appearance may mean that a defendant will make a damning statement, hamstringing a defense going forward. Ex. E at 18:15-19:20; Ex. K at 52:10-53:7.

b. Defendants also lose their opportunity to move to change judges or venues because they do not have counsel to guide them. Ex. E at 19:8-20, 19:24-20:15.

c. When an MSPD attorney is unable to get her client out on bond and the defendant is detained pretrial, the defendant is much less likely to fight her charges and more likely to quickly take a plea, even if the defendant could have secured a better plea deal had she been willing to wait. Ex. E at 44:11-16 ("[T]he jails are miserable . . . [T]hey don't even treat [defendants] like people. So all that - their whole being is how do I get out of this situation. What's the fastest route to get me out of custody. If that's pleading guilty, they'll plead guilty."); Ex. I at 93:23-94:4.

d. An inability to consistently communicate with defendants forecloses a trusting relationship between a defendant and her attorney, meaning that a defendant is unlikely to rely on an attorney's advice about, for instance, whether to take a plea; brief communications often mean that defendants—particularly those with mental health issues or difficulties reading or writing—do not fully understand the consequences of their decisions to plead guilty. Ex. C at 79:22-80:5, 24:6-23, 38:9-39:2, 39:16-24; Ex. E at 23:6-24:9.

e. Because they do not have time to investigate the foundations of an indictment, MSPD attorneys lose the opportunity to dismiss cases early in their proceedings. Ex. E at 41:10-42:5.

f. When MSPD attorneys are unable to investigate their cases or file suppression motions, they lose leverage with prosecutors in plea negotiations and cannot present a robust defense at trial. Ex. O at 29-30; Ex. A at 185:6-18, 186:8-22.

g. When MSPD attorneys must rely on boilerplate motions, judges often recognize that the motions plead no case-specific information and are disinclined to grant relief. Ex. C at 53:3-10.

h. In cases that end in pleas—the vast majority of MSPD's cases—MSPD attorneys could have negotiated better plea deals had they come with "ammunition," such as exonerating evidence, legal defenses, or successful motions or had the plea negotiations not taken weeks (or months or years) to get underway, leaving defendants too anxious to hold out for a better offer. Ex. Y at 145:6-146:22, 149:9-150:12, 223:18-224:2 ("[s]everal times a month per attorney," he is told that a lawyer is uncomfortable with a guilty plea but defendant cannot wait in jail long enough for attorney to work up a case); Ex. O at 29-30.

i. In the few cases that go to trial, MSPD attorneys often realize that their case is missing a key component—a deposition of an important witness, for instance—too late to do anything about it, resulting in a diminished chance that a defendant will be acquitted. Ex. E at 30:5-31:7; Ex. K at 69:25-70:5.

j. Defendants will often get better outcomes where attorneys are able to prepare for sentencing, including investigating sentencing alternatives. See, e.g., Ex. K at 84:2-85:12; Ex. E at 55:15-56:20; Ex. I at 97:5-21; Ex. A at 117:16-118:18 (ability to coordinate treatment programs that might allow clients to reduce time in custody is "virtually zero").

121. MSPD attorneys must routinely ask for continuances and other allowances for delay, because they are unable to consistently prepare cases in a timely fashion, often leaving their clients to wait further in pretrial detention. That reliance often backfires at the further expense of defendants. Ex. H at ⁋ 286 (defendant sentenced to life without parole because overburdened MSPD attorney identified alibi witness too late to be allowed to call witness at trial); Ex. E at 36:10-37:8 (did not receive continuance to secure mental health expert on PTSD; as a result, defendant was convicted of statutory rape).

122. MSPD attorneys describe natural experiments—time periods during which for, whatever reason, they are able to fully work up a case—that prove the obvious: Cases where attorneys do some work see better outcomes for defendants. For instance, one office that has placed new defendants on a waiting list to more fully serve existing defendants has seen an uptick in depositions and motions and, correspondingly, better outcomes for defendants. Ex. E at 32:11-33:6, 42:18-25; Ex. QQ (Affidavits of Current and Former Public Defenders, Oct. 31, 2017 (Carver Dep Ex. 26.)). In that same district, attorneys have begun filing motions to dismiss indictments, to good effect. Ex. E at 41:2-42:25.

123. Finally, the inordinate wait times for cases to get any attention from their assigned MSPD attorney—wait times that have only increased with the implementation of wait lists around the State, see infra, ⁋⁋ 124-54—often lead to worse outcomes because defendants are willing to bargain away a better result in order to leave jail. Some feel pressured to plead guilty well before MSPD attorneys can complete an investigation or discovery; others will waive their right to counsel in order to move proceedings along, and in some cases, desperate defendants will even negotiate their own plea deals, obviously resulting in worse pleas than those that an MSPD attorney with the benefit of time to investigate the case might produce. Ex. C at 95:12-96:9; Ex. A at 66:6-68:23; Ex. C at 79:22-80:5; Ex. L at 63:13-65:2.

MISSOURI'S INDIGENT DEFENSE DEFICITS HAVE REACHED A CRISIS POINT.

124. On September 12, 2017, the Missouri Supreme Court issued an order in the matter of In re Hinkebein, affirming the recommendations of the state Disciplinary Hearing Panel and finding that Karl William Hinkebein, a senior attorney for the Appellate/PCR Division of the Missouri Public Defender Office, violated Rules 4-1.3 and 4-1.4(a) of the Rules of Professional Conduct and should be disciplined, including by suspending Mr. Hinkebein's law license indefinitely.[8] Order, In re Hinkebein, SC96089 (Mo. Sept. 12, 2017).

125. Specifically, the Disciplinary Hearing Panel determined that, in the course of his representation of several different indigent defendants, Mr. Hinkebein failed to keep his clients adequately informed about their cases, in violation of Missouri Rule of Professional Conduct 4-1.4(a) and failed to act with reasonable diligence and promptness in the representation of his clients, in violation of Missouri Rule of Professional Conduct Rule 4-1.3. See Ex. Z (Disciplinary Hearing Panel Decision, In re Hinkebein, No. DHP-16-004, (Mo. Nov. 2, 2016)).

126. Among other things, the Panel found that, with respect to at least six of his former clients, Mr. Hinkebein had gone months—sometimes years—without communicating with them; missed critical filing deadlines; and failed to file significant motions and other documents on behalf of his clients. Id. at ¶¶ 13-121.

127. Notably, the Panel reached its conclusions notwithstanding Mr. Hinkebein's contention that his inability to remain in consistent contact with his clients, and his failure to take timely action on their behalf, were the result of ongoing health problems between 2010 and 2014, id. at ¶¶ 147-148, and, more significantly, his overwhelming workload. Id. at ¶¶ 151-152.

[8] The Court ultimately stayed the suspension and placed Mr. Hinkebein on probation for one year.

128. Mr. Hinkebein noted that he had approximately 110 cases on his docket at the time of the disciplinary hearing, while his supervisor admitted that he was forced to assign an unreasonable number of cases to Mr. Hinkebein in light of the office's heavy workload. Id. at ⁋⁋ 152, 160.

129. MSPD senior staff testified that a number of studies had already found that the state's public defense system is saddled with more cases than it can "ethically, reasonably, or effectively handle," *id.*at 161. Nevertheless, the court found that Mr. Hinkebein violated his ethical obligations to his clients and deserved to be disciplined as a result.

130. In the wake of the Hinkebein decision, MSPD district offices across Missouri were thrown into a state of uncertainty and panic, as public defenders sought guidance from their supervisors, the courts, and the Office of Chief Disciplinary Counsel to determine the implications for their own careers. See Ex. V at 99:6-14 ("Alarm, fear. Attorneys quitting…"); Ex. C at 81:7-13; Ex. E 77:14-20; Ex. M at 172:25-173:10; Ex. J at 66:9-69:17; Ex. K at 117:15-118:18, 138:15-140:16.

131. Indeed, public defenders in MSPD district offices around the state, who, like their colleague, Mr. Hinkebein, are laboring under crushing workloads and, as a result, are providing similarly deficient representation to their clients, expressed profound concern about their own professional lives following the Hinkebein decision. Id.

132. In the days and weeks that followed, public defenders in a number of districts informed their supervisors that they were overwhelmed by their current workloads, and could not ethically continue to take on additional cases. Ex. E at 77:14-20; Ex. C at 81:14-82:3; Ex. J at 66:9-69:17; Ex. K at 114:22-115:15, 117:16-118:18; Ex. I at 46:17-22, 90:22-91:6, 126:12-127:4.

133. Some defenders have resigned, or have expressed their intent to resign, from their positions if they continue to be unable to do their jobs in a way that complies with their ethical and constitutional obligations. Ex. A at 167:13-169:11; Ex. E at 95:24-96:14; Ex. M at 173:3-10.

134. Beginning in late September 2017, MSPD District Defenders in a number of jurisdictions took steps, formal and informal, to inform the courts in their respective areas that their offices could no longer continue to accept appointments, unless and until their workloads diminish.

135. Those steps included sending letters to the applicable judges alerting them that MSPD attorneys do not have the capacity to accept any more cases, Ex. LL (Email from Rod Hackathorn, District Defender, to Hon. Thomas Mountjoy, Hon. David Jones & Hon. Calvin Holden, Oct. 10, 2017 (Hackathorn Dep. Ex. 53)) (informing judges of waitlist); Ex. E at 77:21-78:5; Ex. MM (Letter from Anthony Cardarella, District Defender, to Hon. Janet Sutton, Hon, James Van Amburg & Hon. Thomas Chapman, Oct. 2, 2017 (Cardarella Dep. Ex. 15)); Ex. M at 168:20-169:13; Ex. K at 134:18-21, and filing motions to withdraw from certain cases or for writs of prohibition preventing judges from continuing to appoint MSPD attorneys to additional cases. Ex. BB.; Ex. NN (Petition for Writ of Prohibition and Suggestions in Support, State ex rel. Petsch v. Hon. Patrick W. Campbell, (Mo. Ct. App. Oct. 25, 2017) (Petsch Dep. Ex. 7)); Ex. BB; Ex. E at 104:19-105:4; Ex. A at 109:3-110:25, 123:20-124:11; Ex. HH (Draft Motion to Withdraw Due to Excessive Caseload (Crowell Dep. Ex. 54)).

136. Indeed, the MSPD administration provided templates and model motions for public defenders to use in the event that they needed to refuse cases going forward or seek withdrawal from any current cases. Ex. OO (Draft Suggestions in Support of Writ of Prohibition and/or Mandamus); Ex. K at 125:1-126:4.

137. On October 11, 2017, Area 35 District Defender Leslie Hazel and Defendant Michael Barrett, in his capacity as MSPD Director, filed a Petition for Writ of Prohibition in the Missouri Court of Appeals to prevent the further appointment of MSPD attorneys in the 35th Judicial Circuit.

a. The Relators noted that District Defender Hazel had informed the circuit court on September 28, 2017, that "'[i]n light of the recent OCDC recommendation that a public defender's license be suspended due to his alleged failure to comply with the Rules of Professional Conduct,' and after consulting with the individual attorneys in her office regarding workload, case type, experience level and other work requirements, 'every attorney in the Area 35 Public Defender's Office, including myself, is currently unable to accept additional cases while also providing ethical, effective and competent representation to our existing defendants'" Hazel Pet. for Writ of Prohibition ¶ 7.

b. The Relators further noted that Ms. Hazel had made clear to the circuit court that continuing to accept appointments in light of the current workload crisis would force public defenders to violate, or risk violating, the Rules of Professional Conduct, including Rules 4-1.1 (competence), 4-1.3 (diligence), 4-1.4 (communication), and 4-1.7 (conflict of interest), as well as the Sixth Amendment right to effective assistance of counsel. Id. at ¶ 10.

c. The circuit court was unmoved and appointed the public defender's office to additional cases. Id. at ¶ 15.

d. Following the appointments, Defendant Barrett wrote a letter to the court further objecting to the appointments, also citing the relevant Rules of Professional Conduct, and informed the court that the MSPD intended to file a writ to prohibit the appointments. Id. at ¶ 16.

e. The petition was ultimately denied by both the Missouri Court of Appeals and the Missouri Supreme Court. Ex. UU (Denial, State ex rel. Hazel and Barrett v. Hon. Robert Mayer, No. SC96736 (Mo. Oct. 17, 2017) and Order, State ex rel. Hazel and Barrett v. Hon. Robert Mayer, No. SD35176 (Mo. Ct. App. Oct. 13, 2017)).

138. But perhaps most disturbing was the decision made by numerous District Defenders to begin placing indigent defendants on waiting lists.

139. District Defenders across the state communicated with the criminal court judges in their districts to inform them of the implications of the Hinkebein decision and the MSPD's intention to begin refusing cases and establishing waiting lists for indigent defendants whose cases have been assigned to MSPD attorneys—all in a desperate effort to comply with both the criminal courts' orders appointing them to represent new defendants and the Missouri Supreme Court's finding that attorneys are ethically required to refuse representation if they do not have the capacity to provide an adequate defense. Ex. C at 81:8-82:3, 85:14-86:7; Ex. PP; Ex. B; Ex. M at 181:4-183:12; 183:13-17, 184:4-9; Ex. J at 69:24-70:1; Ex. K at 126:5-8; Ex. N at 44:20-45:23, 66:9-24; Ex. I at 90:6-15; Ex. A at 105:1-108:24.

140. The waiting lists in the various districts statewide include hundreds, if not thousands, of individuals, Ex. C at 86:8-23; Ex. E at 79:7-11; Ex. J at 77:9-15; Ex. K at 127:9-15; Ex. N at 45:9-10, many of whom have been charged with serious felonies and will remain in pretrial detention, without access to counsel, until an MSPD attorney is available to provide constitutionally sufficient representation. Ex. E at 81:22-82:17; Ex. J at 79:4-10; Ex. K at 127:19-128:6.

141. The waiting lists in some districts are still growing and will continue to do so as workloads continue to rise. Ex. C at 91:7-11; Ex. E at 127:21-128:10.

142. Moreover, because their criminal cases are proceeding notwithstanding the fact that they have been placed on a waiting list, some indigent defendants have been required to appear before the court without counsel. Ex. C at 92:23-93:7.

143. District defenders also noted that continuing to add cases to their already overwhelming workloads would constitute an inherent conflict of interest since any significant time or resources a public defender spends on one case further limits that defender's ability to devote the necessary time and resources to other cases. Ex. K at 55:1-4; Ex. E at 91:12-18, 120:4-121:1; Ex. PP at 1; Ex. M at 177:1-15; Ex. N at 44:5-9. This is particularly true given the "triage" nature of MSPD representation. Ex. J at 83:16-85:12.

144. In response to the complaints from district defenders, a number of courts urged the MSPD to simply comply with Mo. Rev. Stat. § 600.063 if they believed that an attorney's individual workload was too high. Ex. E at 101:22-102:9, 102:20-103:7; Ex. M at 232:7-13. Sec. 600.063 states, in relevant part:

> Upon approval by the director or the commission, any district defender may file a motion to request a conference to discuss caseload issues involving any individual public defender or defenders, but not the entire office, with the presiding judge of any circuit court served by the district office. The motion shall state the reasons why the individual public defender or public defenders will be unable to provide effective assistance of counsel due to caseload concerns.

Mo. Rev. Stat. § 600.063 (emphasis added).

145. As the language of the statute suggests, § 600.063 is not designed to address systemic deficiencies in the delivery of indigent defense services. A number of district defenders nonetheless have filed motions seeking a meeting with the relevant judges, pursuant to § 600.063, but noted that the workload problem in their office goes well beyond that of any one attorney. Ex. RR (Motion Requesting Conference to Discuss Caseload Issues, In re Area 16 Public Defender Office, No. 1716-MC13258 (Mo. Cir. Ct., Nov. 1, 2017) (Petsch Dep. Ex.. 8)); Ex. E at 101:22-102:9, 102:20-103:7, 103:11-104:4; Ex. M at 232:7-13, 233:18-235:24.

146. Because § 600.063 was crafted specifically to address workload complaints by individual attorneys, however, the courts, by and large, have refused to engage with the district defenders with respect to the alleged systemic problem. Ex. K at 137:2-138:14; Ex. J at 75:16-77:6; Ex. E at 101:22-102:16.

147. Despite the objections articulated by district defenders through their informal communications with the court, as well as through formal legal filings, and notwithstanding their acknowledgment that a workload problem exists, at least with respect to particular attorneys, Ex. E at 101:22-102:16, criminal court judges around the state continue to appoint MSPD attorneys—including the district defenders themselves—to additional cases. Ex. SS (Email from Christopher Piatt, Assistant Public Defender, to Michael Barrett, Missouri Public Defender, Nov. 20, 2017); Ex. E at 118:7-120:3; Ex. A at 82:25-83:11.

148. This has made it even more difficult for district defenders to supervise their less experienced attorneys and further exacerbates the workload problem for all involved. Ex. J at 64:12-20.

149. One judge suggested that MSPD attorneys continue to take cases, but string their clients along by taking many continuances. Ex. A at 126:14-127:1.

150. Another judge recommended that MSPD attorneys no longer wait to receive complete discovery before pleading clients and that a "pro se docket" of felony charges be implemented. Ex. TT (Finding and Order, In re Area 25 Public Defender Office, No. 17PH-CV02226 (Mo. Cir. Ct., Jan. 11, 2018)).

151. Indeed, in light of the courts' insistence that she continue to represent indigent defendants under the current circumstances, District Defender Ruth Petsch took the extraordinary step of self-reporting to the Office of Chief Disciplinary Counsel, noting that she was in violation of not only the ethical rules governing representation of defendants, but also the rules governing her responsibilities as an attorney supervisor. Ex. K at 139:3-140:16.

152. District Defender Justin Carver also chose to self-report since he continues to receive appointments (over his objection) despite his admission that he is "definitely not providing competent representation" to all 213 of the defendants he currently represents. Ex. A at 165:4-17.

153. According to a number of district defenders, courts are not appointing members of the private bar in any significant number in an effort to help alleviate the workload problem, and there are few lawyers in the rural parts of Missouri with the capacity to take on pro bono appointments. Ex. A at 83:12-84:19, 113:4-114:24; Ex. E at 84:12-24, 99:6-9, 99:17-20, 105:9-106:2.

154. Particularly following the fallout from the Hinkebein decision, district defenders from across the state have acknowledged that, under the circumstances, the public defenders in their offices—including themselves—are unable to provide constitutionally sufficient representation to their clients. Ex. A at 189:15-190:11; Ex. K at 113:2-15.

III. SUMMARY JUDGMENT STANDARD

This Court should grant summary judgment to Plaintiffs because, viewing the uncontroverted evidence in the light most favorable to Defendants, there is no genuine issue of material fact and Plaintiffs are entitled to judgment as a matter of law. Fed. R. Civ. P. 56(a); see also Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 323 (1986); Grey v. City of Oak Grove, 396 F.3d 1031, 1034 (8th Cir. 2005).

IV. ARGUMENT

The uncontroverted facts amassed from documents, depositions, and expert analysis demonstrate, as MSPD's own director has admitted, that Defendants are continually violating Plaintiffs' right to counsel. Ex. G at 98:19-99:2. Plaintiffs' uncontroverted evidence show a violation of their right to counsel in at least five different ways, any one of which would be sufficient to entitle Plaintiffs to summary judgment on their constitutional claims:

First, the evidence shows that substantial structural limitations ensure that even the most competent attorney could not provide adequate representation and that the State's cases are not subjected to adversarial testing; as this Court noted in denying State Defendants'[9] motion to dismiss, courts around the country have held that such a showing is sufficient to prove a Sixth Amendment violation on a systemwide basis. § IV.A; Dkt. 69, at 36.

Second, Defendants cannot and do not dispute that MSPD attorneys operate under an actual and perpetual conflict of interest, pitting each client's interest in constitutionally adequate representation against other defendants', such that an hour spent on one case is an hour further from effective representation on another—a Sixth Amendment violation no matter the consequences for the outcome of a defendant's case. § IV.B.

[9] Plaintiffs will refer to Governor Greitens and the State of Missouri as "State Defendants" and to MSPD Director Michael Barrett and the MSPD Commissioners as "MSPD Defendants."

Third, per the uncontroverted facts in this case, MSPD attorneys perform their duties at a standard well below prevailing professional norms. § IV.C.

Fourth, Plaintiffs are entitled to injunctive relief on their claims to prevent the high risk of a conviction or a plea deal that might have been staved off or mitigated by constitutionally competent counsel. § IV.D.

And finally, the uncontroverted evidence shows that indigent defendants around the State are routinely being denied the prompt appointment of counsel, going unrepresented during crucial periods of their case, and, in some cases, never receiving counsel at all—actual deprivations of the right to counsel that cannot be remedied without lowering workloads at MSPD. § IV.E[10]

Any one of these theories, standing alone, would entitle Plaintiffs to relief. That relief must be prospective and systemwide. § IV.F. This Court has rejected State Defendants' assertions in prior filings that any relief under the Sixth Amendment must come from the framework set out in Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668 (1984), and therefore is not available on a classwide basis or before conviction. Dkt. 69, at 34-36. As this Court explained, "In fact, it is 'well settled' that the Sixth Amendment right to counsel is broader than the question of whether a court must retrospectively set aside a judgment due to ineffective assistance of counsel." Id. at 34 (quoting State ex rel. Mo. Pub. Def. Comm'n v. Waters, 370 S.W. 3d 592, 607 (Mo. 2012)). The right is "affirmative and prospective," and "Strickland is inapplicable when systemic deficiencies in the provision of public defense are at issue." Id. at 34 (quoting Waters, 370 S.W.3d, at 607, and Tucker v. State, 394 P.3d 54, 62 (Idaho 2017)).

Plaintiffs also seek summary judgment as to their claims under the Due Process Clause of the Federal Constitution; Article I, sections 10 and 18(a) of the Missouri Constitution; Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 600.042, 600.048, 211.061, 211.211; and Mo. R. Juv. P. 126.01.[11] As explained in § IV.G, Plaintiffs are entitled to summary judgment on these claims for the same reasons they are entitled to summary judgment on their Sixth Amendment claim.

A. THE UNCONTROVERTED EVIDENCE DEMONSTRATES THAT MISSOURI'S PUBLIC DEFENDERS ARE SO HAMSTRUNG BY THEIR WORKLOADS THAT THEY ARE UNABLE TO MEANINGFULLY SERVE AS AN ADVERSARY TO THE STATE, CONSTRUCTIVELY DEPRIVING PLAINTIFFS OF COUNSEL.

The Sixth Amendment treats a lawyer so hamstrung by circumstances as to be unable to meaningfully advocate as no lawyer at all. Accordingly, criminal defendants "constructively" denied counsel, like defendants literally denied counsel, need not make any showing of "prejudice" to prove a Sixth Amendment claim. Courts from New York to Florida to Washington have recognized such constructive denials on a system-wide basis. The uncontroverted facts about MSPD attorneys—their sporadic communication with defendants, the frequency with which they must rely on the State's version of events, the pressure they feel to plead out as many defendants as quickly as possible, and the enormous workloads at the root of all those deficiencies—establish that defendants assigned to MSPD, including Plaintiffs and the putative class they represent, are constructively denied counsel as a result of MSPD's massive workloads.

The United States Supreme Court has long recognized that formal appointment alone does not mean that an accused is receiving the right to counsel. Even where counsel in name accompanies a defendant through the criminal process, a defendant may be "constructively" denied the right to counsel. For instance, in Powell v. Alabama, 287 U.S. 45, 58 (1932), a lawyer assigned the morning of trial was not considered to be counsel within the meaning of the Sixth Amendment. In Avery v. Alabama, 308 U.S. 444, 446 (1940), an attorney denied the opportunity "to confer, to consult with the accused and to prepare his defense" was "a sham." And in United States v. Cronic, 466 U.S. 648, 654 (1984), the Supreme Court listed circumstances that would amount to constructive denial of counsel. As relevant here, the Supreme Court offered as examples cases in which "counsel entirely fails to subject the prosecution's case to meaningful adversarial testing" and where "although counsel is available to assist the accused during trial, the likelihood that any lawyer, even a fully competent one, could provide effective assistance" is miniscule. Id. at 659-60.

Crucially, a claim of constructive denial of counsel is conceptually distinct from a Strickland claim of ineffective assistance of counsel. The former alleges no representation—a lawyer in name only—while the latter alleges specific errors in the course of representation. See Roe v. Flores-Ortega, 528 U.S. 470, 483 (2000); Penson v. Ohio, 488 U.S. 75, 88 (1988). Where counsel is constructively absent—as when counsel is actually absent—no showing of prejudice is required. See Cronic, 466 U.S. at 659 n. 25 ("The Court has uniformly found constitutional error without any showing of prejudice when counsel was either totally absent, or prevented from assisting the accused during a critical stage of the proceeding."). There is therefore no reason that a completed prosecution is necessary for a defendant to make out a constructive denial of counsel claim—the claim requires no showing of prejudice, so there can be no argument that it must be raised post-conviction.

Courts around the country have acknowledged that, upon a proper evidentiary showing, indigent defendants are entitled to relief for system-wide claims of constructive denial of counsel. See, e.g., Tucker v. Idaho, No. 43922, 2017 Opinion No. 38, 394 P.3d 54 (Idaho Apr. 28, 2017); Kuren v. Luzerne County, 146 A.3d 715 (Pa. 2016); Wilbur v. City of Mount Vernon, 989 F. Supp. 2d 1122 (W.D. Wash. 2013); Hurrell-Harring v. State, 930 N.E.2d 217, 222 (N.Y. 2010); Luckey v. Harris, 860 F.2d 1012, 1018 (11th Cir. 1988). Although these cases vary in their particulars, each identified two general conditions for a finding of constructive denial of counsel: first, "on a system-wide basis, the traditional markers of representation" are absent or significantly compromised; and second, "substantial structural limitations" cause that absence or limitation. Tucker v. Idaho Amicus Brief by the United States, at 25, available at https://www.justice.gov/opa/file/850831/download (synthesizing existing case law).

The undisputed facts of this case make clear that Plaintiffs are being constructively denied their right to counsel. As in Powell, a defendant's MSPD attorney may not have "any opportunity to acquaint himself with the facts or law of the case"—though MSPD attorneys are not assigned cases on the morning of trial, they admit to going to trial with little to no preparation and, in the vast majority of cases, to advising defendants to plead guilty without having done any meaningful investigation or significant legal research. Powell, 287 U.S. at 59. As contemplated by Avery, MSPD attorneys are denied the opportunity to "confer, to consult with the accused and to prepare his defense"—communication between MSPD attorneys and their defendants is late, limited, and infrequent. Avery, 308 U.S., at 446.

Indeed, Plaintiffs have demonstrated that the situation in Missouri is analogous to two of the examples of constructive deprivation of counsel given in Cronic. First, MSPD attorneys routinely "entirely fail[] to subject the prosecution's case to meaningful adversarial testing," as Plaintiffs' experts concluded, without dispute; MSPD attorneys must rely on police reports to at best shape and at worst substitute for their own research and investigation. Cronic, 466 U.S., at 659-60. MSPD attorneys routinely plead defendants guilty without having conducted any witness interviews, engaged in any legal research, or even reviewed the discovery in the case. Supra, ¶¶ 64-87. And second, extraordinarily high workloads make it exceedingly unlikely that "any lawyer, even a fully competent one, could provide effective assistance" to her clients; Plaintiffs' experts testified as much, and district defenders—MSPD's most experienced attorneys and the "fully competent" attorneys contemplated by Cronic—testified without dispute that they were exceedingly unlikely to be able to provide effective assistance of counsel as a result of their enormous workloads. Supra, ¶¶ 44-47.

Missouri's uncontrovertibly dysfunctional indigent defense system also resembles the systems identified by other courts around the country as amounting to a constructive denial of counsel. As one expert put it, a judge in one case where relief was granted for the constructive denial of counsel "could have been describing" MSPD's misdemeanor practice when he wrote that "[t]here is almost no evidence that [the public defenders] conducted investigations in any of their thousands of cases, nor is there any suggestion that they did legal analysis regarding the elements of the crime charged or possible defenses or that they discussed such issues with their defendants" and that "[i]n general, counsel presumed that the police officers had done their jobs correctly and negotiated a plea bargain based on that assumption." Ex. H at ¶ 97 (quoting Wilbur v. City of Mount Vernon, 989 F. Supp. 2d 1122, 1124 (W.D. Wash. 2013)).

The United States Department of Justice has endorsed prospective relief on the basis of a constructive denial of counsel in several amicus briefs and has identified two indicia necessary to make out such a claim: an absence of traditional markers of representation and substantial structural limitations. See Tucker v. Idaho, Amicus Brief by the United States, at 25. Both are hallmarks of MSPD's representation. As to the first, MSPD attorneys are rarely able to communicate with their clients; their conversations are sporadic, non-substantive, brief, and often less-than-confidential. Supra, ¶¶ 56-63; see Kuren, 146 A.3d, at 730 (identifying "timely and confidential communication with defendant" as a traditional marker of representation); Wilbur, 989 F. Supp. 2d, at 1124 (noting "[a]lmost complete absence of opportunities for the accused to confer with counsel"); Hurrell-Harring, 930 N.E.2d, at 224 (constructive denial of counsel where counsel was uncommunicative). Attorneys for indigent defendants interview witnesses in only a fraction of their cases, interview all witnesses identified by a defendant or a police report in still fewer, and identify new witnesses in fewer still. Supra, ¶¶ 64-73; Kuren, 146 A.3d, at 744 ("appropriate investigation" is hallmark of representation); Wilbur, 989 F. Supp. 2d, at 1124 ("no evidence of investigation"); Hurrell-Harring, 930 N.E. 2d, at 224 (counsel makes "virtually no efforts on behalf of nominal defendants"). There is little evidence of legal analysis and "substantive hearings and trials are rare." Wilbur, 989 F. Supp. 2d, at 1124; supra, ¶¶ 79-95. And Missouri's indigent defense system encourages quick pleas, made without full investigation or counseling. Supra, ¶¶ 79-87; Wilbur, 98 F. Supp. 2d, at 1124 (system "amount[s] to little more than a 'meet and plead' system).

As to the second indicator identified by the Department of Justice, MSPD has been laboring under "substantial structural limitations" for decades. Report after report, from outside entities, respected accounting firms, professional associations, and MSPD itself, has chronicled MSPD's lack of resources. Supra, ¶¶ 11-43. Workloads exceed national recommendations by two- and threefold. Id. MSPD attorneys, both current and former, noted that resource constraints were the single biggest determinant of how they approached cases. Supra, ¶¶ 55-118. And given the ratio of indigent defendants to public defenders, there simply aren't enough hours in the day for MSPD attorneys to subject the accusations against their clients to meaningful adversarial testing. Supra, ¶¶ 44-47.

In short, there is no dispute that the conditions of MSPD's representation indicate a complete breakdown of the adversarial system and are analogous to those identified by other courts as indicia of a constructive denial of counsel.

B. THERE IS NO DISPUTE THAT MSPD ATTORNEYS LABOR UNDER AN ACTUAL AND PERPETUAL CONFLICT OF INTEREST, CONSTANTLY TRIAGING CASES AND TAKING TIME FROM ONE DEFENDANT TO REPRESENT ANOTHER.

Given the ongoing scarcity of time and resources at MSPD attorneys' disposal, providing constitutionally adequate representation to one defendant of necessity requires foregoing constitutionally adequate representation to others. Such a conflict of interest violates the Sixth Amendment whether or not there is any showing of prejudice. See Holloway v. Arkansas, 435 U.S. 475, 484 (1978) (Sixth Amendment violation whether conflict had any impact on outcome of case).

The Sixth Amendment guarantee of the assistance of counsel is a guarantee of "untrammeled and unimpaired" loyalty; representation by an attorney "struggl[ing] to serve two masters" amounts to a denial of counsel for purposes of the Sixth Amendment. Glasser v. United States, 315 U.S. 60, 70, 75 (1942). In other words, an attorney forced to choose between the interests of two clients—codefendants with conflicting defenses, for instance, or a current and a former client—is no attorney at all as far as the Constitution is concerned.

Such a conflict of interest is created by constitutionally intolerable workloads. Where an attorney is unable to provide constitutionally adequate representation to all her clients, her clients' interest are in opposition: doing the constitutional minimum for one defendant necessarily takes time that could be spent providing the constitutional minimum to another. Public Defender, Eleventh Judicial Circuit of Fla. v. State, 115 So. 3d 261, 267 (Fla. 2013); s*ee also People v. Roberts*, 321 P.3d 581, 589 (Colo. App. 2013) (finding defense counsel's workload was sufficiently excessive to "allow the trial court to determine that a potential conflict of interest existed"); State ex rel. Missouri Public Defender Comm'n v. Waters, 370 S.W. 3d 592, 609 (Mo. 2012) (accepting too many appointments is a violation of ethical rules and the Sixth Amendment); In re Edward S., 92 Cal. Rptr. 3d 725, 746-47 (Cal. Ct. App. 2009) ("[A] conflict of interest is inevitably created when a public defender is compelled by his or her excessive caseload to choose between the rights of the various indigent defendants he or she is representing."); United States ex rel. Green v. Washington, 917 F. Supp. 1238, 1275 (N.D. Il. 1996) ("[C]onflicts of interest are necessarily created as a surfeit of clients compete for the scarce resources of available attorney time and attention."); Missouri Supreme Court Rule 4-1.7(a)(2) (conflict of interest where "there is a significant risk that the representation of one or more defendants will be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another defendant [or] a former defendant").

The undisputed facts show that MSPD attorneys operate under just such constraints, routinely pitting the constitutional demands of each defendant against several others. Supra, ¶¶ 48-54. As the uncontested expert testimony in this case indicates, the triage required by MSPD's workloads creates a potential and actual conflict of interest. Id. Although MSPD offices around the State juggle those constraints in different ways—some neglect all their defendants except the ones going to trial, others prioritize their less serious felony cases over their more serious cases, and still others overload the managing district defenders so that other attorneys can adequately attend to their cases—all offices must triage across defendants and cases, picking and choosing which defendants receive something approaching constitutionally adequate representation. Id.

Where, as here, a conflict of interest is raised before trial and conviction, no showing of prejudice is necessary to make out a Sixth Amendment violation. Holloway, 435 U.S. at487. Once a conflict of interest is established, prejudice is presumed, and courts need not undertake "nice calculations as to the amount of prejudice arising from its denial." Glasser, 315 U.S. at 76. Establishing prejudice would, after all, be impossible: In a conflict of interest case, "the evil … is in what the advocate finds himself compelled to refrain from doing." Holloway, 435 U.S., at 490. While "it may be possible in some cases to identify from the record the prejudice resulting from an attorney's failure to undertake certain trial tasks," to "judge intelligently the impact of a conflict on the attorney's [total] representation of a client," including such matters as potential plea negotiations, "would be virtually impossible." Id., at 490-491. Because every member of Plaintiffs' putative class , by definition, has yet to have their cases resolved, proof of MSPD attorneys' conflicts of interest is enough to prove that Plaintiffs' Sixth Amendment rights are being violated.

Even if Plaintiffs had not raised their claims prior to the resolution of their cases—which they have—the Sixth Amendment still would not require a showing of prejudice. Rather, a defendant alleging a Sixth Amendment violation need only show that a conflict of interest "actually affected the adequacy of his representation"—it needn't have rendered representation constitutionally deficient under the Strickland standard, and it needn't affect the outcome of the case. Cuyler v. Sullivan, 446 U.S. 335, 349-50 (1980).[12] Here, defender after defender testified without dispute that the conflict of interest affects every aspect of their representation. They give short shrift to some cases because they are trying to investigate others, advise defendants to accept plea deals because they know they will have to go to trial on other defendants' cases, prepare for some defendants' hearings at the expense of visiting other defendants, and make decisions about which witnesses to interview in one case on the basis of how much time they must allocate to their other cases. Supra, ¶¶ 48-54. Plaintiffs' conflicting interests, in other words, "actually affect[] the adequacy of [their] representation."

There is no dispute, in sum, that members of Plaintiffs' class have not received their Sixth Amendment due because their attorneys' loyalties are hopelessly divided.

C. PLAINTIFFS HAVE PRODUCED UNCONTROVERTED EVIDENCE OF SPECIFIC DEFICITS IN REPRESENTATION THAT RENDER MSPD ATTORNEYS' REPRESENTATION UNREASONABLE UNDER PREVAILING PROFESSIONAL NORMS.

In order to overturn a conviction under the Sixth Amendment, a defendant must show, first, deficient performance—that "counsel's representation fell below an objective standard of reasonableness . . . under prevailing professional norms"—and, second, prejudice—that the "deficient performance prejudiced the defense." Strickland, 466 U.S. at 688. But before a defendant is convicted, she must only show the former (deficient performance) to make out a Sixth [12] Although the Supreme Court and other courts have found that this rule does not apply to every possible conflict of interest, courts agree that Cuyler supplies the appropriate standard at least where the conflict arises between the interest of two co-defendants rather than in part from the self-interest of an attorney. See Beets v. Scott, 65 F.3d 1258, 1265 (5th Cir. 1995). So, for instance, Cuyler would not govern a case where defense counsel advised defendant on the conduct giving rise to the charge, see Covey v. United States, 377 F.3d 903, 907 (8th Cir. 2004), because the potential conflict of interest is between the defendant's interest and the defense attorney's self-interest, but it would apply to cases of multiple or serial representation, see Caban v. United States, 281 F.3d 778, 782 (8th Cir. 2002), because the conflict of interest in such cases is between two defendants. Here, MSPD attorneys face a conflict of interest between multiple defendants—time spent on one defendant's case is time not spent on another's—and Cuyler governs.

Amendment violation, which Plaintiffs have done along every possible measure of prevailing professional norms.

Strickland's "prejudice" prong is designed to measure whether counsel's deficient performance would "warrant setting aside the judgment of a criminal proceeding" and to identify principles that "should apply in federal collateral proceedings as they do on direct appeal or in motions for a new trial"—in post-conviction contexts, in other words. Strickland, 466 U.S. at 691, 697 (emphasis added). The considerations limiting relief where a defendant seeks to overturn a conviction—concerns for finality and judicial economy—simply do not apply when prospective relief is sought. Luckey, 860 F.2d at 1017.

In that sense, the Sixth Amendment resembles every other trial-related constitutional right. A court may require proof that the deprivation of the right had an impact on the outcome of a trial in order to grant the remedy of vacating a conviction, but vindicating the constitutional right before trial simply requires proof that the constitutional minimum is not being met. Thus, a defendant seeking to overturn her conviction on the ground that her constitutional right to a speedy trial was violated typically must demonstrate prejudice, see Barker v. Wingo, 407 U.S. 514, 530 (1972), while a defendant suing prospectively to obtain a speedier trial need not, see Braden v. 30th Judicial Circuit Court of Kentucky, 410 U.S. 484, 488 (1973). A defendant may file a § 1983 suit to demand a judicial determination of probable cause prior to detention even if that illegal detention would not void a subsequent conviction. See Gerstein v. Pugh, 420 U.S. 103, 119 (1975). And a defendant filing a pre-trial motion to suppress evidence or confront a witness need not show that inclusion of the evidence or a lack of cross-examination would result in conviction, even though such a showing would be required after conviction. Compare United States v. Green, 835 F.3d 844, 853 (8th Cir. 2016) and United States v. Love, 329 F.3d 981, 985-86 (8th Cir. 2003) with

United States v. Swift, 720 F. Supp. 2d 1048, 1058-60 (E.D. Ark. 2010) and United States v. Gonzalez-Marichal, 317 F. Supp. 2d 1200, 1203 (S.D. Cal. 2004). Since other rights relating to criminal trials can be enforced prospectively, without a showing of prejudice, the Sixth Amendment right to the effective assistance of counsel—"by far the most pervasive" of "all the rights that an accused person has," Cronic, 466 U.S. at 654—can as well. See Luckey, 860 F.2d at 1017.

To require a showing of prejudice for every Sixth Amendment claim would also mean that defendants whose evidence of guilt is overwhelming would have no entitlement to the effective assistance of counsel. After all, such defendants will never be able to show "a reasonable probability that if counsel had performed adequately, the result would have been different"—overwhelming evidence of guilt may guarantee a conviction even if counsel performs spectacularly. But "Gideon's guarantee to the assistance of counsel does not turn upon a defendant's guilt or innocence, and neither can the availability of a remedy for its denial." Hurrell-Harring, 930 N.E.2d at 227. No court could have assigned David Washington subpar counsel because he had confessed to the murders at issue in Strickland, and no one argued that Clarence Gideon's Sixth Amendment right was meaningless because he had surely broken into that pool hall. Although a showing of prejudice may be necessary to overturn a conviction after the fact, a Sixth Amendment violation is complete the moment a defendant is deprived of constitutionally adequate counsel, whether or not that deprivation affects the outcome of her case.

The second prong of the Strickland test, then, simply does not apply to a Sixth Amendment claim raised before trial. Instead, the only question in a prospective deprivation-of-counsel claim is whether Plaintiffs have demonstrated the first prong—that the representation provided by MSPD attorneys is unreasonable in light of prevailing professional norms. Here, Plaintiffs have shown that, from the moment they are appointed to a case, MSPD attorneys are unable to operate within the "range of competence demanded of attorneys in criminal cases." Strickland, 466 U.S. at 687.

As a starting point, Plaintiffs presented undisputed evidence from The Missouri Project study showing that MSPD attorneys spend far fewer hours per case—and far fewer hours per case task—than prevailing professional norms dictate. Using a process known as the "Delphi process," the study surveyed both private practitioners and public defenders in Missouri to pinpoint the amount of time defense counsel would need to spend on a particular case or task to comport with prevailing professional norms. Ex. R at 18.

The results are stark: On virtually every case type and task, MSPD attorneys spend a fraction of the time that actual practitioners estimated would be necessary to litigate a case according to the prevailing professional norms in Missouri. According to actual Missouri practitioners, who reached a consensus estimate using a forecasting method that Defendants have not challenged and that has been endorsed by the only experts who have provided opinions in this case, MSPD attorneys put in between 10 and 25 percent of the time they would need to prepare a C/D felony (1.7 hours versus 10.3), an A/B felony (8.7 hours versus 47.6 hours), a misdemeanor (2.3 hours versus 11.7 hours), or a juvenile offense (4.6 hours versus 19.5 hours) according to prevailing professional norms. Id. at 24. MSPD attorneys spend less than one-tenth the time that prevailing professional norms would dictate on investigating C/D felonies and misdemeanors. And prevailing professional norms require spending more than double the amount of time MSPD attorneys spend on crucial tasks in certain types of cases, such as communicating with defendants in murder or homicide cases (14.8 versus 34.6), investigating sex felony cases (25.6 versus 63.8 hours), or preparing juvenile cases for trial (2.1 versus 7.3). Id.

As further detailed supra, ¶¶ 11-43, according to the only measurement of prevailing professional norms supplied in this case—what actual practicing professionals tell us is the prevailing norm—MSPD attorneys spend a fraction of the time on each case type and task as that case requires. Short of being between two and ten times as efficient as the average attorney, MSPD attorneys cannot possibly live up to the prevailing professional norms on their cases, in light of the vast gaps between the time spent by MSPD attorneys working up a case and the time it would take to work up a case according to prevailing professional norms.

Moreover, three experts in the prevailing professional norms for public defenders have opined, without dispute, that MSPD's handling of cases is below objectively reasonable standards. As further detailed supra, ¶¶ 44-47, Plaintiffs' experts have opined that MSPD attorneys' workloads "make it impossible to provide constitutionally effective assistance of counsel"; allow "competent representation to some of their existing defendants by neglecting other defendants"; and foreclose necessary investigations, sufficient preparation for hearings and trials, and sufficient legal research. Defendants have challenged neither the qualifications of Plaintiffs' experts nor their conclusions about prevailing professional norms and the gap between those prevailing professional norms and the assistance of counsel provided in Missouri. The State Defendants have also failed to identify any experts of their own or any alternative to the data and conclusions produced by The Missouri Project.

Finally, "although they are 'only guides,' and not 'inexorable commands,'" codified standards of professional practice "may be valuable measures of the prevailing professional norms of effective representation." Padilla v. Kentucky, 559 U.S. 356 (2010); see also Frye, 132 S. Ct, at 1408. As Plaintiffs' experts concluded, MSPD attorneys are unable to comply with their own guidelines, with the ABA standards, and with the Model and Missouri Rules of Professional Conduct. Supra, ¶¶ 44-47. And this failure to comply is not as a result of strategic decisionmaking, but rather because of time and workload constraints. See id.

For instance, the ABA Criminal Justice Standard 4-4.1 (cited in Strickland itself) holds that the prevailing professional norms include a "duty to investigate in all cases," a duty that is "not terminated by factors such as the apparent force of the prosecution's evidence" or "a defendant's expressed desire to plead guilty." As documented supra, ¶¶ 64-73, MSPD attorneys routinely stop investigation once a defendant expresses a willingness to plead. Cf. Criminal Justice Standards 4-6.2(d) (Am. Bar Ass'n 1980) ("CJS Standards") (attorney should not advise guilty plea without adequate investigation). MSPD attorneys are routinely unable to interview key witnesses, even witnesses identified by their client. Courts are in agreement on an "almost absolute duty to investigate known (and readily available) sources of exculpatory evidence that would be consistent with the defendant's explanation of his innocence." LaFave, Criminal Procedure § 11.10(c) & nn.205-09 (collecting cases); White v. Roper, 416 F.3d 728 (8th Cir. 2005) (deficient performance where lawyer did not interview or call key witness and conducted only "superficial" investigation); Ex. P at Situation 3 (a lawyer too busy to interview an alibi witness "should not have accepted the case"); CJS Standard 4-4.3(c). They do not use expert witnesses, investigate sentencing alternatives, or take depositions nearly often enough. CJS Standards 4-4.1(d), 4-3.2; Ex. P at Situation 4, 7.

Various professional standards also require sufficient consultation with defendants, which includes "adequate and available space for confidential defendant communication," keeping the defendant "informed and advised" about representation, building "a relationship of trust and confidence immediately upon retention," and consulting with defendants before important hearings. CJS Standards 4-3.1(a), (e), 4-3.9; Ex. P at Situation 1, 9 ("too busy" is not a sufficient justification for a prolonged failure to communicate). Plaintiffs' uncontroverted evidence shows that MSPD attorneys routinely lapse in living up to this professional norm, often communicating with defendants in unsecured spaces, failing to update defendants for months at a time, meeting with the defendant for the first time far too late to build any rapport, and lacking the time to talk with defendants before important hearings. Supra, ⁋⁋ 56-63. As part of their general failure to communicate with defendants the way prevailing professional norms dictate, MSPD attorneys are not able to counsel their clients about plea bargains, a process which requires an explanation of the strengths and weaknesses of the defendant's case and a discussion of legal options and collateral consequences. Ex. P at Situation 12; CJS Standards 4-3.3(c), 4-5.4, 4-5.5, 4-6.2(d). Glaringly, MSPD attorneys often neglect to advise their clients of the immigration consequences of a potential plea agreement, thereby directly violating the Supreme Court's ruling in Padilla, 559 U.S. at 357, which held that "[t]he weight of prevailing professional norms supports the view that counsel must advise her client regarding the risk of deportation."

MSPD attorneys' pretrial practice fails to live up to the prevailing professional norms in myriad other ways. MSPD attorneys have a duty to request and review discovery as soon as practicable. See CJS Standard 4-3.7 (emphasizing "promptness" in reviewing pretrial discovery); Kimmelman v. Morrison, 477 U.S. 365 (1986) (not reviewing discovery until after deadline for filing motions to suppress was constitutionally ineffective performance). Yet MSPD attorneys often wait to review discovery until shortly before trial. Supra, ⁋⁋ 74-78. MSPD attorneys routinely fail to perform basic legal research or present affirmative defenses even where there is clear and supportive law. When they do file motions, they are often generic, boilerplate motions, which are "almost always (if not always)" inconsistent with satisfying the duty of competence. Ex. P at Situation 8; see also Ex. P at Situation 6; CJS Standards 4-1.5, 4-8.1 (post-trial motions); United States v. Coutentos, 651 F.3d 809 (8th Cir. 2011); United States v. Jones, 403 F.3d 604 (8th Cir. 2005).

MSPD attorneys' preparation for and handling of court appearances and trials similarly is well below prevailing professional norms. The prevailing professional norms for court appearances and trials require having the same attorney handle all (or most) court appearances, adequately preparing for all court proceedings, and being prepared to make legal arguments on everything from jury issues to post-trial motions. See, e.g., CJS Standards 4-4.6(a)-(b), 4-7.3, 4-8.1. A failure to object to key testimony, to impermissible judicial conduct, or to flawed jury instructions, or a failure to adequately prepare to examine or cross-examine a witness (for instance, by failing to amass impeaching evidence) all are unreasonable. See Gabaree v. Steele, 792 F.3d 991(8th Cir. 2015); Paulson v. Newton Corr. Facility, Warden, 773 F.3d 901 (8th Cir. 2014); United States v. Orr, 636 F.3d 944 (8th Cir. 2011); Green v. Norris, 394 F.3d 1027 (8th Cir. 2005); Reagan v. Norris, 365 F.3d 616 (8th Cir. 2004). In other words, in a situation where someone has done "almost nothing" until a few days before a felony trial, it is "hard to imagine a situation" where the lawyer could deliver adequate assistance of counsel. Ex. P Situation 10. Yet MSPD attorneys of necessity go to trial without more than a few days of preparation. Supra, ¶¶ 88-95.

Similarly, professional standards lay out guidelines for sentencing proceedings—namely, that attorneys should investigate sentencing alternatives and prepare for sentencing early in their representation of a defendant. CJS Standards 4-3.2, 4-8.3(a). A failure to do the factual investigation and research necessary to advocate for a sentencing alternative is a failure to live up to the prevailing professional norms. Ex. P Situation 11. Yet MSPD attorneys are unable to investigate sentencing alternatives, don't have time to do any work "early in their representation," let alone begin preparing for sentencing, and often cannot present more than boilerplate arguments at sentencing. Supra, ¶¶ 88-95.

To take one final example, excessive delay alone can violate professional norms. The Rules of Professional Conduct require attorneys to act "with reasonable promptness in representing a defendant," and an attorney who seeks multiple continuances simply because she has no time to work on a case, or a lawyer who forfeits the opportunity to make certain arguments on her client's behalf because she waited too long to investigate is by definition acting unreasonably. Rules of Professional Conduct 1.3(c); Ex. P at Situation 5; Marcrum v. Luebbers, 509 F.3d 489 (8th Cir. 2007). MSPD attorneys rely on continuances to manage their massive workloads, meaning they place their clients' cases at the mercy of a judge's discretion; when a continuance is denied, the consequences for the defendant are dire. Supra, ¶¶ 64-73, 88-95. Such delays also require defendants to wait to receive any assistance from MSPD attorneys, even while they sit in jail. In the meantime, key evidence is lost, memories fade, and attorneys lose valuable time to make legal arguments. Supra ¶¶ 64-73.

Finally, as noted above, the Missouri Supreme Court recently upheld the finding of its Disciplinary Hearing Panel, which had determined that the conduct of at least one MSPD attorney, Karl Hinkebein, had fallen below prevailing professional norms and suspended his bar license as a result. Supra, ¶¶ 124-54. As documented supra, id., MSPD attorneys from around the State worry about suffering the same fate as Mr. Hinkebein—and think their representation is just as deficient as his was. In addition to the uncontroverted evidence adduced from the only expert witnesses in this case, the Missouri Project study, and the facts surrounding representation, the Hinkebein decision makes clear that the state's highest court believes that neglecting to visit clients, filing boilerplate motions, and missing critical deadlines constitute inadequate representation—missteps that many of MSPD's attorneys believe that they, too, are making.

Plaintiffs have thus shown deficient performance—an "abdication—not an exercise—of [] professional judgment"—the entirety of the showing they must make to prove a Sixth Amendment violation prior to conviction. See McQueen v. Swenson, 498 F.2d 207, 216 (8th Cir. 1974).

D. BECAUSE PLAINTIFFS SEEK ONLY INJUNCTIVE RELIEF, THEY NEED ONLY SHOW A RISK OF PREJUDICE, WHICH THE UNCONTROVERTED EVIDENCE EASILY ESTABLISHES.

The purpose of prospective relief is, of course, to "prevent future violations." United States v. W.T. Grant Co., 345 U.S. 629, 633 (1953); Forest Park II v. Hadley, 336 F.3d 724, 731 (8th Cir. 2003) (courts must consider only the threat of irreparable harm—not actual harm—to issue a permanent injunction). That's why a prisoner "need not await a tragic event" to receive an injunction against unsafe prison conditions, see Helling v. McKinney, 509 U.S. 25, 33 (1993); an injunction may issue preventing law enforcement officers from illegally stopping plaintiffs in the future, whether or not the plaintiffs have yet been stopped, see de Jesus Ortega Melendres v. Arpaio, 695 F.3d 990, 998-99 (9th Cir. 2012); and a court can prevent a stranger from entering private property even if no trespass has yet occurred, see Roe v. Operation Rescue, 919 F.2d 857, 864-65 (3d Cir. 1990).

Because an injunction "can be utilized even without a showing of past wrongs"—to prevent an unlawful act that is "about to be committed"—Plaintiffs need only show that that their Sixth Amendment rights will be violated imminently, not that those rights have already been violated. See United States v. Laerdal Mfg. Corp., 73 F.3d 852, 855 (9th Cir. 1995). "Because the petitioners are seeking redress for the ongoing violation of their fundamental constitutional right that affects the manner in which the criminal case against them will be prosecuted and defended, it is enough that they have shown a violation of that right that may likely result in irremediable harm if not corrected." See Lavallee v. Justices in Hampden Superior Court, 812 N.E.2d 895, 905 (Mass. 2004).

Thus, even assuming Plaintiffs' Sixth Amendment rights have not yet been violated,[13] Plaintiffs are still entitled to summary judgment. Rather than waiting for their Sixth Amendment rights to be violated, they need only show a likely violation of their constitutional rights—that is, that there is a risk that MSPD attorneys' deficient performance will prejudice their cases.

The uncontroverted evidence demonstrates that Plaintiffs face an imminent risk of prejudice in the form of a worse plea offer, a foregone trial, or a botched trial that results in a longer sentence, among other possibilities. For the 98 percent of MSPD defendants who plead guilty, prejudice amounts to "a reasonable probability that the end result of the criminal process would have been more favorable by reason of a plea to a lesser charge or a sentence of less prison time." Frye, 132 S. Ct at 1409. And for the small fraction of MSPD defendants who go to trial or face a sentencing court, prejudice means "reasonable probability that, but for counsel's unprofessional errors, the result of the proceeding would have been different." Strickland, 466 U.S. at 694.

It is virtually self-evident that Plaintiffs represented by attorneys handling double or triple the recommended workload will see worse outcomes, and Plaintiffs have also amassed uncontroverted evidence to that effect. Supra, ¶¶ 119-23. MSPD attorneys, overloaded by cases, aren't in a position to adequately negotiate pleas for their defendants. They don't have the investigative or legal research bandwidth to identify defenses that might put pressure on the prosecution. Because defendants must wait so long to get any attention from their MSPD attorneys, they have less leverage in plea negotiations than a defendant represented by a constitutionally adequate attorney, as they are often more desperate to leave custody by the time an offer is on the table. And given that MSPD attorneys prepare for trials and sentencing proceedings in a fraction of the time recommended by experts in the field, their clients risk being convicted of a more serious offense or facing a longer sentence. Supra, ¶¶ 88-95.

Because Plaintiffs seek merely prospective relief, the risk of a longer sentence or more serious charge as a result of MSPD attorneys' deficient performance is sufficient to entitle Plaintiffs to summary judgment on their Sixth Amendment claim.

E. DEFENDANTS DO NOT DISPUTE THAT SOME PLAINTIFFS ARE DENIED COUNSEL ALTOGETHER AT CRITICAL STAGES AND THAT THESE DEPRIVATIONS CANNOT BE RECTIFIED WITHOUT REDUCTIONS IN WORKLOADS.

The current state of affairs in Missouri also violates the Sixth Amendment because MSPD attorneys are entirely absent for crucial portions of defendants' representation. First, thanks to the MSPD attorneys' general overload and the recent institution of "waitlists" to receive counsel, defendants around the State languish in jail for weeks or months after they are arraigned but before any attorney begins work on their case, in blatant contravention of the guarantees of the Sixth Amendment. Second, MSPD attorneys are not present during critical stages of the pretrial process. And third, in at least one district, an entire category of defendants are processed through the system with no attorney at all, at any point.

There are currently thousands of indigent defendants across Missouri who have been charged with a crime, held in custody and brought before the court, all without access to an attorney. Though MSPD's recent "waitlists" have formalized this deprivation of counsel, systemwide delays in beginning work on a defendant's case mean that many more defendants are delayed in receiving counsel than appear on waitlists. See Lavallee, 812 N.E.2d at 903 (designating a case to a public defender office not sufficient under Sixth Amendment; office must actually assign an individual attorney to work on case).

When cases lie dormant for months before public defenders actually begin work on them—whether defendants are formally on a waitlist or not—it becomes virtually impossible for a defendant to receive a fair trial. A significant number of defendants have pled guilty without ever receiving legal representation, preferring to start serving a sentence than to wait weeks or months for someone to take even a perfunctory look at their case. Supra ¶ 98(c). Other defendants have been forced to appear in court, where they could waive important rights or make damning admissions, without counsel present to advise them. Supra, ¶¶ 96-100. Moreover, witnesses move, memories are lost, and physical evidence deteriorates before a public defender turns attention to a case. Lavallee, 812 N.E.2d, at 903-04 ("The effects of the passage of time on memory or the preservation of physical evidence are so familiar that the importance of prompt pretrial preparation cannot be overstated.").

These waitlists violate the Sixth Amendment in at least four ways, any one of which would suffice to entitle Plaintiffs to relief. First, because some defendants do not receive the assistance of counsel at all for weeks or months after being arraigned, they remain in custody for longer than they otherwise would, and a Sixth Amendment violation has occurred even without any further harm to their case. Gonzalez v. Comm'r of Corr., 68 A.3d 624, 637, 655 n.9 (Conn. 2013).

Second, the time immediately after arraignment constitutes a "critical stage." For Sixth Amendment purposes, a "critical stage" is any portion of a criminal proceeding where the "substantial rights of the criminal accused may be affected." Mempa v. Rhay, 389 U.S. 128, 134 (1967). Plea bargaining, post-arraignment lineups, psychiatric evaluations, pretrial hearings at which bail is set, voir dire, sentencing and, of course, the trial itself are all such "critical stages." See Missouri v. Frye, 132 S. Ct. 1399, 1406 (2012); Estelle v. Smith, 451 U.S. 454, 470-71 (1981); Gardner v. Florida, 430 U.S. 349, 358 (1977); White v. Luebbers, 307 F.3d 722, 729 (8th Cir. 2002); Smith v. Lockhart, 923 F.2d 1314, 1319-20 (8th Cir. 1991). Where counsel has been denied to a defendant at a critical stage, no showing of prejudice is necessary. Malcolm v. Houston, 518 F.3d 624, 627 (8th Cir. 2008). Here, the time period immediately following arraignment is such a critical stage, because the substantial rights of the accused are affected—if investigation is not done during this time, crucial evidence and testimony can be lost, hamstringing the defendant throughout the trial process. See Lavallee, 812 N.E.2d at 904. The deprivation of counsel during this time violates the Sixth Amendment, with or without a showing of prejudice.

Third, during the time they are unrepresented, defendants are routinely forced to attend court proceedings without counsel; because they may waive constitutional rights or make incriminating statements at such proceedings, these proceedings qualify as critical stages, and having no counsel at such proceedings violates the Sixth Amendment. Supra, ¶¶ 96-100; see Sigler v. Bird, 354 F.2d 694, 697 (8th Cir. 1966) (any proceeding at which defendant may make statement that will impair defense at a later date is a critical stage).

And fourth, the Sixth Amendment requires appointment within a "reasonable time after attachment to allow for adequate representation at any critical stage before trial, as well as the trial itself." Rothgery v. Gillespie Cty., Tex., 554 U.S. 191, 212 (2008).[14] Waiting weeks to receive an attorney—or months for an attorney to even begin work on a case—does not amount to such a "reasonable time." See Lavallee, 812 N.E.2d at 234-37 (accepting petitioners' argument that "the designation of a case to" public defender is not the same as "actual assignment of an individual attorney to represent each petitioner" for purposes of the Constitution).

Moreover, as a result of the waitlists and other delays in receiving the assistance of counsel, some indigent defendants are forced to negotiate and accept guilty pleas without the benefit of counsel. Supra, ¶ 98(c). The plea bargaining process is a critical stage of the criminal proceeding—"plea bargains have become so central to the administration of the criminal justice system that defense counsel have responsibilities in the plea bargain process, responsibilities that must be met to render the adequate assistance of counsel that the Sixth Amendment requires in the criminal process at critical stages." Frye, 132 S. Ct. at 1407; McClain v. Swenson, 435 F.2d 327, 332 (8th Cir 1970). Defendants forced to negotiate pleas pro se, as a result either of being placed on waitlists or the standard delays that result from MSPD's ongoing crush of cases, must face a critical stage in the criminal proceeding without the guiding hand of counsel, a violation of the Sixth Amendment even absent prejudice.

Missouri's indigent defendants face other critical stages without counsel as well. For instance, MSPD's clients sometimes must undergo psychiatric examinations without any representation—a critical stage of the criminal process, since competency is often determined at these evaluations. Supra, ¶¶ 96-100; Estelle, 451 U.S. at 470-71; Raymond v. Weber, 552 F.3d 680, 684 (8th Cir. 2009). Some defendants are not accompanied by counsel when they attend the interview used to recommend a sentence in their case, another stage that can prove outcome-determinative. Supra, ¶¶ 96-100. MSPD defendants rarely have representation at initial appearances, during which bail is set and there is an opportunity to dismiss charges, yet another critical stage. Supra, ¶¶ 96-100; Lockhart, 923 F.2d at 1319-20. And many clients are deprived of the ability to communicate confidentially with their attorneys. Supra, ¶¶ 56-63; Geders v. United States, 425 U.S. 80, 92 (1976).

Finally, some categories of defendants do not receive counsel at all, at any point, despite meeting Missouri's indigency requirements and despite facing actual prison time. For instance, in Cole County, an informal administrative order dictates that defendants facing criminal nonsupport cases—who could face four years in custody (seven years if they have a prior felony conviction)—will not receive counsel. Ex. A at 51:10-55:19. Other defendants are told that if they want to exercise their right to trial, they must either hire a private lawyer or represent themselves. Ex. A at 59:13-60:22. If the Sixth Amendment is to have any meaning, this Court must find that these defendants' rights have been violated and construct relief that will remedy this ongoing deprivation.

Because Defendants have disputed none of the evidence showing that members of the Plaintiffs' putative class are not appointed counsel within a reasonable time after arraignment, are deprived of counsel at critical stages before trial, and, in at least one category of cases in one district, go without counsel altogether, Plaintiffs are entitled to summary judgment on their Sixth Amendment claim.

F. THE SIXTH AMENDMENT MUST ALLOW FOR PROSPECTIVE RELIEF.

Every court to consider the question—including the Missouri Supreme Court—has held that the Sixth Amendment can be violated—and relief accorded—even before a defendant is convicted. See, e.g., Luckey v. Harris, 860 F.2d 1012 (11th Cir. 1988); Wilbur v. City of Mount Vernon, 989 F. Supp. 2d 1122 (W.D. Wash. 2013); Tucker v. Idaho, 394 P.3d 54 (Idaho 2017); Simmons v. State Pub. Def., 791 N.W.2d 69 (Iowa 2010); State v. Peart, 621 So. 2d 780 (La.

1993); Lavallee v. Justices In Hampden Superior Court, 812 N.E. 2d 895 (Mass. 2004); State v. Young, 172 P.3d 138 (N.M. 2007); Hurrell-Harring v. State, 930 N.E.2d 217 (N.Y. 2010); New York Lawyers' Ass'n v. State, 763 N.Y.S.2d 397 (N.Y. Sup. Ct. 2003); Kuren v. Luzerne County, 146 A.3d 715 (Pa. 2016); State ex rel. Missouri Public Defender Comm'n v. Waters, 370 S.W. 3d 592, 607 (Mo. 2012) ("The constitutional right to effective counsel … is a prospective right….").[15]

Yet State Defendants' motion to dismiss claimed that the Sixth Amendment right to counsel could only be raised after a defendant was convicted. On the State's theory of the Sixth Amendment, courts must sit idly by and watch constitutionally ineffective counsel hamstring defendants' cases. Only after a conviction or guilty plea can a court intervene, and then only to overturn a conviction, and only on a showing of prejudice. Per the State, the Sixth Amendment's only role is to provide a mechanism for overturning convictions. But the Sixth Amendment guarantees each defendant "the Assistance of Counsel for his defence," not "the right to overturn a conviction upon a showing of prejudice." It is thus unsurprising that "[n]o case suggests that a court analyze whether the Sixth Amendment right to counsel has been preserved at all critical stages only by retrospectively determining that the lack of such counsel deprived a defendant of a fair trial"; "[t]o the contrary," as this Court has recognized, it is "well settled that the Sixth Amendment right to counsel is broader than the question of whether a court must retrospectively set aside a judgment due to ineffective assistance of counsel." Dkt. 69, at 34 (quoting Waters, 370 S.W.3d at 607 (internal quotations omitted)).

The quotations cited by the State Defendants in their motion to dismiss for the proposition that the Sixth Amendment cannot be violated until after conviction—that Plaintiffs must prove Strickland's "prejudice" prong—are inapposite dicta. In Lockhart v. Fretwell, 506 U.S. 364, 369 n.2 (1993), a criminal defense attorney failed to make an objection that, under then-governing Arkansas caselaw, would have prevented a conviction. Later, the Arkansas case in question was overturned. The Supreme Court held that the defendant's conviction should not be overturned even though the defendant satisfied Strickland's prejudice prong: It was undisputed in that case that the outcome of a trial would have been different had counsel made the objection in question; the question in that case was whether such proof that the defendant was convicted because of counsel's errors was sufficient to prove a Sixth Amendment violation, not whether such proof was necessary. Id. at 368, 369-70. Fretwell thus demonstrates that the sine qua non of a Sixth Amendment violation is not whether a petitioner was convicted as a result of an attorney's incompetence, but rather what effect an attorney's conduct had on "the reliability of the trial process," conviction or no. Id. at 369.

The State Defendants also quoted United States v. Gonzalez-Lopez, 548 U.S. 140 (2006), a case in which the Supreme Court held the defendant need not establish prejudice to make out the kind of Sixth Amendment violation at issue in that case. In that case, the Court stated that "the violation of [the right to effective assistance of counsel] generally requires a defendant to establish prejudice." Id. at 146 (emphasis added). But this is not the "general[]" case, in which a defendant is seeking to overturn a conviction. And Gonzalez-Lopez says nothing about the rare case of systemwide, prospective relief.

Finally, United States v. Lee, 715 F.3d 215 (8th Cir. 2013), dealt with a post-conviction Strickland challenge. Defense counsel struck jurors on account of their race; despite the difficulty of making such a showing, the Eighth Circuit held the defendant must show—as in virtually every case where a defendant is seeking to overturn an already imposed conviction—a reasonable probability that the outcome of the trial may have been different. Here, of course, Plaintiffs are not seeking to overturn any already imposed convictions.

Dicta in a case where a showing of prejudice was insufficient (Fretwell), in a case finding a Sixth Amendment violation with no showing of prejudice (Gonzalez-Lopez), and in a case straightforwardly applying Strickland post-conviction (Lee) have no bearing on whether Plaintiffs can raise a Sixth Amendment claim prospectively or whether Plaintiffs have raised claims for the actual or constructive denial of counsel. As explained supra, § IV.A-E, there are many Sixth Amendment violations that do not require a showing of prejudice, and Plaintiffs have demonstrated a Sixth Amendment violation in at least five different ways.

G. PLAINTIFFS ARE ENTITLED TO SUMMARY JUDGMENT ON THEIR CLAIMS UNDER THE DUE PROCESS CLAUSE, THE MISSOURI CONSTITUTION, AND VARIOUS MISSOURI STATUTES.

In addition to their Sixth Amendment claim, the uncontroverted evidence amassed by Plaintiffs proves that Defendants have violated others of Plaintiffs' constitutional and statutory rights.

Due Process Clause: The Due Process Clause provides additional protection of the right to counsel for both juveniles and adults. As to juveniles: In re Gault, 387 U.S. 1 (1967), held that juveniles accused of crimes in delinquency proceedings must be afforded the same rights as adults, including the right to counsel. Juvenile delinquency cases require, at minimum, the same amount of time and resources to defend as do criminal cases. In fact, representing children accused of crimes often demands more attention than a normal criminal case due to the defendant's age, relative lack of mental capacity, and the specialized nature of juvenile proceedings. See National Juvenile Defender Center, National Juvenile Defense Standards, 9 (2013). The Supreme Court in In Re Gault held that defense counsel's representation in a juvenile delinquency case should be the same as it would be in a traditional criminal case. See In re Gault, 387 U.S. at 36 (finding that "there is no material difference" between representation for adult and juvenile proceedings). Juveniles require their attorney's assistance, and by extension, their attorney's time and resources, "at every step in the proceedings" to examine the facts and develop potential defenses on behalf of the juvenile. Id. (quoting Powell v. Alabama, 287 U.S. 45, 69 (1932)). The defendant's age does not change the nature of the attorney-client relationship. See Model Rules of Prof'l Conduct R. 1.14(a) (Am. Bar Ass'n 2017) (even if the defendant's mental and decision-making capacity is diminished, "as far as reasonably possible, [attorneys shall] maintain a normal client-lawyer relationship with the client" (emphasis added)). A normal relationship should be maintained for "children as young as five or six years of age, and certainly those of ten or twelve." Model Rules of Prof'l Conduct R. 1.14(a) cmt. 1. Moreover, due to the "diminished capacity" of juvenile defendants and unique nature of the proceedings, delinquency representation often requires more specialized training and knowledge than criminal cases, particularly among attorneys who do not represent children on a regular basis. Among other things, attorneys must understand adolescent development to effectively interview and communicate complex legal principles to juveniles in an age-appropriate manner. See National Juvenile Defense Standards, 22 (2013). Additionally, defense counsel must specialize in, or at least be familiar with, juvenile case terminology, procedures, statutes, and relevant case law. Id. (citing Model Rules of Prof'l Conduct R. 2.1 (2010)).

Finally, it is worth noting that, to the extent that juveniles are represented by public defenders in transfer proceedings, where the court determines whether the juvenile should be tried as an adult, the stakes of such proceedings are exceedingly high and therefore require extra attention. See Kent v. United States, 383 U.S. 541, 553-54 (1966) (holding that a juvenile transfer proceeding is a "critically important" action and that the proceedings must satisfy basic due process and fairness requirements). As a result, representing children in transfer proceedings can be particularly demanding on an attorney's time. The undisputed facts regarding the violations of adult Plaintiffs' Sixth Amendment rights therefore also establish a violation of the Due Process rights of juvenile Plaintiffs, because the representation of juveniles requires, if anything, more time and care.

In addition, the Due Process Clause provides residual protection to adult criminal defendants in criminal justice and related proceedings. See Powell v. Alabama, 287 U.S. 45 (1932); Gagnon v. Scarpelli, 411 U.S. 799 (1973); Evitts v. Lucey, 469 U.S. 387 (1985). For the same reasons that MSPD's representation of indigent defendants violates the Sixth Amendment, it also violates the Due Process Clause.

Missouri Constitution*:* The Missouri Constitution provides "[t]hat in criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to appear and defend, in person and by counsel." MO. Const. art. I, §18(a). Missouri's courts have interpreted § 18(a) to require the same things as the Sixth Amendment of the United State Constitution, namely appropriate investigation, preparation and presentation of each defendant's case. See State ex rel. Missouri Pub. Def. Comm'n v. Pratte, 298 S.W.3d 870, 874 & n.4 (Mo. 2009). Providing representation of counsel to indigent defendants is "a duty which constitutionally is the burden of the State." State v. Green, 470 S.W.2d 571, 573 (Mo. 1971) (internal citation omitted). For the same reasons

Plaintiffs are entitled to summary judgment on their Sixth Amendment claim, therefore, they are also entitled to summary judgment on their claim under Article I, section 18(a) of the Missouri Constitution.

The Missouri Constitution also provides, nearly identically to the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, "[t]hat no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law." MO. Const. art. I, §10. Under section 10, the State of Missouri is required to ensure that all indigent defendants in criminal or juvenile delinquency proceedings receive meaningful and effective legal representation. Courts analyze constitutionality under section 10 of the Missouri Constitution the same way they analyze federal Fourteenth Amendment claims. State v. Nathan, 522 S.W.3d 881, 882 (Mo. 2017). The same uncontroverted facts that make out Plaintiffs' federal Due Process Clause claim therefore establish Plaintiffs claim to relief under Article I, Section 10 of the Missouri Constitution.

Missouri Criminal Codes: Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 600.042, 600.048: Mo. Rev. Stat. section 600.042 provides in relevant part, "[t]he director and defenders shall provide legal services to an eligible person . . . [f]or whom the federal constitution or the state constitution requires the appointment of counsel." Mo. Rev. Stat. § 600.042(4)(5). "A person who is charged or detained in any case listed in section 600.042 or who appears in court without counsel at any stage of a case, or any other person on behalf of such person, may request that legal representation be furnished to him or her by the state." Mo. Rev. Stat. § 600.048(2). "[T]he public defender system was a response to [the Missouri Supreme Court's] opinion in State v. Green, 470 S.W.2d 571 (Mo. 1971) that it was the duty of the State to provide legal services to an indigent accused of crime, so that § 600.042.3, taken in terms of that antecedent history and its own context, indicates that it is intended to require a public defender in the guilt determination stages of prosecution." State ex rel. O'Brien v. Ely, 718 S.W.2d 177, 180 (Mo. Ct. App. 1986) (citing State ex rel. Marshall v. Blauer, 709 S.W.2d 111, 112 (Mo. 1986)).

The legislative intent behind the statutes is clear by their plain language; the statutes were meant to codify criminal defendants' constitutional right to effective assistance of counsel. Stiers v. Dir. of Revenue, 477 S.W.3d 611, 615 (Mo. 2016) ("When interpreting a statute, the primary goal is to give effect to legislative intent as reflected in the plain language of the statute.") (citation omitted). For the same reasons that Defendants' conduct has violated the Sixth Amendment of the United States Constitution, it has also violated the statutory codifications of the right to counsel under Mo. Rev. Stat. sections 600.042 and 600.048.

Missouri Criminal Codes and Juvenile Codes: Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 211.061, 211.211; Mo. R. Juv. P. 126.01: Juveniles are entitled to appointed counsel if they cannot afford an attorney. In re Gault, 387 U.S. at 42. Missouri's criminal code and juvenile codes codify this right. Mo. Rev. Stat. section 211.061 states in relevant part that when a juvenile is subject to a detention hearing, "[n]otice of the date, time and place of a detention hearing, and of the right to counsel, shall be given to the juvenile and his or her custodian in person, by telephone, or by such other expeditious method as is available." Similarly, under Missouri law, juveniles have a statutory right to counsel in all delinquency proceedings. Mo. Rev. Stat. § 211.211. Section 211.211 also requires the appointment of counsel for the juvenile, if a request is made and the juvenile is indigent. Mo. Rev. Stat. § 211.211.2. See also In re D.J.M., 259 S.W.3d 533, 536 (Mo. 2008) (trial court committed reversible error because it did not appoint counsel for juvenile without a full record supporting waiver of right to counsel). Mo. R. Juv. P. 126.01 requires that juveniles shall be advised, prior to any in-custody interrogation that "the juvenile has the right to an attorney, and if the juvenile is unable to afford an attorney, that one will be provided." Mo. R.

Juv. P. 126.01.2. For the reasons explained supra, § IV.A-E, juvenile members of the Plaintiff class are not receiving their constitutionally mandated right to counsel; for that reason, Mo. Rev. Stat. § 211.211 is violated. And because the requirement to advise juveniles of the right to counsel is rendered hollow by the reality that the right will not be honored in Missouri state courts, the uncontroverted evidence shows that Mo. Rev. Stat. §§ 211.061 and Mo. R. Juv. P. 126.01 have been violated as well.

IV. CONCLUSION

For the reasons discussed above, Plaintiffs are entitled to summary judgment on all their claims. This Court should grant Plaintiffs' motion for summary judgment, hold that the Defendants are violating Plaintiffs' constitutional right to counsel, and issue an order requiring that Defendants propose a plan within 30 days to ensure that all indigent criminal defendants in the State of Missouri are provided with constitutionally adequate legal representation.

RESPECTFULLY SUBMITTED this 15th day of February, 2018.

JUSTIN CARVER, of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined on behalf of the Plaintiffs deposes and says:
EXAMINATION
BY MR. SCHERZER:
Q. Good morning, Mr. Carver.
A. Good morning.
Q. My name is Aaron Scherzer, and, as you know, I represent the plaintiffs in this case. How are you doing?
A. Fine. Thank you.
Q. Other than when we just met in the hallway, have we met previously?
A. Not to my knowledge.
Q. Okay. Have you ever been deposed before?
A. Yes.
Q. And how many times?
A. Just once.
Q. And what kind of case was that?
A. It was a civil case in the late 1990s in the city of Chicago. I was dating a gal who had been -- who had a major, like, jaw reconstructive surgery, was afterwards injured in a vehicle accident, all of which occurred before I knew her.

My understanding is that the reason that I was sought to be deposed was I could testify to limitations that she might have had as a result of, you know, kind of the injuries in the accident.
Q. Got it. And you haven't been deposed in your role at the MSPD, though?
A. Correct.
Q. Have you testified in any other cases at trial?
A. I don't believe I've testified at trial. I've certainly testified in court a number of times.
Q. Got it. And we'll get to that later. I'm aware of one particular instance we'll certainly talk about later.
A. Okay.
Q. And have you taken depositions yourself?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. About approximately how many?
A. No idea. More than I can count on my fingers and toes.
Q. Got it. So more than ten or 20?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So then you're very familiar with how this works. I'm going to ask you questions relevant to the case. You're required to answer truthfully and to the best of your ability. Remember, obviously, that you're here under oath. Does that all --

A. I understand.
Q. -- make sense? Okay.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. As you know, there's a court reporter here transcribing the deposition, so just for ease of the record, and, obviously, there's video as well, please wait until I finish the question, if you can, and -- before you answer, and if you have any questions about my questions, don't hesitate to make that clear. If you need to take a break, obviously, feel free to do so; I just ask that you try to answer the pending question before you do so.
A. Understand.
Q. Your attorney might object -- Ms. Shipma might object. Unless, of course, she instructs you not to answer, you should still go ahead and answer the question. Does that make sense?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And, of course, if you need a break at -- like I said, at any time, just let me know, and we can take one.
Okay. So how did you prepare for this deposition?

A. I met with Ms. Shipma, and I reviewed the data from my office, in terms of cases -- how many cases did we open, how many cases do we have open now.
Q. Okay. And when -- for how long did you meet with Ms. Shipma?
A. About two hours.
Q. Okay. And you said you reviewed data. What -- in what form were those --
A. Electronic.
Q. Electronic data. Okay. Did you review any other documents?
A. After I had received the notice of depositions and before I met with Ms. Shipma, I reviewed items that I had submitted to Ms. Shipma that I understand were disclosed to the parties as a part of the discovery process.
Q. Got it. Any items in particular that you recall that you reviewed?
A. There was an e-mail thread that was initially an e-mail that I sent to the court late December of 2016 with a couple of responses. There were -- there was a motion for caseload conference. There's a transcript in relationship to that. There was a motion to decline representation. There may have been something else. I can't remember. Those are the items that come to my mind.

Q. That's very helpful. And did those documents refresh your recollection about what's transpired?
A. Yes.
Q. And when you say "electronic data," just to return to that, can you just tell me more about that?
A. Sure. All of our case work is conducted in software called Lotus Notes. It's a case management database -- or system, and, you know, within that, say, client Joe Blow, certainly, he'll have all of the pleadings associated with this case, court dates, memos of the case, file action items to the investigator. So there's that -- specific case-related items with regard to specific clients, but then there are also views that I can access that will tell me how many cases does this lawyer have open now? How many cases did we open last year? How many cases did we close last year? There are -- you know, probably guesstimate, two dozen different views that I can access to slice down our case data more specifically. How many per venue, by case type.

Q. Got it. And does all of that data pertain to your district or is it statewide?
A. Purely my district.
Q. Okay.
A. There are -- there's kind of a wall setup so that I cannot access data for another district.
Q. Got it.
A. But I can access my district only.
Q. And your understanding is that each district defender has access to the data for his or her district?
A. Correct.
Q. Do other attorneys in your office have access to that data or just the district defender?
A. Everybody in my office has access to the same data.
Q. Got it. Okay.
A. Well -- if I can qualify that.
Q. Sure.
A. There are certain management views that I can see kind of over and above case data that employees would not be able to access, personnel records, things of that kind. But purely in terms of the case data, what I have access to is what my employees have access to.

Q. And --
A. Does that make sense?
Q. Yes.
A. Okay.
Q. And is it your understanding that that data, then, is transmitted to the central office from time to time or daily or ...
A. My understanding is that the central office has access to all of it at any given point in time.
Q. Okay.
A. Well, I say that -- some people within the central office have access to it at any given point in time. For example, my supervisor -- my direct supervisor is Ellen Blau. I understand that she is able to access the data from my office for the Columbia trial office for all of the other offices that she supervises. There may be people in our administrative office who don't have access to that information because they don't need it.
Q. Got it.
A. Does that make sense?
Q. Yes. Perfect. Thank you. In terms of the documents that you reviewed, did you bring any of those documents or any other documents with you here today?

A. No, sir.
Q. Okay. I want to turn -- I'll just do this slightly out of order, given the documents that we're discussing. I want to turn to what I'm going to mark as Plaintiff's Exhibit 17.
(Deposition Exhibit No. 17 was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) I'll give you a chance to just glance at it. Obviously, not read the whole thing, since it's 60 pages.
A. Yes. I'm with you. Thank you.
Q. Okay. Do you recognize this document?
A. I do.
Q. And what is it?
A. This is the transcript of a -- sort of a part 1 of a case conference hearing that was held in Cole County in November 2017.
Q. Okay. And do you see the date on the middle of the first page?
A. I do. It says November 7.
Q. And the case name is State of Missouri v. Quentin Williams; is that right?
A. Yes, sir.

Q. And do you see the judge on the top of the page?
A. Yes, sir. Judge Joyce.
Q. Okay. So I want to get much more into detail on this later on -- and, obviously, I haven't asked you background questions first, but I'm asking you about this now for the following reason. Can you turn to page 8- -- see the Bates page numbers on the bottom, page 82. It's Bates 4.
A. Yeah, I'm sorry. I was looking at the -- 82.
Q. Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. So you see there are a number of exhibits --
A. Yes?
Q. -- affidavits and caseload printouts.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you -- I'm asking you about this early on in the deposition on the chance that -- obviously, you don't have it with you. Would someone in your office be able to get this -- these documents before the end of the day, by chance, or -- if not, it's fine.
MS. SHIPMA: Can we go off the record for a second?
MR. SCHERZER: Sure.
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 9:11 a.m. We're off the record.
(Discussion off the record.)
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 9:13 a.m., and we're back on the record.
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Okay. Mr. Carver, by who are you employed?
A. The State of Missouri. Specifically, the Missouri State Public Defender System.
Q. And what's your current title?
A. District defender of Area 19.
Q. And how long have you been in that position?
A. Since the end of September 2014.
Q. Okay. And prior to that, did you serve with the MSPD in another capacity?
A. I did. I was the district defender in the Fulton office, which I think was Area 12, and I was the district defender there -- I started as an assistant public defender in Fulton in 2002 -- either in 2005 or 2006 -- I can't remember -- I was promoted to district defender, and so from that -- 2005 to 2006, up until 2014, I was the district defender in Fulton.

Q. Okay. And then in 2014, you switched and became district defender in Area 14?
A. Nineteen.
Q. Nineteen. Sorry.
A. Yes, sir.
Q. And why did you make that switch?
A. The entire time I had been working in Fulton, I lived in Jefferson City and just drove to Fulton, and, you know, the vacancy came open in Jefferson City, and I took the anecdote [sic] of, you know, I could drive five minutes to the office or I could drive 30 minutes to the office. Driving five minutes to the office sounds great. So -- and, you know, as a practical matter, all of the time I had been working in Fulton, if the kid got sick at school, all of that fell on my wife. So for the family dynamic perspective, it would be more helpful to have me in Jefferson City.
Q. Got it. And which counties are included in District 19?
A. Cole County, Miller County, and Moniteau County.
Q. Okay. And what does it mean to be a district defender?

A. It means that I am the supervisor in that office and that I'm responsible for hiring, for doing in-house training, for, you know, any employee discipline issues. I deal with those in coordination with our human resource office and with general counsel. Invoices, budgets -- you know, there are administrative components to the thing. In addition to that, I'm a lawyer, and, you know, the reality of our caseload situation is, I have to carry a caseload, and so as part of that, I go to court and do my best to work on my cases.

Q. And you mentioned that you report to Ellen Blau; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And what is her title? Do you know?

A. I believe she is -- her official title is the trial division director.

Q. Okay. And she's located in the central office?

A. She -- she supervises the entire state, and so commonly when I call her, she's in her car driving, so -- I know that from time to time, she does work out of the Columbia office. You know, primarily, I think that there's an administrative office in St. Louis -- or there's at least a desk that she utilizes in St. Louis, but she spends a lot of time on the road.

Q. And you mentioned some of this previously, but as the district defender, do you have discretionary authority over some things that your line attorneys don't have discretion over, in terms of day-to-day management of the office?

A. Are you talking about, like, you know, how things work within the office and stuff like that?

Q. Uh-huh. Yes.

A. Yes.

Q. Are you familiar with the standard litigation practices in your office?

A. What do you mean?

Q. Are you familiar with either -- with, say, policies and procedures that you've set up or team members in your office have set up for how your office operates and how the line attorneys operate?

A. We don't have, like, any sort of formal policies or procedures that are Area 19 specific.

Q. Okay.

A. You know, there are -- the agency has sort of standards and guidelines that all employees are sort of directed to follow. I have my own, you know, sort of supplementary or additional expectations for the lawyers that are not, like, reduced to writing in some sort of formal document. You know what I mean?

Q. Uh-huh. So you communicate those verbally with your line attorneys?

A. Right. Right. Yeah.

Q. Do you do that individually, or are there team meetings?

A. In a variety of formats. I mean, you know -- for example, last week we had an office meeting, and, you know, as a part of that, there's sort of administrative issues that were coming up in the context of Cole County, so I -- we talked about what those issues were, and I gave the lawyers several ways that they can handle the issue. But, ultimately, I didn't mandate that they handle it in any specific manner but gave them, you know, kind of some -- Hey, these are the different ways that you can deal with it. You know, deal with it one way or another, but don't just ignore it.

Q. Got it. Got it. Do you talk to most of the line attorneys in your office every day?

A. No. Part of that is -- you know, right now my caseload is in Miller County, and so I spend -- right now I'm spending a considerable amount of time outside of the office going to court in Miller County, going to the Miller County jail, and so there are lawyers who I may see once a week.

Q. Got it. How many days a week do you estimate you're spending in Miller County?

A. Hmm. That's hard to say. I'm going to say one or two, just for court. In addition, there are other things that take me down there, jail visits, things come up, I need to go, so ...

Q. So with court and the jail visits, do you think two or three days a week? Does that seem right?

A. Probably. But it -- you know, certainly, it's going to vary.

Q. It depends.

A. There may be a week where I don't go there at all, but then there may be other weeks where I may be there four times, so -- right. But that's -- two or three is probably a decent rough estimate.

Q. Okay. Does your -- you mentioned the Lotus Notes program for attorney workload.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Does your office gather statistics about how many hours attorneys spend on various tasks, or did it at any point?

A. It did. For a considerable period of time, every lawyer in the agency was required to log their time in five-minute increments. And over -- sort of in the time that I've been with the agency, there was a time where we started and we continued it, and then it stopped. And then we started it again, and it continued, and then it stopped. I can't -- I can't recall, you know, when we started, when we stopped; when we started, when we stopped.

Q. Okay. And do you have any knowledge of why you stopped this most recent time?

A. What I was told by Director Barrett was that we had been doing it long enough that we accumulated, you know, a substantial body of data, and if -- what he articulated was, he felt like we have all of the data we need. You know, right now additional data would not be beneficial, and logging the time just gives the lawyers one more thing to do, and, frankly, their time is short. Personally, I was finding it would take me 20 minutes a day to log all of my time, and when you're trying to squeeze every hour out of every day, you know, if you aggregate that, you know, 330 lawyers or whatever we have, you know, 300 working days of the year or whatever, that's a pretty good amount of productivity that's lost just typing in data that's really not -- that we're really not getting anything out of -- any additional benefit out of.

Q. Since you'd already logged it for such a long period --

A. Correct.

Q. Got it. And so, in other words, the -- your understanding of the rationale is that it was taking time away from cases and representing clients?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Okay. I'll move on away from the background section, just to note that any remaining questions that I ask, unless I indicate otherwise, are about your district and -- rather than the state as a whole. And by "your district," I mean, obviously, District 19, not the Fulton office.

A. Fair enough.

Q. All right.

A. Okay.

Q. So you mentioned that in addition to all of your responsibilities as district defender, you also have your own caseload; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And about how many cases a year do you, yourself, handle?

A. Off the top of my head, I couldn't tell you how many cases a year. I did look at my caseload yesterday, and I can tell you that as of yesterday, I had 213 open cases.

Q. Okay.

A. And that would include everything from -- I had seven misdemeanor cases that were open, all the way up to one murder case.

Q. Got it.

A. Predominantly, those are felony cases. About 150 are felonies.

Q. 150 felonies, and does that mean 63 misdemeanors, or is there some other category?

A. Probation violation cases. Some of the probation violation cases are probation violations cases on felony charges. There are some misdemeanor cases.

Q. Okay. But you don't have in your head an exact breakdown of the remaining 63 how many are probation violations, how many are misdemeanors?

A. I want to say about 30 to 35 of the 213 are probation violations.

Q. Okay.

A. As of yesterday, I had seven misdemeanor cases.

Q. All right.

A. So now I'm trying to do math in my head while we're talking.

Q. Right.

A. So I would say -- I said, you know, sort of initially as a ballpark, 150 would be felony cases. Trying to do the math, about 170, it sounds like, is a better estimate of how many open felonies I have right now.

Q. And is that 213 that you have open as of yesterday, is that atypical of what your caseload has been in the last, say, three months, or does that seem -- does your caseload seem about what it's been for the past three months?

A. A couple of months ago, about September or October, somewhere in there, it had spiked up to 300, and so it's actually been -- it's been a little bit higher, at least within this calendar year. This calendar year has been a complete mess for my office.

Q. And when you say it spiked to 300 cases, was that just for a one-month period or for longer?

A. Yeah, about a month -- about a month, give or take.

Q. And what was the cause of that spike?
A. We've had an unusual amount of turnover in the Area 19 office in calendar year 2017. We lost -- thus far this year, we've lost five lawyers. In -- you know, we've been hiring replacements as we go. One of the replacement lawyers that I hired, he's Army Reserves. We had him, you know, kind of on staff for two months, and then he got mobilized. And so as of July, he went out on military duty, and we're not expecting him back until July 2018.
So -- and, frankly, even preceding January 2017, we had a lawyer go out on leave in September of 2016. So, I mean, effectively, we've been shorthanded at least one lawyer, sometimes two, since 2016, and so the turnover has substantially contributed to my caseload. The other thing that has contributed to my caseload is -- you know, we've sort of changed how we're doing things in Area 19 in an attempt to manage the caseload of the assistant public defenders. And, you know, you note kind of through the documents that you received in discovery that the -- about the only plan that we could cook up was to communicate the situation to the courts, and if they were going to order the public defenders to represent, what I told the judges is, Look, if we're telling you we can't take any more cases and you put us in it anyway, I'm going to assign it to myself and not continue to assign cases to an assistant public defender who has already got too many. And so it -- that has been an additional factor in my caseload sort of spiraling in 2017.

Q. Got it. And you said you had five attorneys leave in the past year. Do you mean in calendar year in 2017?
A. Correct. Yes, sir.
Q. And how many attorneys total -- line attorneys, not counting yourself, does the office have?
A. There's seven line attorneys not counting myself.
Q. So five of the seven left within the past year?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. Is that -- what was the basis for that turnover?
A. A variety of reasons. The first two to leave in early 2017 both had babies, and Grandma and Grandpa lived in other parts of the state, and so they -- each of those lawyers transferred to public defender offices in other parts of the state for family reasons. The lawyer that left in June, I believe it was, retired. He had a good number of years of service in and was eligible to retire, and he did. The lawyers that left more recently in August or September, one went to work for the attorney general's office, another went into private practice. Both -- in spite of the caseload controls that we implemented in January, both remained concerned about their caseload and didn't feel like they were practicing law the way they wanted to, had other opportunities, and took them.

Q. Okay. And that -- do you talk to each of those attorneys -- did you talk to each of those attorneys before they left the office?
A. Yes.
Q. And is that the basis for your knowledge of why they left?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Are you concerned by this turnover?
A. Oh, absolutely. Yeah. Absolutely. And the turnover -- you know, the turnover has been a problem with the agency as long as I've been around. And, you know, there's turnover that's just going to happen, that you really can't avoid, but there's turnover that absolutely is avoidable. And, you know, the most common reasons lawyers cite in leaving is either pay or caseload or both. And, you know, the problem is, is that there's so many -- there's so many problems. You know, we -- typically, the lawyers that come to the public defender's office are coming with little legal experience, because, frankly, we pay bottom dollar. You know, I've never had a senior partner at a major law firm apply for a job as a public defender. Likewise, I've never had a sitting circuit judge apply for a job as a public defender. It just -- I mean, it's not happened in the entire time I've been doing this, at least in my office. You know, typically, we get people who are looking for some experience. We spend a substantial amount of time and money training those lawyers to get them up to speed as quickly as possible. You know, when they leave and go on to private practice or go into other public service positions or what have you, you know, all of the investment in that lawyer is effectively lost. Also, that lawyer is going to leave behind a block of cases. Those have to get reassigned, typically, within the office, and that causes, then, for the lawyers that remain that are already struggling with their caseload, now we're giving them that many more cases. It causes a significant interruption in the representation, in terms of the client relationship.

You know, right now we've got clients who are on their fourth or fifth lawyer. And, you know, from -- you know, frankly, if it were my kid who kept getting a new lawyer every two or three months and the lawyer says, Look, hey, give me some time; I've got to get up to speed. You know, I'll look at the thing, I'll come talk to your child in jail, and they get up to speed, and they go talk to the child in jail, and then they leave, and then the case gets reassigned -- I mean, if that had been my child, I would be furious. And we see that happening, like, over and over and over again. You know, for -- a lot of our clients have distrust in the legal system and have distrust in public defenders, and so we kind of start with the -- you know, sort of with a creditability gap in the eyes of a lot of our clients anyway, and when they have that experience with the public defender's office, they don't have any faith in their representation.

You know, from an efficiency perspective, the new lawyer has to duplicate all of the work that was done before. You know, the fact that the old lawyer read the police reports doesn't help the new lawyer; the new lawyer has got to read them all over again. You know, all the videos, they've got to watch them all over again. Got to go meet with the client, talk to them all over again. So there's a significant inefficiency there.

You know, we've had clients who end up saying, To heck with it; I'll just cut a deal with the prosecutor and go to prison pro se. I mean, the turnover is -- it creates significant issues, sort of in a number of different areas. And I spend a ton of time hiring, just -- so ...

Q. Because you're responsible for the hiring for the district office?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And that's something you need to do on top of all of your other responsibilities?

A. Right.

Q. Okay. And when you say -- you said the two primary reasons, based on what these folks are telling you for why they leave, is pay and caseload; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And I assume that means low pay and high caseload?

A. Right.

Q. And you said that your office pays bottom dollar. Are you -- first of all, is the salary for, say, a -- you know, a first-year, lowest level assistant public defender, is that the same across the state, or does it vary office by office?

A. Same statewide.

Q. Okay. And do you know what that rate is?

A. $39,000 a year and change.

Q. Okay. And the -- do you know what the rate is for even the most senior assistant public defender?

A. I want to say -- and I'm just going off memory. This is a ballpark. About 64, 65,000.

Q. Okay.

A. And under our existing sort of structure, you know, once they hit that amount, there's no room for advancement, unless they go into management or, like, the death penalty division or the commitment defense unit.

Q. Okay. So someone could be an attorney for 30 years and still be making --

A. They could have tried a hundred murder cases, and we'll still pay them $65,000 a year or whatever it is.

Q. Okay. And then the other thing that you mentioned was that some individual defendants could have four or five lawyers during the course of the case. I understand how that is, but just for the record, could you explain how that is that that happens based on the turnover?

A. Absolutely. So say the client, Bob, is assigned Public Defender No. 1, and Public Defender No. 1 then quits. I'm going to hire a replacement for Public Defender No. 1 and try to find a new lawyer within the office for Client Bob. Client Bob now gets Public Defender 2, whoever that is -- maybe it's the new person; maybe it's somebody else. If No. 2 quits, I got to do it all over again. And so on and so forth.

The other thing that happens is -- at least in the Area 19 office, you know, we try to assign our cases geographically, in that we've got one lawyer that does Moniteau County. Right now the only lawyer getting new Miller County cases is me, and everybody else is getting new cases out of Cole County. And that's an efficiency thing. You know, from a client-relationship perspective, you know, it would be better if Bob had one lawyer in Cole, Miller, and Moniteau, in the event that Bob had cases in all three. But, frankly, we're just not able to do that because of the volume of cases that we've brought. So if Bob's got charges in all three counties, Bob is going to have three different public defenders from my office. If two lawyers in Cole County quit, for example, I will seek to hire replacements, but at that point, the question of which lawyer goes to what county is going to be up for grabs, and I may take a lawyer out of Moniteau County, put them in Cole County, and then place the new person in Moniteau County.

It's sort of -- frankly, it depends on a million and one different things, but every now and then, we have to move a lawyer from one jurisdiction to another, and that, then, can interrupt -- I mean, that just -- that will cause an interruption in the relationships for the clients whose lawyer quit, but it's also, then, going to interrupt the cases in which the lawyer was sort of pulled out and transferred back in.

Does that make sense?

Q. No, that makes sense.

A. Okay. Fair enough. I'm not sure if I explained that very well.

Q. No, no.

A. Okay.

Q. And have you either received directly or heard about complaints from individual defendants, when they -- or their family, when they have re- -- have four or five different attorneys that -- from your office that have been on their cases during the pendency of the case?

A. Absolutely. Yes.

Q. Okay. And just in -- all right. Well, I'll scratch that. I'll move on.

And when someone leaves -- I'm sorry. To go back to what you were saying, about how you divide up based on geography. You said that's for efficiency sake. Can you just explain for the record why that is?

A. Sure. The lawyers and myself spend a considerable amount of time in court, and the court dockets -- the judges in county -- in Cole County, for example, don't coordinate their dockets with themselves very well. They definitely don't coordinate their dockets with judges in Miller County and Moniteau County. And if I assigned cases by client instead of by county, the lawyer would find themselves double- and triple-booked on a regular basis, in that I've got to be in Moniteau County at nine o'clock and I've got to be in Cole County at nine o'clock, for example.

Q. Got it. And when someone leaves your office, is their position filled right away?

A. Filled as quickly as I can do anything, but right away, no. I mean, it may take -- you know, understand when a lawyer leaves -- hopefully, we get 30 days' notice. That's what we ask for. Generally -- generally, lawyers have been good about giving it. You know, when -- so I've got to -- as soon as I receive a notice, the first thing I do is request permission to post that vacancy, which, generally, is approved right away. The position will get posted the following Wednesday. We leave it open for two weeks to allow all applicants to apply, and then we start the interview process. And, you know, realistically, as a practical matter, I never have the replacement on board, you know, at -- on the -- on or by the lawyer that's leaving, on or by the next day. Generally, we'll go a couple of weeks or a month before the replacement starts. Sometimes that's because they have to move and relocate; sometimes that's because it takes me forever to finish the hiring process. Sometimes that's -- you know, it could be a variety of reasons.

Q. Okay. And during that time -- in between when an attorney has left and when you've hired their replacement, your office is obviously short-staffed; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And who picks up the cases from the attorney who has left in that interim period?

A. Well, prior to January 1, 2017, we would reassign the cases internally as best as we could. As of January 1, 2017, we sort of changed that. What we would do is assign out those cases, to the extent that we could, without making -- without having the individual lawyers take more cases than they could. Invariably, there was always a gap of cases that we could not reassign internally, and on those cases, we would file a motion to decline representation or a motion for caseload conference or whatever.

Q. Okay. And I'll certainly get into much more detail on that --

A. Sure.

Q. -- later on. And even just given the logistical delays in posting, do -- putting that aside, do you sometimes have difficulty finding someone to take the position?

A. Absolutely. Yes. Especially this year. Hiring has gotten much more difficult within the public defender's office. The applicant pools are shrinking and the applicants within the pool is less than what it had been in years past.

Q. And you said hiring within the public defender's office. Do you mean your office or statewide or both?

A. Well, that's been my experience in my office, and in talking to other district defenders in other offices, that's what they tell me too.

Q. Got it. And when someone applies, are they applying to Area or District 19, or are they applying to the MSPD system overall?

A. Whichever they like. So on our application for employment, on the bottom of the first page, the applicant is given the opportunity to check geographic regions of preference. So they could check Jefferson City, Columbia, St. Louis, Kansas City, or they could check all, or if they want to go work in West Plains, they could just check the West Plains box. So, I mean, it's sort of up to the applicant. And it's my understanding that HR will forward that application to the offices within the geographic preference that are hiring, you know, within the period of time relevant to the application.

Q. And you mentioned there's often difficulty finding applicants and qualified applicants. Do you have a sense of why that is?

A. Well -- yes. I mean, pay, caseload. The legal market has certainly turned around since, you know, the crash in 2008 or whenever it was, and my impression is that the public defender's office is not the pick of most graduates right now. And, you know, there's been a lot of adverse publicity about the public defender's office. You know, I mean, it's sort of in the media that we're declining cases, that we're all overwhelmed, that -- you know, the Hinkebein decision certainly caused quite a stir. So it's an agency that's not getting a lot of positives out there in the community right now.

Q. And so to clarify, it's -- the same reasons that cause -- many of the same reasons that cause your attorneys to leave -- low pay, high caseload -- are the same reasons that you have difficulty recruiting new folks to come to the office?

A. That's my impression.

Q. And you said within -- this has gotten much worse within the past year; is that right? In terms of recruiting?

A. Yes. Absolutely.

Q. Okay.

A. Yeah. I mean, it's kind of funny, you know, like, back in 2008, when the economy, you know, completely fell apart, I remember hiring in those times, and everybody wanted to be a public defender. You know, we'd get a hundred applicants for a position, even in Fulton, you know?

Q. Uh-huh.

A. And now the economy has certainly turned around, and, you know, sort of as -- as this year has unfolded and the public defender struggles have sort of become more known in the community, you know, I -- I had fewer applicants for the position that we just filled than the ones that we had even -- even, say, like, in January of this year -- of 2017, so ...

Q. Got it.

A. And there's not been -- in my opinion, there has not been, like, a huge economic swing in those intervening months.

Q. Okay. So I want to go back to some basic questions about your office.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So you have seven attorneys in the office, although one of them is on leave in the Army Reserves; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And you mentioned that there's another -- there was another individual who was on leave, but is that individual back or ...

A. In September of 2016, one of my lawyers went on leave, was scheduled to return in January of 2017. Instead of returning to my office, he actually ended up transferring to another office, and so he left my office.

Q. Okay.

A. That's one of the lawyers that ended up leaving.

Q. Got it. Okay. So you currently have six line attorneys plus yourself in the office?

A. Correct.

Q. With -- plus this individual who is on leave in the Army Reserves?

A. Correct. Tangentially, my investigator has been on leave.

Q. Got it. And how many of those -- you mentioned already that you handle felony cases. How many of those six line attorneys handle felony cases?
A. All of them.
Q. Okay. And how many of them handle misdemeanors?
A. I believe all of them do.
Q. How many of those attorneys handle juvenile cases?
A. Just one.
Q. Does that attorney handle only juvenile cases or ...
A. No. Also handles a regular mix of felonies, misdemeanors, probation violations. When I say "regular mix," not serious felonies, though. That lawyer has been practicing -- she passed the February bar, joined us in about June.
Q. Okay. And so she then picked -- immediately picked up all of the juvenile cases that were in the office or ...
A. Right. But, typically, we've got two to three open at any given point in time.
Q. Okay. And that's two or three cases in all three -- some in all three counties?

A. Generally, the juvenile cases that we get are in Miller County only. In Cole County, we do not receive a single juvenile case, and the reason for that is that the county actually has a contract with some private lawyers where they pay the private lawyer, you know, like, a reduced rate, and the private lawyer will represent an indigent juvenile. And so as a result, we get zero juvenile cases in Cole County.
Q. And when you say "contract with a private lawyer," are those private lawyers who are at law firms or ...
A. Yes. Yes.
Q. And are those private lawyers who do solely juvenile cases, or it's a mix of -- it's part of their caseload?
A. Generally, it's a mix of whatever. You know, like -- they'll do some family, they'll do some criminal, maybe they'll do a little bit of civil stuff, and then some juvenile appointments.
Q. I'm sorry. When I -- my question earlier wasn't clear. When I said that -- I mean, are these individuals at medium-sized law firms in Jefferson City, or are they solo practitioners at smaller law firms?

A. So the one I can think of -- I think he's a solo now. Another one that I can think of is a partner in a firm, but it's a -- you know, it's Jeff City, like, every firm is kind of small, you know what I mean? You know, I would be surprised if the entire firm had five lawyers. Like, I -- I don't think that they have that many people.
Q. Okay. And just to tie up this juvenile piece, when you said there -- there are two or three cases at any given time in Miller County --
A. Correct.
Q. -- is that -- is your sense that that's the total number of juvenile cases in Miller County at any time, or is someone else receiving some of those cases?
A. My sense is that there are probably a bunch of other cases out there that we're not seeing and we're not getting.
Q. Okay.
A. And, likewise, in Moniteau County, I can't think of the juvenile case that we've had out there. Maybe we've had one. Surely at some point they've detained a juvenile. I have no idea what, if any, counsel that juvenile had.

Page 44

Q. Okay.
A. And, you know, even in the Cole County world where, you know -- I had a case in Cole County where a 16-year-old had been certified, and I did not do the certification because it was, you know, the appointed lawyer, and the certification hearing was not well done.
Q. Okay. So just speaking about Moniteau County, you're not aware of who, if anyone, is representing the juveniles in that county?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay.
A. I mean, certainly, if a juvenile applied for public defender services and they qualified, we would represent them. I don't recall having received any Moniteau juvenile cases.
Q. And when you say that, you mean since the time that you took over the district defender position in 2014?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay.
A. I mean, there may be one or two out there. I'd have to go back and look, but I can't think of a name or a charge or a face or even the memory of the existence of one of them.

Q. Okay. Other than yourself, how long has the most experienced attorney in your office been practicing?

A. The most experienced attorney started practicing approximately 2010. And then after that, the next most experienced attorney has been practicing a little over three years.

Q. Okay. And how long has the least experienced attorney in your office been practicing?

A. He started practicing November 13th.

Q. Okay. So less than a month?

A. Correct.

Q. And is that attorney carrying felony cases?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Do you -- I'm not holding you to an exact number, but do you have an estimate of how many cases that attorney is handling?

A. He's got about 70 cases open right now. I couldn't tell you off the top of my head how many are felonies or misdemeanors or probation violations.

Q. And are those primarily cases -- new cases that were opened within the past month or cases that he took over from someone else in your office?

A. Typically, the bulk of them -- say, 50 -- were cases that had been sort of -- that he took over from somebody else who had left or were ones that came in after somebody left and we filed a motion on but then were able to open up when he started. I would say approximately 20 were, like, brand-spanking-new cases that came in after he started.

Q. So those 50 cases -- going to the 50 cases that were already existing in your office, how long after he started did he pick up those -- did he pick up all those 50 -- sorry. Scratch that.

Did he pick up all of those 50 cases at once?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And how long after he started did he pick up those cases?

A. We started assigning him cases out of those 50 the very first day. And it probably took a few days for staff to click all of the buttons and make -- you know, do all of the stuff that we have to do to transfer a file, but, effectively, within the first week, he had received all of those 50 cases.

Q. Okay. And, again, this is within his first week of practicing anywhere as a lawyer?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And then in the next two or three weeks, since it's only been three or four weeks, he received an additional 20 cases?

A. Correct.

Q. And you have said you're not aware of the exact number of felony cases, which is certainly fine. Do you know if he's receiving -- if he has any cases that are A, B felonies, or is it just --

A. He does have one. And I think it was a situation where he had been assigned the client on a misdemeanor or C and D felony, and then an A or B drug case arose after he had already entered on behalf of the client and did something to engage in the representation. For continuity purposes, we made the decision to assign him to A and B drug case, too.

Q. Are you aware of any other A and B case that he has?

A. No.

Q. Are you concerned about the fact that this brand new attorney has 70 open cases within his first three and a half weeks in the office?

A. Including some felonies?

Q. Yes.

A. And an A or B drug felony that could incarcerate his client for up to 15 years in prison? Yeah. Absolutely. And, you know, I've got another lawyer -- the lawyer who has three-plus years of experience, and she's got 120 cases. I've got 213. I mean, we're doing the best we can to keep brand new lawyer's caseload down. I'm concerned about his caseload situation. I'm concerned about everybody's caseload situation. And that's about the best that we can do at this particular moment to keep his caseload down. I certainly don't want it to grow any larger. I would like him to have more time under his belt learning how to practice law, but, as I mentioned, things are a mess right now, so ...

Q. Right. So I take it, obviously, if you -- if you could, you would give him -- you would give him many fewer cases to start; is that fair?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Okay. But the reason -- you started to say this, but just -- if you could explain the reason you can't do so is because everyone in your office is overloaded; is that right?

A. Everybody is -- I don't believe that there's a single lawyer in my office right now who can take more cases. And, you know, all year we've been filing motions to decline representation or a motion to appoint -- we filed motions to appoint a state lawyer who is employed by the Public Service Commission or Department of Revenue or motions to withdraw based on our caseload or motions for caseload conference, and we've received a lot of sympathy and a lot of moral support. And, you know, there are judges who are talking about doing something and contemplating doing something, and at this point, we haven't received significant caseload relief. We've received some.

Judge Joyce in Cole County told us, You're not taking any more criminal nonsupport cases until we can get some representation on these people charged with A and B felony cases first. So for months in Cole County we've not been representing people in criminal nonsupport cases, some of which are felonies.

And, you know, there are other things -- there are sort of smaller things that have been done to try and help us. You know, frankly, it's sort of like -- and I appreciate all of the help that we can get, because I will take all of the help that I can get. You know, you can take an ice cream scoop to the iceberg that sank the Titanic, and the ship is still probably going to go down. It might go down slower, I don't know, but that's kind of where we are. I mean, the -- really, what it would take to get our office caseload down to a rational level would be very dramatic, and at this point in time, at least in the legal communities that I run in, we don't have anybody talking about -- or we don't have anybody doing the dramatic relief that would be necessary.

Q. Okay.

A. Interestingly, on the Cole County nonsupport cases, effectively, those litigants are forced to proceed pro se.

VIDEOGRAPHER: Excuse me one moment.

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

VIDEOGRAPHER: Can you move your -- could you move your tie over?

THE WITNESS: It's hidden. I apologize.

VIDEOGRAPHER: Yeah. No problem. No problem. Thank you.

THE WITNESS: You're welcome.

Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) What is a criminal nonsupport case?

A. In Missouri, failing to pay child support that one is ordered to pay can be dealt with in a couple of different ways. One is in the form of a contempt at proceeding. Alternatively, a person can be charged with a crime of failing to pay child support. There's a misdemeanor offense of failing to pay child support and a felony offense of failing to pay child support. If it's a civil contempt proceeding, under Chapter 600, they're ineligible for public defender services, even though they may have a right to counsel. If it's a criminal proceeding, provided that they meet the financial criteria, they would be eligible for public defender services, certainly; the right to counsel would attach, but at least in Cole County right now, there's sort of this informal administrative order that's not written down on any piece of paper that's basically a judge saying, You guys aren't doing any more criminal nonsupport cases until I tell you otherwise.

Q. And what's the most severe penalty that someone facing a criminal nonsupport case could face?

A. Four years in the department of corrections, if they have no prior felony convictions. If they have prior felony convictions, even if they're unrelated, it could carry up to seven years in the department of corrections and a fine or probation or a combination thereof.

Q. And approximately how many criminal nonsupport cases are there in Cole County?

A. I don't know because we're not doing them anymore. I mean -- and I'm not trying to be flip about it or anything.

Q. I understand.

A. Off the top of my head, I can't tell you. But, you know, commonly, the -- you know, typically, in a criminal nonsupport case on a first offense, typically, the state is not requesting and the court is not inclined to place the person in prison. Typically, the judge is going to place the person on probation with the condition that they pay, and so then there are, invariably, on some cases, probation violations related to the person's alleged failure to pay. If you were to combine the criminal nonsupport charges plus the probation violations, there would be a substantial number, but I cannot give you an estimate off the top of my head.

Q. Just to get a ballpark, during the -- do you think there are more than 50 a year in Cole County?

A. This is a wild ballpark -- and talking only about ones in which my office -- you know, which they requested and received a public defender. Wild ballpark, I would say, in a year, there may be 50 cases that we would do. Some folks in those cases are going to retain private counsel. And, you know, sort of one of the limitations -- at least, when I get a criminal nonsupport case, I can only deal with the criminal side of the case; I can't do anything on the family domestic relations side of the case. So I cannot get in the family case and request a modification of the child support amount, for example, or an alteration of the custody arrangement or any of the stuff, I can only deal with the criminal nonsupport charge. I don't even know if that was responsive to the question, but it was tangential -- a lot of clients because of that, if they can find a way to borrow some money from Mom or whatever, may hire a lawyer on the private side who can do both, kind of, dynamics of the case.

Q. Okay. So when you -- but your wild ballpark -- I'm not holding you to this -- you think there are 50 cases or there would be 50 cases in a given year that would have gone to the public defender --

Page 54

A. Correct.

Q. -- that now aren't going to the public defender?

A. Correct. Be it a criminal nonsupport charge or a probation violation on a criminal nonsupport charge.

Q. Got it. Because they're also not doing their probation violations on the criminal nonsupport charges?

A. Correct.

Q. And how much time could someone face, maximum, on the probation violation on the criminal nonsupport charge?

A. It depends on how the probation was set up. If the imposition of the sentence were suspended, the range of punishment on the probation violation is the range of punishment on the underlying charge. So say it's a felony criminal nonsupport charge charged as a first felony offense; the range of punishment would be one day to one year in the county jail or two to four years in the department of corrections or a fine or probation. That would be the range of punishment on the suspended position of the sentence. If the court were to impose a prison sentence but then suspend the execution of the sentence and place the person on probation, on a probation violation, the court can't change that three-year sentence. The court could either execute the three-year sentence, continue the probation, continue the probation with additional special conditions, continue the probation with a period of shock detention in the county jail, or there are a couple of other sentencing statutes that the court could implement. The court could place the person in the department of corrections for 120 days, retain jurisdiction for 120 days, then consider releasing them on probation. There are a couple of other squirrely sentencing statutes such as that.

Q. Okay. But, in general, the -- is it correct that individuals facing probation violations on these criminal nonsupport charges could face up to four or seven years, as you described previously?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Would it be possible for them to face more than seven years on a probation violation on a criminal nonsupport case?

A. If the imposition of the sentence had been suspended on a criminal nonsupport case -- and is going to be an exceeding rare sentence, but say the judge suspended the imposition of sentence on the criminal nonsupport case, but the client had a suspended execution of the sentence in another county or a suspended imposition of sentence in another county -- probation is revoked in the other county, and a five-year sentence is executed in the other county. On the probation violation on the criminal nonsupport, if no sentence has been fixed, if the court suspended the imposition of the sentence, that court could take that four- or seven-year sentence and run it consecutive to the previously imposed sentence, such that four plus five would be nine or seven plus five would be 12. If the court had suspended the execution of the sentence, whether it would be concurrent or consecutive would be driven by what the judge said at the time of sentencing, when the execution was suspended. That is a pretty rare circumstance, but that's the only thing that comes to mind, in terms of whether the court could increase -- have a consequence that carries bigger than seven years. And in no event could -- I mean, the range of punishment fixed by the legislature is up to four or seven, if they're a persistent felony offender, and so the judge can't change that; the only thing that the judge could do would be to tack it on and run it consecutive to something else.

Q. Got it. And you said that typically in these cases the defendant is -- first-time felony offender wouldn't be necessarily facing prison time. I assume when you meant "typically," you mean in the cases that your office had taken previously; is that right?

A. Right. Yeah. I mean, usually -- and it's been my experience on criminal nonsupport cases, really, what the prosecutor wants is, they want the person to pay. The prosecutor knows if the prosecutor puts in them in prison, they're not going to be able to pay, and so, typically, in most cases, generally -- this is gross generalization, but, you know, generally, what the state is going to seek to do is request probation with the condition that the person pay such that if down the road they don't pay, then they're in danger of going to prison.

Q. Got it. And to clarify, you -- your office, then, isn't -- wouldn't represent them at this point now, even on that probation violation --

A. Correct.

Q. -- that might occur?

A. Correct.

Page 58

Q. Okay.

A. Unless some judge somewhere tells me I'm going to, that's kind of the standing order is, that I'm to not.

Q. And, obviously, you're not aware, since your office now isn't representing, of what's happening -- whether that practice of not seeking prison time initially is still happening for those who are now representing themselves pro se. Is that --

A. I don't have personal knowledge as to whether that practice has changed. My -- I mean, if I had to guess, I would say that it probably has not, but I don't know.

Q. Okay. Are you aware of criminal nonsupport cases that your office had either initially or probation violations of criminal nonsupport cases where the individual was facing time in prison?

A. I can think of a couple of situations -- you know, one, if the person had a prior or prior convictions for criminal nonsupport, you know, then -- you know, if the prosecutor had been dealing with this person for the last 15 years, and they've consistently failed to pay on multiple cases, then the prosecutor may be like, Look, we're not going to do probation on this. And in another sort of more rare instance, you know, if the accused wants to go to trial, I've practiced in front of at least one judge who would say, You know, look, never. Only once did he say it on the record, I'm not inclined to grant probation after trial. And so I -- in kind of thinking back in time, I can think of one client who went to trial on a criminal nonsupport charge. The first trial resulted in a hung jury; second trial, he was convicted, court imposed a four-year prison sentence, and he went and served the time.

Q. All right. And if an individual now in Cole County wanted to exercise his or her right to trial, and if they weren't able to afford a private lawyer, your understanding is they would need to represent themselves?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay.

A. I -- if -- I specifically heard the judge doing that docket tell someone, Look, you're not getting an appointed lawyer. You can represent yourself or you can hire someone. And that's me paraphrasing his words, but those were the options that that judge had laid out.

Page 60

Q. And that was to an individual, as you said, who was facing either four or perhaps seven years in prison?

A. Correct.

Q. And did the -- did that judge explain the reason for there not being a public defender available to that individual?

A. He's -- I've heard him explain it a couple of different ways. I've heard him say, Well, the public defenders say they're too busy, sort of in a condescending type of manner, or the public defenders just don't want to take your case or the -- you know, but I've also heard him say something to the effect of, you know, the public defenders are not available for new cases. And, again, that's me paraphrasing his words, but I've heard him sort of explain that a couple of different ways.

Q. And so you've been in the courtroom, obviously, when this has happened on at least some of the occasions when this has happened?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And when did this -- I know it's not a written policy. When did this practice in Cole County of your office not taking criminal nonsupport cases begin?

A. I'm going to say April or May. And the reason that that comes to my mind was, I recall sitting in Judge Joyce's courtroom next to a lawyer who left us in June, and that was when Judge Joyce -- she asked, What are you guys doing here? We said, We're here for the nonsupport. She said, Why are you doing nonsupport when we've got all of these people charged with, like, you know, real felonies, real crimes that we can't get public defender representation on? You guys aren't taking any more nonsupport cases. Because I know that that lawyer left us in about June. I want to say this was in April or May. And so the only way that we would have taken any additional nonsupport cases since then is if Judge Joyce or Judge Schollmeyer told us specifically, I'm now ordering you to take this one. But, generally, as a rule, we are not doing them.
Q. And that was something, it sounds like, suggested and instituted by Judge Joyce?
A. Correct.
Q. And that was -- just to clarify, that was in response to concerns about the -- about the case -- Judge Joyce's concerns about the caseload overload in your office?

A. Well -- yes. So it was an overload thing and it was -- you know, we were filing motions to decline representation or to appoint counsel on -- even serious cases, A and B felonies. There were people in jail at that point who we filed these motions on. And, you know, the -- kind of the response of most of our Cole County judges was they said, Well, we're neither going to grant or deny the motion; we're just going to continue it out and hope that your staffing situation resolves.
So there were all of these cases that floated for months and months and months and months, and we weren't entering, but yet then judge saw us, you know, on this nonsupport docket on cases that we had already entered in, and judge told us, Yeah, you're not -- no more of those, so ...
Q. Okay. And in the times that you've been in the courtroom, which sounds like several times, do you recall what -- when a defendant is told he or she doesn't have access to the public defender in this criminal nonsupport case, what they've said in response?
A. A lot of times the prosecutor will go up to them and talk to them and say, Hey, look, I'm just looking for probation with the condition that you pay, or the judge may say, Hey, look, why don't you talk to the prosecutor, see if you guys can work something out. Or the judge will just ask the prosecutor in the court, Prosecutor, what's your recommendation? Well, we're looking for probation. And then that -- and then the accused decides to go forward on their own, is sort of how that generally unfolds.

Was that responsive to your question?
Q. Yes. And when you say "decides to go forward on their own," you mean decides if they can't afford an attorney, they don't have a choice, other than to go forward on their own; is that right?
A. Right.
Q. Okay. And you're mostly in court in Miller County; is that right?
A. Yes. Yes.
Q. Okay. So -- and this is happening in Cole County?
A. Yes.
Q. But you can recall several instances, even in the limited time that you're in Cole County court, where you've witnessed an individual in a criminal nonsupport being told that they don't have access to a public defender; is that right?

A. Correct. Correct.
Q. All right.
A. And, you know, right now what I'm seeing in Miller County is, I'm filing these motions for caseload conference and -- you know, so cases are sort of dragging on. Also -- and kind of preceding that, I filed motions to withdraw, citing my caseload or motions to decline representation citing my caseload. You know, so clients -- or applicants for public defender services have been in jail for months. Now in Miller County, we're seeing people decide to, just on their own, talk to the prosecutor pro se, strike a deal, and go to prison.
There was a fellow just the other day in Miller County who I represented on a criminal charge and had a probation violation. I entered on the criminal charge way before all of this unfolded. He picked up the probation violation; we filed, you know, a motion of some kind or another. He sat in jail a couple of months. Eventually he decided that he just wanted to go to prison. He talked to the prosecutor on his own, ended up waiving counsel on the probation violation, waived counsel on the criminal charge that I was in, went to prison.

There's another fellow -- been in jail for a couple of months in Miller County. We filed the caseload motions. Again, he decided after sitting in jail for a couple of months, I just want to have my probation revoked and go to prison. There's another fellow who appeared in the associate docket within the last week or two, charged with a new offense, and we either filed a motion or told him we were going to file a motion, and he's like -- he just went over and talked to the prosecutor, and they cut a deal, he waived his preliminary hearing, he sat on an arraignment docket for a plea with -- either tomorrow or the 19th.

Q. So I'm going to ask some more questions about that.

A. Sure.

Q. So going back to the first individual you mentioned who you represented on the criminal and then the probation violation. Had you entered appearances on both of those?

A. Only the criminal, not on the probation violation.

Q. Okay. And then that individual engaged in a -- plea negotiations with the prosecutor pro se -- was that in court that that happened?

A. Yes.

Q. And you or someone from your office was in that courtroom or --

A. Yes, I was.

Q. Okay. Tell me more about the logistics of how that --

A. The gentleman appeared in jail on the probation violation. Again, sort of my announcement to the court was that we either had filed a motion for caseload conference or were filing a motion for caseload conference, and we'd not entered it on the probation violation. And so I asked that that case been set over to some date after what we anticipated the case conference hearing date to be. And -- you know, and at that point on the probation violation, I think he had been in jail for two months on the probation violation. And that's -- and so he -- you know, the judge did, the gentleman sat back down, and he called me back over, and he's like, Look, I want to go to prison on this right now. I'm like, I'm not going to enter my appearance and send you to prison right now. And he expressed that he wanted to waive counsel and wanted to talk to the prosecutor, and so, you know -- I mean, that's -- you can. I'm not sure -- I don't know that that's a good idea, but that's what he ended up doing. The prosecutor here -- and he, you know, sort of struck this deal in court, they had the case recalled, they added the other criminal case to the docket. He admitted on the probation violation and pled guilty pro se.

Q. All in that same courtroom?

A. Yes.

Q. On that day while you were there?

A. Yes.

Q. And so did he turn to the prosecutor and discuss the -- a plea deal --

A. Yes.

Q. -- at the counsel table or --

A. Well -- I mean, the way that that courtroom is laid out, you know, the table where the prosecutor sits is not far away from where the inmate sits. For example, behind you there's a glass window. If instead of that window there were a wooden half wall, and that's where the jury box was, that's where he was seated. So the prosecutor could turn around and engage with the person right there.

Q. And where were you located in that courtroom?

A. Well, I was probably sitting at the other table on the far side of the thing or, you know, up in front of the judge. Once they started talking -- once he told me, Hey, I -- you know, I -- I've changed my mind, I don't really want you right now; I want to talk to the prosecutor on my own. At that point, I stepped out of the thing.

Q. And did he say why it was that he, as you just said, didn't want you right now?

A. My impression was he didn't want to sit in jail for another who knows how many months. In this county, this circuit judge only comes to town every two months, and so -- and that -- and that sort of presents its own issue because say he comes into town on the 1st of July, for example. His next date is going to be September 1. So if on July 2 someone gets arrested on one of his warrants, they're going to sit in jail until September 1, and then he'll bring them up to court, you know, if they want to -- if they'll -- they can apply for a public defender right then. If the case gets set over, it's going to be November 1.

Q. This judge -- is there only one judge in Miller County?

Page 69

A. There are now three.
Q. Okay.
A. And the presiding judge is Judge Hayden. You know, so he'll come every other month. New circuit judge is Judge Hamner. He will come on his cases on the months that Judge Hayden is not there. So, for example, if Judge Hayden is July 1, September 1; Judge Hamner will come August 1, October 1. Does that make sense?
Q. Uh-huh.
A. Okay. They within the last couple of years added a third circuit judge to that circuit, and that judge has a docket every month. It'll be towards the end of the month. But depending on who you happen to be on probation in front of -- you know, if you happen to be on probation in front of one of the judges who comes only every other month, that's going to have pretty substantial impact on -- for how long you're incarcerated in the event of a violation.
THE WITNESS: I'm going to need a break at some point, so when you get to a segue -- MR. SCHERZER: We can take a break now.
THE WITNESS: Okay. Thank you.
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 10:35 a.m., and we are off the record.

Page 70

(A recess was taken.)
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 10:54 a.m. and we're back on the record.
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) So, Mr. Carver, I just want to go back to that individual that you were just speaking about. Do you know how much time he got in prison as a result of his negotiations with the prosecutor?
A. I do not.
Q. Is that because he was sentenced on a different day other than the day that you were there in court?
A. No. I think he was -- I think he was sentenced that day, but once he resolved to go pro se and it was clear that he was in accord with the arrangement that he and the prosecutor had entered into, I turned my attention to, you know, the other 30-some-odd cases that I had on the docket.
Q. Got it. And you said you had represented him for a couple of months -- or you had entered appearance at least on his behalf a couple of months prior on the criminal case; is that correct?
A. I think that my entry on the criminal case was sometime in 2016. Now, if memory serves, it was another one of those cases that I picked up from some other lawyer who picked it up from another lawyer -- I can't recall off the top of my head. But I had been in the criminal case for quite a while. The probation case was much newer.

Q. And you said you picked it up from somebody else. You mean another lawyer in your office?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. Was that a lawyer -- if you recall, was that a lawyer who had left the office that you picked it up from?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And so the probation case-ballpark, not an exact number, do you -- about how old was the probation case? Do you know -- at the time?
A. Ballpark?
Q. Yeah.
A. Two months, maybe a little more.
Q. Okay. And had you been able to visit this individual since he had picked up the probation case?
A. No.
Q. And was that -- and why was that?
A. I am drowning in cases and I'm horribly behind on jail visits.

Q. Okay. So given your other -- given your very high caseload, as you've indicated previously, and your responsibilities to those clients, you hadn't been able to visit him in prison?
A. Correct. Correct.
Q. And had you been able to communicate with him in some other fashion other than an in-prison visit?
A. Well, he had been in jail for the two months preceding this very recent court date. I don't believe I visited with him at all during these two months. He had been free for a period of time, and during that period of time that he was free, I had no substantive contact with him himself. Before that, he had been incarcerated, I believe, on the criminal case, and then I did have contact with him -- but it had probably been -- estimate, probably a year since I had substantive private contact with him outside of a courtroom.
Q. Okay.
A. And that's -- frankly, that's not unusual right now for my caseload.
Q. Okay. And during that year, some of which he was incarcerated and some of which he was not, he was facing -- what kind of criminal charge was he facing?

A. It was a drug charge. I can't remember if it was a simple possession charge or a possession with the intent to distribute. Simple possession would be a Class C felony that carries up to 7 years in the department of corrections. Possession with the intent at the time relevant to his case would have carried five to 15 years in the department of corrections. That since changed on January 1, 2017, but his case preceded that.

Q. Okay. And so what was happening with his criminal case during that year?

A. There was work that I had identified that I needed to do: Depositions, investigation -- didn't do it.

Q. And that was because of the tremendous caseload that you have discussed previously?

A. Correct. It -- I mean, right now I am -- even when I can get to talk to a client, commonly, I will identify work that needs to be done on the case, investigation, things to pursue. Actually doing it is a whole other matter.

Q. Okay. And is that represented -- is that experience that you're describing, to your knowledge, as their supervisor, is that representative of the other attorneys in your office?

A. No. And that's because I'm attempting to control their caseload. But the consequence to me controlling their caseload and the consequence to me telling the judges I'm not going to keep dumping it on an assistant public defender, I'm going to give it to myself. You know, consequence is that my caseload has spiraled out of control. I've got more cases now than anybody in the office by a considerable number.

Q. Prior to the time that you've instituted the case control, which I believe -- that was January 2017?

A. Yes.

Q. Prior to that time, with this experience, that you -- when there were no caseload -- or not these caseload controls for the line attorneys in your office, was the experience you're now describing representative of what was happening with your line attorneys?

A. My line attorneys were experiencing exactly what I'm experiencing. You know, we had -- goodness. There had been a fellow who was incarcerated in the Cole County jail, sat there for three years with no contact with his lawyer.

Q. Sorry to interrupt. When you say "his lawyer," do you mean an attorney -- a line attorney from your office?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay.

A. Since that case has been reassigned to me -- and it's probably been a year since I've talked to him -- he's no longer in the Cole County jail; he's in the department of corrections on another matter.

You know, circling back before January 1, 2017, there was a client who was in the Miller County jail for four years, tells us he saw his lawyer once, and I believe him, because there are no notes of any kind in the file. When I look at the file, it would appear that no work was done in those four years. Subsequently, that lawyer left; it was reassigned to another lawyer in my office. That lawyer, after getting in the case and getting involved in the thing -- ultimately, that case ended up being dismissed on a speedy trial violation five years and nine months after the gentleman was incarcerated. You know, it's one of these cases where, frankly, the work that my office did -- I would describe it as grossly ineffective, but that's forever going to escape any Strickland Review because there was never any sentence to the department of corrections that was imposed.

There are a significant number of cases like this where clients have just languished for a year or two years without substantive work being done on their case or without any contact with their lawyer, without knowing what's going on with the case. And that was something that was going on, you know, when I took over the Jeff City office at the end of 2014. You know, we've done a variety of things to address that and try to prevent that from happening. You know, right now, I don't believe that that is happening with regard to my individual lawyers and their caseload, but, you know, right now, I'm absolutely not doing what I need to be doing for my clients.

Q. And so going to this individual who spent five years and nine months waiting in jail, what was happening at the court dates, if you -- if you know during that time?

A. What the docket entry says was trial stricken and reset. Nine months later, there'd be another docket entry, trial stricken and reset. One of the reasons it was dismissed on a speedy trial violation was the docket entries did not articulate who was requesting a continuance or why, and when the new lawyer took over four years into the case, ultimately, at some point thereafter was reassigned to a different judge as well. The judge that had it at the time of the dismissal had no history with the case and couldn't tell what the continuances were for. But the docket entries were exceedingly sparse.

Q. And you said there are a number of other cases that you can think of just off the top of your head that are similar in nature, in terms of what happened to individual defendants?

A. There was another client in the Miller County jail when I took over the Jeff City office at the end of 2014 who had been in jail for 16 months, never talked with his lawyer. You know -- even right now, you know, circling back to kind of my personal experience -- yesterday I was in the office trying to put files together for my Tuesday docket in Miller County, because I've got to have somebody cover because I'm tied up with something else. You know, in going through those, most of the cases, I had not talked with the client. There was one that I found where the client had been in jail at least two months, maybe more, maybe three or four on a probation violation matter. I've never been able to get to the jail to see her. So the note that I wrote to my lawyer is, Please tell the judge I'm wildly ineffective. I don't know what's going to happen with it. You know, right now, just sort of understanding my schedule and stuff like that, the best time I found to get to the Miller County jail to meet with clients is on a Sunday, you know? But you can only see so many people in one day, and, you know, when you've got dozens and dozens and dozens of people that are there, you are not going to be able to meet with them all in a day. And if you go back in another two weeks, you can meet with more of them, but, you know, I've got clients scattered in Miller County jail and most of the major correctional settings and other county jails. There's -- I'm working as much overtime as I can, but I can't keep up.

Q. And so just to -- without -- you've given some helpful details about some of these stories. Without going into more detail about any of them, you mentioned that this is representative -- the couple examples you've just given about long periods of time with no work and no client contact is representative of what your office is -- what attorneys in your office were forced to do in the years prior to when you instituted this caseload control; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And it's now representative of what you're forced to do on your own cases, given the number of cases you've taken on; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And you mentioned that your office -- you described your office in that case and in these similar cases as grossly ineffective. And is that because of the caseload that your line attorneys are experiencing or were experiencing prior to the caseload controls?

A. Yes. I mean, I don't know how you could describe a guy sitting in jail for four years with no work being done on the case. I mean, I don't know how else you can describe that. It was a serious case. That client deserved representation.

Q. And effective -- what you're describing is that client just wasn't receiving any representation at all?

A. Nope.

Q. And that was because of the case overload that your line attorneys were facing?

A. Yes.

Q. And that's representative of other cases in your office prior to the caseload controls?

A. We had other cases not as dramatic, not four years old, but we had other cases where clients sat in jail for 12 months or more not having talked to their client -- not having talked to their lawyer.

Q. And that individual that you were mentioning previously, the individual with the five years and nine months, do you recall what charge or charges he was facing?

A. Sodomy, rape, assault one of an infant -- I can't recall if it was charged to statutory or forceable sodomy, but those were the charges. And sort of the charges evolved. At one point the assault was dismissed voluntarily. Since the assault has been -- so it was the -- the rape, sodomy that were dismissed on speedy trial violations. Since the assault has been refiled and that case is now pending.

Q. And that's because the assault had been voluntarily dismissed in the interim or what?

A. Yes. And I -- and I understand -- and -- yes. Yes.
Q. And so what class of offense are those sodomy, rape -- what class of offense is that?
A. This gentleman is charged with unclassified ones that could carry an unlimited number of years. A million years would be a permissible sentence or life -- times two, because there was one of each. I think it was one rape, one sodomy. Maybe it was two sodomies. Facing significant charges.
Q. Facing up to his entire life in prison?
A. Correct. Yes.
Q. And didn't -- effectively didn't have any representation for five years?
A. For at least four.
Q. At least four.
A. At least four. And then that lawyer left and it got reassigned. And, actually, the lawyer that it was reassigned to then did eventually get into the thing and start doing good substantive work. When I say "eventually," you know, 2017 was a bad year for my specific office. The year that the initial counsel left was 2014. That was another bad year for my office. I can think of at least three lawyers off the top of my head who left the Area 19 public defender's office right about the same time. And so all of those cases -- you know, when I came in at the end of 2014, it was a train wreck. Everybody had 2- or 300 cases each, and it took forever to dig out from under that.

Q. And so the other cases that you were speaking of prior to the caseload controls, that your line attorneys had similar experiences with clients going long stretches without any work being done on their cases, that wasn't confined to just one attorney in your office?
A. It was not.
Q. Was that, to your knowledge, every attorney in the office or most attorneys?
A. It was -- there were several lawyers who I -- I saw that happened.
Q. Okay. Have you told other -- you mentioned that you instructed your -- one of the attorneys in your office who is covering for you tomorrow to tell the judge that you were wildly ineffective on that case due to your other caseload?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Have you told other judges that you have been ineffective on cases due to your caseload?

A. I've been telling my judges that consistently all year as my caseload has grown. And, you know, generally, they express sympathy and tell me to do the best I can, and I do, but, you know, at least in Miller County, I've been articulating that on a regular basis, you know, Judge, I can't possibly take more cases; I'm not doing a good job with the cases I've got. I'm not talking to my clients now; don't give me more, and, consistently, I'm ordered in over my objection.
Q. And what do the judges say, if anything, about the rationale for ordering you in, despite you telling them that you would be ineffectively representing that client?
A. That -- they've sort of expressed different things at different times. You know, the -- one of the judges there has expressed that he doesn't feel like he has any other good options. He feels like it's not the responsibility of the private bar, and that the private bar did not make this mess and -- I've asked him to appoint state-employed lawyers. You know, pick on some someone from the department of revenue, legislative research. His concern there is that he's got to make sure that they're competent, and if you appoint a tax lawyer on a case, they aren't going to know anything about the criminal side of it. They aren't going to know anything about criminal law. My response to that is, Judge, if the person can read the file and take the time to talk to the client, they've got a leg up over me now. I can do all of the criminal law in the world, but I don't have time to work the case.

At other points in time, he said, Well, I'm not going to implement that remedy because that's going to be bad for the agency or it's going to cause you more problems or the legislature will never find you. At other points in times he's said, Really, the remedy is legislative; it's not judicial, and that tends to be a commonality. I mean, other judges have expressed to me that, you know, Look, I don't have the tools to solve this mess. Really, it's the legislature.
Q. Okay. And just going to the -- to that -- to the tax lawyer that you were speaking of or someone from -- you know, as an example, if you had to actually -- if you had time to adequately work on your cases, presumably -- or do you agree with the judge that you would be more effective for that criminal defendant since you have long practiced criminal law and are experienced in criminal law?

A. I think I would have a head start -- understanding I've been practicing now criminal law 15 years, I would certainly have a head start over a lawyer who has not touched anything criminal law-related since criminal law class in law school, okay? Yes. But that sort of assumes a rational caseload. I mean, right now, you can know everything that there is to know about criminal law, but when you've got more than 200 cases, it's not going to do you any good, because you're not going to have time to talk to the clients, you're not going to have time to do the legal research, to file the motions, to visit the investigation, to visit the crime scene, to go look at the physical evidence, to effectively advise the client. I mean, you know, right now, my knowledge of criminal law on your average day is generally useless because I don't have time to -- I don't have time to pursue it.

Q. And how does that make you feel as someone who has been practicing for -- for 15 years, criminal law?

A. 2017 has certainly made me consider other employment options. Yeah. I mean, I'm not -- I'm certainly not practicing the way I want to be. My clients are given the short end of the stick. It's not fair to them. I would not want me as a lawyer right now. And -- I'm not sure how long I'm going to do this. Give me a rational caseload, I'll retire with the agency. 200 cases, I don't know how much longer ...

Q. And to follow up on that, you're -- you've taken on all of those cases in order to protect your line attorneys from the massive overloads that they were facing prior to your taking on all of those extra cases?

A. Yeah. And, you know, sort of what they'd expressed to me if I didn't, they were all going to quit. And, historically, what we've done in the public defender's office is the district defender has a reduced caseload -- typically, significantly reduced because of the management responsibilities, and we're going to flood the assistant public defender with an impossible number of cases, and we'll tell them to swim. And what I've seen in my time is that invariably we burn out lawyers and they quit. Part of the thought process behind this strategy was sort of -- it was an attempt to allow my five lawyers -- or my -- sorry -- seven lawyers to practice ethically in hopes that it would stop the bleeding and prevent some of the rampant turnover. You know, I can't -- I can't build anything in terms of a well-functioning office if the foundation is always being taken out from underneath me. I've got to find a way to retain lawyers so that can I teach them how to try complicated cases and do a good job of it. You know, we've got murder cases, we've got rape cases, we've got complex cases where the client deserves a lawyer with significant experience. You know, right now I'm assigning murder cases to lawyers who have been practicing for two or three years. If I can't find a way to retain the lawyers I've got, then I'm going to be assigning murder cases to a lawyer that's been practicing less than a year.

Q. And you're assigning it that way because the second senior line attorney has been practicing for two years? Is that --

A. Right. I've got one that's been practicing since 2010, but the second most senior lawyer has got three years under their belt.

Q. And you said that your hope is that after you instituted the caseload controls in January of 2017, that your lawyers would be able to practice ethically.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Is your opinion that prior to those caseload controls being implemented, your attorneys were not being able to practice according to their ethical responsibilities?

A. Well, I mean, that's -- they told me they felt like they were not. And when they brought that concern to my attention, yeah, we took a number of steps to deal with it. You know, and, frankly, when I took over the course in 2014, it was clear that there were problems then. How much of it was a caseload issue as compared to a -- you know, we've got positions we need to field issue, as compared to we're taking cases that we shouldn't be taking. That, it took some time for me to sort things out. It kind of was my impression when I took over in 2014 that there were a number of things going on, and so we -- we hired to fill the vacant positions, and that certainly helped. But that was one of the reasons that we were not -- not handling cases that we ought to be.

We also changed how we screened applications for public defender services. As a result, that did reduce our caseload, and that certainly helped. You know, and even after that, it struck me that there was still a problem then, and so at different points in time, I was in contact with our management and was allocated some money to contract out some of the cases. At another point in time, when that didn't do the trick, I was allocated an additional staff member, and that certainly helped. And when all of those things did not prove effective, you know, that was kind of when the lawyers came to me at the end of 2016 and said, Hey, this is a problem.

Q. And so even after you tightened the requirements for indigency determinations and got an additional step and the other things you've described, the problems still persisted in your office in terms of caseload?

A. Correct. Our head was still underwater; it was just less so.

Q. Okay. I'd like to show you what I'll mark as exhibit-- Plaintiff's Exhibit 18.

(Deposition Exhibit No. 18 was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Let me know when you've had a chance to glance at this.

Page 90

A. Okay. I'm familiar with it.

Q. Okay. Do you recognize this?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is it?

A. This is an e-mail thread that started with an e-mail that I sent to the courts and the prosecutors December 29, 2016, with follow-up responses from some of the various parties.

Q. And I believe this -- when you say -- earlier, when we were discussing which documents you reviewed, you said you reviewed an e-mail chain from December of 2016. Is this the e-mail chain that you were referring to that you recently reviewed?

A. Yes.

Q. All right.

A. Tangentially, prior to this e-mail, I had a number of other e-mails from me to the court starting the end of 2014 telling them what was going on with our caseload and staffing situation. I did not save any of those e-mails, and, to my knowledge, they're long gone. Like, when I received the discovery request from Ms. Shipma, I went back through to look for them. I deleted them quite some time ago, but I will tell you there were a number of -- this -- the December 29 e-mail is not the first time I communicated our caseload staffing problems to the courts.

Q. Okay. So you believe you sent similar e-mails for at least the two years prior to this e-mail?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And to the -- to the judges and prosecutors in District 19?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. I'd like to turn to -- and looking again at the Bates numbers in the bottom middle of the page to 39421.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Can you read out for us the first -- I guess it's two paragraphs -- starting with, "I wish had I better news."

A. Sure.

"I wish I had better news. The struggles of the public defender office remain. Every single one of my lawyers has expressed to me that their caseload is too high and that they cannot effectively handle the cases that they have. I have lawyers threatening to quit if I don't get their caseloads down to a level where they can be effective. Director Barrett tells me that the agency turnover is now at 22 percent. I agree that my lawyers are all overloaded. As they are all overloaded, I can't reassign cases from one lawyer to another to fix the problem. Ethically, I can't ignore the problem, and neither can my lawyers. As a practical matter, if I don't deal with the problem, my lawyers will find their own solution by finding new employment. I have to do something to get my lawyers' caseloads down to a level where they can be effective."

Q. Okay. And I want to just track back to the two -- the "to" line on this e-mail. Can you just tell me who these individuals are in this "to" Line?

A. Sure. Stan Moore was a circuit judge in the 26th Judicial Circuit that serves Miller, Moniteau Counties, also Camden, Laclede, and Morgan Counties. Judge Moore has since retired. Kenneth Hayden is the presiding judge of the 26th Circuit. Jon Kaltenbronn is associate court judge in Miller County. At the time, those were the only judges serving my part of the 26th Circuit in Miller County. Later in that header you see Peggy Richardson. She was, at the time, the associate judge in Moniteau County. She has since been made third circuit judge in the 26th Judicial Circuit. Judge Joyce is a circuit judge in the 19th Judicial Circuit, which is Cole County. Judge Beetem, circuit judge, Cole County. Thomas Sodergren, associate judge in Cole County. Dan Green is a circuit judge in Cole County. Judge Schollmeyer is an associate judge in Osage County. He comes to Cole County on some special judge cases and criminal nonsupport cases. Markrichardson@colcopa.com, he is the elected prosecutor of Cole County. Benjamin Winfrey, the elected prosecutor of Miller county. The e-mail address prosecutor@moniteaucounty.org is the e-mail address that the elected prosecutor Shane Healea uses for Case.net notifications and filings and stuff like that, so I use that as an e-mail for him. His last name, to my knowledge, is H-a-e-l-a-e [sic] -- or H-e-a-l-e-a -- I can't remember which.

Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) And -- sorry. Just shifting over on the page prior to that, 39420. There's a "from," and is that your e-mail address?

A. That is -- I'm looking --

Q. Sorry. The bottom of 39420.

A. Bottom of 39420. There's a from Judge Richardson to myself cc'ing in the other people who were in on that thread.

Q. Oh, I'm sorry. The very, very bottom.

A. Oh, I apologize. Yes, I see that.

Q. That just tracked over that page, but this is obviously an e-mail that you sent to all of these individuals?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that effectively every judge and head prosecutor in the relevant counties that you represent individuals in?

A. Yes. With the sole exception of if there was some random case that happened to have a special judge out of some random county that I wasn't aware, they were not included on this e-mail. But these were the judges who we would have seen for 99.5 percent of our cases.

Q. Okay.

A. Perhaps all of them.

Q. And so in that -- now we're returning to the body of the e-mail. The second sentence saying, "The struggles of the public defender office remain." And was that referring to the other e-mail that you sent previously indicating case overloads and problems in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And you mentioned this previously, but what precipitated this particular e-mail, if anything?

A. The December 29, 2016, e-mail was precipitated by a number of lawyers walking into my office and saying, in very colorful language, we've got too many cases, and if you don't stop giving us this many cases, we're all going to quit.

Q. And how many of your attorneys, if you recall, came into your office and said that?

A. Three, perhaps, four.

Q. So at -- half or more than half of the attorneys in your office?

A. About half.

Q. Okay. And was that something that you had heard from them previously -- not that -- that they had -- sorry. Scratch that.

Was the fact that they had too many cases something that you heard from the line attorneys in your office previously?

A. Well, certainly, when it started in 2014, everybody expressed that they had too many cases. And, you know, at that point, like I said, there were a number of things going on, and so we tried to deal with each of the things to get the caseloads down, and we did. And, understand, all of these things sort of unfolded over time. You know, from 2014 to 2016, we made significant progress in reducing the caseload of every single one of the lawyers. You know -- so we were certainly -- so, yes. I mean, as a part of all of this, there was kind of a dialogue of, you know, we've got too many cases. Well, I -- you know, these are the things that we're doing to deal with it. But we did not have sort of the formal caseload restriction until the time period surrounding this e-mail.

I don't know if that was responsive to your question. I'm sorry. Did that answer --

Q. Yeah.

A. I mean, certainly, between 2014 and 2016, lawyers complained to me about their caseload; we were doing other things to address it that weren't necessarily in this e-mail.

Q. Okay. But, obviously, at least from your line attorneys' perspective, you hadn't addressed the problem because half of them -- or more than half of them said they were going to quit if something further wasn't done?

A. Right. It had not -- certainly had not fully addressed the problem. It was not as bad as it was in 2014, but it was not where it needed to be either.

Q. Okay. And then can you just read the -- just the first sentence of the paragraph that begins, "As an agency."

A. "As an agency, the public defender's office has tried everything it can think of to get its caseload under control."

Q. Okay. And I -- and in that -- you're referring to the steps that you have taken previously in your district office?

A. Over and above that. So the public defender's office, in the time I've been with the agency, we've gone to the legislature and asked nicely for more money and gone to the governor and asked nicely for more money and we've gone to the Supreme Court and asked to be exempted from time standards and we've gone to the Supreme Court and asked for caseload controls and we've passed an administrative rule, and that was challenged in court, and then we passed another administrative rule. And then we -- there was -- you know, there was a statute that was passed. And, you know, there was the Senate interim committee that got together to study the thing. We've been studied by the Spangenberg Group at least twice in the time we've been here. We had RubinBrown come in and study us because the legislature said, Give us the Missouri specific standard; give us some data; we need something other than your professional judgment. So we did the work; we got the data. And, you know, at least as an agency, you know, in terms of having had court hearings, having gone to the Supreme Court, having gone to the legislature, having gone to the governor -- I mean, you know, this is something that we've been dealing with for -- as long as I've been around. And so that sentence was really more intended to be a reference to all of the things that the -- the agency has done in the preceding decade, plus to try to deal with the caseload problem.

Q. Okay. And, obviously, you indicated that your -- you, in your capacity as district defender in Area 19, had also taken a number of steps to try to address the caseload problem as well?

A. Yes. And, actually, it -- you know, further down in that paragraph there's a sentence that begins with, "Internally, I have done everything I can think of." And that's -- you know, that's sort of a reference to me telling them, Hey, look, I've done everything I can do, too. You know, it's not ...

Q. Okay. And then just in the paragraph above that, it -- there's a reference to the Jeff City office, which I assume is the Area 19 --

A. Yes.

Q. -- office's current caseload is about 250 percent of its capacity.

A. Yes.

Q. And that's from the ABA RubinBrown study; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So then in the paragraph beginning with, "Starting in January," towards the bottom of that page -- can you -- can you read out that paragraph?

A. Sure.

"Starting in January, when I receive a qualifying application for public defender service, I will do one of two things. If the applicant is in jail, I will assign the applicant a lawyer immediately until all of my lawyers have become overloaded. If the applicant is not in jail, I will hold the application until the end of the month. If I have available lawyers at the end of the month, I will assign it to one of my lawyers. If I don't have available lawyers, I will be filing a motion to appoint a lawyer who is employed by the State of Missouri, such as a lawyer for DNR or the PSC, et cetera. After all, it is the state's responsibility to provide counsel for those who cannot afford it; it is not the responsibility of the private bar. In the event that the motion is overruled, we will not refuse to provide representation. Instead, I will exercise my discretion to assign the case to myself. I will not assign additional cases to an already overburdened assistant public defender. If qualifying cases continue to come into my office at the same rate, my personal caseload will increase significantly. I am not Superman, and I know I can't do it all. I could be forced to file continuance motions and/or motions to withdraw. The immediate impact on your courts will be that when an applicant is not in custody, I will not be able to give you an immediate answer as to whether that person qualifies. Obviously, this impacts the administration of your courts and the handling of your dockets. This presents an inconvenience for the courts and the applicants. For that reason, I feel that you deserve a heads up. Nonetheless, as a supervisory lawyer, I have a specific ethical obligation to monitor and control the caseloads of my assistants. I simply can't keep assigning my lawyer cases at the rate that I have been assigning them."

Q. Okay. And then can you read that -- just the last sentence on that -- the last two sentences, sorry, on that page?

A. Sure.

"It seems worth mentioning that I don't really love this plan. Frankly, I don't know what else to do."

Q. And so you've described some or previously what you are thinking when you sent this e-mail, but anything else you haven't said previously about your feelings about this e-mail or why it is you felt the need to send it?

A. Well, there are sort of a number of things that precipitated it. You know, the immediate spark was the lawyers walking into my office. Preceding that, in September of 2016, there was a management meeting that all of the district defenders in the state went to, along with senior management, and at least previously -- preceding this September 2016 management meeting, the directive that we had received as a line district defender was that, you know, we're going to -- that management will sort of figure out the strategy for dealing with caseload going forward; don't you all go rogue and do your own things; we want to do this on a statewide basis to be consistent. The upshot of the message from the September 2016 management meeting was, as I took it to be, we've exhausted all of our options; we don't know what else to do; we now wish to empower local offices to come up with their own solution to the situation.

When, you know, the lawyers came into my office and said, Hey, you keep giving us all of these cases, we're all going to quit, the first thing I did was contacted senior management -- well, I -- we called a meeting, we talked about it, and then I contacted senior management, and there was an additional meeting in the Jefferson City office preceding that September 29 e-mail where we kicked around a number of different options. And, frankly, my impression of the thing was nobody had any great options. Nobody -- I mean, really, this is something we've been dealing with for forever. The state public defender system doesn't have more lawyers in their back pocket that they can reallocate to Jefferson City. Every office is underwater; it's just a matter of how far underwater they are. Not hearing -- in this, sort of, meeting with the local office, the assistant public defenders, and with senior management, not hearing any other solution that would really get my lawyer's caseloads down, this was sort of the decision that I made following the meeting -- well, the solution, frankly, kind of stinks, but I don't know what else to do.

And so that was sort of what had preceded this e-mail to the courts. My fear was -- one of the options that we talked about in the meeting was lawyers on an individual caseload just litigating their caseload, filing motions to decline or motions to withdraw or what have you. You know, my impression was none of those were going to get granted, and it wasn't going to bring the lawyers any effective caseload relief, and then they'd all end up just quitting, and then -- you know? It wouldn't fix the problem.

The thought was, at least with this remedy, at least the assistant public defenders can practice consistent with the rules of professional conduct, or at least they have a fair shake of doing it, or we can all not, so. As between all of us practicing ineffectively or just me, I'd rather it just be me.

Q. So prior to January 2017, before you instituted these caseload controls, your opinion was that the rest of the attorneys in your office were practicing ineffectively?

A. Yes. In talking to him, I felt like they had too many cases, and so we had to -- and it -- you know, it wasn't a thing on their part. I think that it was -- even in spite of all of the things that we had done internally, in spite of all of the things that the agency had done since, you know, 2004 or whenever, they still had too many cases, and I had to address it; I had to do something to deal with it. And so immediately, come January 1, we put everybody on sort of a caseload diet where we limited the number of incoming cases every month, and when we believed they could not take additional cases, we cut them off.

Q. Okay. And what happened to it? Obviously, you didn't -- sorry. I'll rephrase.

Was your office -- sorry. I'll rephrase again.

What happened to the other cases that you would have previously been receiving in your office?

A. We filed motions to decline representation or motions to appoint a state lawyer or -- the motion was sort of an evolving thing over time, but, ultimately, it was some sort of motion to appoint somebody else, a motion to decline representation, or, Judge, you've got other options, too: You can take jail off the table or you can let the person -- let the accused out of jail or you can continue the case or -- I can't remember all of the remedies that were in there. It was kind of a kitchen sink. Some of the affected applicants ultimately were able to retain counsel. Some of the affected applicants waived counsel and proceeded on their own. Some of the affected applicants we were able to get into their case at a later point in time.

Q. When you say "get into their case at a later point in time," what -- can you tell me what that means?

A. Enter an appearance, assign them a lawyer, and initiate representation.

Q. Sorry. My question wasn't clear. And what would happen in the interim before you entered an appearance?

A. Probably nothing. I'd certainly -- we would not engage in representation.

Q. Okay. And was there a waiting list of individuals waiting for representation from your office?

A. Well, we'd had applicants who had applied, and we'd filed a motion to decline or a motion to appoint somebody or what have you. I've gone round and round with people as to whether that would be -- whether you call in a wait list or not -- I mean, I don't know what you want to call it, but what was happening, was some people would apply, and we could not take their case, so we would file a motion. Sometimes we'd be able to get into it later; sometimes the issue would sort of become moot from my perspective, in that they may hire a lawyer. But that was what was going on.

Q. Or it could become moot in some sense that they -- if they represented themselves, having waited too long, in their opinion, for a public defender to be assigned?

A. It would no longer be -- I mean, we would no longer have to get in the case, if the case was then closed.

Q. Right.

A. It would not become moot from a perspective of, you know, was this person deprived of their right to counsel. So it sort of depends on -- yeah.

Q. Right. Right. And do you have any sense of how many -- in how many cases you've filed one of these motions to decline representation or appoint another attorney?

A. In various formats, whether it's a motion to decline representation or a motion to decline representation and appoint a state lawyer -- or now we're filing motions for caseload conference. There have been literally hundreds. As of yesterday, we had filed 120 about -- approximately -- caseload conference motions that were pending. And those -- so these are people who meet the financial criteria for public defender and have an eligible case, but instead of entering, we filed a motion for caseload conference.

Q. Okay. So 120 motions for caseload conferences and more than 100 motions for -- to decline representation or less than 100?

A. More than 1500. The motions to decline representation or the motions to decline representation and appoint a state lawyer, I would estimate, ballpark, between 2- and 300 motions we've filed.

Q. Okay. Is there any other broad -- so there's 2- and 300 of those motions; 120ish of the caseload conference motions. Any other broad category of motions you've filed in a similar event, or does that cover the waterfront, pretty much?

A. On my existing cases, we filed a number of motions to withdraw from representation based on caseload after we have entered. Does that make sense?

Q. Uh-huh.

A. Okay.

Q. And you said "my cases." You mean cases where you, yourself, were appointed -- or have entered appearances in, not other attorneys in your office?

A. Correct.

Q. And those were clients that you were already representing that you filed a motion to withdraw due to your excessive caseloads?

A. There were motions that I entered previously. Following the entry, I received all of these additional appointments that were over my objection, and so then I sought to withdraw from cases that I had already entered into.

Q. And move to withdraw and appoint a private attorney or move to withdraw and provide remedy as the court sees fit or ...

A. Appoint a private lawyer, appoint a state lawyer, take jail off the jail. I mean, it's a kitchen sink of proposed remedy.

Q. Okay. And in those motions to withdraw, approximately how many, ballpark, of those motions to withdraw have you filed?

A. I'm not sure off the top of my head. I really don't know.

Q. Okay. Do you think more than 30?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. More than 50, do you think?

A. Fifty is a good starting guesstimate. One of the things I've got on my staff's to-do list is go back and file them on all of the cases that I've not previously filed one on. So depending on when they can get that done, you know, they may be filing more as we speak. I don't know.

Q. When you say "all of the cases," do you mean each and every one of your 213 cases?

A. Except for ones that I had just been appointed on within the last month or two, yes. And, you know, my approach with that is going to be -- you know, I don't -- the situation being what it is, I'm never going to convince one of my judges that I should not have a caseload. And, frankly, I should probably have some small caseload. I would never expect my courts to let me out of every single one of my cases, but I do think that I -- at this point, my caseload being what it is, I think I'm obliged to seek leave to withdraw from all of my cases, and if that motion were granted as to 211 of my cases, I might not need to pursue it on the last two, but, you know, as a practical matter, I filed that motion a number of times; I've not successfully had it be granted ever, so I'm not anticipating that it be granted on any of my -- in any of the future cases in which I file it.

Q. And is the basis for that motion -- because I don't think we have one of those here, but is the basis for that saying that in that motion it's due to my excessive caseload?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And so since you either have or are planning to file it, essentially, in every one of your cases, that includes cases that you have done substantive work on for however -- for months or perhaps years?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And, obviously, since you've already described it, you understand that that's deleterious to the clients in that case, but you have no choice, given your excessive caseload?

A. Absolutely. But, you know, frankly, it would be deleterious to the client to have their lawyer switched around a year into a case, for example, and be assigned someone who knows nothing about it. What I am telling my courts right now, Judge, if you put me in this case, my representation is going to be deleterious to this client. I cannot do this client justice right now. I am not doing justice on my existing cases. I'm not doing the work that I ought to be doing. And it's not a willful thing. I'm working overtime. I can't keep up. There are only so many hours in the day.

Q. And you're describing, for example, going to jail visits on Sundays and the like.

A. Yes.

Q. You're working on the weekends, as well, but you can't handle 213 cases?

A. I cannot.

Q. And that's in addition to the numerous responsibilities you have as a district defender and that we've discussed previously, in terms of running the office and hiring and budget and administration and supervision?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And just to tie up that last piece about supervisor, in addition to all of the administrative tasks you have, you're also responsible for supervising and training the line attorneys in your office; is that right?

A. Yes. Some of whom are brand-spanking-new to the practice of law. Like I said, I've got one lawyer that's been practicing less than a month. I've got another lawyer who took the February bar, got the results in April or May or whenever, and started with us over the summer, and she's a very good lawyer. She is very new to the practice of law, and I should be spending much more time training those two lawyers and the other lawyers that I have.

Q. Are there other supervisors in the office who are responsible for supervising those two younger attorneys?

A. I'm the only supervisor in the Area 19 office. We do have -- from time to time, there's some informal mentoring that goes on. More experienced lawyers will help the lesser -- not the lesser but the more junior lawyers. As I mentioned, my most experienced lawyers really aren't that experienced.

Q. Right. Okay. So just to sum up this -- these motions, there are about -- just doing -- not asking to do heavy math here, but if there are about 2- to 300 motions to decline and/or appoint counsel, and there's 120-plus motions to -- for a caseload conference, and there are 50-ish motions to withdraw, my rough calculations are it's close to 500 cases in which you've moved in one fashion or another to either get out -- not take a case or to withdraw from a case that you or your office is currently -- or would otherwise be representing a defendant?

A. That sounds about right.

Q. In fact, that number -- once your staff gets around to filing a motion to withdraw in the other 163 cases that you have is going to be 6- or 700 cases?

A. Absolutely.

Q. Okay. And so, broadly speaking -- we can talk about some specific examples, but what is happening in those 500, soon to be 6- to 700 cases that you've moved to decline or withdraw from in some fashion?

A. On the cases in which we'd filed the motion to decline, most of those, as in all but a small number, either the courts ordered us -- denied the motion to decline and ordered us to represent. If we were ordered to do so, we did. Now, you know, my representation at this point is exceedingly limited. I mean -- you know? The -- let's see. There are motions for caseload conference that are sort of out there that are pending. You know, there's a hearing in Miller County on December 22. Most -- so what -- I mean, those are sort of out there and they're floating.

The motions to decline representation, generally, those have either been assigned somebody from my office or some have become moot, either in that the individual goes pro se or that they retain a private lawyer. I can think of a couple of cases in which, in response to that motion, a judge did appoint a private lawyer. As I'm sitting here thinking about it, I can think of three private lawyers in Cole County who were appointed in response to motions that we filed, one of who was my wife.

Q. And where does your wife work -- not location, sorry, but what's her -- what firm or organization does she work for?

A. Her firm is Carver & Michael in Jefferson City, Missouri.

Q. Okay. And was that appointment upon her request or was --

A. No.

Q. Okay. And do you think that -- was that a coincidence or -- as one of three lawyers not a coincidence?

A. I don't have personal knowledge as to the judge's thought process behind that.

Q. Okay.

A. We could speculate.

Q. Yes. Fair enough. Okay.

Have any attorneys from the state -- you mentioned one of the options was appointing someone who is employed by the State of Missouri. To your knowledge, has anyone employed by the State of Missouri been appointed as a result of these motions?

A. Not to my knowledge.

Q. Okay. So other than the three private attorneys, no other attorneys, to your knowledge, have been appointed --

Page 116

A. Correct.

Q. -- as a result of these motions?

A. Correct. Judge Joyce is contemplating appointing private counsel but has been contemplating that for many months. Preceding the conference with her, if you can give me something that says I can do it, I'll do it. I did provide her a proposed order in May or June, and she did not make any appointments.

Q. Okay. And in those -- in the cases where you or your office is entering appearances over an objection, are you then engaging in active representation of those clients or simply entering an appearance and waiting until your office has some time to actually work on those cases?

A. Well -- I mean, if we're ordered to represent, we're going to do the level best that we can. I mean, understand right now my level best, I would rate as pretty terrible. The -- there are times where we've been ordered by the court to enter, and I've entered, but I really haven't been able to do anything with the case. And as another lawyer in my office was able to take on additional cases, I would then reassign that case to the lawyer that was actually able to work on the thing. So that, I know -- that has happened, certainly, a number of times. Other times, you know, in -- for example, in Miller County, I'm the only lawyer taking new cases in Miller County, so I'm simply not going to be reassigning it to anybody else. If I'm ordered to represent over my objection, I will file an entry; I will do the best I can, but, you know -- I mean, right now, active representation, a client may sit in jail for two months before I can get down to see them. I mean, I don't consider that active representation. It's not a willful refusal thing on my part; it's -- if you look at the list of people that I need to see and their corresponding court dates, I -- you know, it -- it's going to take forever for me to get to people.

Q. And as you described, it's not just meeting with your clients; it's also doing all of the investigative work that would be needed on any individual case. You're unable to do that either?

A. Oh, absolutely. Or legal research or filing motions or -- you know, there's so many things. In Miller County, our judges tend to fix fairly high bonds, but they will consider, like, a furlough for treatment, so if your client wants to go to in-patient treatment for drugs or alcohol or what have you -- which is fine, except that my ability to coordinate that is -- I mean, it's virtually zero. Basically, I dedicate it to a staff member who has got other responsibilities, and she does the best that she can. That's -- you know, there are clients who have simply asked the family to do it because their family will do it faster. Even when they get a furlough, there have been dates that they have not been able to get to simply because I can't get a motion in front of the judge that fast. You know, getting and reviewing full discovery. On my desk, I've got a stack of CDs and DVDs that have been sitting there for a couple of weeks; haven't looked at them, don't know what's on them. Not going to have a chance to look at them anytime soon. I mean, any of the substantive legal work that I should be doing, right now, there isn't time to get it done.

Q. And that's the -- what are the effects of continuances and delays and cases on the individual defendants and their cases?

A. Well -- I mean, if they're in jail -- we're already seeing in Miller County people saying, Forget it, I don't want a public defender; I'll just go to prison pro se; I'll just represent myself. If they don't take that approach, then they sit in jail that much longer until I can get around to doing the work that needs to be done. Miller County is one of the counties that will impose payment of a board bill as a condition of probation. So every day that they sit in jail, they're getting a bill for 38 bucks a day. And if they sit in jail for six months because it takes me that long to work on the case, that's -- $38 times 180 days, that's going to be added to their board bill, and, of course, my clients are completely destitute. If they're free -- well, whether they're free or whether they're in jail -- you know, a lot of times our clients, their life -- their whole life is on hold because of the criminal charges that they're facing. Obviously, if they're in jail, they're at risk of losing their housing, their car is likely to get repo'd, they may lose custody of their kids, they're likely to lose their job. When the landlord goes and evicts them, they're just going to throw all of their stuff out in the street; there's no one to pick it up you know; it's all going to get taken. So when a client, after sitting in jail four to six to 12 months or whatever, and they come out and they have absolutely nothing, I think they're much more likely to get back into trouble and reoffend, and it makes it that much harder for them -- if they're granted probation, it's going to make it that much harder to succeed on probation. You know, if they're not in custody, a lot of times -- again, the case has dramatic effect on them in that -- you know, in Missouri, everything is -- all of our court records are all in Case.net; it's on the Internet. You know, a lot of employers have caught on to that, and when an employer sees that guy has got a charge for possession of a controlled substance, that is going to impact the accused's employment prospects, even though they're presumed innocent while they're going to court on the charge. You know, right now drug tests at the crime lab are taking -- I don't know -- eight to 12 months for the drug test to get complete. You know, you set a trial in Miller County right now, the trial is going to be in the summer of 2018. And, you know, you throw in an overloaded public defender in all of this, you know, for our client -- I mean, just that pending charge, for it to go on that long, 18 months, has a horrible dramatic effect. I mean, it can affect the custody of their kids; it can affect -- may get kicked out of public housing, if they're in public housing; it may affect their job. You know -- and they've got to show up for all of these court dates. In some counties, they require bond supervision. So in addition to showing up to court dates, they may have to show up at a private probation office every week and pay a supervision fee and -- you know, obviously, if transportation is hard, it's going to be difficult to do that. Man -- I mean, you know, the -- you know, the consequences that are -- there's a huge list of the consequences, whether you're in jail or not, you know, just because of the delay associated with the public defender's office.

So I don't even know if I -- I started talking, and then I lost track of your original question. I apologize.

Q. No, no. That's -- so those are all tremendous personal consequences that these individuals can face, and then the other piece I'm hoping you can speak to is what consequences it has for their legal case continuance of months or years, in terms of the evidence and witnesses and all of those things.

A. Well, if it takes me two months to get the client in the county jail, and there's a video recording that they think is important to their case from the quickie store or from Walmart or from what have you, you know, most businesses only hold onto those videos for so long. If I don't contact them, you know, shortly after the thing, it may be erased and rerecorded over. So there's certainly the possibility that, you know, material evidence on the case could be lost. I've got a case right now where it's a very important part of the case that blood be tested. Preceding the -- I -- well, let me back up to the beginning.

It's a serious charge. I had to find an expert -- took me forever because of my schedule and because there's a shortage in this specialty, but you put the two together, it took me six months to find an expert on the case, possibly longer. And then in talking to the expert, we identified, Hey, there's blood that needs to be tested, then we had to find a lab to test it. The lab that we found to test it, by the time I got done playing phone tag with the people I needed to talk to, told me, You know what, at this point, blood is going to be too old; can't test it. As the thing stands now, we think we have found another lab who can work with the sample and then run the test that we need to be run, but, frankly, if for some reason they get into it and they find that they're going to be unable to do that, we're going to be up the creek without a paddle. That is a very important part of this case, but we have no ability to get any additional samples. I mean, that -- you know, just over and above the legal consequences of witnesses going into the wind or video being lost. You know, this one client, if the blood is too old to test, it's going to be a real problem in the case.

Q. And what charge is that individual facing?

A. Murder.

Q. You mentioned individual -- the other thing that is a result of these continuances and delays these individuals deciding to take plea deals pro se and go to prison rather than waiting longer for representation. It sounds like you're aware of multiple cases where that's happened.

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Okay.

A. And even in Miller County now, we're seeing some applicants -- some people come into court, and in lieu of filling out a public defender application, they say, Judge, I just want to represent myself. So even before I'm filing a caseload conference motion in some cases, people are saying, You know what, I'm not even going to go there.

Q. And is that because they've heard about the delays in public defender representation?

A. Most of the Miller County jail has received from me a motion to withdraw citing my caseload, a motion to decline representation citing my caseload, or a motion for caseload conference, and there's been a good amount of media about the thing. So between all of those sources, they're certainly aware of the situation.

Q. And do these individuals representing themselves and/or negotiating plea deals pro se to go to prison, does that raise sixth-amendment concerns for you as a public defender?

A. Oh, absolutely. And, frankly, the cases where I'm in them and representing people now.

Q. And that all stems from the case and work overload that you and your office is facing?

A. Yes.

MR. SCHERZER: Do you want to take a break for a little while?

THE WITNESS: We can. And can I see if the affidavits came in, if you'd like.

MR. SCHERZER: Okay.

Page 125

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 12:21 p.m. and we're off the record.
(A lunch recess was taken.)
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 1:03 p.m. and we're back on the record.
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Mr. Carver, I want to just return to Plaintiff's Exhibit 18 that we had been discussing, and we'll move through it quickly because we have a lot more to discuss, but if you could turn to that page 39420 that we were looking at previously, and let me know when you've gotten there.
A. Okay.
Q. So that e-mail that you had been referencing previously, the e-mail from Judge Richardson to you, the bottom of that page, do you see that e-mail?
A. From Judge Richardson to me?
Q. Yes.
A. Yes.
Q. Which is dated December 29th, 2016, at 10:16 a.m.?
A. Yes.
Q. And the subject, again, is Re: Public defender struggles; is that right?

Page 126

A. Yes.
Q. And it looks like it's in response to the e-mail that we had been reading earlier? It's her response to your e-mail?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And, in fact, she wrote back right away because you sent that e-mail at 9:54 a.m., and she responded 22 minutes later; is that right?
A. Yes. That's about right.
Q. Okay. So just if you could read the sentence that begins sort of on the four or five lines up from the bottom, the sentence, "We all know that."
A. "We all know that on any given jury week, there is no way the public defender can prepare for the number of cases that get set, so at least for me, continuances will be pretty freely given."
Q. Okay. So it seems like the response -- and I won't ask you to read the whole e-mail into the record, given the time, but the response from Judge Richardson, is it fair to sum up, was, I agree you're too busy and -- but I want you to at least file appearances, and I'll give you as many continuances as you need? Is that a fair summary of her response?

Page 127

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And we've discussed already the problems that can result as a result of all of those continuances, but --
A. Right.
Q. -- worst -- you know, the best of the worst possible worlds, perhaps?
A. Right.
Q. Okay. And then just turning to the e-mail above that on that same page, 39420.
A. Yes.
Q. Which, I guess, if you turn to the page before, 39419, you see at the bottom, that looks like it's from Ben Winfrey?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you remind us who Ben Winfrey is?
A. The Miller County prosecutor.
Q. And it's addressed -- it's addressed to many or all of the same individuals who were on your initial e-mail?
A. Yes.
Q. And it was sent -- if you're looking at 39419, that same day, December 29, 2016?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And can you read the second paragraph, "I do not -- " or sorry -- can you read the first clause, "In a related vein"?

A. "In a related vein of woe is us, the Miller County prosecutor's office regrets to announce the resignation of assistant prosecutor Derek K, who has been granted a very gracious offer by the Morgan County prosecuting attorney to vastly improve his situation in a county with less crime than Miller.
Q. And can you read the next paragraph?
A. Sure.
"I do not have an ABA-designated study. The ABA does not care enough to perform a study about whether the prosecution is adequately funded to perform its official duties as the minister of justice. Nonetheless, this prosecutor has determined, based upon my expert opinion and anecdotal evidence, that my office is at approximately 100,000 percent, our recommended carrying capacity by any standard. Please keep this in mind as we venture out together in the new year, and please be understanding of the state's own limitations in counties other than Morgan."
Q. Okay. And then if you could turn to 39419, a page prior to that, there's another e-mail from Ben Winfrey just to you later in the day that same day, six or seven hours later, where he says he was joking and says I was not mocking or minimizing your problem, we have both asked to do more with less; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And then if you could turn to 39416. The bottom of that page, it looks like there's an e-mail from Judge Schollmeyer to Ashley Lute?

A. Yes.

Q. And it looks like just above that it says Ashley Lute is associate circuit judge's secretary; is that right?

A. Yes. I mean, I think officially she's one of the court clerks, but she serves as his secretary.

Q. Okay. And she forwarded that e-mail, also, to you on December 29th at 4:26; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And so, essentially, it looks like -- oh, I see. Sorry. Because on -- just -- on 39417, it looks like you ended up writing to Ashley Lute because your e-mail to the judge directly bounced back; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Do you see that sort of at the top?

A. Yes.

Q. So then, essentially, this e-mail from Judge Schollmeyer was to you, just passed through Ashley Lute; right?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And he said -- can you read us what he said -- his short e-mail?

A. "I'm not going to appoint your office in Class A DWRs, if they're eligible for reinstatement, until I see that they aren't going to get reinstated."

"DWR" is -- tangentially, it's driving while revoked.

Q. Okay.

A. "Also, at the first of the year, first-offense stealing will have no possibility of jail, so I can't appoint. These things might help a little."

Q. Okay. And so when he says -- so is that referring to -- there was some statutory change in January 2017 about first -- the first offense for stealing; is that right?

Page 131

A. That's how I read that, yes.

Q. Okay. And are you aware of that particular statutory change or ...

A. In memory serves, I think it's just under a certain dollar amount.

Q. Okay.

A. I think it's less than 150 bucks.

Q. Okay. And so when he says, "I can't appoint," what is he referring to?

A. So when he says -- if it's -- if there is no risk of incarceration -- you know, there's certain statutes that say you can get a fine only under Chapter 600; they are not -- persons charged with that are not eligible for a public defender.

Q. Okay. If they're not -- if there's no possibility of jail time, they're ineligible for a public defender?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay.

A. Tangentially -- I don't mean to interrupt -- I just got a text from my office indicating they tried to send an e-mail to the staff up front, so I don't know if someone wants to step out and check on that or not.

MR. SCHERZER: Sure. Yeah. We can take a two-second break to do that.

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 1:12 p.m., and we're off the record.

(A recess was taken.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 1:16 p.m., and we're back on the record.

Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Okay. And then just the last e-mail in this chain, if you don't mind, Mr. Carver, that starts on that page 39415. At the bottom of that page -- sorry. When I said the first e-mail, the first e-mail, if you look at the top, is an e-mail from you to Ms. Shipma in October of this year forwarding this e-mail chain; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. But the second e-mail and the first one, you know, in this chain from -- in 2016, is this e-mail from -- at the bottom of the page on 39415 from Daniel Green to you?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you remind us who Daniel Green is?

A. Circuit judge in Cole County.

Q. Okay. And if you turn to the -- to 39416 at the top of the page, can you just read a few sentences that start with, "At any rate" on the second line there? "At any rate I would ..."

A. "At any rate, I would go so far as to suggest you figure out the maximum number of active cases for your folks, and we call these green cases. The rest we call red. When the case comes on the docket, and I ask you what action, you respond with, This is a red case, and we continue for 90 days, or, This is a green case, and we set it accordingly."

Q. Okay. And is that -- has that been happening, the green or red or some similar type of code word?

A. No.

Q. Okay. But what Judge Green is suggesting here is -- was, at least, that you set up two classes of cases, one class of which you would just continue, perhaps, ad infinitum, but at least for 90 day clips at a time?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. I'm done with that exhibit for now. I want to turn now to 8286.

(Deposition Exhibit No. 19 was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) So, Mr. Carver, I'm showing you what's been marked as Exhibit 19. Let me know when you've had a chance to glance at it.

A. Yes.

Page 134

Q. Okay. Do you recognize this?

A. Yes.

Q. And what is it?

A. This is an e-mail thread. The substantive e-mail would appear on Bates stamp 39414, which is an e-mail I'd sent to the courts in October of this year, and it wasn't addressed to all of the judges that I practice in front of, but it was addressed to those who had been continuing to order us to represent, even after we had been telling them we're drowning and we can't take more cases.

Q. Got it. So just to that subset of judges who were ordering you to continue representing, despite your concerns about your ability to effectively represent those clients they were ordering you to represent?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And can you read us that e-mail on 39414?

A. Sure.

"As you know, I have been filing motions to appoint counsel for some time. In the event those motions are overruled, I'm now sending notice of the court's order to my supervisors with the request that they respond. I simply do not have any ability to assign these cases internally within my office. Frankly, I don't know what my supervisors will tell you. They don't have extra lawyers on hand to take additional cases, and I'm told that they are receiving notices of appointment from local public defender offices all over the state. I assume it may take some time to receive a response. Your patience is much appreciated. If you do not receive any response after you have ordered the public defender to provide representation, feel free to let me know. Tangentially, I will remind you under State ex rel. Robinson v. Franklin, the court cannot appoint specific public defenders; the court can only order the agency to provide representation. As always --"

Page 135

It's supposed to say "feel free," but there's a typographical error --

"-- feel free to get in touch with questions or concerns. Thanks, Justin."

Q. And what, if any, response did you receive as a result of this e-mail?

A. From the courts? None.

Q. Okay.

A. I sent a number of cases to my supervisor, Ellen Blau, and I think that she asked -- I cc'd in other members of senior management on it. Sometime later I got a call from Ms. Blau saying, Don't do that anymore. We don't have any lawyers to give these -- to assign these cases to.

Page 136

Q. Don't do what anymore? Sorry.

A. Send the cases to the administrative office with the request that they provide representation.

Q. Okay. So, initially, she told you to send those -- to copy other individuals after you had sent it, but eventually came back to you and saying sending these cases to us is frivolous because we have no one to take them?

A. Correct.

Q. And what did she suggest that you do instead?

A. Have evidentiary hearings on my motions to decline representation or motions to withdraw.

Q. Okay. And have you been able to have those hearings?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay.

A. And I've had zero success.

Q. Okay. So tell us about that, if you could.

Page 137

A. Sure. There was -- I can think of two right now off of the top of my head, evidentiary hearings on motions to decline representation and/or motions to withdraw representation. One was in Miller County in front of Judge Kaltenbronn where we took up a number of cases simultaneously, as in -- when I say "a number," I mean more than a dozen, maybe two dozen -- cases in which essentially the same issues was there, and I testified as to my caseload and what I was able to do and what I was not able to do. The judge overruled all of the motions and ordered me to remain in the case or enter into the case as the case may be. Likewise, there was another hearing on a conflict case in Laclede County in front of Judge Richardson where, again, I testified and the judge ordered the public defender to represent.

Q. Okay. So -- and those are the only two evidentiary hearings that you've had?

A. That I can think of off of the top of my head. There may have been more -- I want to say there was at least one more in circuit court in Miller County. I can't recall for sure for sure. We've also had the case conference hearings in Cole County. We had a hearing on motions to -- for the caseload conference in Miller County, and the conference is scheduled in Miller County.

Q. Okay. And what, if any, reasons or rationales did the judges in these evidentiary hearings give for denying your motions?

A. In the Lebanon -- in the Laclede County case -- I use Lebanon and Laclede County interchangeably.

Q. Right.

A. In the Laclede County case, the judge said, Well, I'm not ordering you to take it, Mr. Carver; I'm just ordering the public defender to take it. If your office can't do it, find another public defender from another public defender office. I talked to my boss, who told me there aren't any other public defenders in any other public defender offices that -- they're all overloaded, and because of the division of labor, the case was my office's case. It had initially started -- the reason it was my case was it initially started in Miller County, and the venue was changed to Laclede County, sort of the administrative division of labor is it gets assigned to the office in the county where the case started. You know, in -- with regard to some of the other things that courts have told me over time, basically, the same things I told you to before. You know, Judge Kaltenbronn in response to the motion -- the evidentiary hearing basically said, You know, look the real remedy is not judicial; the real remedy is legislative. And he didn't feel like he had any good options other than appointing the public defender, was sort of what he articulated.

Q. I'd like to just -- to close this loop here, just return to Plaintiff's Exhibit 18 for one second. When you have that in front of you, that's the eight-page chain of e-mails.

A. Okay.

Q. On -- and going back to 39421 -- sorry. I wanted to do this before the break, but I will just come back to it quickly now.

The four lines up from the bottom says -- you read this earlier -- that, "Nonetheless, as a supervisory lawyer, I have a specific ethical obligation to monitor and control the caseloads of my assistants."

A. Yes.

Q. "I simply can't keep assigning my lawyers cases at the rate that I have been assigning them."

A. Yes.

Q. Can you just tell us a little bit more about that special ethical obligation that you have as a supervisor?

A. I'm obliged to make sure that all of my lawyers practice consistent with Rule 4 of the Missouri Supreme Court Rules. One of those rules specifically, if you look at Comment 2 relating to diligence, says that a lawyer's caseload must be controlled so that they can practice each case competently. Over and above that, if you look at the rule relating to competence, competence is knowledge and skill, but it's also preparation. It's a conjunctive test. It's not sufficient -- you are not competent if you have only knowledge and skill but you do not do the preparation to provide competent representation within the meaning of Rule 4. You have to have the knowledge, the skill, and the preparation. So those are just some -- sort of some of the obligations that come to mind as you ask that question.

Q. So that's over and above your ethical responsibilities to your own cases, you have these additional ethical responsibilities as a supervisor?

A. I have to make sure my lawyers are being ethical in their practice as well.

Q. Okay. And are the rules that you're referring to 4-1.3 is diligence -- is that --

Page 141

A. That sounds correct.
Q. -- correct? Okay. And then 4-5.1 is responsibilities of partners, managers, and supervisory lawyers?
A. That sounds correct, yes.
Q. And does that -- does that rule say something to the effect of a lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer conforms to the rules of professional conduct?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And, in fact -- well, I'll just -- let me just submit this quickly so I don't force you to try to guess on what the ...
(Deposition Exhibit No. 20 was marked for identification.)
A. Yes.
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Do you recognize what I put in front of you as Exhibit 20?
A. Yes.
Q. And this is Rule 4-5.1?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you see Letters -- C under that?
A. Yes.

Page 142

Q. And it says, "A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of the rules of professional conduct if, one, the lawyer orders or with knowledge of the specific conduct ratifies the conduct involved"?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And is that one of the things that you're talking about, about your special ethical responsibilities as a supervisor?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So, indeed, you could be ethically responsible for the conduct of your line attorneys if you either order or even ratify their conduct conducting ineffective for unethical representation of the defendants your office is assigned to represent; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. I'd like to mark this as Plaintiff's Exhibit 21.
(Deposition Exhibit No. 21 was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Have you seen this document before, Mr. Carver?
A. It looks like there's some formatting errors that may have occurred --

Page 143

Q. Yes.
A. -- when the thing was printed.
Q. Yes.
A. Setting aside those formatting errors, this would be appear to be a supplemental budget request relating to the public defender's office. I presume I have seen this at some point in time. I mean ...
Q. And it's okay if not. I'm asking you about one specific page, which I'll refer to you.
A. Okay.
Q. But it does say -- although, yes, this is something in the file that has occurred, but on the front it says, "Supplemental --" what looks like "Supplemental Legislative Budget Request."
A. Yes.
Q. Is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Approved October 25th, 2017? Is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And it says, "Michael Barrett, director." Underneath it has the Missouri State Public Defender commission seal?
A. Yes.

Page 144

Q. Okay. So I just want to turn to the last page of that document, 38976.
A. Okay.
Q. And it says, "State Public Defender Cumulative caseload Metric Fiscal Year 2017" on the top. Do you see that?
A. Yes.
Q. And it says, "Start date, July 1st, 2016, end date June 30th, 2017"?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And do you see it -- it looks like the 33 districts or areas in the Missouri State Public Defender System are listed here in rows.
A. Yes.
Q. And they're ranked 1 to 33 in the far right-hand column?
A. Yes.
Q. And this is a percent of capacity chart for the 33 area offices of the Missouri public defender system? Is that a fair --
A. Yes.
Q. -- statement?
A. Yes. Based on the RubinBrown metric.
Q. Based on the RubinBrown metric. Okay. And so it has attorney time and capacity, and then in that second-to-last column, it has percent of capacity; is that right?

A. Yes.
Q. And do you see Area 19, Jefferson City, in this chart?
A. I do.
Q. Okay. And if you go across -- it says, "Percent of capacity, 210.3 percent"?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you tell us what that means, to your understanding?
A. That would mean that we would have 210 percent of open cases as compared to the number of lawyers to handle those cases, and that 210 percent presumes that the office is fully staffed with all of its lawyers, and as of June 30, 2017, we were not. We had actually been shorthanded for all of calendar year 2017. And so that -- you know, if you based our percentage based on the number of lawyers we had on hand, it would change and it would probably increase, but what that number would be, I couldn't tell you off the top of my head.
Q. And it would certainly increase because you have six on staff instead of seven?

Page 146

A. Agreed.
Q. So it would increase one-tenth or one-sixth or whatever.
A. However that math works out.
Q. Some complicated fraction.
A. Right.
Q. Okay. And so, effectively, it would be fair to say what this means is that your office would be twice as many attorneys as it currently is even authorized for -- much less has, but is even authorized for in order to adequately represent the defendants to whom it's been assigned to represent?
A. At least twice, yes.
Q. Okay. And is that consistent with your experience and understanding, having worked in the system for 15 years and been in charge of this office for three-plus years?
A. Yes.
Q. That your evaluation is you would need twice as many lawyers?
A. Yes.
Q. And then do you see on that last column where I mention before the rank Jefferson City -- can you tell us what rank Jefferson City is?
A. Twenty-eight.

Page 147

Q. Okay. So that's -- and you see at the bottom here there are 33 areas or districts in the MSPD system; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. So your -- so for fiscal year 2017, your office was 28th out of 33 offices; is that correct?
A. Yes. Yes.
Q. Okay. So even with this 210 percent overload and all of the problems that you've been identifying, 27 of the 33 offices have a greater numerical overload than your office; is that correct?
A. That's correct.
Q. And, perhaps, that -- might that explain Ellen Blau's response that -- and your previous acknowledgment there aren't other attorneys to come in and -- as knights in shining armor to represent these individuals in your district?
A. That's correct.
Q. Okay. I'd like to turn quickly to what I'm going to mark as Plaintiff's Exhibit 22.
(Deposition Exhibit No. 22 was marked for identification.)
A. Yes.
Q. Do you recognize this document?

Page 148

A. Yes.
Q. What is it?
A. This is a report of the Senate interim committee following a series of hearings at the state capitol.
Q. A series of hearings on?
A. Public defender caseload, staffing status of the public defender's office.
Q. Okay. And do you see the date on the bottom of this cover page?
A. The report was prepared, according to the cover page, in January of 2007. The hearings were in the summer of 2006.
Q. And do you recall these hearings?
A. I do.
Q. Okay. And is that because you testified at at least one of them?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So if you go to -- well, if you look very briefly at 18328.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you see that? Is it says, "Summary of the August 25th meeting."
A. Yes.
Q. And it talks about August 25th, 2006.

Page 149

A. Yes.
Q. And if you turn to 18330.
A. Yes.
Q. Which looks like it's describing that same meeting.
A. Yes.
Q. Do you see your name there?
A. I do. It lists me as an assistant public defender. My memory is that I was the district defender at the time.
Q. Right. And actually the first line does say, "As a supervising attorney in his office."
A. Uh-huh.
Q. So that was when you were -- you testified as the district defender in the Fulton office; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And this was 11 -- almost 11 and a half years ago; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And can you read the first sentence under your name?
A. "As the supervising attorney in his office, Mr. Carver's testimony focused on the difficulties of maintaining his own heavy caseload while attempting to mentor, supervise, and evaluate the other attorneys in his office."

Q. Okay. So fair to say this is a problem that you testified to the Senate about yourself 11 and a half years ago?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And much the same problem that you're describing today?
A. Yes.
Q. You're laughing, and I don't blame you. Why is it that you're laughing?
A. It's -- it has been a problem that has persisted the entire time I've been in the public defender's office. And it's not funny. It's been going on for forever.
Q. Okay. And you've testified to the Senate -- I mean, other individuals here testifying as well, but you, yourself, testified to the Senate about this 11 and a half years ago?
A. Yes.
Q. And, if anything, would you say -- has the problem gotten better or worse since that time?
A. You know, one of the results -- so one of the results of the Senate interim committee is that they did raise the salaries some, which certainly helped. And I think they did allocate us an additional number of lawyers or support staff statewide. You know, I don't know -- the little bit that the Senate interim committee did -- it's sort of a Band-Aid on a gushing wound that did not fix the problem. There was probably -- there was certainly some help that came out of the Senate interim committee. Now, whether the additional resources that we got out of that process, whether that has kept pace with sort of the change in our caseload, that, I couldn't speak to. And, frankly, whether the pay raises now would keep pace with inflation, that, I couldn't speak to either. We're still struggling with the same problems we had back then, I mean, is sort of the short summary. This did not fix or end the problem by any means; it just placed a Band-Aid on a very serious wound.

Q. Okay. And at the end of that first paragraph under your name, it says, "Last year office closed 1,664 cases, including 298 cases closed by Mr. Carver."
A. Yes.
Q. And what does that mean? Just -- can you tell us what the "298 cases closed by you" means.
A. That means I pled or tried some or something -- there was some dismissals, but that would be the number of cases that I would have closed that year.

Q. Okay. And then on the -- can you just read the second paragraph of that testimony?
A. Sure.
"Mr. Carver expressed the frustration of trying to balance management and representing clients. If he focuses on his own cases and does not supervise the new attorneys, clients suffer from their inexperience. If he focuses on management issues, his own clients do not receive proper representation; however, Mr. Carver expressed that proper management and feedback are essential elements that would help with attorney retention and improved performance."
Q. Okay. And do you still agree with those sentiments today?
A. Absolutely.
Q. And, in fact, is that the same sort of internal conflict that you face as a supervisor, trying to do what's best for your clients and for your attorneys and the clients that those attorneys represent that you're facing every day now in Area 19?

Page 153

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And, again, this is something you testified to the Senate about 11 and a half years ago; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. All right. I'd like to turn to what I'll mark as Exhibit 23.
(Deposition Exhibit No. 23 was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Plaintiff's Exhibit 23, do you recognize this document?
A. Yes.
Q. What is it?
A. This would be one form of the motions to decline representation and to -- you know, to appoint counsel that I spoke of earlier.
Q. Okay. I know this looks like it was in a particular case, the case of State of Missouri v. Quentin Williams; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And who drafted this -- who wrote and filed this motion?
A. I did. Much of it I borrowed from something somebody else did previously, but I did this, and I also did all of the other motions I've been alluding to earlier.

Q. Okay. And can you read just the first -- well, the first sentence but just until the -- until 451, so the one, two, three, four -- the first five and a half lines?
A. Yes.
"Comes now Justin Carver, district defender of Area 19 of the Missouri State public Defender System, and informs the court that he has found the defendant to be indigent but that he has no lawyers able to take this case, as every lawyer in the Area 19 office is already overloaded with cases and cannot accept additional cases without violating the Missouri Rules of Professional Conduct 4-1.1, 4-1.3, 4-1.4, 4-1.7, 4-1.16(a), and 4-5.1."
Q. Okay. And, essentially, you asked the court to decline -- to allow you to decline representation and to appoint a lawyer employed by the State of Missouri or some other remedy to get the person adequate representation?
A. Yes.
Q. And what was the result of that motion?
A. It was neither granted nor denied. Mr. Williams is the gentleman who we had a case conference on in Cole County sometime after this motion was filed. After the first hearing on the case conference and before the second, one of the lawyers in my office was able to take additional cases, and so Mr. Williams' case was assigned to the lawyer who then entered and began representation.

Q. Okay. And we'll get to that a little bit more in a minute, that conference.
So was this -- is this essentially a -- this motion -- because you mentioned you filed hundreds of these types of motions, is this, then, what became a form motion that you filed in several different cases?
A. It was a template that we set up in the computer, and any time that the situation arose where we needed it, we just pulled up the template and used it.
Q. And was this the filings of this kind of motion -- the motions that you mentioned filing in early 2017; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay.
A. And through middle 2017.
Q. Right.
A. Up until Hazel v. Meyer, the writ decision was decided by the Missouri Supreme Court, then we switched to the case conference motions.

Q. Okay. I'll show you one of those motions. I'm marking this as Plaintiff's Exhibit 24.
(Deposition Exhibit No. 24 was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) And do you recognize this -- what I've marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 24?
A. Yes.
Q. And what is it?
A. This was a motion requesting conference to discuss caseload issues that was filed on behalf -- on Mr. Williams' case.
Q. Okay. And so that's the -- this is the motion that you -- the type of motion that you mentioned previously that you're now filing instead of this motion to decline representation; is that right?
A. Correct. My memory is that, also, in conjunction with this memory on Mr. Williams' case, there were suggestions and support that was filed. After his case went to conference, we took the motion requesting conference and the suggestions and condensed them into one big giant motion requesting conference that we've been using since.
Q. Okay. And I'll show you what's been -- what I'll mark as Plaintiff's Exhibit 25.

(Deposition Exhibit No. 25 was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) And do you recognize this document?
A. I do. This was the suggestions and support.
Q. The one that you were just referring to?
A. Yes.
Q. And this has now become a form that you're now attaching to Plaintiff's Exhibit 24, the motions, and filing in many of your new cases?
A. We've condensed Exhibits 24 and 25 into one big giant filing and using the one big giant filing.
Q. And, again, are you filing this in every new case or just in the cases that -- once you've allocated however many cases your attorneys can take at any given time, then in each additional case after that, you're filing this motion?
A. We're filing it only in the additional cases that we feel that we cannot ethically take.
Q. Okay. And you're determining that -- which cases you -- when you've reached that point at any given moment by consulting with the attorneys in your office?

A. Right. So the system that we have set up internally is when support staff assigns out cases to a lawyer, Bob, they're going to track how many of which case type they've assigned to Bob, you know, as they assign out cases, and they're going to put that information in a spreadsheet that has all of the RubinBrown numbers built into it. When the lawyer gets to 100 percent of their RubinBrown capacity or just slightly above, 102 percent, what have you, that triggers an e-mail from support staff to me and to the lawyer, Hey, Lawyer Bob is at 103 percent of capacity or what have you. I then either talk or e-mail with the lawyer, and, generally, the conversation is, Hey, can you take more cases and still provide ethical, competent representation on all of your cases, or no? And if the lawyer says, Man, I think I can take one or two more, I'm probably going to give the lawyer one or two more, as long as they're providing me a rational reason for believing so. If they say No, I absolutely cannot take additional cases, then we cut them off and do not assign any additional cases, at least until the start of the next month.
Q. And just quickly, if you could, tell me about the other nonattorney staff in your office. You mention support staff -- at one point, you mentioned an investigator. If you could just tell me what additional staff there is other than attorneys in your office.

A. I have three support staff members. One, the official job title is office support assistant. I have two legal assistants. In addition to those three support staff members, there is one investigator.
Q. Okay. And that investigator was on leave but is now back from leave?
A. Went out October 1 or very early October and is due to come back on January 2, I think, is the date he comes back.
Q. Okay. And so currently in the office, you don't have any investigator?
A. Right now we have a legal assistant who had other responsibilities who is attempting to fill that gap and to serve subpoenas and visit crime scenes and do evidence views and that kind, and -- yes. Our investigator is out, so we're trying to cover that with other support staff right now.
Q. Okay. And so you mentioned the RubinBrown numbers, but it sounds like -- the system you have set up is the RubinBrown numbers, but, also -- not just a strict adherence to those numbers, but, also, based on your own experience, having done this for 15 years, and your attorneys' experience with their own caseloads, coming up to a holistic evaluation of going to the absolute maximum that someone could take and still provide ethical representation. Is that fair?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And you mentioned in this motion and suggestions Rule 4 for the rules of professional conduct, and you mentioned that a couple of times in this deposition. And is it your understanding that that rule governs public defenders -- you and the other public defenders in your office, just as it governs every other attorney in the state of Missouri?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And so if you could turn -- so what we were just looking at, Plaintiff's Exhibit 25, the suggestions and support, and page 151.
A. Yes.
Q. And if you could just read that -- the main -- the first paragraph under Roman Numeral 3.
A. Yes. The title heading is, "Area 19 attorneys must be permitted to assert and rely upon the rules of professional conduct." The body of the paragraph reads:

"There is no exception in the rules of professional conduct, Rule 4, for public defender attorneys." And it's got the citations.

"To the contrary, as the American Bar Association has aptly noted, there is an implicit premise that governments, which establish and fund providers of public defense, never intended that the lawyers who furnish the representation would be asked to do so if it meant violating the ethical duties pursuant to professional conduct rules." And then there's a citation.

"For this reason public defenders are risking their own professional lives when appointed to an excessive number of cases." Citation.

Q. Okay. And those -- the last two sentences you read, the "due to the contrary" sentence and the "for this reason sentence," those are, in fact, just full, direct quotes from the Waters case from the Missouri Supreme Court; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And is this consistent with your understanding --

Page 162

A. Yes.

Q. -- of what rules and responsibilities govern you and the attorneys in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. And I want to focus strictly on that last sentence, the "For this reason, public defenders are risking their own professional lives when appointed to an excessive number of cases." Do you agree with that sentiment expressed by the Missouri Supreme Court?

A. Yeah. Everybody in the public defender's office that has too many cases is very concerned about their professional licensure at this point.

Q. And is that something you've heard from the attorneys in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. And from attorneys in other offices around the state with whom you've spoken?

A. Yes.

Q. And is that something you're concerned about yourself for your own professional license?

A. Maybe I should be. I feel like I've done everything I could realistically do at this point. I mean, when I read the rules, it says, if you've got too many cases, move to decline, I've done that -- or move to withdraw, and I've done that. You know, we're doing the Chapter 600 conferences as well. And -- you know, and I self-reported because I've got too many cases, and I know it. You know -- and -- you know, every time I've been ordered to take a case, I've done it. And, like I said, I'm working overtime. I'm doing the best I can. So I don't know. I mean, I feel like I have done what the rules require me to do when I've got too many cases, but I also feel like because I've -- I feel like I've tried to take action early before a lot of people I knew in other offices were doing anything to address the thing. I feel like I'm probably in a better situation so far as my professional licensure is concerned.

Q. Okay. But despite the fact that you've moved to decline and withdraw on hundreds of your own cases, in addition to hundreds of cases for the office, you've been ordered to appear in many of those cases; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And so, therefore, you end up with the 213-plus cases that you mentioned earlier?

A. Correct.

Q. And you have said you don't feel like you're able to ethically represent many of those individuals who are -- who you've currently entered appearance for; is that right?

A. I'm definitely not providing competent representation to those 213 clients.

Q. Despite your every intention and best effort to do so?

A. Correct.

Q. And despite the fact that you're a 15-year veteran of the Missouri State Public Defender System?

A. Correct.

Q. And, therefore, are -- obviously, by virtue of that, have much more experience than anyone -- twice as much experience as anyone else in your office, five times as much experience as the second-most experienced person -- you know, the third most -- second-most experienced line defender in your office; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And whatever 12 times 15 -- you know, almost 100 times more experience than the individual who started November 13th and already has 78 cases?

A. I'll trust your math on that. I don't know.

Page 165

Q. Yeah. Much, much more experience than he does and many of the people in your office?
A. Correct.
Q. And you mentioned you self-reported. Can you tell me about that?
A. At some point a few months ago it became clear to me that I felt like I had done everything I could think to do to address this situation, and yet my caseload was not in compliance with what I felt like it ought to be with any of our ABA, NAC standards, RubinBrown metric, whatever. I mean, I had kind of blown all of those out of the water. And, bottom line, I was not providing competent, ethical representation, in spite of the fact I've been telling my courts that I am not providing competent, ethical representation; please don't put me on another case. So I self-reported to OCDC.
Q. How did you do so?
A. I just sent them a fax.
Q. You sent them a fax?
A. Yeah.
Q. Okay. All right.
MR. SCHERZER: I'd like, if possible, Jackie, at some point, if we could get that.
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) And what's the -- do you know what, if anything, have you heard about that self-reporting?

Page 166

A. I've heard nothing.
Q. Do you know what the process is for -- the ordinary process for such a report?
A. No.
Q. And you said OCDC. Can you just tell us what that is?
A. Office of the Chief Disciplinary Counsel.
Q. Was that the same office that prosecuted Karl -- I don't know if "prosecute" is the right word, but brought the case against Karl Hinkebein?
A. Yes.
Q. And is that the Hinkebein decision that you referenced earlier; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you just tell us briefly what your understanding of that case is?
A. Sure. There was a Missouri public defender who had clients pursue complaint or complaints relating to lack of client contact and misfiling deadlines. And as I understand, there had been at least one complaint or a series of complaints in the past. OCDC began an investigation and pursued -- you used the word "prosecution," and

I can't think of any word better, but it's not a criminal prosecution, but took action against Mr. Hinkebein's license. It ended up going to the Missouri Supreme Court, and the Missouri Supreme Court put Mr. Hinkebein on probation.
Q. Okay. And is that a case that everyone in your office is aware of?
A. Yes.
Q. And it sounds like you've had discussions with other individuals in the MSPD about that case as well.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And has that caused other attorneys in your office to be concerned about their own license and possible ethical cases against them?
A. Yes. In fact, it was after that decision that came down I had two lawyers leave. And I asked them point-blank, What, if any, impact did the Hinkebein decision have on your decision to leave? One described it as a consideration; the other described it as the straw that broke the camel's back. Tangentially, you had asked me earlier about how courts have responded to my -- the various motions that I've filed. I had an additional thought. One of my judges in Miller County told me that the right remedy is for me to quit.

Q. And did he or she explain how that would possibly be a remedy for either you or your clients?
A. His thought was that that would be a remedy for me because then I would not have a caseload problem.
Q. Okay. And what is your opinion about what repercussions that would have for the other individuals in your office and the clients that you and they represent?
A. Well, you know, the -- it means the clients, eventually, at some point, when someone hired a replacement for me, they would get another lawyer; it might be their fifth or their sixth at that point. I mean, I think that -- you know, and at that point, the experience level of the lawyers in my office would be cut pretty dramatically.
Q. And you mentioned, nonetheless, despite your -- the concerns that you have for not only your colleagues and the individuals you supervise, but your and their clients that you're considering doing that at some point because of the -- of the tremendous caseload and overwhelming caseload that you're experiencing?
A. Yes.

Q. And if it weren't for that overwhelming caseload, is that something that you would be considering otherwise? Would you be consider quitting or resigning?

A. No. I love -- I love the mission. I love my clients. I like doing the work that we do. I'm in a convenient place in that my wife gets paid like a real lawyer, and so I -- you know, I don't have to go make more money somewhere else. The only thing that I think would drive me away would be the caseload.

Q. Okay. All right. I want to just turn back quickly to Plaintiff's Exhibit 17, which is that transcript that we talked about at the very beginning of the deposition.

A. Yes.

Q. Do you remember that? And so that is a transcript of this hearing -- the Quentin Williams caseload hearing; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And if you could turn to page 125. -- or excuse me -- the very bottom of 124.

A. Yes.

Q. Can you just read starting three lines up, "if I'm appointed on Mr. Williams' case -- " down to the end of that paragraph.

A. Yes.

Q. And by -- onto the end of that paragraph, I mean, on 125.

A. Understood.

"If I'm appointed on Mr. Williams' case, I'm caught in a Catch-22, in that I can't -- I can't frankly represent him, too, with all of the people that I've already got. And if I assign it to a junior lawyer, who I believe already has too many cases as I can possibly give them, then I'm going to be violating my responsibilities as a supervisor. So I'm kind of caught in a Catch-22, Judge. I'm either going to force the lawyer to take the case, which would violate my responsibilities as a supervisor, and cause them to violate their responsibilities under the court rules, or I can just take it myself, and then it's just me."

Q. Okay. And so the Catch-22 you're describing -- and are you still -- this was months ago, but are you -- I suspect I know the answer to this, but are you still feeling like you're in -- you're still experiencing that Catch-22?

A. Absolutely. It's a question of which ethical rule that I'm going to end up breaking: One that applies to me as an individual lawyer or one that applies to my responsibilities as a supervisor.

Q. And fair to say that your current belief is that you have -- that is, in fact, the nature of a Catch-22: You have no other choice. Either you can violate your own ethical responsibilities as a lawyer to your own clients, or you can violate your ethical responsibilities as a supervisor by assigning that case to the other individuals in your office; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. You don't have any other option that would fully comply with your ethical responsibilities?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And so tell -- I guess, then, quickly, while we're doing this --

MR. SCHERZER: Can we go off the record for one second?

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 2:15 p.m., and we're off the record.

(A recess was taken.)

(Deposition Exhibit No. 26 was marked for identification.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 2:20 p.m., and we're back on the record.

Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) So, Mr. Carver, I'm showing you what's been marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 26. Do you recognize that?

A. Yes. These would be -- contained within Exhibit 26 are the various exhibits that I submitted to the court in relation to the case conference hearing on Mr. Quentin Williams' case.

Q. And we unfortunately don't have time to go through in this any detail, but fair to say, if you turn to Plaintiff's Exhibit 17, back to the transcript again --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and look at the second page of that, which is 82 --

A. Yes.

Q. -- Bates stamp 82.

A. Yes.

Q. And there's an exhibit index there with Exhibits A through H.

A. Yes.

Q. Fair to say that Exhibit 26 is -- are those one, two, three, four, five, six, seven -- eight exhibits that you submitted at the caseload conference?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And, in short, those -- that was the affidavits were and are affidavits that attorneys, current and former, in your office prepared and you submitted on their behalf about their caseload and other related issues?

A. Yes.

Q. And the caseload printout is a printout of cases that you -- well, tell us what that caseload printout is so I don't characterize it inaccurately.

A. That was a printout of cases that I had open at the time. You'll see on the top of it and then in the body of it there are -- you know, on the top it's got 224, and it's crossed out, and it's written 220, and then there's a couple, you know, of people who are crossed off of the list. Very shortly before the case conference, I had closed those cases, but staff hadn't mechanically closed them in the computer. So when I submitted what's marked Exhibit H, I sort of did it with the caveat that it says 224 but my current caseloads is 220 because I know those four cases had been closed.

Q. So at that time, you had 220 cases?

A. Correct.

Q. So fair to say that Exhibit H, the caseload printout, is a printout of every open or active case on your docket; is that right?

A. As of 11/7/17, yes.

Q. Okay. Great. Since that's the only one -- you're done looking at it. Since that's the only copy, do you mind if I take a gander at it?

A. Oh, sorry.

Q. I'll move on to other things, but ...

So turning to Exhibit 17, the transcript of the caseload conference.

A. Yes.

Q. If you could turn to 137.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you see in the middle of that page there's a long quote -- two-sentence statement from the court?

A. Yes.

Q. And the court, again, is -- was which judge?

A. Judge Joyce.

Q. Okay. And can you just read that -- those three sentences.

A. Yes. So it starts on Line 10.

"The Court: I'm going to take it.

Counsel, you are all aware that we're trying to work with the public defender and that their caseloads are such that they can't provide competent representation. So I'm going to find that they cannot be asked to take cases that would violate the -- more importantly, the clients' right to effective assistance of counsel. So I'm going to make that finding."

Q. Okay. So what's your understanding of what the judge found there?

A. That our caseloads are such that we cannot take additional cases and provide competent representation, and so she's going to make a finding to that effect.

Q. Okay. And what's the result been of that finding?

A. So we had a second hearing on the case conference, and by then our situation had changed some because we had hired at least one more lawyer, maybe two -- I can't remember off the top of my head, but we were able to assign a significant number of cases that had been awaiting counsel to counsel -- including Mr. Williams. At the time of the November 7 hearing, Mr. Williams had been in the Cole County jail for five or six months. Between the November 7 hearing and the subsequent hearing, we were able to enter on his cases, and almost all of the other cases who -- people who are confined in the Cole County jail. There was still a substantial block of 71 cases that we didn't know what to do with. We didn't have a lawyer who could possibly take those cases, too, or we couldn't divide those cases up any more. In Phase 2 of the conference, the judge asked me to submit that list to her and to Mr. Richardson, the prosecutor, and they were going to take a look at it to figure out what, if anything, they could do; take jail off the table, appoint a private lawyer, what have you. I submitted that list to the court and to Mr. Richardson. I have not received any sort of response one way or another as to what the court intended to do with those 71 cases.

Q. And so those 71 cases are 71 individuals who qualify for public defender services?

A. There are 71 cases. Some individuals had more than one case.

Q. And how many of those individuals, if you know, are or were in custody?

A. Of the 71, I think, maybe one or two.

Q. Got it.

A. And I think at this point, if they were in custody, they probably have been assigned out by

Q. Okay. And to be clear, on some of those cases that are being assigned, you aren't -- you -- I guess, primarily, you -- you aren't able to -- well, as we've termed, conduct active representation for a period of, at least, months before starting on the case?
A. I am not voluntarily entering on anything, and I haven't been for months. The only way I'm getting in a case is if the court orders me to take a case. With Cole County cases, you know, what we're doing is at the start of every month, support staff is going to open up and assign as many cases as they can, you know, starting with in-custody clients first, and then if we can't assign more, then we start filing motions.
Q. Okay. And I just want to turn back quickly to -- just for one second to Plaintiff's Exhibit 26, which I'll pass back to you. In Exhibit H, the case level report that you mentioned previously in that Exhibit 26.
A. Yes.
Q. So that's -- that caseload report, your caseload is broken down in there by type of case A and B felony, murders, drug felony, et cetera; is that right?

A. Yes.
Q. And it lists a number of -- next to those categories, it lists a number for each of those categories. Fair to say that's the number of cases in each of those categories there was at that time, at least on your docket?
A. Yes. Except, you know, as corrected.
Q. As corrected by the court?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And then it has a date next to that.
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me what that date is? I mean, what that date --
A. I believe that that is the date when the case was opened in our system.
Q. And when is a case opened in your system? Is that opened at the first appearance or the first appearance that you enter an appearance?
A. So when we receive an application for public defender services -- well, it's -- things have been -- things are a little weird now, so this is going to be kind of complicated to explain. I'm going to do the best I can. You know, like, for example, right now, in Miller County, on my cases, when a person wants a public defender to represent them, they're going to fill out a formal application for a public defender. I'll take that to the responsible staff member, they'll review the application, they'll check Case.net, and they sometimes will have to call the applicant back or call a bondsman or ask some basic questions to figure out if the person meets the criteria for a public defender. Once support staff makes the determination that the applicant qualifies, you know, if we had an available lawyer, we'd just open up a case file, file an entry of appearance, and ask for discovery. You know, right now, it's not quite working like that. On my cases in Miller County right now, instead of filing an entry and a request for discovery, I'm filing a motion for caseload conference or, previously, a motion to decline representation or something along those lines.

On Cole County and Moniteau County cases, it's a little bit different, in that if we've got a lawyer we can assign to the thing, you know, right away, certainly, we will. If we're not able to, then we would be filing a motion for caseload conference.

Q. I have one more exhibit, and then some questions, and then we'll be finished. The last exhibit -- I believe we're up to Exhibit 27.
(Deposition Exhibit No. 27 was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Do you recognize this --
A. Yes.
Q. -- document? And what is it?
A. These would be -- there was a brief period of time when we couldn't take cases, I was sort of sending them to the administrative office, and this would be the e-mails associated with the cases that we had sort of attempted to send.
Q. And if you could turn to Bates stamp 14, the last page. And so just to clarify, this is -- is this the set of -- or at least a set of the e-mails that you've mentioned earlier that you had sent to Ellen Blau, and then she eventually responded that there was not going to be any magical help coming from another office?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And so it looks like there were -- who is Kalie Campbell?
A. She is the office support assistant in Area 19.

Q. Okay. And it looks like in these previous pages, she sent a -- sort of a form e-mail saying the Area 19 office is overloaded and cannot possibly accept additional cases without violating our ethical obligations?

A. Yes. That was language that I typed up and sent to her and asked that she paste into the body of an e-mail when sending the cases to the Columbia administrative office.

Q. Okay. So these were all -- it looks like -- and for attachment reasons, those individual e-mails didn't go through. And then at the end here on 14, those e-mail sent October 12th, 2017 at 3:01 p.m., she sent a number of -- it looks like 11 cases with that line, the Area 19 office is overloaded and cannot possibly accept additional cases without violating our ethical obligations?

A. Yes.

Q. And that was, as you said, language that instructed her to send?

A. Yes.

Q. And the response from the central office was, We don't have any way of handling these cases from anyone outside your office; your office is going to have to try to take other steps to try to remedy this situation?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. I just want to go quickly to initial hearings, when someone is first brought before the judge.

A. Yes.

Q. Is your office present at those -- does your office enter an appearance and represent individuals at those hearings?

A. Generally, no.

Q. Okay. And is it at those hearings that bond is set, generally?

A. Generally, in most cases, there will be some bond that has been fixed before that hearing. Certainly, that hearing would be an opportunity to seek reduction of bond, if we were there. But, generally, we are not there.

Q. And why is it that you're not there?

A. The -- we simply -- I mean, at the end of the day, what it boils down to is, we simply do not have enough people to even think about stationing them in a courtroom, you know, in the event that somebody had gotten arrested, you know, the night before or, you know, whatever. I mean, we -- there just simply aren't people -- we don't have that kind of time.

Q. Okay. Given your -- given the caseload issues that we've discussed at length today?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. All right. I'll just run through and try to be as quick as I can. Just some summation questions about many of the things we've discussed today.

In your opinion, do you have the time and resources to communicate with clients in the manner that each case requires?

A. Absolutely not.

Q. In your opinion -- and speaking now about the time prior to when you instituted these caseload controls that caused your own caseload to jump so dramatically, in your opinion, do the attorneys in your office -- did the attorneys in your office at that time, in 2016, let's say, have the time and resources to communicate with clients in the manner that each case required?

A. In 2016, I do not.

Q. You do not believe they did have that time?

A. Correct.

Q. In your opinion today, do you have the time and resources to investigate each case of your cases in the manner that it requires?

A. No.

Q. And in 2016, before you instituted these caseload controls that caused your own caseload to spike so dramatically, did the attorneys in your office have the time and resources to investigate each case in the manner it required?

A. No. Complicating all of this is, we have one investigator. So in addition to the lawyer -- being short staffed on lawyers, we're also short investigators.

Q. Okay. And you've mentioned this previously, but without getting into specifics or compromising attorney-client privilege, can you think of a time when your representation of a client was hampered by a lack of time to investigate the case?

A. Yes.

Q. And, again, same question in 2016, without getting -- for the attorneys in your office, without compromising attorney-client privilege, can you think of a time when the representation of a client by an attorney in your office was hampered by a lack of time to investigate a case?

A. I'm confident that it happened. I couldn't -- I mean, as I'm sitting here now, I couldn't think of a case, even in my mind, without speaking the name, which -- but, yes. Understanding the caseload we were carrying in 2016, yes.

Q. Okay. In your opinion, do you have the time and resources to obtain and review discovery in the manner each case requires?

A. No.

Q. In 2016, for the attorneys in your office, did they have the time and resources to obtain and review discovery in the manner each case requires?

A. No.

Q. Speaking of your caseload, can you, without getting into specifics, think of a time when your representation of a client was hampered by a lack of time to obtain and review discovery?

A. Yes.

Q. In your opinion, do you have the time and resources to consult with experts in the manner each case requires?

A. No.

Q. In 2016, speaking of the attorneys in your office, did they have the time and resources to consult with experts in the manner each case requires?

A. No.

Q. Without getting into specifics, and you mentioned one already, can you think of a time when your representation of a client was hampered by a lack of time to consult with an expert?

A. Yes.

Q. In your opinion, do you have the time and resources to file and research pretrial motions in the manner each case requires?

A. No.

Q. In your opinion, speaking about 2016, before you instituted these caseload controls, did the attorneys in your office have the time and resources to research and file pretrial motions in the manner each case requires?

A. They did not.

Q. Without getting into specifics, can you think of a time when your representation of a client was hampered by a lack of time to research and file pretrial motions?

A. Yes.

Q. In your opinion, getting to the -- do you have the time and resources to adequately prepare for trial?

Page 187

A. No.

Q. In your opinion, speaking about 2016, before the caseload controls, did the attorneys in your office have the time and resources to adequately prepare for trial?

A. No.

Q. Okay. In your opinion, do you have the time and resources to adequately negotiate plea deals and counsel your clients on whether or not to accept a plea deal?

A. No.

Q. In your opinion, speaking about 2016, did the attorneys in your office have the time and resources to negotiate plea deals and counsel your clients on whether or not to accept a plea deal?

A. No.

Q. Without getting into specifics, can you think of a time when you could have gotten your client a better plea deal with more time and appropriate resources?

A. Yes.

Q. In your opinion, do you have the time and resources to adequately advise your clients on the immigration consequences of the decisions they make about their criminal cases?

A. I -- well, I don't feel, generally, I have enough time to counsel my clients. I'm trying to think of a situation in which I felt I didn't have time to discuss an immigration issue. I'm not thinking of one, but, you know, to be able to think of one, I have to be aware of the issue, and to be aware of the issue, I really need to talk to my client.

And as I mentioned earlier, my client contact right now is atrocious. I've got people who have been in jail for two months. Somewhere there's probably an immigration issue. So I'm thinking out loud in response to your question.

Q. Understood.

A. And now I've lost track of your initial question. I apologize.

Q. No. I think that -- I think you've answered it.

A. Okay.

Q. Is it reasonable to say you very well may not even be aware of an immigration consequence because of your inability, due to your caseload, to even contact or regularly speak with your clients?

A. Correct.

Q. And you mentioned Mr. Williams. You said he had been in jail for five or six months. Had you been able to speak with him in that time?

A. I had talked with him very quickly over the phone a couple of times to explain the case conference motion and our inability to assign him a lawyer. I certainly engaged in no substantive legal representation, and, to my knowledge, nobody from the office did either.

Q. For at least five and, perhaps, six or more months that he had been waiting for representation?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. In your -- just some -- a few -- three or four final questions.

In your opinion, can the attorneys -- if you had not instituted the caseload controls, could the attorneys in your office adequately represent all of the clients on their docket?

A. No.

Q. And that's true no matter how experienced that lawyer might be?

A. Correct.

Q. In your opinion, now that you have instituted the caseload controls and have 213 open cases yourself, could any attorney adequately represent clients, given the constraints you're facing?

A. No. Not on these cases. There's some very serious cases in these 213.

Q. And, again, that's 213 cases, in addition to the numerous administrative, supervisory, hiring, budgeting, training --

A. Correct.

Q. -- requirements that you have as the district defender?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Is there anything else you think we should know regarding your ability or the ability of your office to provide effective representation?

A. I can't think of anything.

Q. Okay.

MR. SCHERZER: Thank you very much for your testimony here today. That's all I have for now.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. RAMSEY:

Q. Would you like to take a break at this point, or would you like to push on through?

A. I'm okay. If you ...

Q. I'm okay as well.

Page 191

A. Okay. I'll stop you if I need a break.

Q. Excellent. Please do.

Again, my name is Steven Alan Ramsey, and I represent the state of Missouri and Governor Greitens in this matter. I will attempt not to interrupt you --

A. Okay.

Q. -- while you are answering my questions. If I do, the reason will be twofold: One is simply because I'm impatient, which I apologize for in advance, but the second is because you're answering a question that I did not ask.

A. Okay.

Q. To begin, going back to your background, did you start at the Missouri State Public Defender System right out of law school, or did you have a job prior to joining the public defender system?

A. I worked at a private firm.

Q. Okay. What firm was that?

A. Mariea -- M-a-r-i-e-a -- & Sigmund -- S-i-g-m-u-n-d -- in Jefferson City, Missouri.

Q. About how long were you there?

A. One year.

Q. One year. And then did you hold any other positions before that after law school?

Page 192

A. No.

Q. Did you go straight from undergrad into law school?

A. Yes.

Q. What did you study in undergrad? What was your major?

A. I majored in international business with a minor in Spanish.

Q. Turning to your preparation -- not necessarily for this deposition, but in regard to the workload and the caseload concerns. So what I'm gathering is you've talked to a number of judges.

A. Yes.

Q. Have you spoken to organizations as well?

A. So there was -- let's see. In Jefferson City there was sort of a community forum -- on a completely different issue. In the context of that issue, public defender caseloads did come up. I've certainly spoken with a number of different media organizations. Those are the two things that come to mind in response to your question, but I -- were those responsive to what you asked?

Q. Yes.

A. Okay. Okay.

Page 193

Q. And I understand it's a very broad question --
A. Right. Right.
Q. -- being with the system for 15 years. So say in the past year or so -- a couple of years, what members of the press or what press organizations -- pardon me -- have you spoken to, if you can recollect?
A. KOMU, KRCG, the Jefferson City News Tribune. There have been a couple of different student reporters majoring in journalism who were affiliated with one of the major news sources, but I can't remember the names of these students or the media source that they were affiliated with. I may have spoken to the Lake Expo. One of the students was associated with KBIA. I know I've talked to a reporter with the Columbia Tribune, but I can't remember if it was about caseloads or something else. There's an Ozark radio. That's all I can remember off of the top of my head.
Q. I failed to mention this, but a number of my questions will be twofold.
A. Okay.
Q. Not those beginning ones, but when we get into more or less your role as the district defender, one, it's in your personal experience, your personal caseload, and then the second question will be regarding the attorneys that you supervise and the staff that you supervise. So that bifurcation will be present almost throughout the course of this line of questioning.

A. Okay.
Q. Do you have a sense at this point in time how many cases --
A. I didn't mean to interrupt you. You can finish the question if you want, but I had an additional thought about your earlier question.
Q. Please.
A. You asked me about organizations I had spoken to. The Senate interim committee, the Spangenberg Group. Very distinctly, I remember meeting with them in 2009. I don't recall if I spoke with them in 2005. I don't know if you would consider -- yeah, I suppose it was an organization. When RubinBrown was developing their protocol, I was one of the panel members involved in that process.
I don't know if that was responsive to your question; I'm just still trying to think of other organizations.
Q. It was responsive.

Page 195

A. Okay.
Q. At this point in time, do you have a sense for how many cases total your district has opened in 2017?
A. Yes. As of yesterday, I believe it was 1,788.
Q. Do you have a sense for how many -- let me rephrase.
Do you have a sense for the percentage of criminal cases that arise in Cole, Miller, and Moniteau Counties that the public defender system takes in, as opposed to the private bar?
A. Ballpark, probably we have about 80 percent of the cases, but that's a very rough approximation.
Q. Sure. It could be more --
A. It could be more; it could be less.
Q. -- and it could be less?
A. Yup.
Q. Have you noticed any trends in how your district defend cases? And what I mean by that, have you noticed that, say, in 2005, you would take maybe two depositions versus 2017, where per case you're taking, I don't know, five depositions. Have you seen an increase in depositions?

Page 196

A. I really don't know. I would have to go back and play with some numbers. I couldn't tell you off of the top of my head.
Q. Would your answer be the same for the usage of experts?
A. I couldn't tell you off of the top of my head.
Q. Would your answer be the same for the amount of plea deals that the -- you see come through your office?
A. It's hard to speak to that, and there are a couple of reasons why: One was is I was in a different office in 2005, and -- plea deals are very jurisdictional, you know? One elected prosecutor is going to decide he's going to get very tough on crime; you may get more trials. I would have a hard time speaking to that.
Q. And that's more than fine. As we proceed, if you simply can't answer, that's fine?
A. If I think of something, I'll pause you, if that's all right.
Q. Sounds good.
A. All right.
Q. Sitting here today, how would you define a case or a matter within your system?

Page 197

A. Sure. I would define a proceeding under one case number as a case. So, for example, Case 123, I have eight counts of wildly unrelated things all filed under one case number, I would call that one case. If under Case No. 125, I have a probation violation -- even if the issues are going to overlap the primary case, I would count that probation violation as a second case, in large part because even if the issues overlap, the issues may be slightly different, and there's going to be additional court dates, additional things I need to do, different legal issues, so on and so forth.

Q. Would that same logic -- so let's say the case is 127 --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and that case went from an associate circuit into a circuit. When they receive that new number, would that be a separate case as well?

A. I would count that as one continuous case.

Q. Okay.

A. The only change in the number in that hypothetical would be they add the 01 on the end. We would consider that the same case.

Q. And would the same hold true if additional files were charged onto that original case?

A. Yes. So say my Case No. 123, pretend I'm initially charged with stealing. It goes to the grand jury, and the grand jury indicts me for robbery, armed criminal action, everything under the sun, and stealing all out of the same incident, I would still consider that one case.

Q. And when you're saying you would consider it, it would be considered like that in your district and in how you allocate cases as one case versus another case?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Now --

A. Now, hypothetically speaking, pretend I'm charged in associate court. That case is then dismissed and refiled -- or I'm charged in circuit court and it's dismissed and refiled and it's refiled under a new case number out of the same incident, I would call that a second case.

Q. Understood. Now, as the district defender, you have the task of allocating how cases are distributed amongst your staff?

A. Yes.

Q. And you do not shift that responsibility onto any other of your staff members?

A. Well, I give my -- the staff that assigns the case I give her my directions, in terms of how I want her to do it. She manually does it, kind of within the parameters that I have given her.

Q. And would that be your office assistant or would that be one of your legal assistants?

A. That would be one of the legal assistants.

Q. And are those directions written down anywhere? I know you testified earlier as to geographic location playing a large role.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. Are there any other, I guess, considerations that go into which cases are assigned where? I know you mentioned, as well, that your least experienced attorney has about 70. So I imagine experience plays into that role as well.

A. Yes.

Q. What other factors, if any?

A. You know, certainly, the case type. The lawyer that's been practicing law for 29 days, I would not assign him a murder, rape, robbery, kidnapping, complex case with DNA or -- you know, something along those lines. So, you know, there's that kind of component to the thing, how much experience does the lawyer have as compared to the case? For example, in Cole County, we've got a couple of lawyers who have got, you know, two or three years under their belt in experience. As far as I'm concerned, for the more serious cases, those are going to be the lawyers that I'm going to look to, as compared to the lawyer that's been practicing for six months. For that kind of core group of the three more experienced lawyers, you know, we try to assign the bigger cases roughly equitably so that we don't have one lawyer with all of the murder cases, for example.

Was that responsive?

Q. It was.

A. Okay. Thank you.

Q. Are there any policies or procedures, aside from your instructions to this legal assistant to inform your district how cases are distributed, or is it simply your directions to that legal assistant that would do that? So said another way, are there any actual policies and procedures just flat out?

A. Like, written down on a piece of paper?

Q. Uh-huh.

A. Typically, it's a -- me walking over to her and saying, Hey, let's do this different or something like that.

Page 201

Q. Sure. Just curious, are any public defenders within your district, including yourself, ever on a 24/7-hour duty, if you will?

A. In terms of getting phone calls from courts or judges come to the court in the middle of the night, we need to arraign somebody --

Q. Never heard of that, but --

A. Okay.

Q. Sure.

A. Okay.

Q. Along with that hypothetical, is there anyone assigned for 24/7-hour-type duty or responsibilities?

A. No. And I -- no. And, you know, like in my jurisdiction, we don't have nighttime, weekend arrangements. I've heard that's a thing, like, in big cities. I don't know. I mean, if something came up in the middle of the night, I assume it would be me that dealt with it.

Q. Referring to the standard operating procedure, if you will, that was referenced before, I thought I heard there was no such thing as a standard operating procedure at the district level but there was -- or that there are general policies at the statewide level. Was that your testimony?

A. For my district?

Q. For your district, yes.

A. I don't -- now, I can't speak to other offices. My understanding is that some may have some formal policies of some kind or another. In my district, we don't have any formal written policies, procedures, things.

Q. Turning a bit to your district's determination of indigence.

A. Yes.

Q. Who makes that determination in your office? Is it your legal assistants or every single attorney?

A. Right now it's the legal assistant, and that's sort of changed over time.

Q. You mentioned the change in your screening procedure --

A. Correct.

Q. -- from, I guess, what it was before to what it is now.

A. Correct.

Q. Would you describe what it was like before --

A. Yes.

Q. -- and then also describe the transition you made and what it's like now.

A. Yes. My -- and this is me sort of paraphrasing or -- but my -- as I understand, my predecessor took the approach of, if you're asking for a public defender, you probably need one; so you're probably going to qualify. And, you know, when I took over the office at the end of 2014 -- you know, when I looked at the written pieces of paper, the application for public defender services, you know, I'd look at the things and I'd see -- it looked to me like it might be incomplete, or we would have information indicating that the client had posted a significant bond or several significant bonds or that they'd had a really expensive private lawyer on another case or something of that kind. And I felt like we were entering on cases that -- where the applicant was outside of the guidelines that we're required to follow under the code of state regulations.

And so one of the things I did when I took over that office was totally altered administratively the process that we go through when we receive an application for public defender services, and we sort of changed who does the screening over time. You know, at the time, it was the office support assistant -- she's actually not with us anymore -- and then for a while, it was some of the lawyers, and now it's all centralized into the legal assistant. Now -- you know, what we're doing is trying to be much more conservative in approving applications for public defender services to the extent humanly possible. We try and do some due diligence, such as by checking in Case.net before we enter to see if, in fact, the fancy-pants private lawyer had been in on this case or a big, ginormous bond had been posted. That's something we would rather know ahead of time, you know, than find out after we enter. And it may be that there's some sort of innocent explanation behind the thing.

You know, I've got one client back in the day that went to high school with the bondsman. Well, I mean, he paid him, like, next to nothing on a really big bond. Okay. I understand that the money he paid to the bondman wasn't going to be enough to hire a lawyer. Generally, though, that's not the case. And one of the things that we're required to look at is the accused's ability to post a bond. That is a consideration in determining indigence.

Q. So presently that diligence is on the shoulders of your legal assistants, the two that you have?

A. Correct. And -- you know, it's kind of one of those things with -- sort of the expectation is, if the lawyer receives information that would be relevant. You know, like there are times when I'm in court and I hear something that is relevant, and I'll throw that on the face of the application so that that gets communicated back to the legal assistant. But, generally, by and large, an overwhelming bulk of the cases, the due diligence is being done by the legal assistants.

Q. Sitting here today in your district, do you have a sense for how often applications for public defender services are denied?

A. I don't know off the top of my head. Certainly, they're denied at a much higher rate now than they were in 2014.

Q. So if I understand your testimony correctly, caseloads and workloads have always been high since you've been with the public defender system?

A. Yes. And they've fluctuated. Some points higher than others, but, yes.

Q. And -- go ahead.

A. I was going to say, with one exception, if you don't mind. There was a period of time in 2012 where one of the administrative rules was in effect, and courts were fine with it. And so there was, I want to say, six months where our caseloads were all controlled -- everybody in the office. And I finally got to that point -- you know, kind of at the tail end of that six-month window where -- Oh, my God, I can see the light of day, I can actually work on all of my cases, not just throw a stack of them in the file drawer. And then very quickly that whole regime kind of fell apart and caseloads when through the roof again.

When I look back at my time in the public defender's office, you know, the tail end of that six-month period when we had a caseload control environment, that was like the one time when I felt like everybody was -- everybody was able to do everything.

Q. Do you have a sense for how many cases you had on your docket, if you will, at that point in time?

A. Oh, I couldn't tell you off the top of my head now. Sorry. It's been a few years. Sorry.

Q. No worries.

Page 207

And you were a district defender in the Fulton office before coming down to Jefferson City?

A. Correct.

Q. While you've been in the Jefferson City office, if you will, what have you done, as far as additional trainings -- and you already mentioned that there are no real formal policies that you've kind of, I guess, promulgated, for lack of a better word. Have you established any type of trainings at the local level in your district to deal with workload and caseload concerns?

A. Well, in terms of training for workload and caseload concerns, you know, right now, we're trying to manage all of the lawyers caseloads. I mean, so, really, the training that consists of sort of them seeing the bigger picture, but, you know, kind of the theory behind this process that I've come up with is, this should remove the individual lawyers from being assigned 200 or more cases simultaneously. At least for the assistant public defenders, it has; it's just been me that has taken a pinch, so ...

Q. Speaking of, what is the threshold for the attorneys that you supervise, in terms of they are working at a reasonable level -- I think you said -- according the RubinBrown study, is that 80 cases or is that 100 cases, or at what level do you prevent them from receiving more cases?

A. Well -- so how many cases they can get sort of depends on the complexity of the case because a driving on a suspended misdemeanor case is not as complicated as a murder case, for example. And -- you know, and if you get down, like, into the weeds of, like, the RubinBrown metric, you'll see that, and it's sort of expanded. You know, sex cases are more complicated than drug cases, which are less complicated than regular run-of-the-mill felony cases. And so -- you know, like I've mentioned, you know, what we're doing is at the start of every month, assigning out that lawyer as many cases as we think they can possibly take. How many that is is going to vary, depending on the case type. Like, for example, if you take -- and my math is a little bit shaky, so don't hold me to specific numbers, but the RubinBrown metric is based on 2080 hours a year -- 40 hours a week for 52 weeks of the year. If you divide that by 12, you get about, what, 170-something, 180-something hours. If I were to assign a lawyer a murder case, that's going to put them at or slightly above that RubinBrown metric.

On the other hand, if I give them -- and, again, my math is a little bit -- don't hold me to the specific numbers. Potentially, I could give them 27 misdemeanor traffic cases, which -- this is a really long way of saying the number of cases they may get is going to vary depending on the complexity of the thing, and so there's not a hard and fast, I'm going to cut you off at 70 cases --
Q. Sure. It depends.
A. Because it depends. And I apologize. That was probably a longer explanation than you needed.
Q. No worries. So the -- I'll ask the same question a different way.
A. Okay.
Q. The lawyer with the least experience currently has around 70 cases?
A. Correct.
Q. Do you have a sense for the average or the most aside from yourself?
A. The most aside from myself as of yesterday was 127. The average is, I'm going to say, about 80 or 90ish. And I didn't, like, you know, actually sit down and average that out before answering that question, but that's -- I'm trying to give you a ballpark.

Q. Now, with the references to the RubinBrown report and with your participation in the RubinBrown report, you have a background in business?
A. Yes.
Q. And you are an attorney?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you have any independent experience or expertise as a statistician?
A. I took a stats class in college --
Q. So you know what standard deviation is, but that's --
A. It's been -- don't even ask me to describe that right now, sir.
I have not taken any follow-up stats classes since college, and I do not wish to take additional stats classes now.
Q. So to be clear, you do not have any prior --
A. Correct.
Q. Okay.
A. And I would not consider myself an expert in statistics based on one stats class 20 years ago.
Q. Now, the conversations concerning the -- I believe you testified that five attorneys have left your office this year.

A. Yes.
Q. Within 2017?
A. Yes.
Q. And two of them had children?
A. Yes.
Q. And they transferred to different offices?
A. Yes.
Q. One of them retired?
A. Yes.
Q. And then the other two, they moved -- well, I guess, one moved into private practice?
A. Yes.
Q. And the other also moved into private practice? What did that fifth person --
A. Went to the attorney general's office.
Q. Went to the attorney general's office. Have you ever been refused a deposition that you have requested personally while you've been with the Missouri public defender system?
A. No. I've been told I needed to better justify why I wanted to the deposition, but then when I did, I was authorized to take it.
Q. And have you ever denied -- ultimately denied a request from an attorney you supervised to take a deposition?

A. If I can walk that back -- I take that back. There were instances in which before Ellen Blau -- I've had a number of supervisors over the years. One of my supervisors was Peter Sterling. As I'm sitting here thinking about it, there were some times in which he -- so there was a deposition request that I had made. He contacted me and said, You know, look, can't your investigator do this? Well, my answer was, I think my investigator could do this, but the context of the thing with what I'm trying to do in the case, I think what would be more effective would be a deposition, and his response was, Look, if your investigator can do it, then your investigator needs to go do it. And sort of for a period of time in his tenure, up until he retired, sort of what he kind of told everybody was, Look, from here on out, if you want a deposition, it better be because your investigator cannot do it. And there could be a variety of reasons why your investigator might not be able to do it. Some witnesses simply refuse to talk to us voluntarily, and the only way that we can talk to them is if we subpoena them to a deposition.

Other times there are just situations that really do not hold themself well to a deposition. Interviewing a six-year-old on a child sex case by the investigator without the lawyer present -- in my opinion, the better practice would be for the lawyer to take a deposition if they need to interview the youth.

Q. And have any of those times been specifically because there were not funds to fund the deposition, or, at least, was that ever a reason given?

A. That was never given to me as a reason, like, as in, We don't have money for this right now. What was given to me was a, We need to conserve the few dollars that we have, which is a slightly different concern.

Q. Are there any policies or procedures that you have in your district or that you are aware of within the system that you've utilized to limit the total amount of dollars available for any particular deposition? Said in a succinct way, are there any limiting factors in terms of how many dollars can be spent on a particular deposition?

A. In terms of, like, a formal policy?

Q. Yes.

Page 214

A. Okay. I'm not aware of any rule that says you cannot spend more than, you know, $5,000 for depositions on a felony case, for example. The -- you know, when I request money from my supervisor for authorization to extend funds for depositions, you know, I've got to list the witnesses that I wish to depose, why I wish to depose them, and then provide kind of a cost estimate based on what I think the length of the depositions to be. And so, like, each -- I've got to justify the ultimate dollar amount that I've asked for. But to my knowledge, there's not necessarily, like, a cap on what that dollar amount might be.

Was that responsive?

Q. It was.

A. Okay.

Q. And forgive me if you've already answered this question --

A. Okay.

Q. I'm a little bit confused whether or not we've answered this question or not --

A. Okay.

Q. -- but have you ever denied an attorney that you supervise funds for a deposition?

A. I suspect that I probably have at some point in time, but I -- as I'm sitting here now, I certainly could not cite to you a case or the rationale. I -- it would be -- probably, it would -- it would have been a very rare instance.

Q. Do you have a sense for how many of the depositions that you have taken or any of the attorneys that you supervise have taken that have been out of state?

A. Can I answer the first part?

Q. Sure.

A. Okay. In my 15 years, I can think of a case that caused me to go to Florida for depositions. I can think of -- and it was a child witness on a child sex allegation, so, like, a phone deposition I didn't think would work well. I can think of another case where I went to Arkansas and Colorado for depositions. The Colorado deposition, likewise, an alleged victim of a child sex offense or a -- or something of that kind. In terms of me personally going out of state for depositions, those are the only two times I can think of.

The other part of your question was lawyers in my office, so let me kind of wrap my head around that for a second, if I can, please. I know one of my lawyers recently went to Texas for a deposition. On another case, Wisconsin or Michigan -- some place north and some place cold -- and those are the only ones I can think of off of the top of my head.

Q. And with those, is there -- is the procedure similar, or are there some different procedures for how one goes about getting an out-of-state deposition approved?

A. For me, my procedure is, the lawyer better have a really good reason to spend the time and the money. That's not a formal written policy, but that's a -- but that's a -- you better really want it. And so, typically, what it would involve is me talking to the lawyer beforehand and having them justify it to me before I click the button that says approved.

Q. How about funds for experts? Have you ever been personally denied a request to utilize expert testimony or consult an expert at your time at the Missouri State Public Defender System?

A. I can't think of a situation in which I had been -- in which I had -- in which it had been told to me, Look, no, that's totally off limits. There have been times where I've been told, No, you need to find a cheaper expert or someone closer so there's less travel, or instead of paying someone to do this computer forensic stuff, how about we have our IT department look at it? But, generally, one way or the other, I was able to get whatever information needed -- I cannot think of a situation in which there was an outright refusal.

Q. Can you think of a situation where you as a supervisor denied a request for expert testimony from an employee that you supervised?

A. I cannot think of such a situation.

Q. Are there any written policies or procedures governing how much money can be spent upon a particular expert, or is it all discretionary?

A. There is -- I don't know if it's written down anywhere or not. It may be in an e-mail or it may be -- I don't know if it's a policy or something. I don't know. But there's a preference for if you take two experts of comparable quality, pick the cheaper one. You know, likewise, for example, in the deposition context, the expectation is that we use the state contract to go with the low cost provider.

And now I've forgotten your initial question. I'm sorry, sir.

Q. No worries. I think I forgot my initial question as well.

Well, the initial question was if you had ever denied expert testimony -- the funds for expert testimony to an attorney that you supervise, I think, was along the lines.

A. I don't think -- I cannot think of a time in which I had. Oh, and then I think you asked me about policy.

Q. Oh. Whether there was any policy or procedure limiting how much may can be spent on a particular expert.

A. Correct.

Q. Yeah.

A. I'm not aware of a policy saying X is the cutoff.

Q. Sure.

A. But sort of, again, the expectation is that we go with the cheapest -- with the experience and expertise necessary.

Q. Turning to trial --

A. Yes.

Q. -- generally, for a second. Do you have a sense of how many trials your district tried to completion, if you will, within the past calendar year or so?

A. I'd have to look at some numbers. So let me -- I'd have to give you a wild ballpark.

Q. A wild ballpark is fine.

A. About ten, give or take. And it sort of fluctuated over time. In years past, sometimes we try more, sometimes we try less; it just -- it tends to -- for the last 12 months, ten is a reasonable guess.

Q. And when there is a trial, is it -- if there are no policies or procedures, is it the custom of your district to send multiple assistant public defenders to that trial? Said another way, do you send a number of second chairs or third chairs, or how do you go about assigning coverage for trials?

A. There will be a second chair. Sometimes it's an active second chair that -- and I'm talking jury trials; I'm not talking bench trials. On a jury trial, there will be a second chair. Sometimes it's an active second chair who takes parts of the cases. You know, I'm going to cross these witnesses, I'll direct this witness, I'll do closing, you do open -- you know, something along those lines. Other times it's a passive second chair whose basic role is to take notes, be a gopher, you know, sometimes serve as a buffer between the client and the lawyer trying the case, just kind of depends. There is never any sort of -- right now there is not any sort of third chair unless there's, like, an unpaid intern, so -- trying to get some experience or something like that. But, usually -- you know, frankly, in the Cole County courthouse, the courtrooms are set up so there's not room for that extra person at the table anyway, so ...

Long answer to a short question. I apologize.

Q. No worries.

A. There's always going to be some sort of second chair.

Q. Turning to plea deals.

A. Yes.

Q. What is the earliest in your district an assistant public defender can counsel their client to accept a plea deal?

A. I have no hard rule on that, and so -- you know, hypothetically speaking, the lawyer can plead the client as quickly as the client wants that to happen, provided that the lawyer has done what due diligence is reasonable in the context of the case. You know, so -- I mean, hypothetically speaking, in terms of my policies and my expectation, if a lawyer gets in on a case on Monday, has full discovery on Tuesday, meets with the client in jail on Tuesday or at the office on Tuesday, does whatever works needs to happen, and the client is adamant that may want to plead guilty in the near future, as long as the lawyer has met with the client, done what the lawyer needs to do, in terms of case preparation, or if the client says, Look, we've talked about doing XYZ, 123, I don't want you to do XYZ, 123, I want to go ahead and do this today. You know, I'm not going to criticize the lawyer, provided that the client is fully counseled, sort of, as to the consequences of the thing.

At some point when you get to a segue, if I could take a break, that would be great.

MR. RAMSEY: Let's go off the record.

THE WITNESS: Okay.

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 3:35 p.m., and we're off the record.

(A recess was taken.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 3:45 p.m., and we're back on the record.

Q. (By Mr. Ramsey) Turning to probation revocation proceedings. I believe the RubinBrown report gives some amount of time that it thinks is necessary to complete those. I don't know if it's nine hours or however many hours there are. In your experience, what needs to happen, specifically, to adequately prepare for a probation revocation hearing?

A. The lawyer needs to review not just incident probation violation reports but other historical probation violation reports. If there's a sentencing assessment report, the lawyer needs to review that as well. In addition -- and have copies and be familiar with the things. In addition, the lawyer needs to meet with the client. In my office, there's an intake form that we expect every lawyer to complete with every client, ask basic questions about their personal situation, about their legal situation, citizenship status, alcohol drug issues, physical mental health issues, things of that kind. And that is rock bottom, bare minimum, but depending on the issues that exist with regard to the probation violation, how it is the client is alleged to have violated probation and what the issues are in the client's sort of personal life and their legal situation. Invariably, there's going to be follow-up activity that should happen, and what that follow-up activity is going to be is just going to vary dramatically depending on, you know, are we talking about a probation violation where the allegation is that the client failed to pay, you know, restitution or is it a -- the client has been kicked out of treatment or is it going to be, you know, some other violation. There may be witnesses that may need to be interviewed. There is -- certainly, the bond should be addressed as quickly as humanly possible, you know, and kind of -- those strike me as sort of, like, the bare minimum. What exists beyond that would just depend on the nature of the case and the client situation.

Q. Turning to timekeeping, I understood your testimony to be that at one point in time -- at least one point in time, there was a period where you and your district that you were working in were tracking time by five-minute increments or by task, if you will. When was the last time you can remember keeping track of time like that?

A. At some point when I was in the Area 19 office. We were tracking time when I came to that office. At some point in my tenure there, we stopped. It would have been, if memory serves, before January 1, 2017, but when between January 1, 2017 and September 2014, somewhere in there.

Q. And when you were tracking time -- well, strike that.

Currently, is the extent of your timekeeping tracking, if you will, the I work ten hours per day or I work 12 hours per day?

A. Yes.

Q. At any point during the actual tracking of time in the five-minute increments was there ever a person assigned to manage or oversee that timekeeping process?

A. The district defender in each office.

Q. And so to the extent that you were tasked with maintaining or overseeing that task, were you ever provided any additional training in timekeeping?

A. Yes.

Q. Where did that training come from?

A. It -- there was -- and I -- I can't recall if it was in the first time that we time logged or the second time that we time logged, but somewhere in there -- it was at our annual management meeting, there was a presentation on that topic. There may have been additional presentations on that topic. In addition, there is a database -- we call it the MSPD help database. It provides instructions on how to do a million and one different things, open a case, close a case, but there was also a number of tutorials on how to do time logging.

Q. Switching gears a bit, when you were testifying concerning the nonsupport matters, whether it's being held in contempt or was a misdemeanor or -- I don't know if you mentioned that it could also be a felony, but in that scheme of conversation and testimony, I believe you testified that the judge had ultimately said that she was going to stop appointing your district to represent in those matters. Am I understanding that correctly?

A. Judge Joyce told us we are not to be entering on criminal nonsupport cases anymore until such time as our caseload situation resolves.

Q. Could you help me understand, I guess, the difference between you all -- someone applying to your office independently, being directed to by the court, and the court directing you not to accept any particular type of case? I'm trying to understand, I guess, perhaps, your understanding of the judge's power to tell you and your district not to accept those cases.

A. So under the Waters decision, the trial courts have sort of inherit authority to control or manage my caseload in a way that I cannot, and so when Judge Joyce told me, Hey, you know, you guys don't take any more criminal nonsupport cases until all of this gets fixed, I sort of took that to be the judge -- you know, she didn't specify the Waters name, but I kind of took that to be her exercising her inherent authority to tell me to stay out of that class of cases.

Q. And sitting here today, is it your understanding that If someone applied that was in that realm of cases and you accepted that, that would be going against that order or that directive from the judge?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay.

A. What we would do is we would file a denial for public defender services saying we've been told not to take criminal nonsupport cases.

Q. I'm going to start jumping all over the place a little bit, and I apologize for that.

Concerning the caseloads, specifically, the cases that have been continued for one reason or another for years on end, do you have a custom -- and I presume -- I'm starting to assume that there's not a policy or procedure, but do you have some type of a custom of first-in, first-out or some way to get the cases that have been on your dockets longer out the door faster?

A. I don't have a policy in that regard. I mean, you know, generally, the longer the case is on the judge's docket, the more the judge is going to push to resolve that case.

Q. Is it your understanding that you were the first -- you were either the first or one of the first district defenders to start exercising control or asking for different mechanisms to control your caseload and workload well before the Hinkebein decision, in terms of -- I think you had mentioned it was January 1 of this year that you started really, I guess, pushing the envelope, so to speak.

A. Yes.

Q. And in your decision to do so, why did you decide to proceed as you did, as opposed to -- I don't know what the other district defenders were doing, and I'm not asking you to testify on their behalf, but what led you to act, I guess, is my question.

A. Well, I mean, essentially, what -- sort of the things that I articulated earlier --

Q. As in your attorneys coming to you in a conservative effort?

A. That was the immediate spark.

Q. Uh-huh.

A. Also, I had done everything administratively I could think of to make our office more efficient. And, sort of, in a number of different ways, I had hit my boss up for money a couple of different times, a couple of different ways, and she told me pretty clearly that the well was dry, and we had been, you know, sort of -- there was that September 2016 meeting where, basically, senior management said, Hey, we're now shifting gears, and we're going to allow the local offices to kind of chart your own course, and then all of my lawyers came to me and said, You better find a different course. So there was kind of a confluence of things.

Q. Is it fair to characterize your testimony as after you started to work with the criminal justice system, whether that be the judges or the prosecutors, that you saw marked improvement in that time, in terms of caseload and workload concerns, whether that was from January 1 up until the Hinkebein decision -- or whatever span we're talking about. Is that fair to characterize that while you were working together with the system, your caseload improved?

A. I don't know that I would characterize it that way. If you go from 2014 to December 29, 2016, you know, the things that I was doing -- I was asking for help, you know, routinely from the judges, but, you know, as you can see from the e-mail thread, you know, the help was, frankly, very small. Well, the statute changed so, I won't put you in this small case type anymore. You know, really, most of the things that I was doing between 2014 and 2016 was trying to run my ship as efficiently and cleanly as possible. And when it was clear that I couldn't, you know, make it any leaner, more efficient, couldn't be any stricter on applications, that was sort of when I told the courts, Hey, look, this is what we've got to do.

Q. Turning generally to the Chapter 600.063 conferences and the motions that you filed, did you receive broad authority to file those motions whenever you felt you had to, or have you asked for permission from upper management every time you were going to file one of those motions?

A. I had received authority, and then the content of the conversation, I understood that to be, pursue it as you need to. I did not understand it to be, But call me every time before you file an individual motion. I'm pretty sure my boss doesn't want that.

Q. Would you turn with me to Exhibit 21 on Plaintiff's Exhibit 21.

A. Certainly. Yes.

Q. Now, the various typos and other issues have been noted in this document previously. Is that your understand that from earlier testimony?

A. Yes.

Q. So you've never seen a document that quite looks like this --

A. I would have --

Q. -- in terms of -- well, you've never seen this exact document with the typos noted.

A. I would have seen it in a format that did not have the typos or the formatting issues or whatever you call them.

Q. And with that, you were referred to this last page, Bates stamp 38976, I believe; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. And so on there, could you tell me how cases initiated or defined on that graph?

A. Yes. When -- in any case management software, when staff goes through to administratively click the buttons to create a case and open it, that, then, as I understand, will -- it is sort of what triggers that case is initiated.

Q. Two steps back. Did you have any hand in creating this particular graph?

A. No.

Q. And are you familiar with any of the, for lack of a better word, metadata that's underlying the graph, if you will?

A. You lost me, I apologize.

Q. Are you -- do you understand, I guess, all of the various components of this graph?

A. I don't understand -- I don't -- well -- it's been a while since I got down in the weeds of the RubinBrown thing. I understand some of it, probably not all of it.

Q. Okay.

MR. RAMSEY: I think that's going to conclude my line of questioning.

Page 232

MS. SHIPMA: I have a few questions, Just.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MS. SHIPMA:

Q. I think I'll go backwards, just to make it interesting.

Mr. Ramsey asked you about kind of the numbers that you were using to determine when your attorneys have a reasonable caseload, and you talked about how that varied on the case type. Are there other factors that go into that determination of what an individual attorney can carry as a reasonable caseload?

A. Their experience level as well. You know, a lawyer with 30 days of experience could not carry the same caseload as a lawyer whose got eight years of experience in criminal defense, all else being equal. And when I say -- that lawyer with 30 days of experience would need a need a smaller caseload, in terms of volume but also in complexity.

Q. Do you talk to the attorneys about what they feel they can ethically handle?

A. Yes.

Q. And do you take that into consideration when you're deciding whether they're available to take more cases?

Page 233

A. Yes.
Q. You talked about there was a time in 2012 when there was an administrative rule in effect and you felt like toward the end of, sort of, the six-month period, you were starting, I think you said, to see the light at the end of the tunnel. I think that was maybe the --
A. Yes.
Q. -- phrase that you used. What caused that six-month period to end, if you know?
A. What I was told was that members of the legislature had communicated to our director, You-all need to pull the plug on this, or we're going to privatize the system. And so -- and there were a whole lot of other things that were taking place at the same time. Bob McCullough was the prosecutor in St. Louis County; he was going to sue. There was an audit report criticizing alliance on the National Advisory Counsel standard or guideline. And so as I understand, senior management kind of, when faced with this sort of battery of problems, decided that they were no longer going to implement the administrative rule or the -- you know, the caseload metric or whatever you want to call it at that point in time.

Q. Is that administrative rule still in existence, if you know?
A. I can't recall.
Q. Okay.
A. We've had a couple of them. Some of them have been struck down.
Q. Let's go back to your process for determining indigency?
A. Yes.
Q. And let's talk about prior to this year, when you've been doing this different experiment with the caseloads.
What would happen when you deny an applicant's request for public defender services?
A. Prior to January 1, the only reason we would deny an applicant would be because it was an ineligible case or they did not meet the financial criteria for a public defender. When we were going to deny an applicant, there's a written denial that we would file setting out the reason or reasons, as the case may be. We would mail a copy of that denial to that applicant, file the denial with the court, and that would be that. If the applicant chose to appeal that decision to the court, certainly, they could. Sometimes people do, sometimes they just ask for more time to hire a lawyer, other times they go pro se.

Q. Did you ever find that applicants you had denied became PD clients anyway?
A. Yes.
Q. And how would that happen?
A. It could be because down the road they would reapply and convince us that their situation at the time of the new application was such that we should be entering. They had been working, now they lost their job, for example, or if they appealed our denial to the court and the court ordered us to represent, then we would do so.
Q. Did you ever experience a situation where there wasn't an appeal but the defendant just repeatedly appeared without counsel and the judge would appoint us in that situation?
A. Yes.
Q. Is it typical for the attorneys in your office to work weekends?
A. It certainly happens, yes.
Q. So while they may not be assigned a 24/7 work assignment, there is work occurring beyond the normal nine to five, Monday through Friday, as far as the attorneys in the public defender system go?

Page 236

A. Absolutely.
Q. Would you say that happens rarely?
A. Consistently, my lawyers are working overtime.
Q. And not really true overtime because they are exempt under the Fair Labor Standards Act; is that correct.
A. Correct.
Q. Sorry. My labor law -- employment law attorney.
A. We don't pay them for the time that they work in excess of the 40 hours a week that they perpetually work.
Q. And I believe Mr. Ramsey also asked you about the number of plea deals that come through the office.
A. Yes.
Q. Are most of the cases pled out?
A. Yes.
Q. So you would have almost as many plea deals coming into the office as the number of cases that are coming into the office; is that correct?
A. Generally, in all but the rarest of cases, there is a plea offer.
Q. And so there would be an increase in the number of plea deals coming into the office based on the number of the cases that are coming into the office; is that correct?

A. Right. If our caseload rises, so would our incoming plea offers.
Q. I want to take you back to Exhibit 21 just for a moment. And I know that you just testified that you did not participate in any way in the preparation of the chart that's shown on Bates 38976, but you did testify about some of it earlier, and I just want to point out -- or I just want to make sure I understand one point.
You were talking earlier about there being 33 offices in the Missouri State Public Defender System.
A. In the trial division.
Q. The trial division, that's correct. So these first lines deal with the trial division only; is that correct?
A. Correct.
Q. There are other divisions, as well, within MSPD?
A. Correct.
Q. And some of those are shown on here, the appellant PCR division; is that correct?

Page 238

A. Correct.
Q. And I think you also mentioned earlier capital division?
A. Correct.
Q. And a CD -- Civil --
A. Commitment Defense Unit.
Q. -- Commitment Defense Unit. Thank you. Yes. That's another division; is that correct?
A. Yes.
Q. In your opinion, have you -- has the quality of representation changed for the clients of your attorneys since you've implemented this caseload control --
A. Yes.
Q. -- in 2017?
A. Yes.
Q. And how has that quality changed?
A. My lawyers have more time to talk to the clients, more time to do the legal research, to file the motions, to do the depositions. I think that the quality of the legal services they are providing has increased.
Q. Okay. Given an appropriate caseload, an attorney with an appropriate caseload, in your opinion, is it better for criminal defendants to have a lawyer experienced in criminal law like you, or just any old lawyer will do?

A. Can you repeat that?
Q. Yeah. Given a reasonable caseload --
A. Okay.
Q. -- is it better for a criminal defendant to have someone who is experienced in criminal law like you, or just any old lawyer from the public service commission or the department of natural resources?
A. Definitely better for the accused to have a lawyer who is trained in criminal law and proficient, as compared to some other random lawyer who doesn't know anything about it.
Q. Okay.
MS. SHIPMA: That's all of the questions I have.
REDIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SCHERZER:
Q. I have just a few.
A. Absolutely.
Q. Do you need a break?
A. No.
Q. Okay. It won't be long.
Just -- I'll pick up right where

Ms. Shipma left off.
In additional -- of course, given a reasonable caseload, would you also say -- and you said -- assuming that it's better for someone to have -- it's better for a criminal defendant to have an attorney who is experienced in criminal law, is it also better for the criminal defendant to have an attorney who works with other criminal lawyers and is supervised by someone who is experienced in criminal law?
A. Yes.
Q. And not only experienced in criminal law but also has training in criminal law?
A. Yes.
Q. And has someone who they -- in their office, colleagues and supervisors, who they can ask for advice and support based on their experience in criminal law?
A. Yes.
Q. And if you actually had resources for investigators and experts and the like, someone who has access to investigators and experts and, perhaps, social workers as well.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And -- okay. Move on from that.

Page 241

Is it fair to say -- so you've talked about two periods where there's strict caseload limits; one for this six-month period in 2012 and one now -- you've sort of created this, fair to say, sort of, pilot project in your office where you're causing yourself to be ineffective in a -- in an effort to try to save your line attorneys.

A. Correct.

Q. Is it fair to say, with those strict caseloads limits in place, you and your attorneys are or would be able to provide something at least approaching effective representation for your criminal defendants?

A. Yes.

Q. And without those caseload -- strict caseload limits, as was the case for your attorneys in, say, 2016 and for you in 2017, you aren't able -- you and your attorneys aren't able to provide that effective representation?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. You talked about 1,788 cases, is that right, that you have open in your --

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. That you have opened in Area 19?

A. No. That we opened thus far in calendar, not open now.

Q. Do you know how many are open now?

A. About 750.

Q. 750. Okay. Just a few more questions.

Mr. Ramsey was asking you about depositions and whether those were denied -- whether those had been denied, and you talked about some examples where they were. Could one of the reasons for denying a deposition -- that you were denied a deposition or that your -- Ellen Blau or the other supervisors in the central were denying a deposition be time, as well as money? In other words, that you -- it's not necessarily the cost of the deposition but time you're taking away from -- you or your attorneys are taking away from other cases?

A. I've never had that offered as a reason for denying the deposition. And, you know, generally, my lawyers and myself self-screen that out. I mean, I don't have time to waste. I'm not going to ask for a deposition that I think is going to be fruitless, and my lawyers are in the same both.

Q. Got it. Okay. That was getting to exactly what I was asking.

A. Okay.

Page 243

Q. You're jumping ahead, so --

A. Sorry.

Q. No, no, no. That's perfect.

So in other words, you don't even ask for depositions in many of the cases you might otherwise -- you don't even -- you wouldn't necessarily have to ask, but -- because you're the district defender, but you don't even consider doing depositions in many of the cases you would like to because you don't possibly -- you couldn't possibly have the time to do so; is that right?

A. Agreed. I would love to do more depositions than what I'm actually doing, and I think there are cases in which it would be helpful. It's a time limitation, not a money limitation.

Q. And is that the same -- it sounds like you were saying that's the same for your line attorneys as well. There are numerous cases that they would like to be doing depositions in but do not, simply because they don't have the time?

A. They may have more time now, but at least historically, that has absolutely been a limitation.

Q. And they might have time now because of the strict caseload limits that you've imposed?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. And because, of course, any time spent taking -- a day spent taking a deposition is an entire day away from the other 212 cases that you have or the other numerous cases that your line attorneys have?

A. Correct.

Q. And for experts, it -- is -- could part of the reason that experts are used less frequently be a similar reason, that it takes lots of time to find the right expert, to talk to that expert, to gather the resources needed to have a fruitful expert report, and, thus, that's also time that would ideally be available to you and your attorneys but isn't, and, therefore, you don't make expert requests?

A. Absolutely. And the youthfulness and general inexperience of the lawyers in my office. If they don't know to ask for an expert, they won't ask for an expert. And I won't know that the need is there, necessarily.

Q. So is it fair to say that your office should be -- in an ideal world, should be taking depositions in many more cases than it currently does?

A. I think so. Certainly on my cases now, absolutely, yes.

Q. And also fair to say that your office should be use experts much more frequently than it does?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. I just have two more questions. Just going back to the five people who left your office in 2017, two for family reasons, two quit for caseload and money reasons, and then you mentioned one retired. Was one -- was part of the reason that he or she retired for the same caseload and money reasons, or was he just retiring?
A. What he articulated to me was that he sat down and did the math, and he could get paid the same to work or not work, and so he said, I'll take the same amount of money to not work, and, you know, if I do some private stuff on the side, I'll be money ahead for less work.
Q. Got it. And did he express at that time any frustration with the caseload or his other recent experience with -- as a public defender at the time he retired?
A. He did not express.
Q. Okay. Just one last question about the criminal nonsupport cases, those -- you estimated are there about 50 criminal nonsupport cases that might come up over the course of the year. The judge's decision to say that you cannot or should not enter appearances in any of those cases, has that significantly reduced, in any meaningful way, your -- the caseload of your office?

A. Well, I mean, at least for my individual assistant public defenders -- I mean, no, because if they couldn't have taken those cases, I was not going to assign them to them. You know what I mean?
Q. Uh-huh.
A. And, you know, in the context of 1,788 cases a year, you know, 50 is -- frankly, it's sort of a drop in the bucket, at least in terms of the bigger impact, you know, kind of office wide.
Q. Especially, presumably, because the point of these 50 is there should be 50 of the easiest, shortest cases they have. It's not 50 murder cases that are being taken away or 50 A, B felony, it's --
A. Right. You're talking about either misdemeanors or probation violations or low-level felonies.
Q. Not to say they're not serious, but, presumably, that you would be spending less time on them than you would be on a murder case.

Page 247

A. Correct.
MR. SCHERZER: And that's all of the questions I have.
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 4:21 p.m., and we're off the record.
(The deposition concluded at 4:21 p.m.)

ROD HACKATHORN,

of lawful age, produced, sworn, and examined on behalf of the Plaintiffs, deposes and says:

QUESTIONS BY MR. SHAHABIAN:

Q Could you please introduce yourself for the record?

A My name is Rod Hackathorn.

Q Good morning, Mr. Hackathorn. How are you?

A I'm good. How are you?

Q Good. I'm Matt Shahabian. I'm one of the plaintiff -- counsel for the plaintiffs. And I wanted to thank you for taking the time to answer some questions today.

A Certainly.

Q Have you ever been deposed before?

A Don't believe I've ever been deposed.

Q So, let's go over some ground rules how this deposition will proceed. So there is a court reporter here who will be transcribing the deposition. So because she'll be writing everything down, you'll need to answer with verbal responses to every question; shaking your head won't get picked up on the record, even though it will get picked up in the video. So yes or no, complete sentence is fine, but nonverbal responses won't work.

A I understand.

Q Wait for me to finish the question before you begin the answer. It's a little more difficult for the court reporter if we are talking over each other. Either your counsel or counsel for the State may have objections to my questions. Unless you're instructed not to answer the question, you should still answer even if there is an objection. If you don't understand any of my questions, please let me know. I will try to rephrase and make it more comprehensible, and if you need a break at any time, just let me know. The only rule is you can't have a break if there is a question pending. So after you answer the question, if you would like a break, just let me know.

A Okay.

Q Anything unclear about my instructions?

A Not at all.

Q What did you to prepare for this deposition today?

A I did meet last week with Jacqueline Shipma.

Q And is that counsel present here today?

A Yes.

Q Did you review any documents in preparation for the deposition?

A I didn't necessarily review any documents. I reviewed some of our data that's on the computer.

Q What kind of data did you review?

A I looked back at our numbers concerning cases that had been initiated over the last couple of fiscal years and where we were at in the number of cases -- excuse me -- number of cases that we had initiated so far this year.

Q Did you review anything else in preparation for this deposition?

A I don't think.

Q Did you talk to anybody else in preparation for this deposition?

A No.

Q Could you please tell us your title?

A My title is district defender.

Q Is that a general title or is that specific to a particular region?

A It's a specific title. It's a -- it pertains to the managing attorney of a trial office or any of our appellate offices.

Page 9

Q And who are you employed by?
A The Missouri State Public Defender System.
Q What trial offices do you cover as district defender?
A I supervise the Springfield Area 31 trial office.
Q Is Springfield the only geographic locality covered by Area 31?
A No. Our office is located in Springfield, Missouri, but we handle Greene, Christian, and Taney counties.
Q And those three counties make up area 31?
A Yes, sir.
Q How long have you been district defender?
A Right -- well, come January 1, I believe it will be 15 years.
Q Congratulations.
A Thank you.
Q Could you briefly describe your employment history prior to becoming district defender?
A Well, I started with the Missouri State Public Defender System right out of law school. And I have actually been with the Springfield office the entire time, of course starting as an assistant public defender.
Q When did you graduate law school?

A 1997.
Q Have you ever been recognized professionally for your accomplishments as an attorney?
A I did receive an award from the Missouri Bar, the Charles East Shaw award. Actually, I'm sorry, that's the Missouri Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers, I received an award from them.
Q Were you ever named one of the ten best lawyers in Missouri?
A I don't believe so, no.
Q I'm showing you, I will ask the court reporter to mark this exhibit. We'll call it Hackathorn 1.
MS. SHIPMA: We left off at Exhibit 46 was the last one we used.
MR. SHAHABIAN: Okay. So let's call it Exhibit 47. Thank you, Jackie.
MS. SHIPMA: Your welcome.
(EXHIBIT NO. 47 WAS MARKED FOR IDENTIFICATION BY THE COURT REPORTER.)
A Sorry, if you bear with me a minute.
Q Please take your time.
A Pretty small print you got there.
Q I apologize for the print. These internet documents don't always print the best. If you can just take a minute and review this document and let me know when you've had a chance.

Page 11

A It appears I stand corrected. It's been a while back but, yes, apparently I was named one of the ten best lawyers.
Q Does this refresh your recollection at all?
A It does.
Q You were named one of the ten best lawyers in Missouri?
A Yes, sir.
Q You can put that aside. So what are your responsibilities as district defender?
A Just all the various duties?
Q General duties.
A Okay. It involves supervising the attorneys. So I spend a lot of time with them talking about their cases, especially the newer attorneys, and make sure that things are getting done that need to be done. Even the more experienced attorneys, I help them brainstorm on issues of complex cases. I'm responsible for approving time sheets, expense reports, expense requests to get money to hire experts and that sort of thing. I sign off on all the bills. I'm responsible for the hiring. Any personnel matters that arise, in a large office like ours, there is inevitably conflict between a couple people every now and then and we have to get involved with that. I assign all of the felony cases and review the probable cause statements for potential conflicts. I'm probably missing something, but that's the bulk of it.

Q Okay. How many people are employed by the area 31 offices?
A Counting myself, if we are at full staff, it would be 22 attorneys and I have eight support staff and then one part-time support staff person.
Q What do you mean if you would be at full staff?
A Over the last few years, it seems like the bulk of the time we are not at full staff. We always -- it seems like we have an open position. Right now I have three open attorney positions.
Q Why are there open positions as opposed to being at full staff?
A Well, for the three that we have open right now, I had two attorneys that resigned over the last few months, and the third position is actually a position that has been granted to us by the director. I don't know where that money comes from or, you know, if that came at the expense of another office, but I know our office has always had higher numbers than a lot of other offices in the state as far as the number of cases that we handle so we were given an additional position.

Q So you said full staff would be 22 attorneys, but there are currently 19 attorneys in the office; is that right?

A That would be correct.

Q And on average what is the experience level of an attorney in your office?

A We have fared pretty well over the last several years as far as turnover on attorneys. So we do have quite a few attorneys who have are either what we call APD 3 or APD 4, which is our top two assistant public defender positions. Right now, I think we only have three attorneys that have only maybe a year of experience or less.

Q Do you report to anybody as district defender?

A Yes.

Q Who do you report to?

A My direct supervisor would be Ellen Blau. She is our trial division director.

Q Where does she work?

A All over the state. She's constantly on the move.

Q Would it be fair to say she's in the central office for the state defender?

A Yes.

Q What directions do you receive from Ellen Blau or anybody else in the central office about how to run your office?

A Well, we have our guidelines for representation. We have our Employee Handbook that states a lot of our MSPD policies. I mean, that's pretty much. Then I can -- whenever there are issues as to how to handle situations, then I go to her or Michael Barrett, who is our director.

Q Do you -- is it fair to say you have a lot of discretion over how the attorneys in your office handle their cases?

A I think that's fair to say.

Q Is there anything that you lack discretion over in terms of how cases are handled?

A Well, as far as how cases are handled, we should be going by our guidelines for representation. But depending on how overworked I guess an office is, there some discretion there on, I guess for lack of a better term, fudge some of the expectations. And so I do have some discretion there and I have had to at times, especially with contact with clients, our expectation is that they would see their clients with, you know, that are incarcerated at least every month. That gets almost impossible to do with the number of cases we've had over the last few years, so I've had to decrease that expectation and go to more like 45 to 60 days.

Q And we'll come back to client contact in a bit. Just starting with a more general picture of the office; what is the current workload based on your review of the data?

A Right at this moment in time, most of our attorneys are hovering right around hundred cases open.

Q Would you say that in your experience that's above average, that's typical, or that's below average?

A That is below average.

Q How far below average?

A Ordinarily, a typical caseload would be anywhere from 150 to 200 cases.

Q Why is the caseload so much lower below average right now?

A Over last three months we have been waitlisting a lot of potential clients who would qualify for our services and because of that, the numbers have went down.

Q So when you say the average caseload is about hundred cases, that's not including indigent defendants who would qualify for representation by your office but are on a waitlist?

A Correct.

Q How are cases assigned to defenders in your office?

A Ordinarily -- now things have changed over the last three months because of the whole waitlist issue -- but ordinarily cases would be assigned by -- I have some attorneys that are assigned specifically to Taney County. I have some attorneys that are assigned specifically to Christian County, and then in Greene County because it's so much larger and we have many more courts. We have actually four associate courts, we split up our Greene County attorneys where they receive -- they are assigned to a specific associate court and they received all of our cases that arise out of that division and then they follow them on through to circuit court. Misdemeanors and probation violations, I gave -- I give basically a list to our clerks of who to assign those to and as they come in, they rotate through that list and assign those out. All felony cases are given to either me or the deputy district defender. Because we split up the attorneys as far as who assigns cases to who, our deputy district defender assigns the felonies out to attorneys in Taney County and half of the attorneys in Greene County; and then I assign the felonies out for Christian County and half of the attorneys in Greene County.

Q Who is this deputy district director?

A Chris Hatley.

Page 17

Q Roughly how much of your time would you say is spent on administrative tasks?
A At least 75 to 80 percent.
Q Do you have your own caseload in addition to your administrative responsibilities?
A I do, but it's a much lower caseload than what our assistant public defenders handle.
Q How many case do you handle roughly per year?
A On average -- I couldn't tell you exactly by year -- but on average I usually have around 25 to 30 open cases at a time.
Q And what kinds of cases do you typically handle?
A I only assign myself felony cases. Now if that client also has a pending misdemeanor or probation violation, I will take that as well, but they would have some pending felony. I try to give myself some sort of variation, but I have murder. I try to take a lot of complex cases, sex cases, murder case, but also some of the lower grade C,D grade felonies.
Q Could you walk-through typically how a public defender approaches a new case that they are brought on, a felony-level case?
A Well, they would usually start by having that initial meeting with the client.

Q Where would that take place?
A Well, that would depend. If the client is incarcerated, it would take place at the jail. If they are not incarcerated, that meeting sometimes doesn't take place at all because the client -- well, we basically have to rely on the clients to contact us to schedule a meeting. We just don't have the time track people down. A lot of times that initial contact information we get on the application changes quickly. So even if we tried to contact them at that address or that phone number, a lot of times it's not good anymore. So for the most part that initial meeting is really usually with incarcerated clients.
Q So in a criminal process, when does that initial meeting occur? Is it before arraignment? Before initial appearance?
A Ideally, it happens within a week of them getting the file. That doesn't always happen because a lot of times they are in court every day of the week. But definitely we try to make sure that it happens prior to the preliminary hearing. You asked about arraignment; I will just say most of the time in the counties we handle, especially in Greene County on felonies, they will have been arraigned before we are ever in the case.
Q Are there any negative consequences to arraigning defendants before counsel is assigned?

A I'm sorry, could you ask that question again?
Q Sure. Are there negative consequences to defendants having an arraignment before they are assigned counsel?
A There certainly can be. They can say things that they shouldn't be saying in open court. But I can't give you an example of where that's necessarily come back to haunt one of our clients.
Q And you mentioned that the goal is to get counsel to meet the client before the preliminary hearing; why is that the goal?
A Well, at the preliminary hearing, although we would rarely ever have our clients testify at a prelim, we do want to have some idea of what our clients have to say about the situation before we go into a hearing because also, a lot of times we don't have any discovery before we go into a preliminary hearing. The only thing we have to base off what we are going to prepare is what our clients have to say.
Q And is -- are there cases where you're not able to meet with the client before the preliminary hearing?
A Like I said, especially with those that aren't incarcerated, yeah, that happens a lot. You know, we try to rush and have a quick meeting out in the hall if they are not incarcerated and they haven't scheduled an appointment beforehand, but those are rushed and they are not very meaningful conversations. With those in custody, I think for the most part, we succeed in seeing them before the preliminary hearing.

Q What happens after the preliminary hearing? Actually, strike that. What happens at the preliminary hearing?
A Well, when one of attorneys comes in for a preliminary hearing, first thing they would do is check to see if the State is prepared. Do they have the witnesses that they need to proceed. If they don't, then the next step is we are asking for the case to be dismissed. If they do have the witnesses that they need, then the next thing we do is ask if there is any kind of offer on the case. If there is an offer, with then meet with the client. Let them relay that offer to them. Then the attorney and the client would discuss whether or not to have the preliminary hearing or whether they should waive the preliminary hearing based upon that offer.
Q In your experience do you have adequate time to prepare for a preliminary hearings?
A That's hard to say. I think probably for our complex cases, no; for others, probably. I mean, considering.

Q Why would it differ?

A Because just the lack of time available and it takes more time to prepare for any stage of proceeding on a complex case and time is a precious commodity that we have very little of in the public defender business.

Q What typically happens after the preliminary hearing?

A Well, if the State has been able to either -- if we have waived the preliminary hearing or the if State has shown probable cause then the case would proceed on to circuit court for arraignment.

Q I'm going to step back from the criminal process for a minute. Let's go back to client contact. You mentioned that in your experience it's typically easier to contact clients who are incarcerated. Where does that client contact take place?

A Can you be more specific?

Q Where does the first time meeting with an incarcerated client take place?

A Well, it would take place at the jail and we have meeting rooms at the jail. Now, that -- for Greene County, that's always the case that it would take place at the jail, that first meeting. And it's easy to have that first -- easier to have that first meeting with them because they are almost always at our Greene County jail prior to the preliminary hearing. Now, later on, that gets more difficult and that's not always the case because the Greene County jail is -- well, we are told it's overcrowded. So inmates get farmed out to counties sometimes two hours away. But generally speaking, prior to the preliminary hearing, they are here. Christian and Taney County; Taney County, it's easier. Yeah, they are always there in the jail. There are meeting rooms there. It's easy to see them. Christian County has been a very difficult place to get our jail visits done. They had one small meeting room at that jail that really wasn't very private. It was difficult to communicate with the clients. They -- I had a meeting with the sheriff. They had two rooms over at the courthouse that they cleaned out and made available for our attorneys to visit privately with clients, but we have to rely on a bailiff being available. So if courts going on in every one of the courtrooms, they can't do a visit. And if the rooms are being used, they can't have a visit. So it does get difficult there.

Q So you mentioned the rooms aren't that private in Christian County?

A The one over at the jail --

Q At the jail.

A -- wasn't, yes.

Q Are the rooms in which you meet clients in Greene and Taney counties confidential?

A Yes.

Q In your opinion, do you have the time you need to effectively communicate with your clients throughout their cases?

A No.

Q Why do you say that?

A Client communication is an area where we have constant downfall. And as a supervisor, I get the majority of the complaint letters I get from clients all stems from lack of communication. Once again, most of our attorneys, they are in court Monday through Friday. As best as I try to assign cases and try to work out some sort of system where they will have a day in the office or a day to go to the jail. Inevitably with the number of judges courts we have here, it seems like they are in court everyday no matter what we do. We have worked with the jails to try to extend visiting hours and we have had some success with that. It used to be in Greene County they had visiting hours only from 8:00 to 11:00 in the morning and then 1:00 to 4:00 in the afternoon. So all the times they were in court, it made it impossible. We have gotten that extended now all the way from 8:00 solidly through 6:00 p.m. So they are able to, you know, during lunch or later in the afternoon or right after they get out of court go and do some of those visits. But even at that, when you have got the majority of your clients are incarcerated, you just can't get them all seen every month. So, yeah, no, there is not enough time to communicate with folks.

Q What are the negative consequences of not having enough time to communicate with your clients?

A First and foremost a poor attorney-client relationship. It suffers right off the bat. Other problems is being able to properly prepare the case. To be able to know, you know, what's the right avenue to take. Is this a case we need to negotiate. Is this a case we need to take to trial. Being able to reasonably explain matters to your clients so that they can make an informed decision about things about whether to plead or whether to take an offer. Whether -- if they are going to trial, whether or not to testify. The majority of our clients are uneducated. A lot of them have difficulty reading and writing. Many of them have mental health issues. It takes so much more time to explain complex legal matters to them. Sometimes yes need to reexplain, reexplain, and reexplain to them and they deserve that kind of attention and they do not -- they do not get it.

Q Without getting into specifics or compromising attorney-client privilege, can you think of a time when a representation of a client in your office was hampered by lack of communication?

A Yeah.

Q Could you elaborate being as vague as you feel necessary to protect the privilege?

A I mean, there is just -- it's -- there are numerous. I'm trying to be general and it stems more from me knowing through the letters I get from clients and then having to talk with the attorneys and understanding. You know, sometimes there have been issues where clients have pled guilty and not fully understood what was in the plea agreement. Not understood the conditions that were going to be on them. Not understanding some of the collateral consequences of that plea. Especially with sex offenses; if that's not fully explained to them, they are devastated when they find out some of the things that go along with pleading to a sex offense.

Q What are some of those collateral consequences?

A Well, now would be lifetime supervision, lifetime GPS monitoring, registering as a sex offender for the rest of your life.

Q I'm handing you a copy of an exhibit that was previously marked Petsch Exhibit 1. I'm not going to remark that. Can you just take a minute and look that over?

A Sure.

Q Do you recognize this document?

A No.

Q Can you tell me what it appears to be?

A It appears to be an e-mail that was sent out by Joel Elmer to -- I'm assuming all of what would have been at the time the assistant public defenders in the Kansas City trial office.

Q And do you see the first sentence in that e-mail?

A Yes.

Q Could you read it for the record?

A "As you know, you are to have contact with trial caseload clients within seven days of assignment and thereafter at least every 30 days."

Q Does that statement reflect your understanding of client contact guidelines in the MSPD?

A Yes.

Q Is that still the guideline?

A Yes.

Q And in your opinion, are attorneys in your office able to meet those guidelines routinely?

A More often than not, no.

Q I'm handing you a document that I'm going to ask the court reporter to mark Exhibit 48. Can you just take a minute to look that over.

A Sure. Did you want me to review the whole thing or just the client counseling section?

Q Just the client counseling section is fine.

A Okay.

Q Do you recognize this document?

A Yes.

Q What is it?

A It is a performance evaluation form that we use for promotions. This one was written out by me concerning an employee named Dawn Calvin.

Q Who is Dawn Calvin?

A Dawn Calvin is an assistant public defender with the Springfield trial office.

Q At the time you prepared this document, how long had she been a public defender?

A This would have been for her promotion to APD 2, so she would have been with us a year.

Q Could you read for the record the box starting "comments" or it says, "in reviewing her files."

A Yes. "In reviewing her files, it appeared that for the six months or so Dawn did quite well at staying close to guidelines for client contact with her incarcerated clients. During that time, she was being assigned misdemeanors and PV's only in Greene County. When she was added to the C,D felony rotation and her caseload began to rise, as well as her number of incarcerated clients, she encountered more difficulty in keeping up with client contact. The worse instance of this I saw was a case where initial contact at the jail did not occur until 102 days. There were short visits before court appearances at court. Also, it was noted in that file that she attempted a jail visit 30 days in, but client had been sent to another facility due to overcrowding. Regardless, further attempts should have been made to visit client sooner. When I met with Dawn to discuss this, she agreed this is an area she needs to improve on. She brought with her a list of her incarcerated clients she had created that she was now using to keep track of their last visit and when another was needed. She currently has 34 clients in custody. We also talked about maintaining control during client meetings. She usually lets the client talk as long as they want at every meeting, which means most of her jail visits are 45 minutes or longer each which make it difficult to get more people seen. For out-of-custody clients, she briefly meets with them at their first court dates and ask them to call and schedule an office visit. For the half or so that do, Dawn lets the clerks know when she is available and they schedule those appointments. For the half or so that don't call, Dawn tries to reach out to them by phone. There were notes in several of her files detailing contact with the client's family members."

Q So going back to the beginning of this comment box, you note that Ms. Calvin was able to maintain client contact when she was assigned misdemeanors and PV's only in Greene County; is it that accurate?

A Yes.

Q You say that changed once she was added to the C,D felony rotation and her caseload began to rise. Why would that make it more difficult for a defender to maintain client contact?

A Misdemeanors and probation violations -- well, I should say just misdemeanors. Misdemeanors, most of those clients are out of custody. Once you get into C, D felony rotation, much more -- many more of your clients are actually going to be incarcerated. Also, you're going to be in court more often once you're added to felony rotation because going to the felony rotation doesn't mean she stopped getting misdemeanors and probation violations. She was still getting those. It's just now she was added into that rotation. So more court appearances, less time to get over to the jail, more clients who are in jail. So it does make it more difficult. I believe when we started Dawn out -- being a larger office we can do this sometimes -- we started her out basically at a zero caseload and she was able to build it up. So, yeah, once we got into the C,D felony rotation, it made it much more difficult because also the number of cases she was handling was going up as well.

Q So once she reached a caseload more typical of attorneys in your office, it became difficult for her to maintain client contact?

A Correct.

Q You noted in this comment box that the worse instance of this I saw was a case where initial contact at the jail did not occur until 102 days. Would you describe that as aberrational, occasional, routine?

A 102 days would be aberrational, especially for initial contact client. Let me add that.

Q What was the reason for the 102 days before the initial contact, if you know?

A This may have been -- I don't recall off the top of my head, but considering something else I added there right after that. This may have been one of those rare instances where the jail had shipped them out to another facility right away once they were incarcerated.

Q And you noted that later in this box it says, "Also it noted in that file she attempted jail visit 30 days in but client had been sent to another facility due to overcrowding."

A Yes.

Q Is that what you mentioned before that in Christian County, clients are sent to other jails or is that frequent in any jail?

A It's mainly actually in Greene County. Now, I will say Christian County just started doing that.

Q Okay.

A But I think the majority of clients that they are farming out they are actually sending down to the Taney County jail which is a jail, you know, it's a county that we cover so it's not as difficult to see them. But it does add for an increased trip for those attorneys that are assigned to Christian County because Taney County is further away.

Q How far away is it?

A Round trip to Forsythe from our office here is, I believe, 94 miles

Q And would you say that based on what you have written here it looks like Ms. Calvin went to the jail and learned that her client had been moved somewhere else?

A Yes.

Q Does that happen frequently when clients are moved?

A Used to happen all the time. Anymore, it seems because of that, our attorneys have -- we have been asking the jail to send us a census each morning, which they do. So our attorneys have now been looking at that census before they go over to the jail to see if they are actually there or not or if they have been sent somewhere else.

Q Is that census always accurate?

A For the most part, yeah.

Q Looking to the second page of this document. You wrote that you talked with Dawn about maintaining control during client meetings. She usually lets the client talk as long as they want at every meeting, which means most of her jail visits are 45 minutes or longer each which make it's difficult to get more people seen. So is it fair to say based on this that you talked about in order for Ms. Calvin to talk with more of her clients, she would reduce the amount of time she was spending talking to each of her clients?

A Yes, but that conversation was focused on making sure that the client stayed focused on talking about the case as opposed to going off on a tangent and just wanting to talk about their family and whatever else. Making sure they stayed focused so that those meetings did get shorter, yes.

Q And your ultimate recommendation on this client counseling factor you had checked the box "ie", which is improvement expected; is that accurate?

A Yes.

Q So you expected Ms. Calvin to improve her contact with clients?

A I do.

Q How is Ms. Calvin's performance otherwise?

A Very good.

Q Was she promoted to the next level?

A Yes.

Q Would you say her inability to meet your expectations on client contact was caused by any lack in skills in her as an attorney?

A Well, because I put improvement expected I would have to say to some degree, yes. She was a brand new attorney. So there was ways that she could improve in that area despite all of the obstacles we have being a public defender. So to some degree, yes, but she has made strides to improve in that area.

Q Would you say to any degree this was due to factors not in her control?

A Yes. There were some factors that were beyond her control.

Q What would those factors be?

A Once again, clients that get farmed out making it more difficult to get them seen. As her caseload increased, having the time to get over to the jail to see those clients; that sort of thing.

Q What about her caseload?

A Yeah. As the number of cases increased as well, yes.

Q So I'm handing you a document that I'll ask our court reporter to mark Exhibit 49. If you could just take a minute and review that.

A Sure. Okay.

Q Do you recognize this document?

A Yes.

Q What it is?

A This would be an entry out of our employee performance log. It would have been created by my Deputy District Defender Chris Hatley concerning an assistant public defender for Paul Duchscherer.

Q Have you seen this document before?

A I reviewed it after briefly after Mr. Hatley wrote it.

Q Who is Paul Duchscherer?

A He is an APD IVin the Springfield office.

Q What is an APD IV?

A That is our highest level of promotion for an assistant public defender.

Page 35

Q How long has he been employed at the MSPD?

A Paul, I think he's been with us right at between 15 and 16 years.

Q So it's fair to say he's an experienced attorney?

A Yes.

Q And if you look at the first paragraph "Under description of event or issue, " it says "We are conducting performance reviews of all the APD IV's in our office starting with those who have been in that position the longest. Paul is one of our longest tenured fours. Our predominate concern in conducting these reviews are client contact unless we have noticed performance related issues in other areas." Is that statement consistent with your understanding of the purpose of this review with Mr. Duchscherer?

A Yes.

Q Why was the predominant concern in doing review of APD IV's client contact?

A Once somebody is promoted to APD IV, really there is no evaluation that ever occur for the most part, at least that are required. And knowing that client contact is one of our biggest problems, once again we see it all the time in complaint letters from clients. I wanted to address that with some of our attorneys who had not been evaluated in a very long time and making sure that they were seeing their clients as they should be as best as they could possibly be seeing them.

Q If you look at the next full paragraph under "counseling." The first sentence says, "In the file reviews I did, there were gaps of 3 months, 3 months, 5 months, 6 months, 6 months, 8 months, and even 13 months between qualifying contacts." Do you see that?

A Yes.

Q What does that mean?

A That would mean as Chris reviewed Paul's files, he was looking to see the documented contact in the file. Using our guidelines that the initial contact in seven days and the follow-up contact at least once every 30 days; there were gaps longer than that. That's why he is taking note over there. So this would mean -- this would not necessarily mean this all occurred in one file -- but of the files he reviewed, this was at least gaps between visits at the jail for that particular client of that amount of months that he's listed there.

Q What is a qualifying contact?

A A qualifying contact would actually be a sit down visit over at the jail. Not a quick, here is what's going to happen in court right when they are brought over to the courthouse or a letter. It's a face-to-face sit down at the jail contact.

Q The next sentence says, "I discussed with David that this method simply is not working and is in opposition to our guidelines for representation." Would you agree with that statement.

A I would agree except that he made a mistake there and put David a couple times in here. I don't know why he had David on the mind, but it should be Paul. But other than that, yes, the gist of that I agree with it.

Q The next sentence says, "I also told him that given the huge caseloads we understood that every 30 days may not be attainable." What does that mean?

A This goes back to something I had said to you earlier where we kind of -- especially for promotion purposes, we kind of fudged those numbers a little bit. And our expectations really for promotion and such as been had to stretch out beyond that 30 days because we know we can't always actually get over there. We expect better than some of these gaps that he's mentioned up here, but we're not oblivious to the fact that you can't -- might not be able to see every one of your incarcerated clients every 30 days.

Q Would you say that the issues noted in this review of Paul applied to other APD IV's or just Paul?

A No, it applied to others. We haven't went through all of our APD IV reviews yet. But on another one that I have done, yes, I have seen similar.

Q Similar?

A Types of gaps, yes.

Q And in response to this, Paul suggested that he could do every 60-day client meetings or could likely do that; do you see that?

A Yes.

Q Is there a disadvantage in representing a client in going from meeting once every 30 days to once every 60 days?

A Yes.

Q What disadvantages would there be?

A Once again, I think it hurts your attorney-client relationship. If they are not seeing you, if you're not responding to their letters, they don't trust you. A lot of our clients we already start out with a level of distrust because, you know, it gets around hey, they are paid by the state. They're in cahoots with the prosecution. So we already start out with a lot of times with distrust. You can't build trust if you're seeing people every 60 days. It also hurts in your ability to once again properly inform your client about the decisions that they have to make, some life-changing decisions. It hurts in your ability to properly prepare the case. It hurts in your ability to negotiate with the prosecutor. It hurts in a lot of ways.

Q You started with trust; why is trust important in the attorney-client relationship in defending an indigent client?

A Well, because there are times when there is a right road and there is a wrong road on a case and how you should proceed. If the client doesn't trust you about which way you need to go, they might make the wrong choice and it will affect them forever.

Q And how would developing more trust aid in picking the right road?

A Because if they trust the attorney, then they are more likely to listen to them about what the attorney thinks they should do in a case.

Q Can you think of a time where a client not trusting you or someone in your office hampered your office's ability to provide effective -- an effective defense?

A Well, I can think of times where I have seen people plead to an offer I didn't think that they should take or I thought maybe they should go to trial, but because there is a lack of trust, they wanted to go with the guarantee in writing.

Q Turning back to this document, if you go to the next paragraph it says, "Christian County is a bit odd when it comes to client contact. The jail is an absolute hellhole and they do everything they can to discourage attorney-client meetings." Can you elaborate on what that means?

A Well, once again, I didn't write this.

Q Right.

A But this goes back to I think earlier we were discussing the jail situations in the different counties. This would have -- this would have -- yeah, this was written prior to the meeting I had with the sheriff in Christian County where they changed it where they have those two rooms now available over at the courthouse for us to visit. Yeah, prior to that, it was so difficult to get clients seen there. Yeah, if you went over to the jail -- and I experienced this myself -- where you go over to the jail itself to try to see a client and because they are so apparently understaffed there, you just wait out in the lobby. You know, they would come. They would ask you for your bar card. Then they would just disappear and you would sit there for a half an hour or 45 minutes just waiting on somebody to come back so you could tell them who you needed to see. Then you go into this little room that's right off the lobby that, once again, is not very private. Anybody sitting in the lobby can hear everything that's being said and there was only the one room there. It's a little metal stool for the attorney to sit on for -- and same way on the other side through the glass for the client. It was difficult to hear through the glass each other; there was no phone. It was very problematic.

Q Are there still difficulties in meeting clients in jail, either in Christian County or other counties in Area 31?

A Yes. As I stated earlier in Christian County, although they have made some accommodations to make things better so that we can see clients, I mean there is still problems. Like a bailiff not being available because court is in session to bring a client over. If the two rooms -- there is only two rooms -- and if they are filled up, you are out of luck. You can't see somebody. So, yeah, there is still issues.

Q You can put that document to the side for now, but we will come back to it in a bit. You mentioned earlier that lack of time can affect the ability to prepare the case. In what fraction of cases do you typically do a pretrial investigation?

A I would say -- we talked about this recently at a management meeting -- I think we average right around maybe 10 percent.

Q In your opinion, does your office have the time and resources to investigate each case in the manner required?

A I've got two investigators in my office. Right now they are able to get everything done that's asked of them. Sometimes they need a little extra time. We have had to continue some cases because they didn't have enough time to look into something. Once again, that's only because we are only looking into only 10 percent of our cases. If we were to truly investigate all of our cases, no. I don't have the support staff for that at all.

Q Do you think your -- if your office had the time they would be investigating more than 10 percent of the cases?

A Yes.

Q In your opinion what would be a better percentage or what -- strike that. In your opinion, what percentage of cases should be investigated to be providing -- strike that. Let's move on. Can you think of a time where a specific case was hampered because of the -- strike that. Without getting into specifics or compromising privilege, can you think of a time where your representation of a client was hampered by the lack of time to investigate a case?

A Well, I mean we've had situations where we weren't been able to track down all of the witnesses that our client has told us about. So we have had that issue before. Once again, this is just going as to investigation?

Q Yes.

A I mean, that would be the main thing I could think of.

Q So due to lack of time, you can think of cases where not every potential witness has been contacted?

A Yes.

Q In your opinion, should attorneys generally be contacting every potential witness in preparing defense?

A Especially the witnesses that our client is telling us about that are potential defense witnesses, absolutely.

Q How frequently do you request discovery from the State?

A We request it on every case.

Q In your opinion, do the attorneys in your office have time to effectively review that discovery?

A Depends on the type of case. If we are talking about a misdemeanor or probation violation, almost never. I would say 95 to 99 percent of the time, that's being looked at on the day of the hearing or the trial or the day before at best.

Q And for those misdemeanors and probation violations cases, is jail a potential consequence of a conviction or plea?

A Absolutely.

Q What about felony cases?

A Felony cases, I think that gets reviewed much more. And once again, depending on the complexity of the case or the severity of the case, it gets more time. That's the real problem here is, you know, I think at least in our office, I think people that are charged with crimes where they're facing potential life sentence, they get a lot of attorney time and their cases are really looked into and looked through. But to do that on all of those cases because we handle a lot of A and B felonies, a lot of people that are charged as prior and persistent offenders; in doing that, it leaves little to no time for all of those folks that are charged with a lower grade felony or those charged with PV's or misdemeanors.

Q So you would separate the ability to review discovery in A and B felonies from C and D felonies?

A I would say so, yes.

Q Do you think attorneys in your office have sufficient time to review discovery in C and D felony cases?

A Once again, it depends on the type of case because there are C and D sex offenses I think that more time is definitely spent on those. But if you're talking about a C or D stealing or tampering; it's probably given one quick reading and that's about it.

Q How frequently do attorneys in your office gather information to evaluate whether an expert would be necessary in the case?

A Can you ask that again?

Q Sure. How frequently do attorneys in your office determine whether an expert would be necessary in a case?

A What do you mean by how often?

Q Let me rephrase. Do you think the attorneys in your office have adequate time to consider retaining and using experts in cases where they would be necessary?

A Well, on the complex cases, yes; other cases, no, generally not.

Q What kinds of cases would there not be sufficient time?

A Well, certainly if you were thinking of using an expert on a misdemeanor, I never see that at all or any kind of request there. Once again, a C or D felony that's not a sex case; I see it very rarely there too, request for funds for experts.

Q Can you think of a C or D felony where expert testimony could have been useful or necessary and wasn't requested?

A I can't tell you an example of -- no, I can't. But I can tell you for instance like a low grade felony DWI, I have -- hardly ever do I get request for funds for an expert on something like that. But in the one or two times I have actually gotten those request and I have approved it, it's been to the client's benefit. It worked out well for them.

Q Why would expert evidence be useful in the DWI case?

A Well, it was a DWI I had pertained to an accident and it was -- both of them were. It was as to whether or not the intoxication actually played any role in it whatsoever.

Q How is an expert approved for a particular case? What is the process for that?

A When the attorney determines that they need to use an expert or think they need to use an expert; first, they will determine what expert they want to use. Sometimes that's done by going through our -- we have an expert witness database; or, also, sometimes they will go on our -- we have a discussion database and they will go on there and ask other public defenders around the state, you know, who have you used for this type of situation. Once they have determined who they want to use, they will contact that person to determine what the cost will be. And then they will fill out what we call an E-request and that will list the expert, the cost, the anticipated start date of the service, and then the reason for the request. That will be sent to me for approval. If it's under $500.00, then once I've approved it, that's it. If it's over $500.00, then once I've approved it, it goes on up to either Ellen Blau or Marshall Plane for approval.

Q Are there any cases you can think of where an expense request was rejected?

A Yes.

Q What would be the reason an expense request is rejected?

A More often than not it's rejected usually because the attorney maybe has not picked the right kind of expert and we need to talk about, you know, who maybe might be a better expert to use. That might be because of the specialty of the expert or sometimes it's because of the cost of the expert. Maybe there is somebody closer or that -- or doesn't charge such a high price that might be the better person to use.

Q So cost is a factor in determining which experts to use?

A It can be, yes.

Q How often do attorneys in your office take depositions in cases?

A You know, I would say we probably -- and this -- I'm just ball parking it here, but I would guess it probably corresponds pretty close to our percentage that we investigate. So I would say around 10 percent of the cases.

Q Do you think attorneys in your office have sufficient time to take depositions in cases where it would be necessary?

A It gets difficult to get those scheduled. I'll tell you, most of the time those depositions are done within a month or two months out from a trial date.

Q What would be the advantage of doing a deposition more than a month or two before trial?

A Well, people's memories fail. So closer in time sometimes is better, depending on who that witness is, whether you really want a fresh memory or not. And also whether or not you can even locate a witness too. Sometimes witnesses disappear on you.

Q This might be difficult to answer given -- knowing the absence of the negative, but can you think of a case where a deposition was not taken in a case where it would have been useful to have taken one?

A Nothing comes to mind right off the bat.

Q Do you have translators on staff in your office?

A No.
Q What do you do when a client doesn't speak English.
A We have to hire a translator.
Q How do you hire a translator?
A It's similar to the way we do with the experts. Our attorney has to fill out an expense request and I have to approve it.
Q Are there difficulties in communicating with clients who do not speak English?
A Sure.
Q Are any of those difficulties related to the time it takes to find a translator?
A Not the time that it takes to find the translator, but then the time to be able to coordinate your schedule with that translator and get over to the jail, and the increased time of that jail visit because it's going to take twice as long as an ordinary jail visit.
Q Roughly, what percentage of your clients do not speak English?
A I don't have any idea.
Q You mentioned earlier that occasionally attorneys in your office seek continuances. Could you elaborate a little more on why an attorney would seek a continuance in a case?

A Usually it's because they're not prepared.
Q Why wouldn't they be prepared?
A Because they haven't had time to prepare.
Q Do attorneys in your district regularly seek continuances?
A Regularly? It happens a lot. It would happen more frequently in our areas, our jurisdictions, if judges pushed harder for cases to go to trial quickly, but they don't. It's not uncommon for us to get a trial date set a year out from the first pretrial conference. So -- and very often, that's not the No. 1 case on that jury trial week; there would be 30 or 40 other cases. So it might not even go that month when it's set that far out. So we would have to ask for them a lot more than we do, but because of how cases proceed here, we don't have to ask for them as much as they might have to elsewhere.
Q Are there negative consequences in representing a client to pushing the trial out further with a continuance or due to scheduling?
A Well, if the client is out of custody they usually don't mind at all; but when they are in custody, yeah, absolutely. You have extended their jail stay.
Q How frequently do attorneys in your office file pretrial motions?

A I'd say we could probably fall around that 10 percent number. Depending on what -- I mean, bond request and such are filed, you know, formerly. But as far as a significant pretrial motion, like a motion to suppress, yeah, I would say around 10 percent.
Q In your opinion should there be more suppression motions -- or more pretrial motions like suppression motions filed in cases in your district?
A Yes.
Q Why aren't more being filed?
A Once again, I think it's a matter of time and number of cases and being able to properly look through everything and prepare.
Q Can you think of a time where a case in your office could have benefited from filing a pretrial motion but a lack of time to prepare hampered the ability to file?
A That would be one of those things where unless I read every case's discovery in our office, there is just no way for me to answer that.
Q Sure. If you could turn back to the Exhibit 49 the Paul Duchscherer evaluation.
A Yes.
Q If you flip to the second page.
A Yes.
Q And as you previously noted, the evaluation

flips between David and Paul at some points, but I will read it as it's written here. It says, "David wishes he had more time available for creative motion practice. His caseload and busy court schedule usually only allow for the doctoring of our boilerplate motions. He also only has time to prepare and submit suggestions in support when specifically requested by the judge." So would you say that that wish to have more time available for creative motion practice is unique to Paul or David or is that something that applies more generally in your office?
A No, I would say that applies to most of the folks in our office. I've got at least a couple of attorneys that they do a lot more of the suggestions. They do a lot more writing of writs and such, but I mean, they are working all the time. I mean, I get to the office early and, you know, they beat me there. They put in a lot of hours to do that.
Q What time do you get into the office?
A I generally get in around 7:00 a.m.
Q The second sentence referring to the doctoring of our boilerplate motions; do you know what that means?
A Yeah. We have a motion database that we keep and for things like -- there is things like motions to suppress on there. A lot of our attorneys rely -- a lot of them rely strictly on that and there is little variation or case-specific information that gets put into those. They just get filed.

Q In your opinion, does that hamper the ability to effectively defend clients?

A Well, it probably puts a judge on notice that you haven't really maybe looked into it as much as you should. I think if you've got more case-specific like on a motion to suppress, you've also educated the judge before you ever come in for the hearing at all. I think that's beneficial to the client.

Q It says, "In addition to the boilerplate motion," it also says, "he only has time to prepare and submit suggestions in support when specifically requested by the judge." Do you know what that means?

A Yes. Sometimes judges when you file a Motion to Suppress or something similar, sometimes the judges will ask for written suggestions from both the State and the defense. At least one of our attorneys I can think of likes to request -- whether or not -- this is one of the ones I was talking about a little bit ago -- request to file suggestions regardless of whether the judge has asked for it or not. And what Chris is writing here about Paul is that, you know, he just doesn't have the time to do that at all as far as requesting to do that unless the judge has specifically ordered it.

Q Why would an attorney want a request to file suggestions even if the judge doesn't ask for them?

A Gives you one more whack at it in explaining why the judge should rule in your favor.

Q The next sentence says, "I noticed while doing the file reviews that the request for discovery was either filed late or not at all in several cases." Do you know what that means?

A Yes.

Q What does that mean in your opinion?

A Well, that means a request for discovery in a felony case should always be filed within 20 days from arraignment, circuit court arraignment. We have a method set up in the office where our office assistants will actually file those for the attorneys. They just have to get the arraignment paperwork to her to get that filed and that wasn't done here.

Q And when you say they have to be filed, is that an internal guideline or is that a court rule?

A It's Supreme Court rule as to when that needs to be filed.

Q What are the consequences of filing a late request for discovery?

A Well, potentially if some discovery was not turned over and you found out about it after the fact, the court could possibly not grant you relief on that. For instance, say somebody went to trial, lost, and during their appeal there was this discovery that you didn't get all the reports. The appellate court might say too bad so sad. You didn't file your discovery request.

Q Is it -- in your opinion, is Paul the only attorney in your office to have filed late discovery request?

A Ever, no. I mean, but once again, I mean, the way our office is set up, they don't have to file it themselves if they'll just follow the procedure I have set up in the office.

Q Why would someone not follow the procedure?

A Once again, it goes to lack of time and just -- Paul was assigned to Christian County as it states there. They would have -- at that time, they would had three Law Days a month. It would not be unusual for them to be there on those Law Days from like 9:00 a.m. until 10:00 at night. And so then you come back in on Friday and there would be -- there is another court date on Friday for the changes of judge. Once again, just as things get going, the number of arraignments that he was handling, it's possible he just forgot to get some into the basket for our office assistant to get done because he was trying to take care of all these other things he was trying to take care of.

Q How often do cases go to trial in your office?

A Not as often as they should, but I can't give you an exact number of how many jury trials we have had over like the last year or so. I don't know.

Q Why do you say they don't go to trial as often as they should?

A I just know we don't go to trial as often as I think we should. For the number of cases that come through our office, yeah, there should be more. There should be more trials.

Q In your opinion, why aren't there more trials?

A Once again, I think it goes to having the time to prepare.

Q If these cases -- if not enough cases are going to trial, is it because they are being delayed or is it because they are being resolved through guilty pleas or other methods?

A I think a lot of times they are guilty pleas.

Q So in your opinion, there are cases that should -- you can think of cases that should be going to trial, but are being resolved through guilty pleas?

A I'm just talking statistically. I can't think of an exact case where -- because if I knew of an exact case, I would talk with that attorney and say no, we need to go trial. I just know statistically we have very few trials for the number of cases that we have.

Q In your opinion, do attorneys in your office have sufficient time to prepare for trial?

A No.

Q Why not?

A Once again, being in court five days a week, to trying -- when they are not in court to get some of these jail visits done that I'm hampering them about they need to go get done, office appointments for those clients that are out of custody. It just doesn't leave a lot of time.

Q Has an attorney in your office ever waived an opening or closing argument at trial?

A I can't think of anybody that's ever waived a closing argument. I believe we had an instance at least once there is one time I can think of where they held off on their opening until the State had rested, but yes.

Q What goes into preparing for trial?

A Well, as we have talked about before, utilizing your investigator to track down any possible defense witnesses, speak to them, look through and see if first of all if there are also any pretrial motions that need to be filed, depositions of the State's witnesses possibly, preparing your client for the trial, deciding whether or not they are going to testify. If they are going to testify, prepare them for that and for the potential cross examination. Preparing your opening, your closing, your directs, your crosses, preparing voir dire.

Q In your opinion, do attorneys in your office have time -- adequate time to talk with their clients about testifying and about preparing to testify?

A Excuse me. When you've hit that point of, yes, this is definitely going to be a trial, you know, those cases do get more of our attorney's time and attention. So those conversations I know definitely get had. They do have that conversation with them about whether or not to testify and they usually have at least one conversation with them trying to prep them for that and the cross. But it's usually, I would say probably just one conversation. If they needed more to really talk about it, they probably don't get that.

Q So in your opinion -- strike that. When an attorney in office -- in your office is preparing for trial, would you say they have adequate time to continue effective representation on their other cases?

A No.

Q Why not?

A Again, in properly trying to prepare for a trial, it comes at the cost of effective representation for all their other clients at that time, at least in that period of time in that they are prepping.

Q Can you be more specific in how preparing for trial in one case detracts from the ability to represent clients in other cases?

A Well, you have got to find that time to do those depositions that we talked about. You have got to have time to talk with your investigator about what she has been able to -- who she has been able to locate and what those statements are. If those statements are good, asking your investigator to have those witnesses come in, you know, to the office and talk. So you have got to find time for all of this. That means you're not focusing on your other cases and -- because if you're not prepared for trial, you're always on the go for all of these other things you're supposed to be doing for everybody else. So a lot of times our attorneys will cover each other cases when you're prepping. So you basically tune everybody else out. You know that your fellow attorneys in the office will cover your cases for you. If they are covering for you, it's not like you're prepping what needs to be done on those court dates. You're basically just telling that attorney go and tell the judge I'm prepping for trial and punt them and so they just get reset. Nothing is getting done on those cases at all. And also other clients aren't getting seen at the jail too.

Q So when you say other attorneys in your office cover cases when one attorney is on trial, that's mainly for court appearances and to push those cases down the road?

A Correct.

Q How much time do you spend working on case before you advise a client on whether to take a guilty plea?

A Me personally?

Q Yes, you personally.

A I try to spend a significant amount. I can't give you an exact amount of time because every case is different on how much time you really need to do. But once again, I mean, I have a reduced caseload. It's much more difficult for our assistant public defenders in that area.

Q Do you think your assistant public defenders have sufficient time to advise their clients on pleading guilty?

A Not all the time, no.

Q What are -- what steps do attorneys in your office take to negotiate pleas for clients?

A The average negotiation, I would say, for most cases -- once again, we are not talking about the complex cases -- I would say most negotiation occurs right on the date that potentially the client is going to plead guilty. That's when most of the negotiation occurs.

Q How are plea offers communicated to clients?

A Could you be more specific?

Q So if an assistant public defender negotiates a plea or is informed of a plea offer by the DA's office, how would they communicate that to their client?

A Well, I mean, if it's occurring in court, they would take them into a conference room -- take their client into a conference room and let them know what that offer is and, you know, have a brief conversation about the ins and outs of that offer and ask them, you know, the client if they have any questions about it. If it occurs outside of the courtroom and the client is incarcerated, we would go over to the jail and let the client know. If they are out of custody, we would try to make contact with the client. That's, as I stated earlier, it's not always easy to do, and relay that offer.

Q Without getting into specifics of particular cases, can you think of times where a client could have gotten a better plea deal if the attorney had -- if your attorney had more time or resources to work on that case?

A I can't think of an example, no.

Q In your opinion do attorneys in your office generally have sufficient time to negotiate plea deals?

Page 62

A No, because like I said, I think most of them are taking place on the date of disposition.

Q Are you aware of cases in your area where defendants plead guilty pro se?

A Ask that again, please.

Q Are you aware of cases in your area where defendants plead guilty pro se, without the advice of counsel?

A Yes.

Q What kinds of cases would that occur?

A It happens a lot on misdemeanor cases.

Q Would those defendants be eligible for representation by the MSPD?

A Sometimes.

Q Why would someone who is eligible for representation by your office plead guilty without the advice of counsel?

A Well, right now they might do that because they know they would be on a waitlist and it could be a very long time before they got an attorney anyways. Before we started the waitlist, I'm not sure why someone would do that other than they think they can just expedite it and get it done quickly.

Q At any point did your office have an agreement with the prosecutor's office that they would not take cases where there was no jail time involved in the plea agreement?

A An agreement with the State that we would not take cases -- we already don't. Unless jail time is a possibility, we don't take any of those cases.

Q Let me be more specific. A case where -- are you aware of any cases where jail time is a theoretical possibility, but the State agreed not to seek jail time and so your office did not enter an appearance in the case?

A There has. Especially we went through some issues of trying to reduce caseload back in 2012 and there were a lot of meetings I went to with judges and prosecutors. And I know that was one of the things that we had talked about that if the State would agree to waive jail time on some misdemeanors, that would keep us out of the case and help reduce caseload, yes.

Q You said there were conversations; do you know if that actually occurred in 2012?

A I believe it did happen to some degree.

Q Are there any immigration specialists in your office?

A No.

Q In your opinion, do attorneys in your office have adequate time to advise your clients on the immigration consequences or decisions they make in their criminal cases?

Page 64

A No. In fact, I just had an attorney come into my office just the other day on an immigration issue because none of us are immigration experts. We have had in the past some who were who would agree to pro bono would allow us to call them and kind of pick their brain on some of these topics. But the name and number that we had given -- this particular attorney we would call, apparently had never gotten with her. So this was causing some stress on how to counsel this client because she didn't know what to tell them.

Q Do attorneys in your office receive adequate training on immigration consequences?

A I believe there have been some tracks. I think there have been some classes on that at some of our statewide training.

Q But there are no immigration specialist who work in your office?

A No.

MR. SHAHABIAN: I think this is good time to take a break. Let's go off the record.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Going off the record. The time is 10:33. This ends Media 1.

(A recess was taken.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Going back on the record.

Page 65

The time is 10:43 a.m. This begins Media 2.
Q (By Mr. Shahabian) Welcome back, Mr. Hackathorn.
A Thank you.
Q I wanted to turn to some of the more administrative tasks you handle. Are you responsible for the management of the budget of your office?
A We have an office budget but, I mean, that's -- no. For the most part, we are told how much money we have for certain things. But if that money runs short, I just give a call to our comptroller and she is the one that moves the money around and makes sure everything is covered.
Q Sounds good. How do you handle -- is there anyone in your office who is dedicated to handling juvenile cases?
A We did up until about four or five months ago.
Q What changed?
A We had a meeting, a couple of meetings, with the presiding judge here in Greene County; that's the only area that we were currently doing juvenile cases in. And because of our caseload issues, the county had agreed that they would use some of their surplus to hire attorneys to handle those cases from now on. Unless it was going to be a certification, in which case they would send the case to us.

Q So when you say the county, you mean Greene County handles non-certification juvenile cases right now?
A They contract out those cases, yes.
Q How does it work in Taney and Christian Counties?
A We have never really been involved in juvenile in those two counties. I believe those two counties have always kind of done something similar as to what Greene County is doing now, just contracting out with private attorneys in those areas.
Q Do you know any of the attorneys who those cases are contracting out to?
A I know some of them here. I don't know necessarily who is getting it in Christian and Taney.
Q Who are some of the attorneys who work on those cases here?
A I believe, I'm not 100 percent, but I believe some of them are going to some attorneys who had previously worked in our office and are now private practice.
Q And so presently, is there anyone in your office who specializes in juvenile cases?
A So right at this moment is there? No, there is not.
Q And just to be clear, in Greene County you're still handling certifications?

A Since we came to this agreement, there has not been a certification case that they have sent our way. So we have kind of gotten out of the juvenile business completely for the time being.
Q Do you expect that to stay that way?
A I don't expect anything. You never know. As budgets change, it could be, you know, next year, we find ourselves back taking juvenile cases again. For the time being, this is how it is.
Q When your office was handling juvenile cases, were all of those cases being handled by the specialist you mentioned who has left?
A Well, I guess I wouldn't necessarily call her a specialist. We had one attorney who was assigned to juvenile cases. But to say that she was a specialist would be a misnomer. I mean, she was -- that was just a caseload that she was given.
Q Did she have any particular expertise in juvenile matters?
A No.
Q Did she have any specialized training in handling juvenile cases?
A No.
Q Did she carry a non-juvenile caseload in addition to her juvenile caseload?

A Yes.
Q Do you recall roughly what percentage of cases was juvenile versus non-juvenile?
A I would say out of her 120 or so open cases that she had back then, I think around 30 or so would have been juvenile cases.
Q And what kinds of juvenile cases would she handle?
A Any that came our way.
Q So not just certifications?
A Correct. Now during the time that she was handling juvenile, I don't recall that we got any certification cases. Now those I do treat a little bit differently. Depending on -- usually, I mean if they are going to certify a juvenile, it's a very serious case. So that would likely be assigned to somebody who handles more complex cases, not necessarily her.
Q So she would -- would she handle detention case -- hearings?
A Yes.
Q And she would advocate for informal adjustment?
A I believe so, yes.
Q If your office were to resume handling juvenile cases in Greene County, would you expect that they would be assigned to someone similar who is not a specialist in juvenile matters?

A Yes. The way that assignment was usually handled in our office, our attorneys basically took a one-year term at handling the juvenile matters. When their year was up, that assignment would go to somebody else.

Q And are the cases that the county is contracting out cases where juveniles would otherwise be eligible for representation by the MSPD?

A Yes.

Q How did your office make indigency determinations in juvenile cases?

A We really didn't. If the court referred them, we took it.

Q So court referrals were how juvenile cases came to your office?

A Correct.

Q I'm handing you an exhibit that I will ask our court reporter to mark as Plaintiff's 50. We fixed the format on this.

MS. SHIPMA: Yeah, it was marked yesterday too on a fixed format.

MR. SHAHABIAN: Oh, it was?

Page 70

MS. SHIPMA: Yeah.

MR. SHAHABIAN: Oh, okay.

Q Do you recognize this document?

A Yes. This is the budget request that is prepared by our comptroller.

Q Could you turn to the last page of this document?

A Okay.

Q Do you recognize this spreadsheet?

A It appears to be a caseload metric worksheet ordering the various MSPD offices by percentage of capacity --

Q Have you seen --

A -- and how far over they are percentage of capacity.

Q Have you seen this particular spreadsheet before?

A Yeah. This is -- budget request is sent out to all the district defenders and I do look at it when it's received by my office. I do receive also various versions of this before in the past.

Q And you see at the top it says, "Cumulative Caseload Metrics Fiscal Year 2017"?

A Yes.

Q And then it says, "Start date July 1, 2016; end date June 30, 2017"?

A Yes.

Q So is your understanding that these caseload metrics are for the entire fiscal year 2017?

A It appears to be so, yes.

Q I know the font is quite small, but do you see Area 31 Springfield?

A I do.

Q And what rank is it assigned in all the areas for workload capacity?

A If I followed it over correctly I believe ninth.

Q Do you have an understanding of how the MSPD determines workload capacity?

A Well, I didn't prepare this worksheet, but I believe it's done using the RubinBrown Standard and the waited caseload standard.

Q What is your understanding of what the RubinBrown standard is?

A I couldn't go into you in any depth as to how they came to those waited caseloads. I can just tell you I have used it, even within the office. You know, various types of cases are given various weights as to how much time it potentially takes to prepare that case. So, you know, A,B felony is weighted heavier than a misdemeanor by a long shot. Then that's compared up with the number of hours available -- that an attorney has available to work on all of their cases. Then that gets you your percentage of how far over capacity you are.

Q You said you use the RubinBrown metrics in your office; how do you use them?

A I use them every so often just to see where my attorneys are at as far as how far over capacity they are.

Q Roughly what percentage of your attorneys are over 100 percent of their capacity?

A Right at this moment in time, I would say probably all but one. We still have one attorney who is still kind of working up her caseload.

Q How long ago did that attorney start?

A She started in September.

Q So she does not yet have a full caseload?

A Probably not one that gets her over 100 percent of capacity yet.

Q According to this spreadsheet it says the Springfield office is 277.5 percent of capacity for fiscal year '17. I'm not going to ask you to give an opinion on whether you agree with how that number was calculated, but would you agree roughly that your attorney was -- I'm sorry, that your office was well over capacity for fiscal year 2017?

Page 73

A Yes.
Q Why would you agree with that?
A Because just as I have done it for individual attorneys, not for the whole office as a whole, I know that in times past where we've had some attorneys that were at 300 percent or 400 percent. I had one attorney at one point in time that was at 500 percent. So, yeah, you average it out for the whole office. I would say, yes, our office as a whole has definitely been over capacity.
Q And separate from the percentages and your understanding, for example the attorney who you said was 500 percent over capacity, what would that mean in terms of their day-to-day ability to provide adequate defense to their clients?
A It's not adequate defense for probably any of his clients at that point in time. I mean, you're just treading water. Just cases getting continued and continued, pretrial conference after pretrial conference. I know for sure because during that time period for that particular attorney too I was getting a lot of complaint letters about I haven't seen him in ages because he didn't have the time to get over to the jail.
Q What do you do when you receive a complaint letter about an attorney?
A First thing I usually do is I will meet with the attorney and ask them about when their last client contact was. Talk a little bit about how in depth that conversation was. If the contact hadn't been an extreme amount of time ago, we'll just talk about when they can get over then the next time to see them and we'll kind of set a deadline for them to get over and see that client and then I generally just leave it at. Then I follow-up with them to make sure that contact was done. If I think there is more issues there than what the attorney is saying, I might also pull the file and actually do a file review to see how many contacts there has been with the client.

Q In your opinion, so you -- in your opinion, are the issues in your office's ability to effectively represent clients -- strike that. In your opinion, could any attorney, no matter how expert, adequately represent clients given the constraints facing lawyers in your office?
A Depending on what point they are in and how long they have been with the office, if it's one of the attorneys that is just starting out and growing their caseload, yes, they can initially.
Q Why can they initially?
A Because their number of cases is much lower than everybody else's.
Q Could an attorney carrying an average or full caseload in your office?

A Effectively represent every one of those clients, no.
Q Can attorneys refuse cases that have been assigned to your office?
A Up until about a few months ago, no.
Q Let's start with up until a few months ago; had attorneys tried to refuse cases prior to that point?
A No, I never had an attorney come to me and refuse a case.
Q Has your office up -- and still focusing on the period prior to a few months ago -- has your office refused to take cases at any point during your tenure?
A We did have a period I referenced, I think it was around 2012, where it was per a MSPD rule that had been promulgated that we had attempted to refuse cases to try to reduce caseload.
Q How did that rule work?
A Excuse me?
Q How did that rule work, that MSPD rule that you referenced?
A I don't remember the exact reading of the rule at this point in time. Too much water has passed under the bridge.
Q Who did you tell that you would be -- you know what, let's just get the exhibit. Can I get 14 and 15. So I'm handing you a document that I will ask the court reporter to mark Plaintiff's 51 and Plaintiff's 52. Do you recognize these documents, Mr. Hackathorn?

A They look vaguely familiar.
Q What do they appear to be to you?
A These were notices that were sent out by our director at the time, Marty Robinson, to the presiding judges in both 38th and the 31st circuit putting them on notice that our office had exceeded our maximum caseload standard for three consecutive calendar months. I believe that was to then trigger -- triggered meetings with them to try to reduce caseload. And if not, then we potentially refused cases as best my memory recalls.
Q Do you remember whether there were meetings that occurred after you sent these notices?
A Yes.
Q What happened at those meetings?
A A lot of talk. Nothing that would necessarily have resulted in any real caseload relief for our attorneys.
Q Do you recall the Missouri Supreme Court's decision in Waters?
A Yes.
Q Were you a party in that case?

Page 77

A I was.
Q You were a plaintiff in that case?
A I believe so, yes.
Q Could you briefly state your recollection of what the Waters case was about?
A Well, my role in the Waters case all took place right up front. After that, it was out of my hands. I went down with my attorneys who were assigned to Christian County that day after we decided we were going to start refusing cases and just to try to take some of the heat off of them and let the judge vent at me. And we -- one of the cases that I refused representation on was the crux of the Waters case because he then went ahead and ordered us in to it and that's what the Waters case was about. I can't remember the young man's name even now who was the poor defendant that was caught in the middle of all of that.
Q But it's fair to say that the case was about your office's ability to refuse case assignments?
A Yes.
Q Do you recall how the Waters case was resolved?
A The Waters case ultimately said that the rule could be followed.
Q How did attorneys in your office respond to the Waters rule -- to the Waters ruling?

Page 78

A Initially pretty well.
Q What do you mean?
A Initially, it looked like we had won and that might ultimately result in some real caseload relief.
Q Why do you say initially?
A Well, things kind of went south after that.
Q How did they go south?
A Well, they went south in that legislature tried to basically disband the public defender system. That ended up not happening, thankfully. And then there were some -- there was some laws that were passed that basically did away with the Waters case. Basically saying that if we wanted caseload relief, we had to go through the Statute of 600.063 and basically request pretty please to the courts that they would give us some relief. And it had to be done as an office by the district defender of each office on an individual attorney basis. I couldn't even go for the office as a whole to the judge. I had to go attorney, by attorney, by attorney and demonstrate that they were overloaded before any relief could potentially, theoretically, be granted.
Q Did you attempt to go down that road and ask for relief for individual attorneys?
A I did not.

Q Why not?
A Well, for one, for my particular office, we had kind of been ground zero on this whole thing prior to the Waters case. As I said, I went to meetings. I went to those meetings and I talked with judges and I talked with prosecutors and it resulted in really nothing. I didn't expect anything to have changed. Also, I didn't like the standard being different for our attorneys than for any other attorney that's out there. And that's kind of what's going on now.
Q And by what's going on now, are you referring to the Hinkebein decision and what's followed from that decision?
A Correct, yes. You know, our position is that the ethical rules, and certainly by the Hinkebein decision, it shows, I mean, that ethical rules apply equally to our attorneys as they do for any other attorney in this state. Their license is just as much in jeopardy as anybody else. The fact that they should have to jump through more hoops to reduce their caseload than anyone else when their license is just as much in jeopardy seems ridiculous.
Q What is your understanding of what the ethical rules require in terms of accepting cases?
A Well, one of the ethical rules concerns competence. And are we competently representing all of our clients when you have 150 to 200 cases, no. As I said before, you know, some of these misdemeanors clients, probation violation clients, they are not getting any real attention. Basically a warm body in there making an off the cuff argument. That's not competent representation. There is a rule on diligence as I've also discussed earlier. A lot of these cases where the client wants a trial and they are sitting in jail, they'll easily sit in jail a year or more to go to trial. That's not diligent representation. Communication; we have talked a lot of about communication. There is an ethical rule on that. We have always failed in that when we have such a high caseload on two fronts: One, keeping the client up-to-date; and then on the other front of making sure that they are reasonably -- legal matters are reasonably explained to them so that they can make informed decisions. And then also, I failed on the ethical rule that pertains to me as a supervising attorney in making some reasonable effort to ensure that those other rules are complied with by those under my supervision.

Q Given your understanding of the ethical rules -- actually, let's take a step back. What is your understanding of what happened in the Hinkebein case?
A My understanding is that some deadlines were missed by Mr. Hinkebein and a complaint was filed against him. He -- as part of his defense when they were going to suspend his license, he stated that had too many cases and was basically told, to some degree, too bad. That you either needed to quit or you needed to go to your supervisor and say something about this huge caseload, which he had not done.

Q How did attorneys in Area 31 react to the Hinkebein decision?

A They were worried. They were worried. They knew that they have a lot of cases too. That they weren't doing everything in every case that maybe they should be doing. You know, just like any attorney, they worked hard to get that license. So there was concern.

Q Did you take any formal actions in response to the Hinkebein decision?

A Not right away. We had a statewide management meeting, I think a few weeks after the Hinkebein decision. After that management meeting, I did. I went back and I had individual meetings with all of the attorneys in my office to make sure what I thought was true was in fact true and that the attorneys in fact agreed with me on that and that they were overloaded, that they had too many cases to follow the ethical rules other than, like I said, potentially the one attorney who had just started. And then based upon that, I sent notice to all of our presiding judges letting them know that we were going to have to start waitlisting some of these clients so I could reduce caseload.

Q I'm handing you a document that I will ask our court reporter to mark as Plaintiff's 52 -- sorry, 53. Do you recognize this document?

A I do.

Q What is it?

A This is that notice that I said that I sent to all the presiding judges letting them know that we were going to have to start waitlisting some clients.

Q What was the response from -- who did you send this to?

A I sent this to Judge Thomas Mountjoy, who is a presiding judge for the 31st Circuit. I sent it to -- well, actually, I'm incorrect on that. I thought I had only sent it to the presiding judges. I actually sent it to every judge that we have cases in front of in all three of our circuits.

Q Did you receive a response from the judges in response to this letter?

A I believe I received a response only from one judge.

Q Do you remember which judge?

A That would be Judge Laura Johnson, the presiding judge for the 38th Circuit.

Q What was Judge Johnson's response?

A Her response at that point right after this notice was to request a meeting with me, the prosecutor, and the other judges in her circuit.

Q Did that meeting take place?

A It did.

Q What happened at that meeting?

A Well, initially I thought that the meeting, based upon the request she sent, was to discuss possibly ways that the court could reduce caseload and maybe make sure that people weren't on a waitlist or weren't on a waitlist for very long. When I got to the meeting, it did not turn out to be that. It turned out to be more of a complaint session about what we were doing, what the public defender system was doing. And then also once the prosecutor had made mention of 600.063, Judge Johnson didn't seem much interested in doing anything else as far as accommodating our attorneys and trying to reduce caseload. Simply said, well, that's what you should be doing is going through .063.

Q And what would going through .063 have required differently from the letter that you sent to Judge Johnson and the other judges?

A That would have -- if you go strictly by what

.063 says, that would have to -- to some degree nobody really knows because it's not really been done -- but it's a matter of giving some sort of notice to the court on each and every individual attorney who I have assigned to that circuit. And then arranging some sort of meeting, whether that be on the record or not; I don't think that's necessarily clear either. To some degree, the prosecutor being put on notice and whether or not they participate is still a question as well. And then some decision being made by the judge, based upon evidence I guess I would present, on each of those attorneys whether or not they are truly overloaded.

Q Did judges other than Judge Johnson react to this letter, either formerly or informally?

A Surprisingly, no.

Q So you've received no response to this letter from judges other than Judge Johnson?

A No.

Q And this letter was sent October 10, 2017?

A That's correct.

Q You stated in this letter that each of the attorneys under your supervision said that their current individual caseloads created a conflict of interest with existing clients because they are forced to choose effective representation of one client to the detriment of other clients?

A Correct.
Q Is that still the case in Area 31?
A Yes.
Q Have you received any reactions from the local bar in your district in response to either Hinkebein or to this e-mail?
A Informally, I have had, yes, members of the private bar talk to me and say, you know, they understood, you know, why we are doing what we are doing. And I've even had a couple say to me that, you know, they would be willing to take a couple of pro bono cases to try to help us out, but.
Q You mentioned that your office created a waiting list for clients, potential clients, where you would otherwise take representation. Could you explain more how that waiting list works?
A We have separate a waiting list for each jurisdiction; one for Taney county, one for Christian, and one for Greene. Ideally, what I wanted to do with that waitlist was have it prioritized with those who are in custody and have been on the waiting list the longest; when I had attorneys who became available to take cases, that those would be the ones that would come off the list first. It hasn't necessarily worked that way. We now have a color coded waitlist based upon how outraged the judge is and whether they are to the point of ordering us into the case or not. So when I have ones that are lighted up in red by our clerks where we have been ordered into the case, those are the ones that are coming off the waitlist first. They are not necessarily the ones that are in custody or been in custody the longest.

Q Roughly, how many people are on the waitlist in each of these counties?
A The last I think yesterday I looked at that and I think the Greene County list was -- it was somewhere around two -- somewhere between 220 or 250 people were on the wait list for Greene County. Off the top of my head, I don't recall how many are on the waitlist for Christian and Greene.
Q And Taney County?
A I'm sorry, for Christian and Taney, I don't recall. For Greene, it's somewhere between 220 and 250.
Q Do you know roughly what percentage of those people are incarcerated?
A I don't.
Q Are some of those people incarcerated?
A Oh, yes.
Q You mention that you have prioritized where -- based on judge outrage; have judges ordered your office to represent indigent defendants over your objections?

A Yes.
Q I'm going to hand you a document that's already been marked Petsch Exhibit 5. And while we are doing this, I'll also hand you a document that I'll ask our court reporter to mark Plaintiff's 54.
A Okay.
Q Have you seen these documents before?
A Yes.
Q What are they?
A The one marked Exhibit 5 Petsch is an example of a writ that could be done if a judge was trying to order us into a case, I believe. This was provided on our -- what do you call it? The legislative database or not -- litigation database as something available for us to file. And then Exhibit 54 here was an example of a motion to withdraw due to excessive caseload that our attorneys could file on their individual cases as well. That was also in the litigation database.
Q So let's start with Petsch Exhibit 5. Why would the litigation database have a form writ specifically for objecting to appointments by judges?
A Well, I think rightfully so, we had anticipated that not all judges, and probably the majority of judges, were not just simply going to go along with the waitlist idea and would be ordering us into cases and so this was made available for that situation when it arose.

Q Have attorneys in your office used this writ?
A We have not.
Q Why not?
A Because before we could, I believe another jurisdiction or two, or another trial office or two had tried it and to no avail. It was -- it wasn't heard basically.
Q Turning to the other Exhibit 54.
A Yes.
Q Why would the MSPD have a form motion to withdraw?
A This was done -- well, for two reasons as I understand it. One would be as an avenue for the individual attorneys to try to reduce caseloads themselves to try to withdraw out of some of their cases. And two, it was thought that by also filing these motions, even if the judge denied it, it might give them some protection from the Office of Chief Disciplinary Counsel if a complaint was filed on them in that particular case.
Q Do you know if any attorneys in your office have filed a motion to withdraw due to excessive caseload?
A I'm pretty sure none of them have.
Q Do you know why not?

Page 89

A It was one of those things where they've already got all of these cases and they already knew they were going to be denied anyways -- or pretty well figured they would all be denied. And so if it was just a matter of protecting themselves, they just figured it wasn't worth they time. They needed to focus on their cases and preparing their cases.

Q How have your public defenders handled cases where judges are ordering the MSPD appointed over their objection?

A Well, our entry that we file in those particular cases states that it is an entry over objection. But other than that, I'm not sure.

Q Are they assigned -- so if a judge appoints -- orders your appointment in a case now, you're entering -- attorneys in your office are entering appearances over objection?

A Our office is doing that for them, yes. We don't have any judges that -- well, they're not necessarily ordering individual attorneys in my office into particular cases. We had one judge who was ordering me into a particular group of cases because I hadn't assigned them yet. But once I did assign them, you know, she was fine with whoever they were assigned to. But, yeah, once a judge has ordered us into a case, I'm kind of treating it like I did before. I'll look through it and see if there is a conflict and if there is not, I assign it out to whoever is assigned to that county or that particular division.

Q So I want to go back to the e-mail you sent to the judges that's Exhibit 53.

A Okay.

Q And the last full paragraph on the first page, it says" Until one or more of the attorneys in our office are able to fully comply with their ethical obligations under the Rules of Professional Conduct, we will no longer be immediately entering into cases in which a defendant is qualified." At this point, are there any attorneys in your office who are able to fully comply with their ethical obligations and enter into new cases?

A Since I sent this, we have had a couple who had got to the point to where we could start actually just regularly entering them into cases, yes.

Q Why were they able to reach the point where they could enter into new cases?

A Because I had stopped assigning them cases for a couple of months. And also these were attorneys who were already -- because they were newer and didn't have the tremendously built up caseloads some of our more long-term attorneys have had.

Q Do you know on average, I know the waitlist hasn't been around for very long, do you know roughly on average how many people are coming off the waitlist and getting assigned counsel?

A I don't. I couldn't give you an exact on that.

Q Has the waitlist grown since you have started it? Stayed steady? Reduced in number?

A It continues to grow. It's not like we're taking them off at such a rate that it's decreased at all. It grows faster than I can take cases off of it.

Q How do you inform indigent defendants that they've been placed on this waitlist?

A When they fill out their application, as far as in Christian and Taney counties, when they fill out their application, they are informed in person because we have people down there when they fill out the applications. In Greene County if they come into the office to fill out the application, then we inform them when they come in and fill that out. For those in custody in Greene County, we don't always -- we are not always there in person when they fill out the application; it gets sent to us. So a lot of those potential clients are informed by letter.

Q What does the letter say?

A I don't recall off the top of my head exactly what I put in that letter.

Q Do you recall, you know, roughly or generally what it said?

A Roughly it's that due to, you know, excessive caseloads we don't have an attorney available at the moment but as soon as we have one available, we'll try to get to them as soon as possible. And there is language about they will be put on a waitlist until then. There is also obviously language that they qualify for our services.

Q Do you know of any reaction from people on the waiting list to being placed on the waiting list?

A Yeah.

Q What reactions?

A Well, I have been getting letters, especially from some of our folks that are, you know, they are sitting in custody, you know, basically begging and pleading can you give me some idea exactly how much longer am I going to have to wait for an attorney. Those who are out of custody, I have gotten some phone calls from. You know, I've got another court date coming up. The judge really wanted me to have an attorney. What am I supposed do. Yeah, so I'm hearing from people.

Q So people on the waiting list, their cases still progress? They are not on a suspense docket?

A Yeah, no. They still have court dates that come around.

Q And they are expected to appear at those court dates without counsel?
A Well, the judge would prefer they were appearing with counsel at the point that he or she has referred them to us. But, yeah, they are appearing without counsel.
Q Are courts in your area appointing private attorneys to represent indigent -- excuse me, indigent defendants in non-conflict cases?
A I can't recall any of our judges doing that, no.
Q How do you handle conflict cases?
A Now all of our contract -- all of our conflict cases are contracted out to private counsel.
Q Was that always the case?
A It was not.
Q When did it change?
A It changed at the beginning of this fiscal year, so July -- July 1.
Q What was the system prior to July 1?
A Prior to that, for what we call first-level conflicts, we had offices that we would basically cover for each other. So we had five counties that we don't handle primarily, but if the offices that did handle those cases

-- or those counties primarily had a personal conflict, they would send those cases to us. And then there are offices that would handle our three counties for our conflicts. We had five conflict counties. We have Dade, Dallas, Webster, Stone, and Polk counties.
Q Did handling conflict cases internally impact your attorney's ability to handle their other cases?
A It did. I mean, they were great time consuming things because they -- you wouldn't have a large number of conflict cases, but they would often take several days, a month because you would have to drive to those counties, sit there through sometimes the whole Law Days for those cases. Then you also had to go to those counties to do your jail visits. So a small number of clients was getting a large percentage of the time.
Q Do you know whether the system that you have to handle conflict cases after July 1 is permanent?
A As long as the money holds out. I know that our director would like to make it permanent, but the money has to be there.
Q If the money is not there, do you expect to go back to the prior system of conflict counties?
A I do.
Q Have you heard of the Missouri Coalition for the Right to Counsel?

Page 95

A I can't say that I have.
Q Have you heard of any pro bono programs to handle indigent defense cases outside of the MSPD?
A For criminal cases?
Q For criminal cases.
A No.
Q What kinds of cases are on the waiting list right now?
A All kinds. We even had a murder case on the waitlist for a little bit. So it's everything from misdemeanor up to murder.
Q What are the negative effects on indigent defendants for being put on a waitlist?
A Well, there could be a lot of detrimental effects of being on the waitlist. One, you still have these court appearances that you've talked about where they are without counsel and that's the potential for them to say something in court that they shouldn't say. We have had -- we have been in court and seen some folks who were incarcerated who have waived counsel, just so that they could potentially get out of jail or work out something with the prosecutor and represented themselves. And I'm sure that they did not get an outcome they would have had had they had counsel.
Q So you're aware of indigent defendants who waived their right to counsel after being put on the waitlist?

A I am.
Q Do you know roughly how many people have done that?
A I don't.
Q Were those cases where jail time was a possibility?
A Yes.
Q Do you know if those cases resulted in jail time?
A I don't know what ultimate outcome came of those cases.
Q You mentioned earlier that two attorneys recently resigned from your office. Do you know why they resigned?
A I'm not exactly sure about one, but I am pretty sure about the other. The one I'm sure about it kind of came out of -- well, it definitely came out of the situation we were having in Christian County ever since we started the waitlist and that judge's reaction and the difficulty they were having in court because of that; kind of the tension that was coming out of that. Also, I don't believe he cared for MSPD's response in that particular situation. To be more specific, I think he thought that a complaint should have been filed immediately against that judge by MSPD.

Q What was the judge's reaction that triggered this?

A Well, because we were having difficulties in that area and she did not seem to want to work with us. She was ordering us into more cases than any other judge was ordering us into. I had taken steps to try on my own to clear up a little bit of our attorney's time. In Christian County, a situation that had been occurring was even on Law Days, even when our attorneys were done with their cases, they were asked by the court to stay in court and wait until the end of the day and then she would bring up inmates that we were not representing yet but would probably qualify for our services and our attorneys would take those applications in court and then bring them back to the office. In order to try to clear up some time for them, I informed Judge Johnson that I would no longer have them waiting around until the end of the day to take those applications. If she wanted to send a list of referrals, I would send a support staff member to take those applications, but I wanted our attorneys to leave court after their cases were completed so that they could work on their cases or maybe do jail visits or office appointments; that sort of thing. She did not take well to that decision. It had been circulated around to our attorneys, not necessarily from Judge Johnson, but from people that worked for her, such as the bailiffs, that they were going to be basically ordered to stay there. Then on a particular Law Day where this all kind of came to a head, she did order them to stay in court even though I told them they needed to come back to the office and had even -- from what I'm told by our attorneys -- that bailiffs were even stationed at the exits of the courtroom to keep them from leaving.

Q How did the attorney who resigned react to that?

A On that particular day?

Q To you.

A To me? Well, he wrecked me on that day. He called me and asked what should we do and I told them to go ahead and leave. They were followed out of the courthouse by bailiff saying, "You're not free to go. You're not free to go. We are going to get you." They actually had a jury trial that following week scheduled in front of that judge. So our trial division director, Ellen Blau, came down and both of us went and sat in that Monday just to see if there was going to be any retaliation against our attorneys for leaving. There was not. Fortunately, nothing was done to them. But his reaction from that point forward was wanting an immediate complaint filed against her and there wasn't one, so.

Q How long had that attorney been working at your office?

A He had been with our office for at least, I'd say ten to twelve years I think. He had been with the system longer. He actually transferred from another MSPD office when he came to us.

Q Who was it?

A His name is Morris Mettler.

Q How many attorneys were in the courtroom the day that bailiffs were stationed outside and they were told to fill out these forms?

A Only two of our three attorneys were in the courtroom that day. The third one had a doctor's appointment, so she wasn't there.

Q How many attorneys total are assigned to the Christian County Courthouse?

A Three.

MR. SHAHABIAN: This is a good time to go off the record and take a break.

Page 100

Q Thanks for sticking around, Mr. Hackathorn.

A Certainly.

Q Basic question, just for my edification, what is a Law Day?

A In more rural counties, Christian and Taney County, it's a day that the circuit court has to pretty much cake care of anything that the circuit court does on its cases, you know, whether it be pleas or pretrial conference, or anything other than a trial; bail request, bond reduction request and that sort of thing. All of those are generally taken up on a Law Day.

Q How often is there a Law Day?

A Well, that's changed, but only recently. It used to be that each of those counties had three Law Days a month.

Q You mentioned that recently the Greene County agreed to contract out juvenile cases; do you know who in the county is responsible for that?

A I don't.

Q Do you know what office in the county is responsible for that?

A I don't.

Q How are you made aware of that change?

A Well, we initiated the change. We made the request. We contacted the presiding judge, Tom Mountjoy, and asked if that could be done to try to reduce caseload and they agreed that they could do that.

Q I want to go back to you mentioned the day where Judge Johnson ordered your attorneys to stay in court to take new indigency applications. You mentioned the reaction of one of your attorneys. I was wondering what was the reaction of the other attorney who was present, if you know?

A The reaction was that she upset by it.

Q Did she say anything to you?

A Well, yeah. I mean, I had more than one conversation with her about what had occurred and, you know, how we were -- how she was feeling about it, yeah, and talking about how to deal with this going forward.

Q What did she say?

A I'm not sure what you're asking me. I mean, I stated she was upset. I mean, I can't give you verbatim exactly what she said. I'm sorry. Are you asking me what she said occurred or how she felt about it?

Q How she felt about it?

A Yeah, I mean, she just said that she was upset.

Q Was there a complaint filed against Judge Johnson?

Page 102

A I don't know whether Mr. Barrett has filed a complaint or not. I know that there was a discussion with him about doing that.

Q In your office there was that discussion?

A Yes.

Q Why did your office not file a complaint?

A Well, initially I was going to file a complaint but then we had conversation with Mr. Barrett about whether or not that should come from him and the conversation kind of went that direction that he would do that. Then, ultimately, Mr. Mettler, the attorney that resigned, sent an e-mail to Mr. Barrett that -- I can't remember exactly how it was phrased -- but it was -- it was blunt as to thinking he needed to get that done and get it done right away and that I think kind of ended that as far as the complaint getting filed.

Q Do you know of any -- can you recall any specific reactions by judges, other than Judge Johnson, to attorneys from your office declining appointments?

A Any negative reactions?

Q Or positive.

A Well, not to me directly and not necessarily to our attorneys directly. It's just, you know, in the docket entries of -- I had mentioned earlier Judge Palmetto was the judge. She was the one that after a couple of docket entries of re-referring us and re-referring us, you know, specifically said she is expecting District Defender Rod Hackathorn to enter his appearance by such and such date, which I considered a negative reaction, but, no, nothing other than that.

Q If your attorneys spent the time they thought necessary to zealously prepare a client's case, say a case that was going to trial, what in your opinion would happen to that attorney's other clients?

A They get ignored.

Q Are there times where attorneys in your office have to triage cases doing less on one case so they can do enough on another?

A Happens all the time.

Q How frequently would you say?

A It happens every day.

Q Is there anything else you think we should know regarding the ability of your office to provide effective representation to your clients?

A Not that I can think of.

MR. SHAHABIAN: I have no further questions of this time.

QUESTIONS BY MR. RAMSEY:

Q Good afternoon.

A Good afternoon.

Page 104

Q Again, my name is Steven Alan Ramsey. I represent Governor Greitens and the State of Missouri. I also have a handful of questions for you. But at any time, please if at any time, you need a break, please let me know and we can take a break immediately.

A Okay.

Q All right. Going back to your background: You came straight from law school into the Missouri State Public Defender System; did I hear you correctly?

A That's correct.

Q And before that, did you go straight from undergrad into law school?

A I had a one-year gap between undergrad and law school.

Q And what did you do at that gap year?

A I worked very briefly at JCPenney.

Q Okay. And undergrad, what was your degree or degrees in?

A Sociology.

Q Also concerning some of the preparation, not necessarily for this deposition, but just your conversations concerning caseload and workload concerns. I understand this is a very general question because this has been an ongoing issue for sometime; who all have you spoken to within the past few years concerning a workload and caseload concern? I take it the private members of the bar was one group. You have spoken to judges at some point. Have you had any conversations with none for profit organizations or the press?

A No.

Q Sitting here today, do you have a sense of how many cases total your office has open right now?

A Has open right at this moment?

Q Yes, sir.

A I believe we have somewhere around 2,300 open cases.

Q Do you have a sense for how many criminal cases are filed total within the area that your district covers?

A Over what period? I'm not sure I understand your question.

Q Over the past year or so. So say there are 100 total cases; how many of those total cases are coming to the public defender system versus the system at large?

A I don't know.

Q A related question but slightly different is how you define a case or a matter in your system?

A A case is a -- goes by case number. It's not by charge. It's however many charges may be in that case. It's still a case no matter how many charges may be in that related to that particular case number.

Q Now if we could turn very briefly to Plaintiff's Exhibit 48, that's the appraisal form.

A Okay.

Q I'm looking at the third page Bates Stamped 15898.

A Okay.

Q Do you see that very last line below the graph or the grid?

A Yes.

Q Would you read that out loud for the record?

A "Attached is a breakdown of Dawn's open caseload. She admits it is a bit inflated as there are several recently disposed of cases that need to be closed."

Q How does your office go about deciding when a case is closed?

A A case is closed whenever our representation has ended, whether that be because the defendant has been sentenced or the case has been dismissed or they've had a trial and won or they've had a trial and lost and we've send it onto an appellate's office.

Q And do you have a sense for when those cases are closed, when they are reflected in the system; is that an immediate thing?

A It is not. The attorney, after they have finished their representation, needs to bring that file into our main area where our clerks are at and there is a cabinet for them. Then our clerks go through that every week and try to get those files closed.

Q This is a larger picture question: Has your office seen a dramatic increase in the amount of criminal cases filed in this region --

A Yes.

Q -- than in recent years?

A I'm sorry, yes, absolutely we have.

Q Do you have a sense why that has occurred?

A Our prosecutor's office, especially here in Greene County, they got some additional funding and were able to increase their numbers. From what I understand from our prosecuting attorney, Mr. Patterson, they were able to work through a backload of cases that they said still needed to be filed. Now that's according to him; I don't know. But I know it's around that time that he added people to his staff that our numbers shot up.

Q And if you don't know the answer to this, it's completely fine, but has the population of the Springfield area dramatically increased as well during this time period?

A Our whole general area of Greene, Christian, and Taney; the population has increased significantly down here more than I think any other part of the state.

Q Turning to the makeup of your current office. So at full staff there are 22 attorneys; is that correct?

A At full staff, yes.

Q At full staff. But currently there are 19 attorneys including yourself?

A That's correct.

Q And you had mentioned that there are eight support staff or eight full-time support staff?

A That's correct as well.

Q And I think you testified that at least two of those are investigators?

A Yes.

Q What are the other six? How does that breakdown go?

A Sure. We have three office support assistants and then we have three legal assistants.

Q And you also have the one part-time support staff position?

A Yes.

Q What is that position?

A It doesn't really have a title. She is actually a retired clerk from our office and she just comes in to help do some of those things like getting files closed in the system and that sort of thing.

Q Now you mentioned that the -- there are two documents, at least if I'm understanding you correctly, that are similar guiding principles for representation. One being the guidelines for representation and the second one being the Employee Handbook if I understand your testimony correctly?

A I think I refer to the Employee Handbook more as when the question was things that guide me and my administrative duties.

Q I see. Have you supplemented either of those documents with local rules or local policies that you, as a district defender, have discretion to, I guess, enforce or create?

A There is a small handful of local written office policies that we have, yes.

Q Are any of those policies related to workload or caseload concerns or controlling mechanisms?

A I don't believe so. I think they are all relating to more as just how we function as an office and that sort of thing.

Q Turning to your office's determination for indigency. I think I understood your testimony to suggest that in juvenile matters when your office was representing juveniles, that was merely a court-appointed function. So your office didn't have an independent indigency determination mechanism?

A There is a form. But pretty much if a juvenile was referred, we took the case. But there is a form for that.

Q Okay. And that form is that a form that you all still reviewed before the ultimate acceptance; or once the court appointed the MSPD, representation you all accepted it?

A We still went through the motions of having that application filled out, but for the most part it was meaningless.

Q So turning to non-juvenile matters. Who makes the determination for whether or not an individual is eligible for services?

A That depends on where the application is taken at. At lot of times with Christian and Taney counties, that determination is made by our attorneys. In Greene County, more often than not, it is made by support staff.

Q And does your office have any independent checks or verification? Or do you all simply refer to or rely upon the application itself?

A Unfortunately, we mostly have to rely on the application itself. I just don't have the support staff needed to try to verify the information that's in that application.

Q Sitting here today, do you have a sense for how often your office rejects applications for services?

A It happens, but I couldn't tell you percentage-wise how often it occurs.

Q So it happens often? Sparingly? Or even that?

A Well, I'd say it happens at least probably once a week or so. Anything that's a close call, especially with the support staff, I have them come to me to make the ultimate determination.

Q Are you aware of any situations or examples -- and you don't have to go into any details if you are -- of where you accepted representation, but subsequently to that, something occurred; for instance a large bond was posted in a separate case or a private attorney was hired in a second case or something to the effect that you all questioned the person's indigency status and proceeded to withdraw or I guess modify representation?

A Yes.

Q Does that happen frequently or it happens sparingly?

A That probably happens more sparingly, but it certainly does happen.

Q Has your -- I guess emphasis is maybe not the right word -- but your breakdown of administrative task versus your actual caseload that you carry -- I believe the numbers were around 75 to 25 percent -- has that always been the case since you have been the district defender?

A No.

Q Could you explain that evolution, if you will? Did you start off having more cases? Did you start off having less cases? And why have you gotten to this point?

A I started off having more cases. As this area has continued to grow and the caseloads have increased more and more and more, other offices around the state have lost positions and we have gained positions. There were far fewer people in my office when I started as district defender than there are now. So the administrative duties have increased a lot.

Q So would you say that it is a function of simply just having more cases and more work to do that your administrative tasks have grown? Or have you found that there is a benefit to you being more of a supervisor and a mentor to the attorneys in your office?

A I think it's a little of both.

Q Concerning your supervision of attorneys: How often would you say you're having mentor-like conversations with the various attorneys in your office?

A Every day. Every day there is somebody in my office and we are talking about some of their cases. So it happens a lot.

Q And the various motions, I believe you had testified that there is a motion bank or a draft bank somewhere within your system that your attorneys pick and choose from in their every day representation?
A Yes.
Q Is that something that's local to your office and that's something that you have created as a district defender? Or how did that bank, I guess, become effective or come into existence?
A There is actually both. We have one that's local and that kind of boilerplate motions that we have drafted individually within our office and saved for other people to use. Then there is one that I believe is on for the entire state can access.
Q Do you have a sense -- this is taking two steps back -- if you supervise your attorneys more so than any of the other district defenders that you know of in their various districts? Do you have a sense if your supervision is more or less than them or?
A I couldn't speak to what other district defenders are doing.
Q You testified earlier that -- I don't know if it was every jail or whether it was in Greene County or Christine County or Taney County sends you a census. I don't know if it was every day, but that process; is that correct? They send you a census from time to time?

A Greene County sends us one every morning. Christian County sends us one -- I'm not sure if it's every morning; it might be once a week. Taney County, I'm not exactly sure about.
Q Has that always been the case or did that come about because of conversations that you or your predecessor had in this role?
A That came about by me requesting to get those.
Q Why did you request that you receive those census reports or files?
A Well, with Greene County -- off the top my head I can't remember why I ended up requesting it for Christian County. It's been a while back. But Greene County it came about for a couple of reasons. One, back when I first requested it, they liked for us to come with our sheets ready for who we wanted to see and that let us know what pod they were in and what cell number so we could fill out the form. Also let us know if they were in segregation. It let us know also by the census of what they were being held on. So if, for instance, we wanted to file a bond reduction request, we could look there and see, well, is that going to do us doing any good. Maybe there is a hold on them for the Feds or maybe there is a municipal warrant. We can check that as well. And now, like I said, you know, it's also being used to see whether or not they are even here or whether Greene County has farmed them out to another jail due to overcrowding.

Q What other -- concessions is not the right word -- but what other results or tools have been created similar to receiving that census report, either every day or every week, to help manage caseload and workload concerns?
A I'm not sure I understand what you're asking me.
Q So would you say that receiving that census report, if it's every morning or every week, helps you know before you get to the jail whether or not someone is there and so on and so forth?
A Yes.
Q Could that also be considered a timesaving mechanism as well so you don't have to drive to courthouse or to the jail cell to find out if they are there or not?
A It is a timesaving measure, yes.
Q So my question is if that came about because you requested it and it was -- I don't know if it's a concession or it's an agreement that was made -- are there other similar cost-saving mechanisms due to your initiative or your conversation that you've had with judges or the prosecutors in the state, generally?

A It's not having to do juvenile cases in Greene County anymore would be one. Other than that, we haven't really been able to come to a meeting of the minds of anything else that the court or the prosecutor's office could do to help reduce caseload or save time.
Q During some of the conversations that you have had -- and now I'm jumping around and I apologize for that -- conversations you've had with the prosecutors and judges where I believe you testified that some of those meetings had become I guess complaints against you and the Missouri Public Defender System; were there some things that were brought up in some of those meetings, or any of those meetings, that were suggestions by any of those other parties in how you all could improve your workload or caseload concerns?
A Well, outside of that meeting that I referred to with Judge Johnson that was, you know, within the last few months; the other meetings that I was referring to took place years ago and I don't recall.
Q Turning to the performance review, and I actually don't believe I'm going to need to look at the actual exhibit, but how often do you perform performance reviews on the APD III's and IV's?
A Well, the APD III's would get reviewed a couple of years after they made APD III because then they would be eligible for potential APD IV promotion. APD IV, that's just something that just kind of fell through the cracks for a very long time and that's why I initiated here recently that we needed to go through all of our APD IV's and do file reviews and performance evaluations to see where they were at.

Page 117

Q I will apologize, I lied when I said I wasn't going to turn to the exhibit. Turning to Plaintiff's Exhibit 49 now.

A I lost it somewhere here in the shuffle. Got it.

Q So my understanding from your testimony earlier was that this particular public defender was having issues meeting the standardized expectation of meeting with clients every 30 days or having those face-to-face conversations every 30 days; is that accurate?

A That's what is written here, yes.

Q And that first full paragraph under client counseling, four lines from the bottom, could you read -- or I guess that second to last sentence starting with "we get."

A "We get almost never get a client complaint about lack of contact concerning Paul, which tells me he is keeping good contact with his clients and that he has a good relationship with them."

Q Is it possible to not meet the 30-day face-to-face requirement and to maintain good contact and good relationships with potential clients or I guess with actual clients?

A Well, once again, I didn't write this, my deputy district defender did. I think what he's getting across here is that when he is meeting with his clients, he is giving them a good amount of devoted time. You know, file focused or case focused and is doing his best to -- given the constraints that we had in Christian County, that he is doing about as good as he could do. But I would still say you certainly need recurring client contact to have a good attorney-client relationship and to comply with the ethical rules.

Q So to be clear, this 30-day expectation with face-to-face meeting is your testimony that you think that is a requirement to meet that ethical rule or guideline of sorts?

A Well, that's MSPD guideline. It's certainly not mentioned in the ethical rule itself. And I think my personal opinion is that's probably a pretty generous amount of time even at that 30 days and we are not meeting that.

Q Turning away from that particular line of questioning, these complaints that you receive as a district defender; is that a system that you set-up where clients -- either current clients or former clients -- are sending you complaints about their various representations? Or talk me through how that process works at least in your district?

A How those complaints get to me?

Q Yes, sir.

A Well, if it's an incarcerated client, I have been doing this long enough know that it's known in all of the counties that we cover that I supervise that office. So there really doesn't seem to need a processing place. They write me. They write me specifically. If somebody is out of custody and they call and they are complaining, you know, my staff is instructed to send those calls either to me or the deputy district defender.

Q And are those complaints or those letters maintained in a database that you have? Or is it maintained in the central office? Do you send it up to upper management or how does that work?

A It doesn't get up to upper management unless we've got a real performance problem with that attorney that I have not been able to correct. Other than that, these letters go into the client's file and that's where the letters stay.

Q Continuing to, I believe it was marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 50, I believe. It's the Missouri State Public Defender System Fiscal Year Report.

A Yes.

Q I'm going to be looking at that last page when you get to it.

A Okay.

Q Do I understand your testimony earlier to suggest that you did not have a hand in creating this document?

A That's correct.

Q And you also do not have a, I guess, an understanding of the underlying data inputs that went into creating any of these various metrics?

A That's fair to say.

Q Okay. Turning to expert testimony. You had mentioned that cost may be a factor in whether or not a particular expert is utilized or allowed to be utilized by an assistant public defender; is that correct?

A Whether they would be allowed to utilize that specific expert or maybe there might be one that is more cost effective, yes.

Q Have you in your practice ever been denied an expert solely because there was not enough funds to pay for that expert?

Page 121

A No.
Q Have you ever denied someone that you supervise in the public defender system as a district defender an expert testimony because there were solely just not funds available?
A No.
Q For depositions, would your answers be the same? Have you ever been denied funds for a deposition that you wanted to take?
A No.
Q Have you ever denied a deposition request from an attorney that you supervise because there were not enough funds available?
A No.
Q Speaking about the budget. You had testified earlier, if I understood you correctly, that when certain, I guess line items for lack of a better phrase, or certain categories are depleted, you would call the comptroller and hey, say this fund is either close to running dry or it's dry. We need more funds for this. What are some examples of like the categories where areas would run out?
A The only area that that has ever actually really happened that I can think of is with our travel expenses.
Q And how are the travel expenses policed for lack of a better word?

A I wouldn't say that they are policed. The attorneys do fill out an expense report at the end of each month as to the mileage they are claiming. I do go through that and I have them put on there why they went to a location. Not just that they went to a location, what case they went there for and why they went there and I verify that. I go through and look at those expense reports. But, you know, ahead of time, nothing but after the fact, that's what I do.
Q You mentioned that you don't go to -- or you or your office don't go to trial as much as you possibly should; is that a correct --
A As much as I think we probably should be, yes, correct.
Q And I remember you saying you don't have a sense of how many trials you tried within your office within the past year. Can you remember one case that has been tried within the past year?
A Yes.
Q Can you recollect five cases that have been tried within the past year?
A Yes.
Q How about ten?
A Now you're getting close I'd say.

Page 123

Q And are those trials -- are we only talking about jury trials or are we talking about jury and bench trials?
A I'm just talking about jury trials.
Q At this point in time, is your office tracking time in five minute-increments?
A No.
Q Is your office tracking time by tasks or by cases?
A No.
Q Is the extent of your timekeeping process right now the hours worked per day or per pay period?
A Yes.
Q Okay. Do you have a sense of when the last period of time was -- not the system at large, but your particular district -- was tracking time in that, I guess, more billable hours type of situation?
A I don't recall the exact date. It seems like it's been around a year or so ago.
Q Turning to the conversation concerning the example of the late discovery request and how you have a process set up in your office to ensure that doesn't happen in terms of the attorneys not having to file that themselves, there being a process that's helps them usher that process along. Is that something that you help create to be a timesaving mechanism or is that something that came from some other location?

A No, it's something we created for our office to try to save a little bit of our attorney's time.
Q Have you found that helps?
A I think it does. I don't know. I haven't polled the attorneys to find out.
Q Are there other examples where you have put in place processes like that to save time within your district?
A Similar sort of things in trying to utilize support staff as much as we possibly can. But once again I don't have near the amount of support staff I would need to take all of the administrative and clerical task off of the attorneys hands, but we try as best we can.
Q Have you as a district defender created or put on any type of internal trainings for your assistant public defenders to help with their caseload or workload concerns?
A Not internal trainings, no.
Q And sitting here today, there were a number of statements made concerning, if I understood you correctly, concerning your office being short-staffed or needing more resources to do -- to provide effective caseload representation or your office needing more resources. My question is, is that assessment based essentially solely on the RubinBrown report or numbers that -- I will stop there. Is that based solely on the RubinBrown report?

A No.

Q What else is that based upon?

A It's based upon my own observation of what attorneys are able to do and not able to do. My own experience before I was even a district defender as an assistant public defender with a caseload like they have knowing that I was wasn't able to get everything done. No, it's not strictly based off of the RubinBrown numbers.

Q Have you compared your caseload and workload concerns to say comparable public defender districts in other states?

A I leave that to other people.

Q Okay. If I understood your testimony correctly, you testified -- I don't know to say that it is the appropriate word, but the Section 600.063 creates additional barriers to public defenders that are not in place for other attorneys; is that pretty accurate?

A That's correct.

Q So with that, that thought process or that feeling or however you want to describe that; instead of filing that Chapter 600 motion, you decided to proceed via letters of communication with the applicable judges in your district?

Page 126

A Yes.

Q And the waitlist that was created; was that created based upon the conversations you had after the Hinkebein decision? After that meeting where all the district defenders and upper management got together, or is that something you decided upon, I guess, in isolation or by yourself?

A If you're asking me if we were instructed to create a waitlist at that management meeting, no we weren't. A lot of various responses were discussed at that management meeting. But basically because this is not a MSPD policy thing, it's an individual attorney thing, the responses were going to be varied around the state and so that's how we chose to proceed here.

Q Have you ever been judicially determined to have provided ineffective assistance of counsel?

A I don't believe so.

Q Has an attorney that you supervise ever been judicially determined to have provided ineffective assistance of counsel?

A I'm fairly certain, yes, but I'm not 100 percent on that.

MR. RAMSEY: I have no further questions.

MS. SHIPMA: I have a few questions for you, Rod.

Page 127

QUESTIONS BY MS. SHIPMA:

Q Did I understand you earlier to say that there are many times that your attorneys go to preliminary hearings without having received discovery?

A Yes, that happens.

Q And why does that happen?

A Well, for one the rules don't provide that the State has to provide that prior to the preliminary hearing. In fact, we filed that request for discovery and it's timely only after the case has reached circuit court. Now, with our relationship with certain prosecutor's offices, they do sometimes provide that to us upon our e-mailed request. They will get it to us ahead of time, but not always.

Q Regarding the complaint letters that you get from clients regarding your attorneys, how frequently do you receive complaints letters?

A Every week.

Q Multiple times a week?

A Usually.

Q Multiple letters a week?

A Yes.

Q How long might a completed case remain open in the case management system before it's closed in your office?

Page 128

A Well, that -- it used to be way longer than I would have wanted. I mean, they would be in there sometimes for weeks before they would get closed in the system. With the additional part-time person that we have been able to add on -- I think Sharon came back on part-time right around maybe the start of the fiscal year around July -- we were able to catch up on that. And another part that was holding us back on getting those cases closed in the system is that's one of those things that the attorneys would back burner getting those files up there to be closed because they were done with it. They needed to move on to other stuff and they figured that's just an administrative task that could wait. Especially with doing these waitlists though, I made it clear to the attorneys that that's something that they needed to give a priority to. I wanted our numbers to be much more accurate and they have done a much better job, especially over the last three or four months, of getting those cases up there to close.

Q How long do you think now, since the beginning of the fiscal year and since the waitlist, how long do they remain open now?

A Within a week I'd say they are being closed in the system.

Q And prior to your getting the part-time person, you said sometimes it might be weeks. Would it be more than a month?

A I'd say it probably happened sometimes, yes.

Q Do you know if that happened with any type of frequency on a regular basis?

A Sometimes, yes. Also depending on certain attorneys too. Some back-burnered that task more than others.

Q Would it be more than two months?

A I'm not sure. I would hope not, but it's possible.

Q I guess anything is possible. Do you believe that there are clients that your attorneys represent who aren't indigent pursuant to our regulations?

A I'm sorry, ask that again.

Q Do you believe that there are clients that your attorneys are representing that don't meet the indigent standards set forth in the regulations?

A I suspect that.

Q Do you think that happens frequently?

A No.

Q Do you think that weeding those out would cause a significant decrease in your caseload?

A Certainly not significant, no.

Q Does Greene County house federal prisoners?

Page 130

A They do.

Q Is that the reason for their jail overcrowding; do you know?

A I would say it certainly contributes to it.

Q Explain why they would do that?

A Well, they get reimbursed for federal prisoners and the rate they get reimbursed for federal prisoners outweighs the cost of housing the state prisoners elsewhere, so they still end up making money.

Q I want to show you -- refer you back to Exhibit 53. That was the e-mail that you sent to the judges on October 10. Do you have that in front of you?

A Yes, it's right here.

Q Was it solely your concerns regarding the process in Section 600.063 that caused you to write this letter rather than filing an .063 motion?

A Well, it was my concerns about our attorneys saying that they all agreed that they were violating the ethical rule is the only reason why I wrote that letter.

Q So it wasn't just because you didn't like .063 that you wrote this letter instead of filing an .063?

A That's correct.

MS. SHIPMA: That's all.

MR. SHAHABIAN: Just a few more follow-up questions.

Page 131

QUESTIONS BY MR. SHAHABIAN:

Q You mentioned during Mr. Ramsey's examination that the Greene County prosecutor's office added more staff, more attorneys. Do you know roughly how many attorneys were added?

A I don't.

Q But caseloads went up after more staff were added to the local prosecutors office?

A Yeah, they went up pretty dramatically.

Q In your opinion, how many more attorneys would you need to get caseloads to manageable standards in light of existing caseloads?

A I would probably need about double the number of attorneys I have right now.

Q You mentioned that you don't have enough support staff to prevent your attorneys from spending significant time on administrative task. Roughly how much time would you say assistant public defenders in your office spend on administrative caseload task versus attorney task?

A I couldn't give you any kind of guess as to percentage. I just know they do have to do a lot of that.

Q Do you have a rough estimate of how many more support staff you would need to free up attorney time spent on administrative caseload task?

Page 132

A Support staff, I would need more than double easily.

Q What kind of support staff would you need?

A I would need far more office support assistants to do the calendaring and all the e-filing and all that sort of thing; all those clerical tasks. In a perfect world where I also had the additional attorneys and they were focusing on all of their cases as they should be, I would need more investigators too.

Q And you have two investigators currently?

A That's correct.

Q Do you have a sense of how many more investigators you would need to provide adequate investigative assistance?

A In this hypothetical where we had more attorneys and they were focusing on all of their cases; more than double number of investigators.

Q Would triple be enough?

A I don't know. In this hypothetical fantasy world, I don't know how to live yet. So, yeah, I would say probably triple.

Q You mentioned in response to questioning from Ms. Shipma that you receive complaints from clients every week, multiple complaints a week. What are the most typical kinds of complaints you receive?

Page 133

A The No. 1 complaint across the board is lack of communication. That predominates. I'd say, if I'm just ball parking, I'd say 90 percent of the complaint letters I get is just that; I haven't heard from my attorney.

Q Do the complaints offer more specific reasons why they want to talk to their attorneys other than I haven't heard from them?

A Yes. They will mention things like, you know, has there been any talk of an offer from the State. When is bond reduction request going to get filed. All kinds of questions, I mean, you know, that they have about their case that they want answered and only their attorney can really answer that for them.

Q You mentioned bond reduction request. Do you think attorneys in your office have adequate time to file bond reduction motions?

A File, yes. Properly prepare for, no.

Q Why not properly prepare for?

A Because I have seen the bond reduction request. I know -- they haven't spent enough time, not just with their client, but also maybe interviewing the client's family, finding out more about the background of their client, maybe getting some records, school records, military records; that sort of thing. That sort of thing is not done. Generally these bond reduction arguments are very quick off-the-cuff arguments and they are not done as elaborately as they should be to paint a full picture for the judge as to whether or not this person is a flight risk -- excuse me -- or danger to the community.

Q Mr. Ramsey asked you if you had any experience or if you knew of any cases from your office where someone was found to have provided ineffective assistance of counsel. In your experience -- and not just limited to attorneys in your office -- do excessive caseloads contribute to cases where attorneys are unable to be provide effective assistance and are adjudicated to have not provided effective assistance?

A Yes.

MR. SHAHABIAN: I have no further questions.

MR. RAMSEY: Just two.

QUESTIONS BY MR. RAMSEY:

Q Have you ever gotten to a point in a filing or in preparing for a particular trial where you have felt 100 percent ready and prepared to do whatever it is that you were about to do?

A Hundred percent?

Q Hundred percent.

A No.

MR. RAMSEY: No further questions.

MR. SHAHABIAN: Thank you, Mr. Hackathorn.

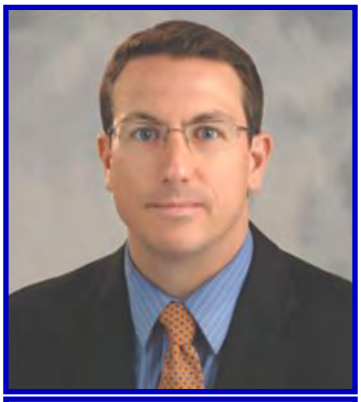
A Message from the Director….



Michael Barrett
State Public Defender

The foremost principles embodied in the U.S. Cons. tution are individual liberty and equal rights under the law. These essential guarantees, embedded in the Bill of Rights, is what binds us as Americans. Throughout our lives, we may come to know varied degrees of advancement, education, and wealth, but it is equality under the law and freedom that makes us uniquely American.

As lawyers for the poor, it is up to us to make certain that access to justice for all Missourians remains paramount. The Sixth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, made applicable to the states through the 14th Amendment, makes it the State of Missouri's obligation to provide counsel to poor persons before the government deprives him or her of their liberty. The State seeks to meet this obligation through the establishment and operation of the Missouri State Public Defender System (MSPD).

Regrettably, the systematic underfunding of MSPD by the state has led to an artif cial increase in the state's prison system, making Missouri 8th highest in the rate at which it incarcerates its citizens. Missouri leads the country in the increase in its incarceration of women. Approximately 50% of those in prison are incarcerated for a non-violent offense. This is not demonstrative of a state that values liberty, human dignity, and small government.

It is not always about guilt or innocence. Oftentimes, the public defender works to come up with an alternative plan to incarceration when someone can be managed more effectively in the community, saving taxpayers millions and helping the client stay connected to both family and their employer in order to re-establish him or herself as a contributing member of society. These efforts are often aimed at addressing the very issue that is precipitating the alleged misconduct, such as alcoholism, drug addiction, or a mental health issue.

As Director of the Missouri State Public Defender System, it is my honor to not only advocate on behalf of the tens of thousands of Missourians represented by MSPD each year, but also on behalf of the hundreds of attorneys and support staff who work every day to protect liberty and ensure equality under the law.

Missouri Public Defenders:
Who We Are & What We Do…

What is the Missouri Public Defender System?

The Missouri State Public Defender System [MSPD] is a statewide system that provides legal representa. on to poor persons who are accused or convicted of state crimes in Missouri's trial, appellate, and Supreme courts. Carrying out these functions fulf lls the state's obligation to provide the right to counsel under the state and U.S. Constitutions to those who cannot afford it.

MSPD is an independent department of state government, located within, but not supervised by, the judicial branch. Instead, it is governed by a seven-member Public Defender Commission, each of whom is appointed by the governor. Commissioners serve six year terms and no more than four may be of the same political party. The Director of the Missouri State Public Defender System, Michael Barrett and Deputy Director, Joel Elmer, are appointed by the Public Defender Commission.

Who qualifies for a public defender?

The standard to qualify for public defender representation is a creature of both statute and rule that includes a number of objective and discretionary factors to determine whether someone can afford an attorney. The rule promulgated by the Public Defender Commission would deem someone eligible if their income was less than 100% of the Federal Poverty Guidelines. Other factors are also considered such as debt, assets, ability to post bond, public assistance, and dependents. If MSPD determines that an applicant is not indigent, he or she has the right to appeal to the court for an independent review of their eligibility.

Who works for MSPD?

MSPD employs 597 employees, 384 of whom are attorneys. The department is divided into a Trial Division, an Appellate/ Post-Conviction Division, and a Capital Division, each of which is described in greater detail on pages 15, 54, and 59, respectively.

Other staff includes investigators, capital mitigation specialists, paralegals, legal assistants and clerks. An operations staff provides centralized information technology support, f scal, and human resources services to the 44 district offices located around the state, as well as managing MSPD's contracting of conf ict cases to private counsel, which is described in more detail on page 63.

Mission Statement

The mission of the Missouri State Public Defender System is to provide high quality, zealous advocacy for indigent people who are accused of crime in the State of Missouri.

The lawyers, administrative staff, and support staff of the Public Defender System will ensure that this advocacy is not compromised.

To provide this uncompromised advocacy, the Missouri State Defender System will supply each client with a high-quality, competent, ardent defense team at every stage of the process in which public defenders are necessary.

H. Riley Bock
Chair

H. Riley Bock, Chair—A f . h-generation attorney, Riley Bock is a life-long resident of New Madrid, MO, a graduate of the University of Missouri, and a former Captain in the Missouri National Guard. He served as the New Madrid County elected Prosecuting Attorney for four terms while also maintaining a small civil practice representing a number of county and regional public entities. After retirement, Mr. Bock served as the New Madrid County Public Administrator for f ve years and taught American History, English Composition, and Literature at the New Madrid County Central High School. He has also served on a number of boards and commissions, including The State Historical Society of Missouri, the Trail of Tears National Advisory Board, the Board of Directors for Camp Marymount, The Optimist Club, and the New Madrid Historical Museum. He is currently the president of the Three Rivers College Foundation Trust and serves as both volunteer and chair of the Higgerson School Historical Site, a one-room school that once served the Higgerson Landing community along the Mississippi River. Mr. Bock was appointed to the Public Defender Commission in January, 2014, and is in his f rst term as Chair.

Charles R. Jackson—One of Missouri's f rst African-American highway patrolmen, Charles Jackson spent 30 years in law enforcement. During that time, he rose to serve as the Captain and Commanding Officer of Troop F, the Patrol's Director of Public Information, and Director of the State Traffic Division before topping off his career with a gubernatorial appointment to serve as Missouri's Director of the Department of Public Safety. In that role, he oversaw 15,000 employees and administered a $600 million budget spanning Missouri's Highway Patrol, Water Patrol, Capitol Police, State Fire Marshall, Alcohol and Tobacco Control Division, Veteran's Commission, Gaming Commission, the State Emergency Management Agency, and the Missouri National Guard. He also developed Missouri's statewide "Amber Alert" system and was granted national security secret clearance from the Department of Homeland Security. A graduate of the FBI National Academy and the U.S. Army War College as well as Lincoln University, Mr. Jackson is a past President of the Association of Retired Missouri State Employees and served on Advisory Boards to both Fulton State Hospital and the University of MO School of Social Work. He currently resides in Jefferson City, MO and is the founder and current pastor of The Guiding Light Missionary Baptist Church of Christ in Fulton, MO. Mr. Jackson was appointed to the Public Defender Commission in July, 2014, and is in his f rst term as Vice Chair.

Craig Chval
Secretary

Craig Chval—A graduate of the University of Notre Dame and Illinois Institute of Technology/Chicago-Kent College of Law, Craig Chval is Associate General Counsel for Veterans United Home Loans in Columbia, MO. He began his practice of law as a civil trial associate in Chicago, before joining the prosecuting attorney's office in Illinois' second-largest county of DuPage, where he became chief of the gang crimes prosecution unit. He went on to serve as Special Counsel and Criminal Justice Policy Advisor to the Illinois Attorney General, and staffed the Governor's Commission on Street Gangs, ultimately becoming the f rst executive director of the Illinois Gang Prevention Center, which developed and implemented pilot gang-prevention programs across Illinois. In 2002, he accepted a position with the National Association of Attorneys General in Washington, D.C., where he reviewed and developed legislative proposals for Congress and assisted in the development of cybercrime training for prosecuting attorneys. When his wife accepted a faculty position at the University of Missouri, he joined the Office of the Missouri Attorney General. There he led a unit specializing in the investigation and prosecution of computer-related crimes. A founding member of the National Steering Committee for the FBI's Regional Computer Forensic Laboratory program, he became a well-known author and presenter on topics pertaining to cybercrime, electronic discovery, and data management and security. Upon leaving the Attorney General's Office, he co-founded the Chval Law Group in Columbia, MO specializing in legal issues pertaining to computer security. In 2011, he made the move to Veterans United. Mr. Chval was appointed to the Public Defender Commission in July, 2014, and is in his f rst term as Secretary.

Missouri Public Defenders:
Salary Information

Assistant Public Defender Starting Salaries
Assistant Public Defender I	$39,708
Assistant Public Defender II	$46,992
Assistant Public Defender III	$52,116
Assistant Public Defender IV	$69,528

Providing effec. ve assistance of counsel in each case demands a well-trained, highly experienced corps of dedicated attorneys and support staff. However, excessive caseloads and low salaries lead to a high turnover rate among attorney staff, which makes fulf lling this important mission difficult, if not impossible. After MSPD began hitting turnover rates of 20-22% in the mid-2000's, repositioning salary adjustments were enacted to bring salaries to the levels shown above. The fact that just these small changes were enough to make MSPD's attorney turnover drop several signif cant percentage points -- though still among the highest turnover classif cations in state government – is proof that most public defenders do want to remain in public service if at all possible. However, staggering student debt loans ($60,000—$200,000) make it extremely difficult for even those who are passionate about public interest work to continue with MSPD if they want to also make loan payments and provide for their families.

The recession that hit in 2008 was actually much more effective in reducing attorney turnover. Private law f rms stopped hiring and senior attorneys on the verge of setting up their own private practice put plans on hold, given the state of the economy. This combination gave MSPD a temporary reprieve from the revolving door, dropping turnover as low as 7.5%; but the reprieve was only temporary. The underlying factors that have perennially caused high attorney turnover continue. Missouri's public defenders still struggle with staggering student loan debt and much lower salaries than what other government lawyers receive. Caseloads are still overwhelming and lawyers still enjoy no immunity from either civil liability or disciplinary action for their failures to handle that caseload effectively, no matter how impossible that task might be.

The District Defenders who head each of MSPD's District offices around the state are equally far behind their counterparts, both within the Missouri criminal justice system and in the f eld of public defense nationally. Missouri's full time elected prosecuting attorneys are required by state statute to be paid the same as an Associate Circuit Judge, $136,402. By comparison their Public Defender counterparts are paid an average of a mere $79,601. This level of pay inequity between the defense and prosecution sides of the criminal justice system is neither equitable nor sustainable.

Public Defender Appropriations

General Revenue: Missouri State Public Defender (MSPD) funding is almost en. rely from state general revenue. It comes in three appropriations:

Personal Service: Used to pay the salaries of all MSPD employees.

Expense & Equipment: Used to pay the overhead costs of operations, such as office supplies and equipment, employee travel expenses, and rent and utilities for the statewide offices.

Litigation & Contracting Expenses: Used to pay the cost of contracting cases out to private counsel and litigation expenses on both MSPD cases and those cases contracted out to private counsel. Litigation expenses include the cost of experts, depositions, transcripts, exhibits, independent testing of evidence, etc.

Legal Defense and Defender Fund: This appropriation is not money given to MSPD but the authorization to spend money collected by MSPD up to the ceiling of the appropriation. The collections associated with this fund are the result of Section 600.090 RSMo, which requires public defenders to collect fees from clients receiving public defender service. Fees are deposited into the Legal Defense and Defender Fund and used to fund all public defender training as well as pay for such miscellaneous expenditures as computer lines, WestLaw, bar dues for the system's 376 attorneys, etc. In FY17 MSPD collected $1.417 million through client payments.

The personal service component of the LDDF appropriation authorizes MSPD to pay the salaries of two employees, the system's Director of Training and the Training Assistant, out of the moneys collected rather than through the general revenue personal service appropriation.

Debt Offset Escrow Fund: This is not an appropriation of actual money, but an authorization for MSPD to collect funds through the state's debt offset program. Under this program, taxpayers due a refund of state income tax who owe a debt to the state may have their refund intercepted and used to pay down the debt instead. MSPD participates in this program to collect payments on the fees described above. The money collected through this program is not in addition to the LDDF collections, but a subset thereof.

Grants: Another 'permission' appropriation, rather than actual money appropriation, this authorizes MSPD to collect up to $125,000 in grants from the federal government or other sources. The last time MSPD collected a federal grant was in the mid-1990's to help start-up an Alternative Sentencing Program of social workers to develop client-specif c sentencing plans as a way to reduce recidivism. That program proved successful and was picked up and funded by the state after the federal grant expired. Unfortunately, the growing caseload crisis and attorney shortage this past decade required MSPD to dismantle the program in order to turn the social worker FTE into more attorney positions.

Actual Funding: In all, in FY17, MSPD received a total of $42.914 million ($39,414,146 released) from the combination of general revenue ($41,497,581, of which $3,500,000 was withheld and not released by Governor Nixon) and actual collections under the LDDF program ($1,416,566).

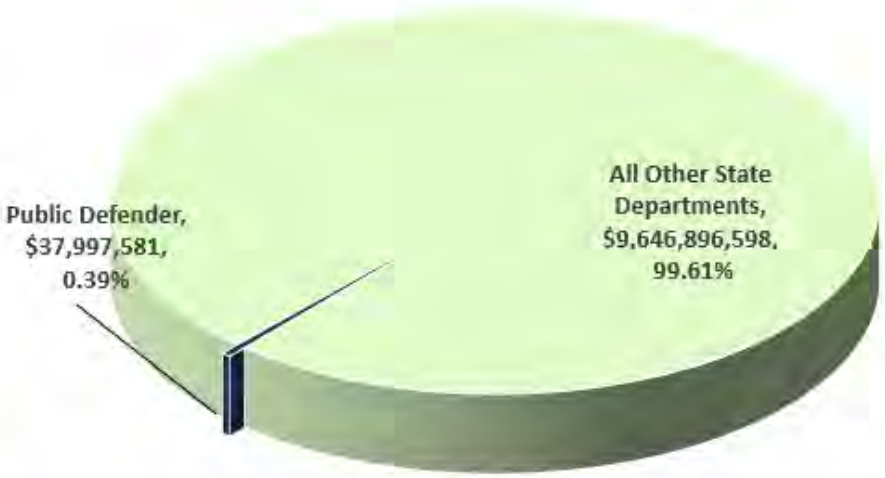
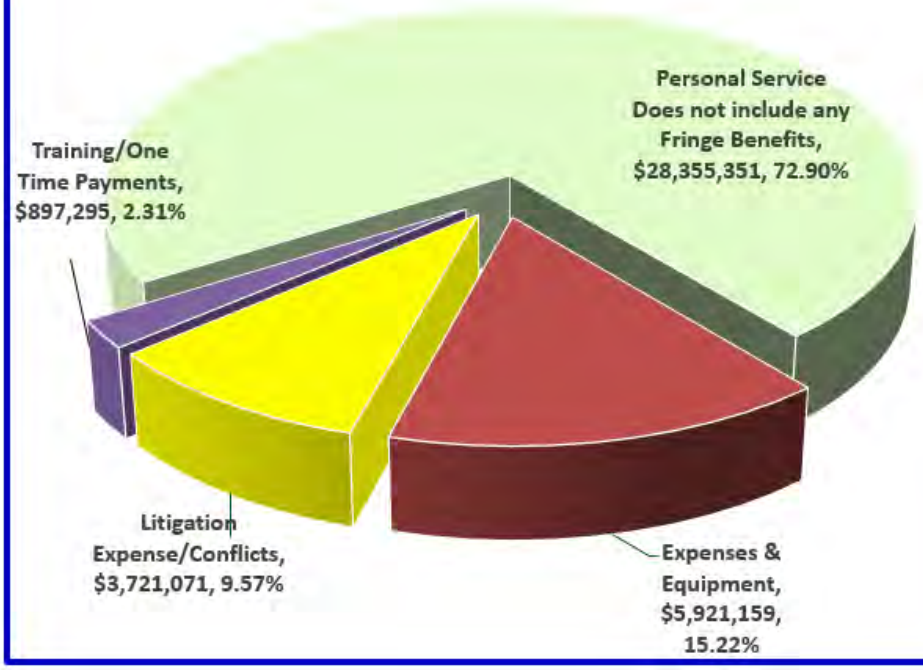
General Revenue Appropriations



Note: Public Defender General Revenue Appropriation is less than 1/2 of 1% of the State's General Revenue Appropriations.

Fiscal Year 2017
Public Defender Expenditures



Collections from clients for the indigent defense services provided to them are generally collected through two revenue streams. Approximately 40% of collections comes through state income tax refund intercepts by the Department of Revenue. The remainder is generally collected by courts who collect payments of the Public Defender fees along with court costs at the close of a case.

Missouri Public Defenders:
Trial Division

These are the trial lawyers, the ones Missouri's indigent defendants first turn to upon being arrested and charged with a crime. The lawyers usually enter on their cases at or soon after a defendant's first appearance in associate circuit court following an arrest and will continue representing the defendant through the entire associate and circuit court process – up to and including any plea or trial and, if convicted, the sentencing hearing. The division consists of 33 district trial offices providing representation in 94.5% of the cases that make up the system's caseload.

MSPD's Trial Division attorneys handle every type of state criminal case in which the law includes a possible jail sentence among the penalty options for the court to consider -- from traffic offenses, conservation, and 'Minor in Possession of Alcohol' offenses up to and including non-capital murder cases. (Capital Murder cases are handled by the MSPD Capital Division.) The Trial Division also provides representation in petitions for release from the Department of Mental Health which is discussed further below.

A MSPD Trial Division Attorney's practice will generally include:

- bond hearings for those defendants who are confined pre-trial and seeking release, which can include verifying a place to stay, finding a sponsor the court is likely to trust, verifying an employer will take them back to work, etc.;
- preliminary hearings;
- tracking down and reviewing all of the state's discovery – police reports, lab reports, witness statements, hospital records, etc.;
- interviewing or deposing the key state's witnesses;
- locating and interviewing potential defense witnesses;
- tracking down records and evidence that may help establish the defendant's innocence;
- visiting crime scenes or re-enacting a described crime to see if the real thing matches up with what witnesses described;
- reviewing the results and original notes and data from forensic tests conducted by the state, determining whether an independent analysis by an expert who doesn't work for the state is warranted, and if so, finding that expert and arranging for the testing of the evidence;
- making initial assessments of the defendant's ability to understand the legal proceedings and, when the defendant exhibits developmental or mental disabilities, arranging for an expert to evaluate the defendant to make that determination;
- researching the law applicable to the defendant's case and litigating motions where it appears the defendant has not been properly charged, the law has not been followed, or the state is seeking to put on evidence of questionable admissibility or reliability;
- negotiating plea agreements with the prosecutor, as well as locating and litigating for sentencing options that could effectively address the problems that resulted in the defendant getting into trouble in the first place and thus reduce the likelihood of recidivism; or

- if the case is one that goes to a trial, conducting that trial, before either a judge or jury, as well as being present and advising the client concerning all the court appearances a defendant will be required to make as his case progresses through the criminal justice system;
- and of course meeting with and advising the client, and perhaps the client's family members if the client requests it, throughout each of the above processes.

As the above list indicates, an attorney's appearance in court on behalf of a defendant is a very small portion of the work they must do on a case. When they have too many cases, some of these steps are skipped or fall by the way side. The state's evidence is taken at face value, assumed by all to be accurate and mistakes fall through the cracks, uncaught and uncorrected. The result is that individual defendants and justice as a whole suffers.

Types of Cases Handled by the Trial Division

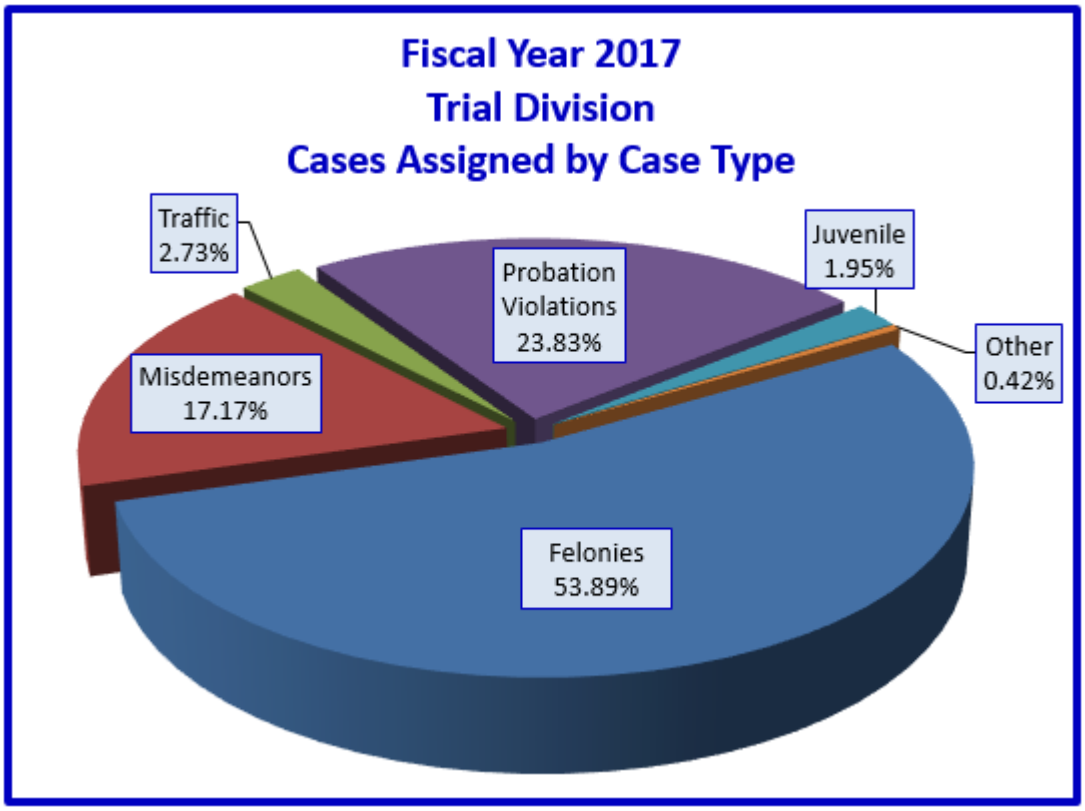
FELONY OFFENSES: As the pie chart on the following page shows, 52.24% of the Trial Division caseload in FY15 was made up of felony offenses. These are charges which carry penitentiary time, ranging from one to four years of imprisonment for the lowest level felonies up to life in prison without the possibility of probation or parole for the most serious offenses.

MISDEMEANOR OFFENSES: Misdemeanor offenses are those which carry jail time as a possible sentence, but any jail time imposed would be served in the county jail rather than the state's penitentiary. The maximum sentence on the highest level misdemeanor offenses is one year incarceration.

JUVENILE CASES: Missouri's juvenile courts have jurisdiction over anyone under the age of 17 who is accused of committing an offense that would be a crime if that person were an adult. They also have jurisdiction over various 'status offenses' – things that apply only to juveniles and not to adults. Examples of these would be Truancy and Incorrigibility. Some Missouri courts appoint private attorneys for juveniles who cannot hire their own attorneys, but a number of counties, particularly those in the urban areas with more signif cant juvenile caseloads, continue to rely on the public defender to provide defense representation to these children.

PROBATION VIOLATION CASES: These are cases in which the defendant has already been through the court system on an underlying charge and placed on probation. The new case arises from the allegation that the defendant has in some way violated the conditions of his/her probation. Violations can arise from new criminal behavior, whether or not any criminal charges were f led; so an arrest alone can be grounds for a probation violation. A defendant may also face a violation proceeding for what are known as technical violations, which are violations of conditions put in place at the time of the probation. These can include such things as failing a drug test, failure to report to the probation officer as instructed, failure to complete an ordered treatment or education program, etc.

PETITIONS FOR RELEASE: Another type of civil commitment in which the public defender is involved are those following a f nding of Not Guilty by Reason of Insanity [NGRI]. A defendant found to be NGRI is automatically committed to the Department of Mental Health for treatment. Petitions for Release are the requests by those so committed to now be released from the Department of Mental Health. Some who have already been released from the mental institution on a conditional release are asking to be unconditionally released, free of the ongoing supervision and conditions of the Department of Mental Health. The issue in both such petitions is whether the defendant's mental illness is sufficiently under control that he or she no longer poses a threat to themselves or to others. These petitions are litigated before a judge, rather than a jury.



FAQ: Why does MSPD count probation violations as separate cases when the courts and prosecutors do not?

It is the practice of Missouri's prosecutors and courts to hold open the original case out of which probation arose, for the duration of the probationary period. As a result, they then treat probation violations as simply another proceeding within the original case.

By contrast, it is the practice of MSPD and the defense bar as a whole to close out a case once the defendant is placed on probation. Neither group of defense attorneys, private or public, is willing or able to commit to continuing to represent, counsel, or maintain contact with that client over the course of his / her probation (which on a felony case can last up to f ve years) as would be ethically required of them as defense counsel if they maintained these as open cases for the duration of the probationary period.

If a probation violation is later f led, private defense attorneys generally expect a separate retainer in order to represent the defendant on that probation violation. This is why MSPD winds up with many probation violation cases in which the defendant had private counsel on the underlying charge. The defendant cannot come up with the additional money to pay the private attorney to handle the new probation violation matter. By the same token, MSPD is seldom in a position to re-assign to the defendant the same attorney who handled the underlying charge in his case. In either situation, therefore, a new attorney-client relationship must be established just as in any other new case.

Any evidence of a probation violation is gathered and reported to the court and prosecutor by the probation officer. The review of that evidence, investigation of its accuracy, the review of the law that applies to the circumstances of this revocation proceeding and the investigation into and presentation to the judge of other sentencing alternatives in lieu of revocation is the obligation of defense counsel. If done correctly, this is very comparable to the work that is required in any other criminal case and therefore MSPD counts it as a case in its own right.

COUNTY VS CIRCUIT SYSTEMS

Missouri's 33 trial offices provide defense representation to indigent defendants in all of Missouri's 114 counties plus the City of St. Louis. Some of the urban offices serve only one county, but most of the offices serving rural counties are responsible for several counties. The office with the largest geographic spread is District 43, located in Chillicothe, which serves eleven counties. Most offices, however, cover between three and f ve counties.

Currently, the geographic areas covered by defender offices do not coincide with Missouri's judicial circuits, even though the district numbers assigned to each office will often be the same as that of one of the judicial circuits the office serves. For example, one public defender office may serve only two of the three counties in a particular judicial circuit, while also providing service in two counties from an adjoining judicial circuit.

This arrangement will be changing as the result of legislation enacted in the Spring of 2013. HB215 requires that the Missouri Public Defender Commission, which is responsible for determining where public defender offices are established and their boundaries of service, begin the move toward making public defender districts congruent with judicial circuits. A plan for implementing that change was submitted to the Legislature on December 2015 and f nal implementation of the revised districts is to be completed by December 31, 2021. Under the legislation, one district office may serve more than one judicial circuit, but circuits may not be split between more than one district office.

MSPD tracks both assigned and disposed of cases for each f scal year. Those two numbers are generally not tracking the same cases. Many cases take more than a year from assignment to disposition and many more do not fall neatly, start to f nish, within a single f scal year. The above chart ref ects the reality that no lawyer begins the f scal year with an empty f le drawer. At the start of FY2017, Missouri's Trial Division public defenders had over 31,988 pending cases already on their desks, to which another 79,714 new cases were assigned over the course of the f scal year for a total of 111,702 cases to be handled by 320 Trial Division Attorneys. This represents an average of 350 cases per attorney per year.

In Fiscal Year 2017, each attorney would receive 183 new felony cases to be added to the 73 felonies already on their desk. This is a total of 256 felonies per Trial Division attorney per f scal year.

Appellate/Post Conviction Relief Division

MSPD's Appellate/PCR Division consists of six offices, with two offices located in St. Louis, two in Columbia, and two in Kansas City. In St. Louis and Kansas City, both offices do both appeals and PCR's and handle conf ict cases for one another. Having a second office down the hall avoids having to transfer conf ict cases to an a. orney on the other side of the state. In Columbia, one office handles exclusively appeals and the other office handles exclusively post-conviction cases.

Appeals: Direct appeals are the f rst step in seeking to set aside or overturn a conviction after a trial. The process involves asking the Court of Appeals and /or the Missouri Supreme Court, to review and grant relief because of mistakes made by the trial court. The attorneys review the trial transcript, the trial court f le, all the legal documents, and evidence introduced in the case and then present to the appellate courts, through written briefs and oral argument, the errors that were made in the lower court and the law supporting relief. MSPD's appellate attorneys handle cases in the Eastern, Western, and Southern Districts and in both the Missouri and U.S. Supreme Court.

Post-conviction Cases: Post-Conviction cases (or PCR's) are collateral attacks on a conviction after the appellate process has been exhausted, and can include challenges to the legitimacy of the appellate process in a case as well as the trial court proceedings. Unlike an appeal, which can only follow a trial, a PCR can also be f led after a guilty plea. These proceedings are conducted in the circuit courts in all 114 counties across the state and the City of St. Louis and include capital as well as non-capital cases.

In a post-conviction case, the focus is on constitutional violations that could not be corrected at the appellate level. For example, if an attorney fails to object at the right time at a trial, the trial court's mistake is not preserved for appeal and the appellate court will usually not review it. However, through a PCR proceeding , a court can examine the attorney's failure to make the right objection and the likelihood the defendant would have gotten relief on appeal had the attorney done it correctly. If the court in the PCR hearing f nds that, but for the attorney's ineffectiveness, the defendant likely would have had a different result, relief may be granted.

Attorneys handling PCR cases must do much of the same work as their appellate counterparts -- reviewing the trial transcript, the trial court f le, all the legal documents, and evidence introduced in the case; but instead of then writing briefs and doing oral arguments for the appellate court, they draft motions to set aside the conviction and conduct evidentiary hearings at the circuit court level. To prepare for these, the PCR attorneys must f gure out what the trial attorney should have done, but didn't, and then do it themselves. This can include a fair amount of case re-investigation, such as locating and presenting witnesses the trial attorney failed to locate or present, presenting the testimony of an expert the trial attorney failed to obtain, or putting on new evidence of innocence that was never provided by the state prior to trial. If a post-conviction claim is denied at the lower court level, there is a right to an appeal of that denial.

Private Attorney Cases: In addition to the direct appeals and post-conviction matters arising out of cases initially handled at the trial level by public defenders, our Appellate/PCR attorneys get many cases from the private bar. It is frequently the case that the money to pay counsel has run out by the time a trial is complete and the appellate and post-conviction processes therefore fall back to the public defender.

Missouri Public Defenders
Capital Division

MSPD's Capital Division provides defense representa. on in f rst degree murder cases in which the state is seeking the death penalty, as well as for juveniles facing the possibility of life without parole in non-capital murder f rst degree cases. They also handle direct appeals in cases in which a sentence of death has been imposed. If their caseloads permit, they may occasionally also take on a non-capital murder case from an overloaded trial office.

The division consists of three offices, one in St. Louis, one in Columbia, and one in Kansas City. Because of the complexity of death penalty cases, attorneys handling capital cases are limited to no more than six open capital cases at a time. Two attorneys, an investigator, and a mitigation specialist are assigned to each case.

Missouri Public Defenders
Commitment Defense Unit

MSPD's Civil Commitment Defense Unit was created 2003 in response to Missouri's adop. on of new 'Sexually Violent Predator' civil commitment laws. After a person convicted of certain sexual offenses has completed his prison sentence, the state may seek to have him adjudicated as a 'sexually violent predator' and have him civilly committed to the state's Sex Offender Rehabilitation and Treatment Services institution. The public defenders working in MSPD's Civil Commitment Defense Unit [CDU] provide defense representation to these defendants during both their initial commitment hearing and jury trial and thereafter, to determine whether he or she remains a danger to the community.

At the time this program was created, MSPD received two additional attorneys to handle the anticipated increase in workload from these new commitment proceedings. Today, MSPD has had to pull three more lawyers from the overloaded Trial Division to help handle the growing CDU caseload.

Missouri Public Defender
Case Contracting

Historically, MSPD has contracted approximately 5 percent of its annual caseload to private a. orneys. In Fiscal Year 2017 4.59% of MSPD's caseload was contracted. Contracted cases generally fall into one of two categories:

(1) Conflicts: The majority of the cases contracted out to private attorneys are second and third-level conf ict cases. A conf ict case is one in which the local defender office ethically cannot provide representation – usually because they already represent a co-defendant or perhaps a witness in the same case. In that circumstance, the local office sends the client they cannot represent to one of the next nearest defender offices for representation. These are called f rst-level conf ict cases. Where there are more than just two individuals needing representation who are involved in a conf ict, (i.e. second and third level conf icts), representation of the additional clients is more likely to be provided by private panel attorneys, who are paid to provide representation on a case-by-case basis. This is more practical and efficient than assigning these clients to yet other defender offices which are even further away from the county in which the case is being heard.

(2) Caseload Relief: Occasionally, MSPD is able to use vacancy savings to contract out excess cases to private counsel to give especially overloaded or short-staffed offices some workload relief. Funds for these kinds of contracts are not sufficient to solve the work overload, but when available, can provide some relief in especially pressurized offices.

Private criminal defense practitioners can apply to be a panel attorney for MSPD, designating both the counties in which they practice and the types of cases for which they are qualif ed. Once accepted onto the Panel, they are asked to enter into a Panel Attorney Memorandum of Agreement with MSPD, after which they will be placed in the rotation to receive case assignments in their areas of availability. More information for those interested in participating in MSPD's Panel Attorney Program can be found at http://publicdefender.mo.gov/contracts/MSPD_Contracting.html.

Fee Schedule for Contracting

MSPD utilizes a modif ed f at fee rate for contract cases. This is a base fee corresponding to the type of case with provisions for additional payment if the case should go to trial. The base fee may also be negotiated upward if the case is a particularly complex one or has special circumstances that may require work above and beyond the norm for its case type or if we are unable to locate a qualif ed attorney who will take the case at the rate on the schedule, as does sometimes happen. The typical contract fee schedule used by MSPD in FY16 is shown below:

65M	Probation Violation - Misdemeanor	$375
110F	Direct Appeals - Felony	$3,750
110S	Direct Appeal - Misdemeanor	$3,750
124A	Rule 24.035 Appeal	$500
124M	Rule 24.035 Motion	$500
129A	Rule 29.15 Appeal	$1,875
129M	Rule 29.15 Motion	$1,000

Note: MSPD will pay additional compensation in cases resolved by:
Trials
Jury Trial $1,500 for the first day and $750 for each additional day
Bench Trial $750 per day - prorated
Appeals
Rule 29.15 Evidentiary Hearing $500
Rule 24.035 Evidentiary Hearing $250

Litigation expenses (expert witness fees and travel costs, depositions, transcripts, case investigation, etc) are not included in the attorney's fee. Those types of expenditures are approved separately and must each be submitted to MSPD for approval by MSPD's Deputy Director prior to being incurred.

In FY17, MSPD contracted approximately 4.59% of its total caseload to the private bar. In FY17, MSPD expended $2,788,745 contracting out 3,938 cases, at an average cost per case of $708.16.

During the 2014 Legislative Session, the legislature truly agreed to and f nally passed $3,472,238 to permit MSPD to contract out ALL of its conf ict cases, including f rst-level conf icts, to private counsel as part of its FY2015 budget. The Governor line item vetoed these additional funds. During the Legislative Veto Session, this line item veto was overridden by the General Assembly and the funds were added to MSPD's core budget. During FY2015, the Governor released only $500,000 of these funds. In Fiscal Year 2016, MSPD Appropriations Core was cut by the $3,472,238. In Fiscal Year 2017, $4,500,000 was added to MSPD's budget. The Governor is withheld $3,500,000 of these funds. Note: In Fiscal Year 2018, the Legislature restored MSPD"S Core Budget and added an additional $1M for conf icts and other operating expenses.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We are on the record. Today's date is December 20, 2017 and the time is 1:36 p.m. This is the video recorded deposition of Matthew Crowell in the matter of Shondel Church, et al versus State of Missouri, et al, Case No. 17-04057-CV-C-NKL in the U.S. District Court for the Western District of Missouri, Central Division.

This deposition is being held at Alaris Litigation Services, 2422 East Madrid street, Springfield, Missouri 65804. The reporter's name, Jenna Petree. My name is Bethany Scutti. I'm the legal videographer. We are with Alaris Litigation Services.

Would the attorney present please introduce themselves.

MR. SHAHABIAN: Matt Shahabian for the plaintiffs.

MS. PRASAD: Anjali Prasad for the plaintiffs.

MR. RAMSEY: Steven Alan Ramsey for the State of Missouri and Governor Greitens.

MS. SHIPMA: Jacqueline Shipma for the MSDP defendants.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Will the court reporter please swear in the witness.

IT IS HEREBY STIPULATED AND AGREED, by and between counsel for the Plaintiffs and counsel for the Defendants, that the deposition of MATTHEW CROWELL may be taken in shorthand by Jenna Petree, and afterwards transcribed into typewriting; and the signature of the witness is expressly reserved.

Page 6

MATTHEW CROWELL,

of lawful age, produced, sworn, and examined on behalf of the Plaintiffs, deposes and says:

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: You may proceed.

QUESTIONS BY MR. SHAHABIAN:

Q Good afternoon, Mr. Crowell.

A Good afternoon.

Q Thanks for taking the time to be here. My name is Matt Shahabian. I'm an attorney for the plaintiffs. Before we get started, have you ever been deposed before?

A No.

Q Okay. So I will start by laying out the ground rules basically how the deposition will work so we are all on the same page. So there is a court reporter here who is transcribing the deposition, as well as a video court reporter. Because we have a transcript, I would ask that you answer questions with verbal responses; yes, no, or whatever you want to elaborate. A head nod or shake of your head isn't going to get picked up by the transcript.

Page 7

Wait for me to finish the question before you begin your answer. It's more difficult for the court reporter to transcribe if we are talking over each other. Your counsel or counsel for the State defendants may have objections to some of my questions. Unless your counsel instructs you not to answer my question, you should answer even if there is an objection lodged. If you don't understand one of my questions, just tell me and I will rephrase the question and hopefully make it clear. We can take breaks whenever you like. So if you need a break, restroom, or just to catch your breath; just let me know. The only rule is you can't take a break when there is a question pending. I just ask that you finish the answer to the question that's pending and then we can take a break. Sound good?

A Sounds great.

Q So what did you do prepare for this deposition today?

A I met with Jackie Shipma, my general counsel, and we discussed kind of what to expect.

Q Did you review any documents?

A I don't believe we did. I don't recall reviewing any documents.

Q Did you review any other data or materials in preparation for this deposition?

A No.

Q Did you talk to anybody besides Ms. Shipma in preparation for this deposition?

A I told other people I would be here, but I didn't talk to anybody else about preparing for today's deposition.

Q And how many times did you meet with Ms. Shipma in preparation?

A Just once.

Q What do you do for a living?

A I'm the district defender for the Area 25 office of the public defender. In that capacity, I function as the supervising attorney and I also represent clients charged with criminal offenses.

Q What is Area 25?

A Area 25 is a branch of Missouri State Public Defender Office. It encompasses six counties in the state of Missouri including Phelps, Pulaski, Maries, Texas, Crawford, and Dent counties.

Q How long have you been the district defender for Area 25?

A I believe I'm going on my third year.

Q What did you do before you were the district defender?

A I was the deputy district defender.

Q Also in Area 25?

Page 9

A Yes.
Q How long were you the deputy district defender?
A Two years.
Q Could you describe your employment experience aside from being defender and deputy district defender?
A I was assistant public defender prior to that for approximately five years. Do you want me to go beyond that?
Q Let's keep going.
A Okay. Prior to that I was a law student. In law school and in college I worked at Sonic Drive-In both in Harrisonville, Missouri and in Kirksville, Missouri where I attended school. That position I was an assistant manager of the restaurant.
Q When did you graduate law school?
A 2008.
Q Did you have any legal internships during law school?
A I did. I worked as an intern for Harrisonville Missouri's public defender office. I don't remember the area. I also -- I guess I also did an internship with Christopher Bird that was paid, so.
Q What is Christopher Bird?
A He was a solo practitioner in the Kansas City area. He did mainly civil law, civil litigation. He was briefly with the law firm of Hazelton and Laner when I went to work for him, but I had no affiliation with them.

Q So moving back to your employment at MSPD; what is your responsibilities -- what are your responsibilities as the district defender?
A My responsibilities as the district defender are to manage the attorneys in the office and the support staff to ensure that clients that we represent receive the best representation possible based upon the MSPD guidelines and also to represent clients.
Q What are the MSPD guidelines?
A They are the -- I guess they're not really -- well, they are rules by which we represent our clients. They are somewhat aspirational in the sense that, you know, I think they anticipate adequate resources, but they are quite voluminous, so I don't know specifically what you're asking. I don't know --
Q Just generally.
A Generally speak, they are the guidelines that dictate how we are to represent our clients.
Q And so is it fair to say that you have administrative tasks, supervisory tasks, and your own caseload as the district defender?
A That's correct.

Q Roughly how much of your time is spent on administrative tasks?
A It varies. Recently, maybe 10 percent because of ongoing caseload issues. Probably prior to the Hinkebein decision, I was probably closer to 30 to 40 percent maybe.
Q And what kind of tasks would you put into the administrative task bucket?
A Hiring, firing, making sure that people are doing their time sheets, that they are coming to work. I would probably throw in that bucket the training and time spent with the younger attorneys, newer attorneys, and getting them up to speed.
Q How much of your time would you say you spend on the supervisory portion of your docket, so-to-speak?
A So out of that 10 percent?
Q So would you put your supervisory responsibilities in the administrative component? Or would you -- I think one way to go back and this may be my fault for being unclear, but I had split it into three buckets; administrative, supervisory, and your caseload. Would you say it's more accurate to put supervisory in the administrative bucket?
A Yeah, I guess I have trouble distinguishing between the two.

Page 12

Q That's fine.
A Administrative in my mind is what administrative tasks do I have to do like my own time sheets, my own expense report and following-up on e-mails and that sort of thing. Supervisory is when I'm monitoring the attorneys and staff doing those things. And so that's how I distinguish between the two. I would spend probably --
Q So let me ask it this way: What percentage of your time would you say is spent doing both administrative and supervisory tasks?
A Currently probably 10 to 15 percent. But, again, if I include training in that and supervising new attorneys, it's much higher. It's probably 50 to 60, maybe even 70 percent of my time spent helping new attorneys.
Q So you would say helping new attorneys including training, could be anywhere from 40 to 50 percent of your time?
A Or much more than that depending on the day.
Q How many attorneys are in your office?
A Including me, 14.
Q And how many non-attorney employees do you have?
A Six-and-a-half.
Q What are their responsibilities?

Page 13

A The non-attorneys?
Q Yes.
A I have two investigators. Their job is to assist the attorneys in investigating the case and collecting evidence and interviewing witnesses, subpoena witnesses. I have two legal assistants. Their job is to -- similar to investigators. They do a lot of the same sort of things, but also they assist in filing motions, preparing motions; kind of the more administrative tasks that an attorney might be responsible for. They also are responsible for assisting in jail visits and in court. And at court they would do things like do intakes for potential new clients, meet with the defendants and their families. Then I have two-and-a-half clerical positions. Their jobs are primarily to answer the phone, maintaining the office supplies, ordering; that sort of thing.
Q What would you say the average experience level of the attorneys in your office is?
A Maybe a year. I have one attorney in my office with 15 years experience. I'm the next highest; I have nine years under me. The next highest is an attorney and I think he has six years and then it drops off from there.
Q And by drops off from there, would you say more or less than two years?

Page 14

A I have one attorney that has I believe three years of experience and another attorney with four or five years experience, but I think a year of that was prior to being criminal defense. Then almost every other attorney after that is less than two. In fact every other attorney after that is less than two.
Q How many attorneys in your office have one year of experience or less?
A You put me on the spot.
Q Roughly, I won't hold you to it.
A I would saw eight or nine attorneys.
Q How do you assign cases that come into your office to those attorneys?
A To the new attorneys?
Q To any of the attorneys in the office.
A The cases are primarily assigned by county. So the attorneys are assigned to a particular county and the cases that come into that county would go to those attorneys. That's traditionally what we have done. More recently, because of my concern over attorney's caseloads, I have been -- the cases have been coming in. When the judge orders us into the case, I have been entering those cases. And then through discussions with attorneys and reviewing their caseload and that sort of thing, I would then assign cases to the attorneys based on their workload.

Page 15

Q Would you say you, as the district defender, you have a lot of discretion in the day-to-day management of your office?
A No.
Q Why not?
A Well, I don't have any control over the resources. That really controls how you manage your office. So the resources that are given to me, I have to distribute between six counties. I can't really control, you know, much about what how those resources are spent because they are so limited.
Q And so you're not responsible for setting the budget for your office?
A My office has a budget. It is not set by me. It is set by our main office in Columbia. I do have some control over some items in that budget. So I could refuse to order certain types of pens. I could deny what we call a local E-request. So if somebody wanted to spend less than $500.00 on something, I could say you're not going to do that. But realistically I don't have much control over it because those are things that we need and we have to do.
Q How big is the current caseload in your area?
A Right now I would say roughly our office is handling about a 1,000 cases.
Q And on average how many cases does each attorney in your office carry?

A Typically somewhere between 100 and 150. Right now it's a little bit lower, again, because we have been waitlisting and I have taken on more cases because of the appointments.
Q How many cases are on your docket currently?
A On my personal?
Q Yes.
A Last I checked it was 133.
Q And that's a case docket you carry in addition to your administrative and supervisory responsibilities?
A That's correct.
Q Are there any local policies, formal or informal, that you have set as district defender that, you know, are not imposed by the central office?
A I have decided to waitlist cases or clients; that was not imposed. I'm sure there are other minor policies, but that's a big one. I mean, that's just me deciding to -- not refuse clients, but delay us entering into their cases.
Q I certainly want to talk about that, but I may just -- I'm not ignoring you. We'll push it off until a little later in the deposition. You said there are about 1,000 cases in your office right now. Would you say that that is typical, above average, below average in your experience as director -- district defender and deputy district defender?

A I would say it's slightly below average.

Q What would the average be around?

A In a year's time we typically handle like I think last fiscal year we handled 3,700 cases. I think by this point last year, we were a couple hundred cases ahead of where we are. It's lower because of the waitlist. So I think right now we have -- and I know you said you wanted to get into this later.

Q Please answer completely.

A -- to show you where we are at, the reason I think we are about 200 behind last year is because the numbers last year show we were about 200 ahead. But also there are roughly 200 people on our waitlist.

Q So when you say a 1,000 cases -- and I may have misunderstood -- when you say a 1,000 cases, you're not counting cases on the waitlist?

A Right. If we were to open those cases today, we would be roughly 1,200.

Q Okay. Could you describe generally after an indigent defendant is arrested, at what point in the criminal process is your office contacted to represent them?

A It depends on the individual defendant. So if they were arrested and they are sitting in jail, all the jails in my area provide applications to them. All they have to do is fill out the application and it gets faxed or we pick it up. So the delay in receiving applications in that sense, if they were to file it the minute they got into the jail would probably be, we would receive it within a day or two, typically. If they are not in custody, if they are released on a summons, we probably wouldn't get an application from them for quite some time.

Q Are there any stages in the criminal process that occur in courts in your area prior to you entering -- your office entering an appearance?

A There would be counsel status hearing, bond appearance hearings. In some courts, arraignments.

Q So in some courts in your area, arraignments can occur for indigent defendants who have not yet been appointed counsel?

A Yes, happens all the time.

Q Are you aware of any negative consequences that can happen to clients in that situation -- or not to clients, to indigent defendants in that situation?

A Certainly. I think a lot of indigent clients in that situation sometimes they pled guilty without the advice of counsel and they don't understand the consequences. In some courts that can have very serious consequences. A lot of times they will say things about their innocence or guilt that probably they shouldn't be saying in open court. If they had an attorney, the attorney could at least advise them to remain silent. I don't think the courts do a very good -- the courts try to keep them quiet, but it's just not the same as having an attorney there, so.

Q Could defendants waive constitutional rights during any of these hearings?

A Yes, they do. They often, I think, waive their right to an attorney. They waive their right to remain silent. I just had one that came to mind. Often times -- I don't know if it's necessarily a constitutional right -- but they with inadvertently waive their right to change of venue or change of judge because of the time beginning, you know, when they go to arraignment, that starts their window of opportunity to change judge or change venue. If they don't have an attorney at that stage, obviously they may not have one ten days down the road, so they will waive that right as well.

Q And that may be an inadvertent waiver, but it happens as a result of the criminal process continuing without counsel?

A It's inadvertent. I think some judges purposely avoid having counsel in cases to facilitate that.

Q What makes you say that?

A In some of our counties, judges -- we would change judge routinely off of a particular judge because of the way they treat our clients, their dispositions, their bonds; that sort of thing. So it was always in our client's interest to change judge. Well, judges would get annoyed with that, or at least in my belief they would get annoyed. So they would stop appointing counsel or having us be present at court dates so that way they could go ahead and arraign the individual and then they would set a court date beyond the ten-day window. So I can't say that, yes, they were being vindictive or something, but it certainly appeared based on their actions and what they were doing, they were trying to circumvent our ability to change judge or venue.

Q And in a case like that where the defendant is arraigned without counsel, at what point after that would your office come into the case?

A Well, again, if they are in jail, you know, it's really kind of up to the client to take -- or the defendant to take action to get us an application. At some point, the courts become a little more active. After they have been sitting for about a month, they will often bring them up to the courtroom while we are there so we will give them an application and have them fill it out. If they aren't in custody, then usually it will be the courtroom center where they will come to their next court date, we will be present. The judge will ask them have they applied for the public defender. Most of the time that will be a negative and so they will say go see the public defender. They are right over there and they will give you an application. So that decision is made in court.

Q When you are appointed to represent clients prior to an arraignment taking place, what steps would attorneys -- would you or attorneys in your office take to prepare for arraignments or other preliminary hearings?

A Generally speaking the main thing you would do is meet with the client. In almost all of our counties we are not getting discovery prior to arraignment in circuit court. So this would be an associate court when we normally get in a case. So the main thing you would do is meet with the client, beyond that not much else I think happens.

Q What sort of information would you try to ask a client in order to be able to effectively advocate for them?

A Well, we have a whole intake sheet that we encourage the attorneys to use that covers pretty much all the basis that we believe are important. So it guess through their education, their physical mental health problems, kind of their story of the case. You know, are they a citizen. Are there any immigration issues we need to be aware of. Is there any evidence that exists or witnesses that exists that we need to get a hold of, you know, as soon as possible so the information doesn't become stale or the witness disappears; that sort of thing. It has a whole host of things. I encourage the attorneys to use it because like me here today, I may not remember everything single thing that I need to cover.

Q In your opinion, do you have the time and resources to communicate with your clients in the manner that each case requires?

A No.

Q Why do you say that?

A Because I have way too many clients to communicate in an effective manner. Most of my communication with my clients occurs on the day of court. It occurs in a back hallway of a courtroom or, you know, in the back of the courtroom in a less than ideal attorney-client confident -- confidential setting. We try to maintain confidentiality as best as possible. I'm not saying I don't do jail visits and I'm not saying I don't meet with clients in my office, but when you have 130 clients continuously and growing, it's just not possible. If I were to spend one hour with every client, I would spend every three weeks just meeting with clients. And I have to spend most of my time in court. A large time in the office doing day-to-day office duties. I spend a great deal of time on the road. So obviously, you know, when you're prioritizing, you're cutting corners.

Q Why is it important to your ability to effectively represent clients to have adequate time to communicate with them?

A Well, if the goal is client-centered representation and if your goal is to try to get your client what they want, all right, it's difficult to know what they want or they don't even know what they want initially. They may say I want probation or I may want this, but they don't understand the criminal process. You have to explain that to them. They don't understand how the case progresses. They don't understand what evidence may be relevant, what evidence we need to obtain, what witnesses we can call. There is a whole host of things that you get from meeting with a client. Probably one of the most important things you get from meeting with the clients on a more than irregular basis is you get their trust. You don't get anywhere in a case without a client's trust because if they don't trust you they are not going to open up to you about, you know, the evidence in a case, what they really want. Often times, it's very adversarial proceeding with the client because the client think you work for the State or you don't care about them and, you know, I don't blame them because it's reflected in the amount of time we spend with them. So there is a whole host of things that go with, you know, meeting with the client and spending time with them. Especially more than, you know, the 10 or 15 minutes or so that we spend with a client. Probably the bulk of the time you spend with the client is when you're talking about a plea deal.

Q And when you're talking to client about a plea deal, does that typically take place in the courthouse or at a jail visit?

A I try to do that at a jail visit because it generally requires more than, you know, ten minutes and you want to give them time to think about it before they actually have to do it. That being said, there is the initial conversation at the jail. They are brought to court, you know, the next day or a week later; whenever it may be. At that point, that's when, you know, there may have been some renegotiations or second thoughts and I think you want to have a conversation the day of as well. But that, again, ideally that would be in a confidential setting where you have more time, but it's typically in the back of a courtroom.

Q When you do a jail visit are those done in confidential settings?

A It varies based upon the jail. In our most populated jail in Phelps County, they have two rooms. One room is a bond -- we call it the bond room. It used to be just a wall with a glass window. Because they didn't like the attorneys using the actual attorney room, they decided to build this sheetrock wall around the bond window and to provide us some sort of privacy. The problem is, is not insulated and it's not or soundproof. So if you're talking to your client, anything you say if you talk at a normal voice, like I think I am now, it can be heard in the waiting area. So that's a big problem in Phelps County. In Texas County, we have a confidential room. In Pulaski County we -- -- they have a phone that you pick up and there is a glass wall. When you pick up the phone it tells you this is being recorded. They tell us it's not, but, you know, it's hard. Again, when we are talking about a client trusting us and wanting to open up to us and that's the first thing they hear, it really impedes, I think, that safety that they feel that they would have if they could actually have some sort of contact visit. Prior to that, it was a broom closet that we met in but apparently somebody hid a shive in that room so they wouldn't let us use that anymore. They said it was for our safety. In Dent County, there is no real confidential area. They put you down in the jail. You know, again, if you talk at a whisper maybe. Crawford County, you have a confidential area and in Maries County there is a confidential area. So about 50/50 there is confidence.

Q If you had more time to communicate with your clients, do you think you would be able to secure a confidential locations for them to talk to you?

A Yes.

Q Why do you think that?

A Because in most counties if you have the time and you arrange it, you can get a conference room or you can get some sort of other arrangement worked out where you can actually meet with a client in a confidential setting. So in Phelps County, I have no problem if I request to have a conference room. And I say I have no problem because I don't ask very often. I suspect if I ask very frequently that that would end very quickly because they have to station a guard outside the door. That's a similar thing in Pulaski County. If we ask, they will bring our clients up to a conference room and they will station a bailiff outside the door so that we can have a confidential meeting. Again, there are just ways that we can -- through motion practice, through simple request, we can get those things. But we don't ask very often so that's why I think we can get them when we ask.

Page 27

Q But if you had more time, do you think you would be able to ask more?

A I would make it a much bigger issue if I had more time, so yes.

Q So far we have been talking primarily about your caseload. In your opinion, do you think the attorneys in your office have sufficient time and resources to communicate effectively with their clients?

A It's gotten better in the last couple of months since I started waitlisting. The average attorney caseload I think I said was 100 to 150. We are probably down to more like 75 now. So it's gotten better. Again, with my attorney experience, they really need I think somebody with them more often than not until they get more experienced to meet with those clients and they don't have somebody with them. There is not the time for that. So I still think their caseload is too high and they are not able to meet with their clients as much as possible, but it's getting better.

Q Prior to initiating the waiting list, do you think they had adequate time and resources to communicate effectively with their clients?

A No.

Q Why not?

A Because, again, they had way too many clients.

Page 28

There -- like I said, even if you were to spend an hour with every client it becomes impossible. To meet a client at almost any of our jails, you're waiting. You go to the jail and you wait to meet with the client. So one client, even if you only have a quick thing to say to them, it's probably going to take about an hour for one client. So you might be able to see eight clients in a day, you know. So it's not really -- you just can't do it with that many clients.

Q On average, how often would you say you are able to meet with your clients, with each client?

A Well, would you include court appearances?

Q Let's leave out court appearances. Let me ask you this first: Would a court appearance be considered a qualifying contact as that term is used in the MSPD?

A No.

Q On average how often would you say you're able to have a qualifying contact with one of your clients?

A I'm probably being generous if I said 25 percent of the time.

Q In what percentage of your cases do you conduct what you believe to be an adequate pretrial investigation?

A Less than 25 percent.

Q What would constitute an adequate pretrial investigation in your opinion?

A It depends on the case, but obviously meeting with the client, investigating their leads; in many cases depositions. In every case a scene view and an evidence view. Consulting with experts in appropriate cases, potentially hiring experts for toxicology and things like that in the proper case. Interviewing favorable witnesses and reaching out to favorable witnesses. Gathering evidence that might exist, like surveillance or that sort of thing. So it really kind of depends on the case, but, you know, all of those things should be evaluated in every case.
Q Why aren't you able to do that in 100 of percent of your cases?
A There is not enough hours in the day.
Q In your opinion, are the attorneys -- separate from your caseload -- are the attorneys in your office able to do the kinds of pretrial investigation that you think cases typically require?
A No.
Q Why not?
A They don't have enough time.
Q Without getting into specifics or I certainly don't want you to waive attorney-client privilege, can you think of a time where your representation of a case was hampered by a lack of time to investigate a case?

A Yes.
Q Can you speak vaguely about such a circumstance?
A Sure. So we just had a trial yesterday. One of the witnesses that was called was a key witness for the State. I inherited this case from an attorney who left, who inherited it from an attorney who left, who inherited it from an attorney who left, who inherited from the original attorney. Depositions had been done of two of the witnesses, none of the others. It became only apparent to me during the trial that probably this witness should have been deposed. But that's -- would I have deposed him if I had the adequate time, I think I would have but I couldn't even make that analysis because of the time constraints. And so I think this client's case maybe was impacted by the lack of investigation.
Q And so to break that down, in your opinion you lacked sufficient time to even determine whether a deposition would have been useful or necessary in this prior to trial?
A That's correct.
Q And you realized that at trial?
A That is correct.
Q And sitting here today knowing that ideally this witness would have been deposed, you're not sure if even had you known that you would have had the time to do a deposition?

A I certainly would have tried, but I don't -- everything you do is sacrificing time for another client. So would I have fit it in somehow, possibly, but that would be sacrificing time spent on another case.
Q How frequently do you request discovery from the state in your cases?
A Every case.
Q How frequently do you file discovery related motions?
A Rarely.
Q In your opinion, do you have the time and resources to obtain and review discovery in the manner each case requires?
A I can say that I do not plead clients or go to trial without obtaining discovery. Now, whether that's complete is another question, but I always obtain discovery. I always file a discovery request. I always obtain at least some basic discovery. If I believe there is something missing I will always do an informal request and that's why I don't file a whole lot of motions, but I have a decent amount of experience. I would guess, you know, based on how the questions are going -- and sorry if

I'm wrong -- but I would assume the next question is what about your attorneys. Again, based on the age of my staff and the experience level, I don't think most of them even understand what might be in a case. So they may receive discovery and sometimes discovery is nothing more than a probable cause statement and the indictment or the information. I would say many of my attorneys at that point don't even know what they are missing to ask for it or to file a supplemental request for discovery or motion to compel.
Q In your opinion, if you or your attorneys had more time to spend on a particular case, would that assist in the ability of your younger attorneys to understand when discovery is missing and when they should be going back for more discovery?
A Absolutely.
Q Why do you say that?
A Because I have seen the impact that the waitlist and relieving some stress off the attorneys has had. I have seen many more motions filed. I have seen a lot more evidentiary hearings. I have had a lot more complaints from the prosecutors about the number of depositions they've had to do. And these are new attorneys who are doing these really exciting things and making good challenges to cases and getting good results for clients that prior to this, I mean, we weren't seeing. They weren't able to do it. They weren't doing it. The unfortunate part of that is, I think is that they don't really have somebody who can really mentor them along because now I am too overworked and I don't really have the staff or the experienced attorneys to fill in that gap.

Q How frequently do you determine whether an expert witness would be necessary in a particular case?

A Every case where I feel like one is needed. I guess I don't understand your question.

Q It's a bad question. How often do you use an expert witness in your cases?

A If it's a mental health issue, it's pretty frequent. So if I look at a case and I believe there is some sort of mental health issue that's needs to be evaluated, I will nearly always reach out to hire an expert.

Q And by mental health issue do you mean for competency?

A Primarily competency because certainly we would -- it's kind of a two-step process. You would have them evaluated first for competency. If they are currently competent, then you would have them look at could it be NGRI.

Q I'm sorry what would it -- it could be?

Page 34

A Not guilty by reason of insanity. Typically you're not going to have an expert get into NGRI unless the client is competent. Most of the time, you know, if you believe they are not competent that ends up being correct.

Q Outside of competency and insanity issues, do you use experts for other cases?

A Yes. In fact, let me just on competency and NGRI we would also -- one of the reasons I would also want it in those situations is for mitigation purposes. Even if I think they might be competent or even if I don't know and they come back competent, an expert would be great to explain some of the reasons why they may have done what they did even though they are completely functional. I also use experts, you know, a whole host of experts: fingerprint experts, blood experts, canine experts, field sobriety test experts.

Q Does your caseload or lack of time impact your ability to work with experts where you think it's necessary?

A Yes.

Q How does it do -- how is it impacted?

A One of the most difficult things about getting an expert in my area is locating one. I'm in a rural jurisdiction. There are no experts in my little area, so we always have to go to St. Louis or some other urban area and then get them to come to us, which is difficult. So that's a big factor that impedes the ability to hire experts. So you spend a lot of time trying to track them down. That's one of the big factors. It takes lot of time to hire an expert. I think I've lost track where the question was going.

Q That is definitely an answer to question, but I'll ask it again in case there is anything else. In addition to the time spent locating and retaining an expert, does your caseload and lack of time impact your ability to work with an expert or use an expert effectively in your cases?

A Yes.

Q How?

A Because we don't have the time to devote to a case, we don't have the time to get experts early enough. It's not uncommon where we end up being forced by the courts to proceed even though we have informed them they with are trying to locate an expert. And even though I do blame the courts, it usually is later in the process when we get around to actually evaluating the case. So you get a case and you may not be able to evaluate it until a week before trial at which point you start scrambling. You know, as I mentioned earlier it takes a lot of time to find an expert. Experts have dates that they are available and not available. Usually that's not going to be within the timeframe that we have. So it's our delay or our inability to prepare a case early on that causes us to miss the opportunity to having an expert later.

Q And would you say your difficulties in retaining and utilizing experts effectively apply not only to your cases but also the cases of attorneys in your office?

A Yes.

Q Without going into specifics or compromising privilege, can you think of a time where your representation of a client was hampered by a lack of time to effectively use an expert?

A Yes.

Q Are you comfortable providing any further details on a case in, you know, vague, general terms?

A So yes. We had a case recently where we needed an expert to evaluate a client regarding PTSD. She was charged with statutory rape and one of our theory of defense was she was actually the victim of the rape. So the assailant was this young man who was 17 or -- 16 or 17. He was a football player. He was a big guy. So we were saying because of her PTSD that is what she confessed to. She was confessing to being a victim when she was younger. So we had consulted with an expert and we're trying to get him in the case, but we had anticipated getting a continuance. Again, this is kind of a late preparation and we were denied the continuance. So because we didn't have the time to devote to the case because our expert couldn't get involved soon enough, we did not have the expert for the trial. We'll have him for mitigation, but it hurt our theory I think or it hurt the ability to present that theory to the jury.

Q Is funding a constraint on your ability to hirer or retain outside services in cases where you think it's necessary?

A I have never been denied a request for funds. At least I may have initially been denied because I -- they needed more explanation. Whenever I needed an expert, I have always been provided the resources to obtain the expert.

Q Do attorneys in your area frequently request continuances?

A Yes.

Q Why is that?

A Because they are not ready for whatever the case may be.

Q Why wouldn't they be ready for whatever the next hearing may be?

A Because they haven't had adequate time. Well, there is two reasons. One is the judges have time standards that they religiously follow that are ridiculous and don't take into consideration the individual case. So, you know, cases get from the date of arraignment to the date of trial is three months on any case. So that's a big part of the reason that I don't think any attorney, even one that is not overworked, could be ready in the amount of time that's given. But even if judges who are more lenient and who are more understanding of the workload issues, we still have to ask for continuances in those cases because, again, you just can't get the work done in the time allotted. It doesn't matter if you're given a month or a year because in the interim you're handling hundreds of cases and you just kind of keep shoveling everything down the road.

Q You mentioned travel earlier. How much time do you spend traveling for case related?

A It varies based on the county you're in. So our furthest county is about 50 miles. It's about an hour drive to get to court or to do a jail visit; that's our furthest. The closest is to our office is Phelps County. It's maybe a mile and maybe about seven or eight minute drive. We do -- because we have a prison in our jurisdiction and the cases that occur within that prison, the criminal cases, typically take two to three years to where they actually get charged. And by that time usually those defendants have moved to different facilities across the state. And so in those instances, the travel time could be anywhere from four to five hours to an hour.

Q Roughly what percentage of your current docket are cases coming out of the prison?

A It's relatively small. I think at any given time we have 20 to 30 cases out of the prison, but those are very time consuming cases.

Q What kinds of cases are those?

A They are usually committing violence on an inmate or committing violence on a prison guard.

Q Has time spent on travel been an issue for attorneys in your office in terms of their ability to effectively represent their clients?

A I believe so.

Q Why do you say that?

A Well, it's part of the whole picture. All but one county in my six counties requires significant travel time. So every other county is at least a 30-minute drive. So if you're going to go to court or you're going to go to jail, an hour of your day is gone just sitting in your car on the road at a minimum unless you're in Phelps County. So the impact is pretty high especially when most attorneys have court five days a week or are expected to see their clients. If you're going to Texas County, which is an hour one way, every day two hours a day, you know, ten hours a week, gone. So over a day, you know, of their time is wasted driving.

Q On average how frequently do you file suppression motions?

A Not very often. As needed. I don't handle a lot of low level -- well, I used to not handle a lot of the drug cases and that's typically where you see the most suppression issues.

Q In your opinion, do you have sufficient time to investigate when suppression motion may be needed?

A Most suppression issues I file are based off of my experience. They are not based upon research. So the research follows the filing of the motion. So, again, that's something different between I think a more senior attorney versus a newer attorney. A newer attorney sees a traffic stop and they have to research is there a case on point and then they learn that as they grow as an attorney. Ideally, I would spend more time doing legal research but that's a luxury that we don't have.

Q Do you think the attorneys in your office have adequate time to research and file suppression motions?

A No.

Q Why do you say that?

Page 41

A They don't have the time.
Q Are there other kinds of pretrial motions that you typically file?
A So if the case is actually trial bound, typically we would file motions in limine, various kinds of things on what the case needed. More recently we have been filing motions to dismiss due to probable cause issues, which has been kind of a new thing that we have been attacking.
Q Why have you newly been filing motions to dismiss?
A One, the attorneys have time to actually litigate these issues. One of the problems that we have is that in many jurisdictions they have gone to indictments. So we don't have a preliminary hearing to determine probable cause. We have a grand jury determining probable cause. The joke is a grand jury would indict a ham sandwich. Everybody kind of hears that and it's true. So we have to be creative in how we try to dispose of these cases and be efficient so that they don't end up going to trial. The biggest examples of these are assaults and domestic assaults. Most of those cases are never going to go to trial because the victim is never going to corporate or the victim said it didn't happen or something to that effect. So we have challenged -- the only way we have figured out how is to, you know, getting the victim in on a challenging the probable cause saying there is no probable cause because the victim said it didn't happen. And if the law enforcement or the prosecutor brought the victim into the grand jury, the grand jury would have indicted.

Q And that is a motion that requires time in your opinion?
A Yes. I mean, you have to first you have to meet with the client and kind of get a feel for the circumstances of the case. Then you have -- if they inform you that this didn't happen or he or she doesn't want to pursue it or whatever the case may be, then you have to investigate that claim and contact the witnesses and speak with them and you have to get them subpoenaed to come to court. And then you actually have to have a hearing and present the evidence to the court and make an argument as to why it should be dismissed.
Q Does lack of time or resources impact your attorneys ability to prepare and file these motions?
A Absolutely, which is why we never saw any up until the last two months.
Q When you say up until the last two months, you're referring to the waiting list reducing caseloads for your other attorneys?
A That's correct.

Page 43

Q How often do you take cases to trial?
A I would say one percent of the cases maybe go to trial, if that.
Q Do you think enough of your cases are going to trial?
A No.
Q Why not?
A When you have the time to dedicate to a case, it always gets better -- well, almost always gets better. You know, you begin to poke holes in the State's evidence. You begin to find your own evidence. You consult with experts. The case gets better. The prosecutor gets tired, they don't want to move forward with it. You know, so going, you know, forcing a case to go to trial and being able to prepare it like you should for trial, you know, ultimately ends up getting to trial. The other thing that will help, you know, the more effort you put into a case, more likely you're able to get your client out on bond. If your clients out on bond, they are more likely to go to trial. So that's another thing that if you have time, you can litigate the bond and get them out of jail. If they are not in jail, they are just like just get me out of here. I don't care, I'll plead to whatever. That's the kind of thing you see a lot.
Q So I want to just unpack that a little more.

Page 44

A Okay.
Q Why do clients who are out on bond -- why are clients out on bond more likely to go to trial?
A Because even though their freedom is still impacted by the fact they have criminal charges pending against them, they have their freedom. They are out of custody. They are able to be with family and friends and they are able to work and they are able to kind of maintain some normal life even though they have to occasionally appear in court even though they have this charge hanging over them. When they are in jail, the jails are miserable. They're overcrowded. They mistreat these people. They don't even treat them like people. So all that -- their whole being is how do I get out of this situation. What's the fastest route to get me out of custody. If that's pleading guilty, they'll pled guilty.
Q Just lost my train of thought for a second, sorry. Do you have adequate time to prepare and file bond motions?
A No.
Q Why not?
A Filing bond motions, I mean, it's one thing -- I file bond motions in most cases, but it's just a paragraph that kind of references the law. To file a bond motion that actually has impact, is to actually investigate the facts of the case and your client's history. You want to know things like where does your client live, how long has he lived there, does he have transportation, does he have family in the area, does he have a criminal history that is maybe not what the prosecutor says it is. You know, what are the strengths and weaknesses of the State's case. Maybe it's not as strong, so there should be more lenience given. Those are the things I would want to put in my motion. And then I would also want to get witnesses to come to court to testify about the virtues of my client. Maybe the alleged victim if it's, again, the domestic case where she or he is saying it didn't happen. That takes a lot of time and that is again something we don't have a lot of. So you sacrifice that a lot of times to get the case ready for trial or, quite honestly, you don't even really have time to even consider it because, again, you have 15 minutes maybe with the client. You file your basic motion. You make your basic argument to the court and, you know, the court has their predetermined bonds that they just throw out there.

Q What are the predetermined bonds?

A Well, it varies by the judge. But in my jurisdictions for most lower-level felonies, it's going to be 25,000. For B and A felonies and unclassified felonies, it's going to be probably somewhere between $100,000.00 to $1 million. The most extreme examples in one county the judge will set drug cases usually at $500,000, even misdemeanor marijuana, which is fine only. So it varies, but the minimum typically on felonies is going to be $25,000.00 across the spectrum.

Q And just to make sure I understand right, there are misdemeanor marijuana cases in your area where defendants are held on $500,000.00 bonds?

A It happens and they are fined only to begin with.

Q In your opinion if you had adequate time and resources would that assist in your ability to advocate for bond reductions?

A Yes.

Q In your opinion, do the attorneys in your office have adequate time to prepare and advocate for bond motions and bond reductions?

A No.

Q Why not?

A Lack of resources.

Q So coming back to trials. In your opinion, do you have sufficient time and resources to adequately prepare for trial?

A No.

Q Why not?

Page 47

A There are not enough hours in the day.

Q What are the kinds of things that you would want to do to effectively prepare for trial?

A Well, the first thing would be to meet with the client, go through what we have already kind of talked about. I would want to make sure that I have evaluated the State's discovery. That I had done my own independent investigation. That I had evaluated the necessity of experts. That I had done depositions in most cases of the main witnesses for the State. That I had prepped my witnesses for their cross exam and direct examinations. That I have adequately prepared my client for knowing what the trial process is and whether or not he wants judge or jury or jury or judge sentencing, whether or not he or she wants to testify. I would want to make sure that I spent ample time preparing my direct and cross examinations. That I spend time preparing an open and closing argument, my voir dire.

Q Without violating privilege or getting too deep into specifics, can you think of a time where your representation of a client was hampered by a lack of time to prepare for trial?

A Yes.

Q Could you give vague generalities and the kinds of things that you were unable to prepare for?

Page 48

A Well, again I gave the example of the trial I had yesterday. I had a trial last Monday and that trial ate up a bulk of the time. I finished that -- well, the prosecutor dismissed it during the trial. The next day I spent the day in court. The next day, I spent the day at a district defender meeting. The next day I spent the day in court. The next day I spent I believe -- I'm trying to think that would have been Friday, not sure what I did Friday. I spent Saturday with my family for Christmas event. I spend Sunday prepping this trial. I spent Monday in court; that was supposed to be the start of the trial. It got -- we didn't have enough jurors show up, so we had to reset to yesterday. So from the time of the last trial, a week later to this trial, I wasn't able really to prepare at all except for Sunday. So what I ended up doing, knowing that was going to happen, I assigned the case. I remained second chair, but I assigned it to an attorney in my office to basically be able to prep it. The only reason that attorney was able to kind of do it -- and this was a stat rape first, so unclassified felony where the range of punishment is ten years to life or 30, was because he is leaving our office at the end of the week. So we haven't given him any new cases in the last month. But he has less than a year and half experience, so he did a great job. But, again, I mean, is somebody who is looking at life in prison, should they have an attorney as their first chair who only has a year -- little over a year experience. And the only reason I gave it to him was because I just couldn't do it.

MR. SHAHABIAN: I think now is a good time to go off the record and take a break. Say five minutes.

MS. SHIPMA: Matt, what did you do Friday?

A Oh, right.

MS. SHIPMA: You spent Friday with me.

A That's why I couldn't remember.

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: We are going off the record. The time is 2:41 p.m. This ends Media 1.

(A recess was taken.)

THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Going back on the record. The time is 2:49 p.m. This begins Media 2.

Q (By Mr. Shahabian) Thanks for coming back, Mr. Crowell.

A You're welcome.

Q I would like to turn to guilty pleas. How do you typically approach a case where a client is considering a plea offer?

A So the offer has already been conveyed?

Q Well, let's take a step back. How do you approach a case where the case may result in a guilty plea?

A If it looks like that's the direction the case is going, I would first I want to consult with the client to make sure that I'm reading that correctly. Then if that's correct, I would go to the prosecutor, obtain an offer, take that offer back to the client and begin the negotiation process. Well, I guess the negotiation process really begins the first time you approach the prosecutor, but. So from there, once the offer has been conveyed and potentially accepted by the client, that pretty much ends the guilty plea process. But if the client refuses the offer, that then again you do negotiations.

Q Do you have adequate time and resources to negotiate and consult with your client for guilty pleas?

A I think in order to adequately consult with the client about a guilty plea you have to have already done all the work. So it's not a simple answer as yes or no because it would assume that you've already investigated the case. You have interviewed the witnesses. You have done everything that an attorney should do in the case to be competent. So if I were competent in my representation, then yes.

Q Do you think you -- you said if you were competent in the representation, your answer would be yes. In your experience, are you able to do all of those things that you think are necessary to provide adequate advice on a guilty plea?

Page 51

A Sometimes, but rarely.

Q Why do you say rarely?

A Because most of the time we are rushing through the case. And I think any time, you know, an attorney shouldn't be rushing through a case. You should be taking the time the case deserves and the client deserves. But because we rush, we are inevitably going to miss things, potentially. So it's hard to know. I mean, there are some cases where you're rushed and it's fine, but I think that's the exception not the norm.

Q In your opinion, do the attorneys in your office have adequate time and resources to prepare their cases to the point where they can advise and negotiate effectively for guilty pleas?

A No.

Q Why not?

A Most of them don't have the experience to know whether or not a client should plea or not to a particular case.

Q Why is experience important to determining whether to plea?

A Because you have to know whether or not that case and the facts of that case if you pushed it to trial, you would get a different outcome. The other factor is an inexperienced attorney is at a great disadvantage of negotiation with the prosecutor. If they've never tried a case, the prosecutor can use that to their advantage. It's a scary thing to try a case for the first time. And so I think a lot of young attorneys will oversell a plea deal because they don't -- they are afraid of a trial or they are afraid they will screw something up. So rather than take that risk and put forth that effort, they kind of force the plea deal. That being said, if they had the time or if they had a mentor or somebody who could help them long the way, I think that prevents a lot of that.

Q So in your opinion even for cases with inexperienced lawyers, having more time and more resources would assist in their ability to effectively advocate and negotiate guilty pleas?

A Yes. And one of the resources I think that is missing a lot of times is to have a mentorship at least in my office. I can't speak for other places.

Q Without getting into specifics or compromising privilege, can you think of a time where a client may have received a better plea deal had you or one of your attorneys had more time to devote to the case?

A Hard to say because you don't know that they would have.

Q Fair.

A I can say that I have intervened in cases where I felt the client wasn't getting the best offer because the prosecutors are taking advantage of the inexperience of my younger attorneys. I can -- there are many instances where I have been able to get better deals.

Q In your opinion, if they had more time and resources would you have to intervene as frequently?

A No.

Q I'm going to hand you a document that I'll ask the court reporter to mark Plaintiff's Exhibit 55 -- never mind. Are any of your attorney's specialist at immigration law?

A No.

Q Do you or your attorneys have training in immigration consequences of criminal convictions?

A I have had very minimal training and I suspect probably my APD IV has had training, minimal training.

Q What steps do attorneys in your office take to evaluate the immigration consequences a client may be facing?

A In my office we don't have a lot of immigrants. We always -- like I mentioned the intake sheet. One of the things the questions that we ask as part of the intake is are you a U.S. citizen, were you born in the United States. That's also a question on the Acknowledgment of Rights form that we have to use for guilty pleas; are you a U.S. citizen. It is very rare to get someone who is not a U.S. citizen in my jurisdiction. If we get somebody who is not a U.S. citizen, we would generally, I would advise the attorney to consult with an expert outside of our office. So I think, I don't remember their name, but MSPD used to and may still have an attorney out of St. Louis that is a specialist in immigration law. If they didn't or if that person no longer is there or that position no longer exists, then I would advise my attorneys to consult a private attorney. But that being said, it is rare that we get an immigrant.

Q Are you aware of any cases where a lack of time or resources hindered the ability to advise a client on immigration consequences?

A Yes.

Q Can you recall generally what the circumstances of that case were?

A I can and let me preface it by I'm not a 100 percent sure they were an immigrant but I know they were Spanish speaking. So any time you get somebody that English is not their first language, you know, you need to decide whether or not to bring in a translator. That creates a lot of problems in terms of, again time is always an issue. So that takes a lot more time when you have to go through a translator. So I suspect, even though not consciously, but certainly subconsciously you're going to limit the number of visits you do because of the time. But I know in that particular instance I'm not hundred percent sure it was an immigrant or not but I remember because they were Spanish speaking, that there was a lot of issues getting a translator to come to the rural part, rural county, Crawford county. The attorney, because of their schedule, had great difficulty in arranging times that would work for everyone. Court was a major issue getting a translator to sit next to the attorney and that sort of thing.

Q So the caseload and time constraints affect the ability to obtain outside resources like translators?

A Yes.

Q Do your attorneys ever consult with social workers for sentencing or other aspects of their cases?

A I can tell you in my practice, I have consulted with a sentencing mitigation specialist twice.

Q In your opinion, if you had adequate time and resources would you consult with a sentencing mitigation expert more frequently?

A If I had the resources, I would do it in every case where I did not have a plea agreement.

Q Why would you do it in every case?

A Because I have seen the impact it has. Part of what those mitigation specialist can do is they know the resources available. They know the right questions to ask. They can do a lot more than I know how to do. Part of that is they have the time. So I suppose if I had unlimited time, I probably wouldn't need one very often because I could do it myself. But when I have consulted with them it's amazing what they can do and the way it impacts the outcome of the sentencing hearing. Things that I just couldn't do it on my own. The other issue is, again, because of their experience and their knowledge, they can take an issue that we have in a rural areas where there is no halfway homes. We don't even have a homeless shelter in any of my counties. We don't have any real good treatment programs. There is none of that. So it's very difficult for us to find those facilities and get our clients into them to help assist them with, you know, better outcomes in their case and hopefully rehabilitation, drug counseling, and that sort of thing. Those mitigating specialist, again, they know the whole state and they know other states and they can provide those resources.

Q And those mitigation specialist are not MSPD employees?

A I think there used to be mitigation specialists. I never known them and when I have used them in the past they are private individuals.

Page 57

Q Do other attorneys in your office use mitigation specialists for sentencing?
A I think I have approved one request that's because there has only been one request.
Q In your opinion, do resource and time constraints impact your attorneys ability to use resources like mitigation sentencing consultants?
A Yes. Again, I would use them all the time if I had the ability and the time to do it. The younger attorneys, I don't think they know what they are or that they even are a possibility.
Q If you had the time would you advise, and if your attorneys had the time, would you advise them to be using sentencing mitigation specialists?
A Absolutely.
Q How does your office handle juvenile cases?
A Just like any other.
Q What kind of juvenile cases do you receive?
A We don't receive very many. I think there is kind of a reluctance by the juvenile division to encourage the use of attorneys in our area. They do not like us to get involved so they find ways to avoid getting us involved.
Q How can they avoid getting the MSPD involved in the juvenile --

Page 58

A I don't know if they still do this, but it was about a year ago or so they were telling the juveniles that if they could take the deal or they could get an attorney, but if they got an attorney it would be worse for them.
Q And would these deals involve detention?
A I think typically the way it works -- and this is just from anecdotal type evidence -- is typically it's going to be probation first. Then it's going to be detention if probation fails. We almost never get involved at the probation level. If we get involved, it's to stand there as they go to detention. And then we also do certification hearing.
Q Are there any attorneys in your office who specialize in juvenile proceedings?
A No.
Q Do any attorneys in your office have specialized training or have any training in juvenile proceeding?
A Minimal.
Q How do you assign juvenile cases to attorneys in your office?
A Generally speaking I assign them to the experienced attorneys. So myself, my deputy district defender and two other attorneys.
Q Why do you assign them to the more experienced attorneys?

Page 59

A Because what's at stake. So generally speaking, we're only getting involved if it's a certification hearing. If it's just a detention hearing, you know, I might assign that to someone else. But the certification hearing, because of the severity and what's at risk for that young person, I want it to go to an experienced attorney.
Q And for the record, what is at risk for a juvenile?
A Well, if they are being certified, it means they are going to be removed from the juvenile system and tried as an adult in the adult court.
Q How often does your office handle a certification hearing?
A A couple a year.
Q Does your caseload or lack of resources impact your office's ability to effectively represent juveniles in certification hearings?
A Yes.
Q How?
A Well, like I said, we treat them like any other case other than I try to assign them to more senior attorneys, but the time constraints still apply to those cases. The other issue when you're dealing with certification is generally the children are going to be in DYS custody at that point. So they are going to be held pending the hearing. That generally means that they are going to be shipped to some far corner of the state and so it's very difficult to have communication with them. And with a juvenile, they require, in some instances, a lot more face-to-face time because of their development. And so it ends up taking a great deal of time to meet with the client more regularly than say somebody who is, you know, on their fourth or fifth felony who has been through the system and they understand it. So that impacts the ability to represent them because, again, we just don't have the time or resources to meet with them on a regular basis. The charges are usually very severe. So we are usually dealing with murder or rape or something to that effect. Same challenges with those; you just don't have the resources to devote, you know, a hundred hours or whatever it takes to handle a murder case. You do your best with what you got, but at the end of the day you're probably not doing enough.

Q In your opinion, can the attorneys in your office currently adequately represent all of the clients on their docket?
A No.
Q Why not?

Page 61

A There is too many.
Q In your opinion, could any attorney, no matter how expert, adequately represent clients given the constraints facing lawyers in your office?
A No, there is -- well, no.
Q Why not?
A The idea that you could handle 150 felonies or 150 misdemeanors at one point in time effectively, I think if you have experience and you know what you can do in those cases and the impacts that you can have if you devote the time necessary to those; I think any experienced attorney would say that's not possible. There are attorneys certainly who say I can do it. But I think if you got down to it and we talked about the guidelines; if you went through the guidelines and said well, have you done everything that's in the guidelines, I don't think that's possible. I don't know what the number would be, but I can tell you that the numbers in my office I don't think it would be possible for even the best attorney to handle the caseload.
Q I'm going to hand you an exhibit that's previously been marked Plaintiff 50. If you can just take a second and flip through that. Do you recognize this document?
A I recognize what's contained -- well, I recognize most of it. I don't recognize -- individually, I don't recognize the document itself.

Q Could you flip to the last page?
A Yes.
Q Do you recognize this page?
A I do.
Q What is it?
A It is the caseload metrics for the system and it appears to be for the period of July 2016 to June 30, 2017. So I guess fiscal year 2017.
Q Do you see Area 25 on here?
A I do.
Q What rank is it listed on this document? I think it's over on the right-hand side.
A We are ranked it appears to be 17th.
Q What percentage -- what does it say on this document for percentage of capacity for Area 25?
A It says 252.2 percent.
Q Do you have an understanding of what that percentage reflects?
A My understanding is it reflects the amount we are over capacity. So if we had adequate staff -- and I believe it's based on the RubinBrown Missouri Project -- if we had adequate staff -- or we are 252.2 percent over the amount of cases we should have based on that analysis by

RubinBrown.
Q Setting aside the RubinBrown metrics, I'm not asking you to give me an exact percentage of how far over capacity you are, but roughly would you say this accurately reflects that your office is over capacity?
A It reflects my office is over capacity, but I don't think it's completely accurate.
Q Why not?
A Well, it expects or I think it takes into consideration that I have 14 attorneys and 14 attorneys is what I would have if I'm fully staffed. In the last year I have had to hire ten attorneys, so I have had -- I don't know what percent over -- I'm constantly hiring. In fact, I have an interview with an attorney tomorrow afternoon -- yeah, tomorrow afternoon for an opening. The other thing I think that the RubinBrown numbers, why I think it may be actually a little low based on that, is because I think it takes into account experienced attorneys that you know what you're doing. Again, most of my attorneys are brand new. So they don't necessarily know what they are doing. So I have to spend a lot of time with them and the other experienced attorneys are spending a lot of time with them and that's time they are not actually spending on their cases. So I think that is probably also not reflected in the 252.2 percent.

Q And so in your opinion this is a more conservatives estimate of the overwork in your office than you think would be fairly reflected?
A I do. And it's conservative also because it doesn't take into account, at least my understanding is it doesn't take into account administrative tasks and training. It also expects that you're working 50 -- yeah, 50 weeks out of the year, which, you know, my attorneys probably do. I have attorneys that lose time every year. But we get three weeks of vacation and so, it doesn't take into account that. It doesn't take into account the fact we get, I think, 11 or 12 paid holidays. So I mean, from that standpoint -- again, I'm not expecting my attorneys to complain about that, but nevertheless, it reflects 50 weeks of work, which, you know, as a state employee that's a little offensive. We don't expect other state employees to work on their weeks off or their days off, so.
Q And to unpack a bit of what you said; so you pointed out that this anticipates 14 attorneys. You're referring to the column right next to area named "Rolla" that says number of attorneys 14?
A Yes.
Q And you said for the time period that this covers is fiscal year '17, you have hired 11 new attorneys if I heard correctly?

A In the last 18 months, I think we have hired ten new attorneys and I believe we will be hiring our eleventh hopefully soon, if we can find somebody.

Q What goes into training the new attorneys that you're hired -- that you have been hiring?

A Well, MSPD as a system has training for new attorneys. A week-long trial skills program that teaches the basics of how to try a case. A week-long what we call New Defender Workshop, which kinds of teaches them the basics of how to meet with the client, how to do your deposition, how to do kind of the more nuts and bolts day-to-day operations. We also do a new employee orientation, which is a day where they basically get their sexual harassment training and kind of familiarized with the -- our case management system and our HR division and that sort of thing. So a new attorney is going to spend two weeks in learning how to do litigation, a day in kind of learning, you know, not to be sexual harassing people and that sort of thing. And then we also have a requirement that the first three years of employment they go to our spring training, which is your more typical CLE training where you would have -- there is different breakout type sessions that cover different things depending on what the attorney feels they need to work on, so there is three more days. So two weeks and four days as a system.

Q What about the training that you do in your office?

A The training that we do is really more hands-on. I mean, we used -- we have tried several times to implement more in-house training but getting people to find time to do that is almost impossible. We have done some and, you know, I usually will sit down with the new attorneys and go through some of the basics with them. We try to pair new attorneys with more senior attorneys, but that is beginning to fail because a senior attorney in my office is someone with maybe a year experience. It's basically it's the last person remaining, not so much the most experienced attorney. So I have several attorneys who are training new attorneys who have less than a year experience, but it's hands-on in my office.

Q And could you remind me roughly what percentage of your time is spent training or supervising new attorneys?

A I think I said somewhere between -- I can't remember, either 40, 50, 60, 70. The more I think about it, the more I think is more time really. It's the bulk of my time is spent with new attorneys.

Q What do you do to train and supervise new attorneys?

Page 67

A When attorneys -- so in my office I maintain sort of an open door where I encourage attorneys to come to me with questions. So a lot of it is hey, I have got this case and we kind of walk through the case together. And throughout that process you kind of identify areas where okay you need to meet with this client in seven days and every 30 days and kind of go through what the requirements of the system are with them. That's the bulk of it. Like I said, it's kind of hands-on just walking through the cases that they have.

Q Why is that important for new attorneys?

A New attorneys have a great deal of difficulty issue spotting. They also have a great deal of difficulty knowing the procedure and the process. You know, law school doesn't teach you how court goes in the 25th Judicial Circuit. It may teach you civil procedure and criminal procedure, but that doesn't mean anything when you step into a courtroom. And so a lot of the questions are really basic questions about like, you know, where is court or how do I get to the jail or what's the pass code to get back in chambers to talk to the judge. I mean, it's that basic with these new attorneys. And then as, you know, usually, you know, that first year the questions start to get more advanced and we start to work on case specific, suppression issues and things like that and then we start over because they leave.

Q Does your existing caseload impact your ability to mentor and supervise other attorneys in your office?

A It does. I mean, that's the difficulty trying to find the balance. What time do I spend on my cases versus what time do I spend on theirs. And so when I'm in the office I try to make myself available to help the new attorneys because my goal is to get them trained and get them where they can be independent because that's going to be the most value to me. What that means though is that I'm spending more time outside typical office hours working on my own cases.

Q You mentioned you have hired a lot of new attorneys recently. Is that typical in your experience?

A I think MSPD has always had high turnover. My office has gotten progressively worse and the pools of candidates have gotten worse. So now it's not only do we have the high turnover, but the candidates we are getting are not as good.

Q Why do you think that turnover has gotten higher?

A I think the recession had a great impact on the quality of candidates and the amount of time they stick around, but that no longer is an issue so we have seen people getting hired out more frequently. I think there is also maybe fewer graduates. I don't know what the issue is, but we have a high turnover. And in addition, the prosecutor's offices, they continue to grow and so I train attorneys to go become prosecutor's. Not intentionally, but that's the effect.

Q So attorneys from your office have left to join the prosecutors office?

A Yes.

Q Why were their reasons for leaving and join the prosecutors office?

A Well, the one that's leaving at the end of the week is becoming a prosecutor. He is leaving because he is tired -- this is what he told me yesterday -- he is tired of taking the cases home with him at night. He didn't mean working on them at night; he meant the fact that he knew he had a client sitting in jail that he hadn't seen who is just kind of wasting away in jail. It wears on these new attorneys. Well, it wears on every attorney I think when you know that you have clients. You have people because these aren't just cases, these aren't just numbers, these are people. When you can't do the things to help them that you know you should be able to do, I think that really wears people down over time and you get burned out. That's what he tells me. I believe him. I think a lot of the people that we hire are passionate about this. They really do believe there is injustice and they want to help the clients. There is other realities too though. He is leaving the job with us where he's making $39,000.00 a year and he's going to get paid $45,000.00 a year, at least I believe. He's also going to have freedom. He can control his caseload. He can't control it with us. He's also going to get respect. So he's going to be able to, you know, get respect from not only the judges and other prosecutors but the people in the community because nobody likes a public defender. So I think all those things kind of come together and it's very difficult to want to do this job long-term when nobody has any respect for what you do. You don't get paid very well for what you do and you lose that fire that you had when you were in law school about wanting to help people or fight injustice or, you know, defend the Constitution or whatever it was that motivated you to become a public defender in the first place.

Q Would you say the reasons that this attorney gave you or that you think may have motivated him are particular to him or do they apply to other attorneys who have left your office recently? Let me ask it in a more basic way: What have other attorneys told you are the reasons for why they have left the office?

A It's almost universally the same. One attorney left after in court the judge -- he asked for a continuance. The judge said no, I'm not giving it to you. You're never ready. He said that in open court. And so that was kind of the last straw for that attorney that he was berated in court and told he was never ready, when it's true, but it's not his fault. So he put in his notice three weeks later when he became a prosecutor and he loves his job now.

Q In your opinion, how many more attorneys would you need to bring caseloads down to levels where you could adequately represent your clients?

A It a difficult question to answer because I have never been in a system where we had adequate attorneys. So I think my judgment is colored by the fact that, you know, when I started I had 200 cases and I handled them or I thought I handled them well it turns out that's probably not true. So what do you go off of? There is the RubinBrown Missouri Project, there is the NACS standards, there is my own personal views. I will say this, I think realistically if I'm going to do the things that I want to do, if I'm going to meet the guidelines I would need double.

Q How many additional investigators would you need to support your attorneys in being able to effectively represent their clients?

A I currently have two. Again, it's hard to say because if my attorneys were able to do more and get more invested in their case and do more work, they would certainly be requesting more. Right now, my investigators only have time to serve subpoenas. So I would say we would need at least double, so four, but probably more than that. But again, it's hard to know.

Q How do you supervise your new attorneys as they manage their ongoing cases?

A So we track caseload through our internal database called Lotus Notes. That's the predominate way that I would keep an eye on their caseload because it lists it out for me. I also have regular conversations with the attorneys to determine, you know, are they comfortable with where they are at, do they think they can handle more. This has been a more recent development based on the waitlisting. Prior to that, it was just as the cases came into your county, you take them and, you know, their caseload may be 200 cases, it may be 100. It just depends.

Q So let's turn to how things have changed recently. Are you familiar with the Hinkebein decision?

A I am.

Q What is your understanding of what happened in that case?

A My understanding is that Mr. Hinkebein, he was being sanctioned -- or that the Office of Chief Disciplinary Council was moving to sanction him because he was unable to meet the requirements that were set forth in his particular case. I don't remember the exact details of what it is was, but I think he missed some deadlines and filings or something to that effect. And that the OCDC had decided to file a complaint against him and that he was eventually sanctioned by the Supreme Court and put on probation. The defense in that case was that he had cancer or that he had a medical condition and that he had a caseload that was far in excessive of any reasonably caseload and that he believed he would be fired if he didn't handle it. So that's kind of my general understanding. I have listened to the oral arguments. But beyond that, I don't know Mr. Hinkebein personally. I don't know any of the parties.

Q Did that decision have an impact on attorneys in your office?

A Yes.

Q What was that impact?

A Well, in terms of myself and my deputy, it made our job miserable. Before that, you know, we got by. But we thought we were -- we thought at a minimum, you know, we thought Strickland v. Washington was the standard. We thought we were at least meeting that standard that, you know, we were providing -- if we did that, we were providing ethical representation even though it wasn't the representation we thought clients deserved. When Hinkebein happened, we realized that there was this gap between what is ineffective assistance of counsel and ethical representation and that Strickland is ineffective assistance of counsel, but you can still be unethically representing your clients if you're following that standard. So we realized all along we have been unethical. That's what Hinkebein told us that we were unethical attorneys because of the conflicts of interest that we had between our clients when we took on additional clients. So that was very -- that was an eyeopener I should say. It brought to attention the problem in a different light. And it was kind of scary in the sense that, you know, with Hinkebein they looked back I think three or four years and how many clients had I represented in, you know, the last three or four years, hundreds, and what have I messed up. So it really bothered us because it also said in the ethical rules that as a supervisor, I have a responsibility to the people I supervise to ensure their caseloads are maintained in an ethical manner. That's why we started waitlisting. I know of attorneys who have decided Hinkebein is kind of the last straw who have left. I can't say anybody in my office has left for that reason, but I certainly think it's impacted their decision at least in a couple of instances.

Q When you said that you'd previously been viewing it through the Strickland standard; in your opinion what was the Strickland standard prior to Hinkebein? I'm not trying to put you on the spot.

A I think the idea in Strickland is that you do some basic things. I don't remember the opinion verbatim. I don't have that kind of memory. My understanding basically was like, look, if you're going to represent someone, you meet with them. You get discovery before you plead them and you review that discovery. You do some basic things that we expect attorneys to do in every case. But I never viewed it as something where, okay, if I can't get to this client today because I have client "x" because of client "y" that that was an issue. It was just what we had to do. Ultimately, you know, we would do the bear minimum, get the discovery and meet with the client. So that was kind of my view of Strickland.

Q So in your view, Hinkebein, by focusing on the ethical rules, brought into view things like conflicts of interest between existing clients; is that fair to say?

A Well, not only that, it brought in, you know, I think we always try to be -- we always tried to meet the diligence, communication, and that sort of thing. The rules for Missouri Supreme Court Rules IV says you have to do. But it was always kind of like -- at least in my mind -- there was always some understanding, we'll we're public defenders so there is going to be some leeway given because everybody understands that we are overworked. That we have too many cases and that if they didn't feel that way, then something would change. But when Hinkebein came along, they said you have too many cases and you have to be proactive in doing something about it or you'll lose your job. So that -- that's what really brought to attention those ethical rules that said look these aren't just aspirational. These apply to public defenders too. So we have a duty of diligence, which means we have to be prompt. We have a duty of communication, which I think our guidelines are ridiculous in that regard. You have to meet with a client within seven days if they are in custody, you know, and every 30 days thereafter. That's not the representation I would want for myself, but that's our guideline.

Q You would want more communication than that?

A I would certainly want more than that. The idea that I could be sitting in jail for seven days and not be -- not see an attorney, that's crazy. That's absolutely crazy, but that's what we have accepted as okay. In my office, it's probably rare that we get -- that we meet that deadline. I mean, I think all the attorneys try really hard to be diligent in that respect and to communicate with their clients as best they can. But, again, it's not just possible with the number of clients that we have. And then the other issue that's come up as a supervisor as I have to look at competency. Are my attorneys competent. I can't give a brand new attorney a murder first unless I really hover over them and supervise them. And so we have a huge problem in my office of competency. You know, I have a bunch of new attorneys who don't know what they are doing. And so as their supervisor, I have to manage their caseload appropriately and make sure that they are doing the things that that case requires.

Q Did any attorneys in your office talk to you about the Hinkebein decision or how it affected their ability to do their jobs?

A I met with every attorney in my office after the Hinkebein decision to talk with them about their caseload and every one of them indicated that they could not ethically handle the caseload they had.

Q What did you do after meeting with the attorneys in your office about Hinkebein?

A That's when I began a waitlist. So I sent an e-mail to all the judges basically stating that because of our workload, because of the fact that my attorneys can't ethically represent the clients that they have, I'm going to be begin waitlisting clients. We are not going to refuse them, but we are only going to be able to handle the ones that we can at any given time and still be following the rules of professional conduct.

Q I'm going to hand you a document that we're going to ask the court reporter to mark Exhibit 55. Do are you recognize this document?

A I do.

Q What is it?

A It is the letter that I sent to the judges after I met with the attorneys in my office regarding their caseload and workload.

Q So you've referenced a waitlist both in this document and in your deposition testimony today. Could you explain what you mean by creating a waitlist?

A So when we receive an application from a potential client, normally we would enter our appearance in that case and begin, you know, file a request for discovery or whatever work needed to be done. Once I implemented the waitlist, the way that worked was when we would receive the application we would notify the court and say we have received the application, this person either qualifies or they don't. If they qualify, they would go on our waitlist. Basically what that is we create an Excel sheet that had each county and the judge and had different columns for what information we thought was pertinent for the judges to have. We would send that out on a daily basis just to let the courts and the prosecutors know these are the people that have applied. These are the people that qualify and this is where they are at on our waitlist.

Q How many people are on that waitlist?

A Currently?

Q Currently.

A I don't know currently off the top of my head. Last time I looked it was over 200.

Q Since you began the waitlist has that number grown, stayed steady or dropped?

A Well, the waitlist started with zero. We did not add anybody to it who we already represented. So, you know, as of September 29 or maybe probably really October 1, I don't remember the first day we would have actually sent it out, you know, there would have been two or three people. It's just continually grown. Cases have come off. So as I have regular meetings with the attorneys and as they inform me that they are able to take more cases and as I review their caseload and as I believe they are able to take more cases, I assign cases to them. I may be getting beyond the scope of your question, so if you want me to continue I will, but --

Q Feel free.

A So the judges throughout this process the ones that have -- there has been some judges that have given it some credibility and have kind of followed it. Those judges requested that I prioritize by people in jail because I don't believe I can create a priority list. I think there is case law that suggest that I can't pick types of cases. The judges ask can you please take people off the list that are in jail first; so we have done that. Some judges basically said that the waitlist was in violation of 600.062 and 600.063. Those judges have been ordering myself and the public defender system into the cases. We originally filed a writ of prohibition to the court of appeals and the Supreme Court. It was denied. It was sent back because they said we need to do 600.063. So some of the cases are not included in that 200 because they have been open to me. And that's a separate category on the waitlist. Again, I have roughly 30 or 40 cases before the waitlist; now I have 130.

Q So when you testified earlier that you have 130 cases on your docket, that includes cases that otherwise would have been on this waitlist but where judges have ordered you to appear over objection?

A Yes.

Q And have you been treating those cases separately from the other cases on your docket?

A No. Except to the extent that because the judge has specifically ordered me into them, I have prioritize them when I assign cases out because it's my interpretation that if a judge specifically orders me in a case, it must be a priority. So when new attorneys have case availability, I give them those cases first, whether they are in jail or not. In terms of handling the cases differently than the cases I had prior to this, it's kind of difficult to answer that. I don't -- I mean, I'm given deadlines by the court and court dates. So if a case is on for a hearing, I don't really have the luxury of saying well, I'm going to push it aside and just handle my original 30. The same ethical rules apply to those cases where the judge I believe has ordered me in. I think the judge is violating the rule by appointing me knowing I can't handle it, but I can't challenge it because the Supreme Court has said file 600.063.
Q Before you were being ordered into these cases, you said your docket was roughly 30 cases?
A It ranged between 30 and 50.
Q What kinds of cases are on the waitlist?
A All kinds.
Q Murder cases?
A I don't think there is currently a murder.

Page 82

There was and then the judge ordered us in.
Q A, B felony case?
A Yes. There are definitely A,B. They are robbery first. There are serious cases on there.
Q And you said that some of the people on the waiting list are currently in custody?
A Yes.
Q Do you know roughly how many people?
A Probably close to maybe 50 percent. In Crawford County, one of our counties that was probably the most overloaded, we created the waitlist. No cases have come off that waitlist except for two or three where the judge has specifically ordered us in. So there is a lot of people in jail in that county who are on the waitlist. So that kind of probably increases the average. The other counties we have been able to pull people out of jail and get them off the waitlist a little faster.
Q Have you received any reaction from people who are on the waitlist?
A Yes. I have a stack of letters of -- I would call them complaint letters, but I don't know that that's really the right word. They are saying, you know, I need an attorney or you're my attorney, how come I haven't seen you; that kind of thing. But that pile just grows, it doesn't every shrink.

Q For the people who are on the waitlist, what happens to their criminal cases while they are on that waitlist?
A Most of them, the judges have been passing counsel status hearings.
Q Do you know of any people on the waitlist who have pleaded guilty without counsel?
A I don't know any specific examples. I'm sure it's happened. A lot of the judges are reluctant to do anything with the case since they have applied for the public defender and we have indicated to the court they qualify. So the judges -- I think most judges are reluctant to do anything with them. But I know or at least I'm fairly confident that in at least a couple of circumstances people have pled guilty.
Q What circumstances were those?
A Well, the circumstances would be the county that they were in. So Texas County, I would guess that a number of those people who were in jail, especially on lower-level charges like misdemeanors and probably low-level felonies, the prosecutor probably got them to plead because it was probably the promise of probation.
Q And you said probably because you have no personal knowledge of those cases?

Texas County, so I know it happens and I wouldn't be surprised if people on the waitlist. One of the weaknesses of the waitlist is that it would expect, or at least I would expect that we would go through and evaluate it from time to time to make sure that these people haven't hired counsel or pled. I haven't really had the luxury to reevaluate it. So 200 cases on the waitlist or 200 clients on the waitlist, you know, it may be slightly less because some of those people have maybe they have hired counsel or maybe they have pled, but I have no way to -- well, I have a way to do it, but I don't have the time to do it.
Q How have judges in your area responded to this letter that you e-mailed them?
A Well, most of them ignored it. We met with all the judges. So I sent this letter and then we then met with all of them to talk with them about it. One of them threatened or made a veiled threat of holding me in contempt. A couple of them were in agreement that something needed to be done and they actually, I think, made attempts to assist us and that would have been the 42nd Judicial Circuit. So they did things like basically abided by the waitlist. They didn't order us in any cases. They made some minor attempts to appoint private counsel. But that's the exception, so.
Q What do you mean when you say minor attempts to appoint private counsel?

A Well, if there is -- I know of at least one instance where a private attorney was in the courtroom and it was a probation matter and we had indicated this particular person was on the waitlist. The judge looks around and sees this private attorney and says to the attorney, "Welcome to court today. I'm appointing you in this case."
Q Do you know who that attorney was?
A Yes.
Q Did they have prior criminal experience?
A Yes.
Q Do you have any supervision over that case that otherwise would have been assigned to the MSPD?
A No.
Q So I'm going to hand you another document that we'll mark -- we'll ask the court reporter to mark Exhibit 56. Do you recognize this document?
A I do.
Q What is it?
A Again, it's the correspondence I sent to the judges. I think it's -- well, at least the first two pages are the same document that was Exhibit 55, I believe.
Q What about the rest of this exhibit?
A This was correspondence with one of the judges -- well, it looks like it's e-mails that I sent in regards to the waitlist and the caseload issues in general. There is an e-mail I sent to one of the prosecuting attorneys and then correspondence between one of the circuit judges and one of the attorneys who is no longer in my office.

Q Let's -- I think this is how it's produced but I think as you indicated it's a few different e-mail threads. So let's start on the second to last page that's Bates Stamped and dated 39446.
A Okay.
Q What e-mail does this appear to be to you?
A This was an email that I sent to Kevin Hillman kind of letting him -- updating him on what we were doing regarding the waitlist.
Q Who is Kevin Hillman?
A He is the elected prosecutor of Pulaski County.
Q Why were you sending the e-mail to Kevin Hillman about the waitlist?
A I think -- I'm having difficulty remembering because I had a lot of conversations. We met with Mr. Hillman and talked with him about the issue. I think at this point in time there was a document circulating amongst the prosecutors that was an objection to the waitlist and it was saying that we were violating 600.063 and 600.062. And so I think he was asking, you know, was this something going on. Were we being ordered to do this or was I doing this on my own. I said no, this is coming my attorneys and me and not Columbia.

Q And by Columbia, you mean the central MSPD office?
A Right.
Q So your understanding is he had expressed concern that this was an order coming from the MSPD central office?
A Right.
Q And you were explaining to him that this was the decision your office and your attorneys had made?
A Right. Because we had -- I think one of my attorneys had told him that this was coming from Columbia, and I just think they didn't understand who was actually creating the waitlist. It had nothing to do with Columbia. I didn't ask for permission. I don't even think I notified -- I probably sent them a copy of it. I don't think I said hey Jackie is it okay that I do this. I'm pretty sure I just did it.
Q Do you see in here a reference to a meeting with Judge Long and Judge Hedrick?
A Hedrick.

Page 88

Q Hedrick.
A Yes.
Q It says you were planning to go to meet with them. Do you know if that meeting took place?
A It took place with Judge Long, not with Judge Hedrick. I don't think Judge Hedrick was available that day. He -- honestly, I don't know that we actually ever met with Judge Hedrick now that I think about it. He is the family court judge and the civil judge and he doesn't really handle criminal cases except for maybe a few change of judges. Judge Long is the main judge for criminal cases in Pulaski County. Sorry.
Q No go ahead.
A That meeting with Judge Long did occur.
Q What happened at that meeting?
A The judge in chambers acknowledged more or less that yeah, you guys got a problem. But like most judges, they are not really able to do anything about it or at least they feel like they can't and that it's our problem, not theirs. He kind of had a let's wait and see approach to the waitlist. It was a cordial meeting. One of the prosecutors was there. I don't remember if Kevin was there. I know Brice Crowly and one of the assistant prosecutors was at that meeting in chambers. We just kind of outlined where we were at and why we were there and how we got there. This judge, Judge Long, it wasn't long before he adopted the policy of appointing me, so he's one of the judges who disregarded the waitlist.

Q If you look at the prior two pages ending in Bates Stamped 44 and 45, what does this e-mail chain appear to refer to you?

A This was in reference to Michael Jacobs, an attorney who was in my office at the time, but who got hired as the district defender of our Troy office. And Mr. Jacobs when he got that position, I told him that I would not be reassigning his cases to another attorney in my office because I didn't believe I had any attorney who could take those cases until we got somebody to replace him. And so this is kind of -- this was his attempt to see if he could get the judges to let him out of those cases. Judge Hickle would not let him out without another attorney entering.

Q And if you turn back to Bates -- the prior page ending in Bates Stamp 43 I think that e-mail from you, does it appear that e-mail from you to Judge Hickle is also part of this e-mail chain?

A Yes.

Q So this e-mail says that you would be happy to meet with Judge Hickle to discuss Mr. Jacobs cases. You indicated that Judge Hickle would not allow him to simply withdraw from those cases. So what was the result of this exchange?

A Mr. Jacobs still has one or maybe two cases. When I -- after -- I could not keep Michael Jacobs in Rolla. That became very clear. I could not -- he could not keep the cases and be the district defender in Troy. It's just not logistically possible.

Q How far is Troy from Rolla?

A It's maybe 150-miles. It's over a two-hour drive. Michael was handling Texas County, which is another 50-miles, an hour down the road. So it would be over three hours for him to go to court and meet with clients one way. What happened as a result of that is that again the judge would not let Michael out, which I was okay with because I didn't have anybody to give the cases to. But through discussions with our director, trial division director and our contract, our deputy director, Joel Elmer and Ellen Blau, they were able to find some money to provide to my office to contract out cases and so we were able to contract out about half of Michael's cases. The other half he disposed of over the course of the month or so that he knew he would be leaving. I took a few of his cases, the ones that we wouldn't be able to contract out. Then, like I said, he's left with maybe one or two cases, a murder first and a couple others. I don't remember what they are.

Q Why don't you try to contract out more cases given the waitlist?

A I send every single case that I have been ordered to enter since I began the waitlist, I have sent a conflict form, our standard conflict form, and it's been filled in with the case information, kind of the court dates, the client. I send every one of those to Joel Elmer, our deputy director, who is in charge of contracts saying it's a conflict. Every one of those have been denied. I have -- I don't have a budget within my own office to contract out conflicts.

Q When you have indicated that they have been conflicts, in what sense are they conflicts?

A I may get the rule wrong, but I think it's 4-1.16 or 17. In the sense that by taking that representation, that is going to take away time that I need to spend on my other clients. I can't represent them both because of the time constraints.

Q You said that these request were denied. Were you given any other explanation for why they wouldn't be contracted out?

A I think realistically -- well, there is a number of reasons I suspect and this would be speculation because I don't think Joel Elmer ever gave me anything more than denied. But I do know this, that you know, the contract budget of MSPD is limited. But probably more importantly, in my geographic area, that we are have very few panel attorneys. The panel attorneys we have handle a huge caseload of ours. I don't know how many cases we contract out a year, but I would guess it's probably at least 200. My understanding that our conflict division attempts to keep these attorneys at a reasonable level. What level that is, I don't know, but they won't give them 400 cases. You know, they are not going to give them ten murders. They are going to try and make sure clients receive adequate representation. I lost my train of thought.

Q That's all right.

A I don't remember what it was. The other thing they try to do is that, again, you have to have an attorney who is competent in handling a case and private attorneys, generally speaking, they don't have an advantage of having a system of attorneys. There is a lot of solo practitioners in our area. So for example, this murder first case that Michael Jacobs had to keep, we really wanted to contract it out. But the only attorneys that would be competent to handle it refused to take it. So even if we had $10,000.00 to pay someone to take it, because that's that rate for a murder first, nobody wanted it. So even if theoretically, you know, we have the money, but nobody wants to handle our cases.

Q In your opinion why do you think nobody wanted to handle it?
A Because of the time it takes. In fact, one of the attorneys I actually e-mailed because I thought he might be interested said he doesn't have the time to invest in it. That would it take way too much time and it would be better handled by a public defender who has the time.
Q Do you think the payment schedule for conflict cases impacts the ability to refer cases out?
A Well, certainly. I mean, if we were offering $30,000.00 for a murder first, you'd probably more people would be inclined to take it, but $10,000.00 for a murder first is kind of a joke. I mean, I wouldn't want it as a private attorney.
Q Why?
A That's way too much work. I mean, the fact that, you know, this person is facing potential of a death sentence, you know, that's a case where you generally probably don't want to leave any stone unturned to ensure they get the best representation possible because of the finality in the outcome. So the hours you would spend, you know, there is no limit. You know, murder first where they are none death take tons of time, probably, you know well over hundred hours easy when you take a death penalty case.

So I'm not going to take a case and get paid pennies on the dollar. So I think our capital division, I don't know but they have limits on how many they handle and I think it's six at a time or six a year or something like that. So if that's their limit, if you're a private attorney, you got to pay the bills.
Q So the capital division doesn't handle necessarily every capital case in the MSPD system in your understanding?
A No, they handle every capital case, but not every murder first goes capital. So every murder first has the ability if the prosecutor chooses to file aggravators and go death, they can do so. This particular case I'm talking about right now the prosecutor has not filed aggravators and has not sought the death penalty. Although yesterday he indicated he wanted this guy to get the needle, so that may change. If that changes, it will go to our capital division but right now it remains ours.
Q So a case could proceed to trial without aggravators and remain with a trial division area until aggravators are filed, then it switches to the capital division?
A Right. And we handle several murder first at any given time where they are none death.
Q When is the latest a prosecutor can file aggravators, if you know?

A I don't know but I know I had a prosecutor on a defendant murder first case say this last week that he could file up to the day of trial.
Q Do you recognize this document?
A Yes.
Q What is it?
A It is an e-mail I sent to our trial director Ellen Blau, regarding some of my concern with how things were moving.
Q Why did you send her this e-mail?
A I think I already said that this job has become miserable. This was kind of in response to that to say we need resources. We need something to happen. I can only do so much. So to the extent that my office is short of resources, I'm asking Ellen Blau, or whoever above me to give me resources to address this problem. That's the same as me sending the conflict forms to Joel Elmer, the deputy director. It is an attempt to say I can't represent these people. Please give me some help. I'm really thinking in this particular case, I'm telling Ellen I'm seriously thinking of quitting. You know, figure something out so I can keep doing this work.
Q Why were you seriously thinking of quitting?
A Because I want to do a good job. I want to be able to represent my clients. I want my attorneys to be able to represent their clients to the best of their ability. I want these clients to get their fair -- to get justice, whatever that may be. When the files continue to pile up and people continue to sit in jail and you're not doing anything about it and can't do anything about it, it leads you to start thinking about alternatives like why do I do this. Why do I continue to try to fight this injustice when nobody seems to care. Maybe I'm wrong. Maybe all that this really needs is a suit to stand up next to this person. Anyway, you begin to question why it is you do what you do and why do you put up with it everyday. I can get a job somewhere else and in fact I did start looking for other work.

Q What led you to join the MSPD in the first place?
A Well, like I said, I did the two internships in law school. I did the public defender internship. I did a civil internship. I certainly liked the money aspect of the civil, but I enjoy the public defender practice and I prefer rural area. So I didn't really want to live in a city. So between those two things, I really liked the idea of being a public defender.
Q In this e-mail, you said, "The words of Zell Fisher ring louder to me every day." Do you recall what you were referring to?

A Yes. In the Hinkebein decision, Zell Fisher, he's on the Supreme Court. He basically said -- I never get it right, but he said something along the lines like "Sometimes you do something" -- I don't remember exactly but sometimes you take a different job and that's what I'm referring to is the take a different job. If I can't provide ethical representation; if I can't do the things that I'm required to do as a lawyer that I swore to do when I took the oath and that I just signed my bar form the other day to get my new bar card, you know, and I had to reaffirm the oath. If I can't live by that doing this job, then maybe it's time to look at taking a different job because I don't want to be suspended. I don't want to lose my license. But probably more importantly, again, I think Hinkebein opened my eyes to the fact that I haven't been providing ethical representation.

Q Do you think the lawyers in your office are able to provide ethical representation?

A No.

Q I'm going to show you another set of e-mails I'll ask the court reporter to mark as Plaintiff's 58. If you just take a minute and review this document.

A Okay.

Q What does it appear to be to you?

Page 98

A This -- back when we initiated the waitlist, we received -- or I received this response from Judge Pearson, the presiding judge in the 42nd circuit. He was very concerned that people would be sitting in jail and would not receive an attorney early enough in the process. And so he had requested that we arrange a meeting to discuss what can be done. I think Judge Pearson recognized there was a problem and was trying to find ways to address the problem and so this was the back and forth to try to get together and meet.

Q Did you meet with Judge Pearson?

A I did. We had a meeting with Judge Pearson and Judge Bernstein and the assistant prosecutor of Crawford County.

Q How did that meeting go?

A We received a muted favorable reception from the judges. Again, Judge Pearson I think he will acknowledge and he has. He has provided a 600.063 order and I think he said something along the lines like they aren't able to provide effective representation. So he acknowledges that, but he want us to provide solutions to that problem and he was asking us at the meeting what solutions do we have.

Q Did you have solutions to offer him?

A We did. You know, we asked him to allow us to waitlist. We asked him to appoint private attorneys and we asked for him to be lenient on continuances with people out of custody.

Q Did he allow you to use the waitlist?

A He did.

Q Has he appointed private counsel in cases?

A I don't believe he has. But the associate judges in the 42nd; one associate judge has and the other circuit judge has.

Q Do you have an understanding of how the private bar has reacted to being appointed cases?

A Well, they do not like being appointed. I have only spoken to one who was appointed and he just kind of joked about it. But also in that same conversation, he liked the waitlist because it was generating clients for him.

Q Do you know roughly how many cases in your area have been referred to private attorneys that are -- that would otherwise be on your waitlist?

A I think two.

Q And has Judge Pearson or other judges in Texas County been granting continuances to people or been more lenient with continuances, I believe is what you said?

A I don't think we have got to the point where we have asked for continuances on cases that are cases that we have been appointed that were on the waitlist because we really haven't been appointed to very many cases. The 42nd Circuit, the judges there, it's a very relaxed circuit. So cases kind of sit forever. I mean, so at this point with these being brand new cases, they are probably getting set for trial a year from now. So it's not really something where you're saying we need anything continued. You know, time will tell.

Q Are there judicial circuits other than the ones we have talked about through these documents that I haven't mentioned that you're responsible believe for?

A The only two circuits we are responsible for are 25th and the 42nd.

Q So I'm going to show you a document that's previously been marked Petsch Exhibit 5. Do you recognize this document?

A I'm sure I have seen it, but I don't.

Q What does it appear to be to you?

A Well, it's a suggestions for a writ of prohibition that looks like it was drafted I'm guessing probably by Greg Mermelstein to be used when a court appoints us.

Q You mentioned earlier that you had filed a writ to try to object to an appointment by judges in your area. Did that writ look similar to this motion or was it different?

A I'm sure it was similar. We did not receive any assistance from our offices, our main office in Columbia, in doing our writ. We did that on our own.
Q And that writ was denied?
A It was denied at the Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court.
Q Have you filed any other writ since that writ was denied by the Supreme Court?
A The Supreme Court, although they did not issue an opinion, they checked a box that said due to 600.063 hearing because they did not deny it with prejudice. So they hinted at that we could re-file it after we do 600.063.
Q What is a 600.063 hearing?
A Well, 600.063 is a statute whereby it is our remedy when we believe that we have too many cases, we are supposed to file a motion with the court to ask the court to review our caseload. Not of all of attorneys, but just of one or some for the court to determine whether or not one, we are over worked; and two, if so, what remedies.
Q Have you filed any 600.063 motions?
A Yes.
Q How many?
A Two.

Q What was the result of the filing of those motions?
A I filed one in the 42nd Circuit and one in the 25th Circuit. In the 42nd Circuit we had a hearing. That was with Judge Pearson. He -- I don't know if grant is the right word, but he issued an Order basically saying that yes, he believed that the attorneys that I had suggested in the motion could not handle effectively their cases and he listed out a number of remedies that mirrored the statute.
Q What are those remedies?
A That the judge can waitlist. That he can be lenient with continuances. That he can appoint private counsel. That he can -- those are the three I remember. I believe there is maybe six, five or six. I don't remember what the other ones are. But he basically listed those out as potential remedies.
Q What happened in the other judicial circuit?
A The other circuit the judge has scheduled a hearing for Wednesday of next week.
Q Why did you first send the e-mail saying that you were creating a waitlist before filing a 600.063 motion?
A Well, as I expected, the 600.063 motion would not provide relief and it doesn't allow us to address an entire office, so it didn't really seem like there was a whole lot of point in following the statute in that particular instance. So I created a waitlist. I believe it's 600.062 says we cannot refuse cases. It was never my intention to refuse representing any client; that we would represent all of them. It just meant we would represent them as an attorney was available, so that was the purpose of the waitlist. So that's why I went that route.

Q I'm going to show you a document that's previously been marked Exhibit 54 -- or actually you can put that aside for one second. Finishing on 600.063; you mentioned that 600.063 doesn't apply office-wide. What was the scope of the Order that Judge Pearson entered for 600.063?
A It applied to -- in my mind it applies to Crawford and Dent County only and the attorneys in those counties. So I don't -- it's again, it's a difficult statute to understand and even though it's short, it's not technically difficult, but application-wise it was written by a legislature who doesn't really understand know court proceedings and how things happen. So they didn't even really tell you how to file it or, you know, do you file it in an individual case. I did it by just e-mailing the judge and said here is my motion. But I think Ruth filed it in a case and I don't know that neither way is wrong necessarily. So I don't know at this point whether it applies only to the three attorneys that I have in Crawford and Dent County. Does it apply to the counties? I don't know. Does it apply to other attorneys if they transfer in? Time will tell.

Q If you could look at Exhibit 54 now. Do you recognize this document?
A I do.
Q What is it?
A It is a suggested motion to withdraw that was created by, I believe, Greg Mermelstein to provide some guidance should an attorney feel that they cannot meet the demands of their caseload.
Q Why would an attorney in the MSPD use this document?
A Well, because I think probably every attorney in MSPD has an excessive caseload and probably should be moving to withdraw on cases because they are unable to provide ethical representation.
Q Have any attorneys in your area moved to withdraw from existing cases?
A One has.
Q Who is that?
A Me. I actually filed this -- I believe this motion. It's a lot of work. I spent a lot of time putting it together and it was summarily denied.

Page 105

Q There was no hearing over the motion?
A The court called it up and I said, "Judge, I filed a motion." You know, we had a little discussion on it, but that was -- that was it.
Q Do you know of any other MSPD attorneys that have filed similar motions?
A No one in my office I believe has filed this motion.
Q Do you know what the Missouri Coalition for the Right to Counsel is?
A I do not.
Q Are you aware of any pro bono programs that have been created to take criminal cases that would otherwise be handled by the MSPD?
A Yes. It may be that, I just don't remember the name. My understanding is that in St. Louis and Kansas City that some of the law firms there have agreed to take cases to help train their young attorneys in litigation.
Q But those programs are limited to, in your understanding, Kansas City and St. Louis?
A I don't think they are limited to that but in rural Missouri there are not law firms that have excess capability, I think, to take on cases like that pro bono.
Q So there are no, as far as you're aware, pro bono programs or representation in counties that your area covers?

A There are certainly no programs.
Q We talked earlier about the high rate of turnover in your office. What kinds of problems are caused by high turnover rate?
A Clients go through multiple attorneys. Every time an attorney gets a case, they have to get up to speed on a case and that takes a lot of time. So cases take much longer than they should to get to some disposition. It creates training problems. I mean, the biggest impact of the constant turnover is that, you know, it's a huge time waste to get attorneys up to speed. And then the other issue is when I'm hiring attorneys, I lose, you know, a day every time I have to do interviews.
Q How are cases transitioned when someone leaves the office?
A Traditionally, when somebody would leave the office, typically at that point they are handling more serious cases. So those cases would probably have to be given to an experienced attorney, the higher level felonies. So you would shift the caseload. So the person leaving cases would then go to next most senior attorney and that attorney would then shift their cases to the incoming attorney.
Q Does that affect the ability of attorneys in your office to provide effective representation?

A Yes.
Q How?
A Well, ideally, a client would have I think horizontal -- or vertical representation. So they have the same attorney from the date that, you know, they are charged when they first get their attorney through trial or plea. I think that goes -- that's for a whole host of reasons that I have already talked about like, you know, developing trust, understanding the case, you know, what discovery is needed, what experts are needed, why certain things have happened. You know, the memory that you get from doing a preliminary hearing or something just knowing whether a witness is credible or not. There is a whole host of things. Every time you transfer a new attorney into the case, that's lost and they don't have that same frame of reference that the other attorney had. And so you lose that every time and I think you just lose more and more every time you change attorneys. But also the client's right. I mean, the clients have a right to a speedy trial. And, you know, even if we are not asserting it, the idea that most clients that I have, you know, if they are in custody will be custody if they go to trial for a year or more, awaiting trial is in large part of a function of the fact that they have gone through four or five different attorneys by the time it gets to trial. And the only reason it's getting to trial is because now it's my case because the judge refuses to grant any further continuances and I cannot give it to a brand new attorney.

Q You said four or five attorneys for a single case; how common is it for a case in your office to be transferred to four or five attorneys over the life of the case?
A On the more serious cases, that's probably the norm. On the -- misdemeanor or C, D, E felonies that don't take a year. You know, if it's a case that only takes six months, you're probably going to have the same attorney. You know, you might go through two attorneys. But on like, you know, murder, rape, unclassified felonies, you are going to have four or five until it gets to me.
Q How long does it take you to fill a position after somebody leaves your office?
A Historically it would take a month to a month-and-a-half. Right now we have an opening. I had four applicants that were qualified. And when I say qualified, it used to mean that they at least had a license. Now qualified means that they are capable of getting a license.
Q By capable of getting a license, do you mean they are recent law school graduates who haven't passed the bar yet?

A The last person I hired, he had a license out of Oklahoma, so he had to get a temporary license and he has to take the bar in February. The two people prior to that were Rule 13. So they were law clerks in my office until they -- and I hired them in August. So they were basically practicing under my supervision up until October when they got their results.
Q And in terms of the available attorney positions that you have to fill, did those attorneys still count against those slots even though they were unable to practice --
A Yes.
Q -- by themselves?
A Yes.
MR. SHAHABIAN: I think now is a good time for a break. Go off the record.
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Going off the record. The time is 4:25 p.m. This ends Media 2.
(A recess was taken.)
THE VIDEOGRAPHER: Going back on the record. The time is 4:34 p.m. This beings Media 3.
Q (By Mr. Shahabian) Thank you for sticking around, Mr. Crowell.
A You're welcome.

Q I wanted to just touch on a few -- we are going to jump a little bit and clean up a few random things. So I want to show you a document that I will ask our court reporter to mark Plaintiff's 59. Do you recognize this document?
A I can see that I received it at some point, but I don't have an independent recollection of it.
Q What does it appear to be to you?
A An e-mail chain between Chad Picker, who would have been the district defender of my office at that and I would have been the deputy district defender, regarding judges appointing us.
Q And if you look on the second page of the document ending in Bates Stamp 59, do you see there is an e-mail from Ellen Blau that asks you to look at a spreadsheet and explain why the numbers of cases coded as judge determining indigency are above average in your area as compared to the rest of the MSPD?
A Yes, I see that.
Q What does she mean -- do you know what she means by a case coded as the judge determining indigency?
A Yes. So whenever -- whenever we receive an application we make a determination of whether or not they qualify for our services. If they qualify, it would be coded as -- I'm not sure what it would be coded as, but it would basically be that we entered the case because they met our qualifications. What this is saying is that we denied them for some reason and so we had a determination made by the judge that we needed to enter the case.

Q So these are cases where your office denied an indigency determination, but over your denial the judge independently determined the defendant to be indigent and appointed the MSPD to represent them?
A Yes.
Q And if you turn to the first page ending in Bates Stamp 58. Do you see the e-mail from Chad Picker?
A Yes, I do.
Q He says, "Ellen, it is part of the HB215 agreement with the judges to help with our caseload. If the indigent PV and misdemeanor cases cannot be resolved with the PA, judge, and defendant we are appointed." Do you have an understanding of what he's referring to in this e-mail?
A I do.
Q Could you explain what your understanding is?
A So I don't remember the year, but I believe it was sometime after the Waters decision. The legislature came out with House Bill 215, which basically kind of clarified the cases we could enter. Chad and I met with the judges and it was agreed that we would only enter into misdemeanors or probation violations if we were specifically ordered into the issue. So a lot of the cases probably why our numbers looked higher than the rest of the state was because of that agreement that the judges made with us.

Q Do you know what Mr. Picker is referring to when he says "if the indigent PV and misdemeanor cases cannot be resolved with the PA, judge, and defendant"?
A Yes. What that refers to is in a misdemeanor or probation violation, that's what PV means, it's expected in the 25th and 42nd circuit that prior to appointment of public defender in a case, that the judge -- well, that the prosecutor is going to meet with the defendant and say here is my offer in your case. So, for example, let's say it's a misdemeanor DWI. The prosecutor would meet the with the defendant and say my offer to you is a suspended imposition of sentence, you know, if you want it, you can take it; if you don't, you know, whatever. So if they agree, if the defendant takes that offer, then he would plead and that would be the end of it. If the defendant doesn't plead or does not want the offer, then the judge would consider whether or not he needs to appoint us, assuming they qualify.
Q Was jail time a possibility in these cases?
A Yes.

Page 113

Q And so to be clear, at this point prosecutors would meet with defendants who potentially qualified for MSPD representation but had not been appointed counsel?

A Right.

Q In your understanding, were those meetings -- in those meetings, did the defendants have other counsel?

A They would not have had counsel.

Q So they would meet with the prosecutors pro se?

A Yes.

Q And they would be offered sentences -- deals on charges that potentially implicated jail time?

A Yes.

Q Do you know if the deals offered included jail time as a possibility?

A I would say most of them had jail time as a possibility.

Q What kinds of sentences -- sentences would be imposed in those cases?

A I think generally speaking these agreements that are made and are still done on these misdemeanors cases are SIS probations and SES probations. So the defendant, if they accept the offer, they're going to be placed on probation. So jail time is a possibility, but only if they violate the probation. So that's what I think most of these were. Now, it does happen where a person maybe is in custody and the prosecutor said my offer is ten days, credit for time served or ten days or whatever, and the defendant may choose to take that. In the probation violation cases, those are misdemeanors and felonies. So the prosecutor would tell the defendant what their offer is for them to admit it, to the violation. And if the defendant wants it, then same sort of scenario, but obviously at that point since it's a probation violation, we are not talking fine only probation. That doesn't happen, at least not that I have ever seen. So we are always talking jail or prison time.

Q And it's only if the defendant doesn't agree to whatever the plea offer is that your office would be appointed in those cases?

A In most of those cases.

Q In what cases would you not be appointed?

A Sometimes judges, rightfully so, don't feel comfortable with this arrangement. It's usually on felonies and so they just kind of do away with this agreement, this kind of loose agreement. They say I'm appointing the public defender assuming we have already notified the court that they qualify. To give you an example, I had email yesterday where the prosecutor had offered an individual probation. The client or the defendant wanted to accept that offer and the judge refused it because he wanted the person to be represented so and he ordered me in case.

Q So these kind -- these agreements are still in effect today?

A Yes. Well, in most of my counties. We stopped doing it in Texas County because the judge there routinely violated the spirit of the agreement, which was that they would not seek jail time, and the judge routinely gives very lengthy jail sentences. So we just said, you know, don't feel -- we're not comfortable with that anymore.

Q I'm not sure I understand. Could you explain how the judge would impose jail sentences in these cases where the negotiations involved probation or the idea of no jail time?

A So obviously the judge does not have to accept any agreed-to disposition between a prosecutor and a defendant. The prosecutor in Texas County, he would say I'm offering you probation. Let's say the DWI example; the defendant is like I will take it. And so he pleads and the judge says okay, that's great. I know you want probation, but I'm not inclined to do that. So do you want to proceed? And, you know, often because these people aren't represented, they don't understand as the judge, as he's smiling at them telling them telling them do you want to proceed, they think he's going to be lenient and he gives them a six-month sentence in jail. So that happened once or twice and we realized, okay, this is not what we had intended. So in Texas County, we -- because it's clear that the judge is seeking jail time even if the prosecutor is not, we just enter the cases.

Q Why did your office enter into these agreements?

A I think at the time it was our belief that that's what House Bill 215 required. We had hoped that it would reduce caseload and so that we could focus on the more serious cases, the felonies. This rule, although it's still in effect, it really only applies anymore to the probation violations. In a couple counties, some misdemeanors still kind of go along this way. But for the most part because everybody was violating it and people were going to jail, it became quite clear that constitutional rights were being violated and we decided that I think the courts basically decided that we need attorneys in these cases. Because nobody wants to say that jail time is off the table except for us; we would be okay with that, but none of the parties that matter in this situation.

Q What were the downsides -- and I think you mentioned some of them already -- but what were the downsides for defendants who were charged with the kinds of cases that were implicated by this agreement?

A I think probably one of the biggest downside -- I mean, I think a lot of times prosecutors really were trying to be fair and give the offer that they would have given regardless. But I know of situations where it doesn't really matter if the offer is what the offer would have been to the attorney if there is a suppression issue. If there is some other mitigation that the prosecutor should be aware of, especially with the younger or the mentally challenged clients. So there is some serious disadvantages to this policy of allowing defendants to plead in misdemeanors, or any case without an attorney, to advise them of their rights and advise them of collateral consequences. A lot of people pled guilty to those cases and, you know, you see them today and, like, maybe it's a marijuana charge and that's impacted them somehow. In my little neck of the woods, maybe they pled to a misdemeanor domestic assault and they go to get their hunting permit and they can no longer own a firearm or possess a firearm, so they can't hunt. They may not seem like a big deal to someone who lives in a city, but in rural Missouri, that's huge. That's huge. So, you know, there are collateral consequences even with misdemeanors that I think the prosecutors weren't advising these people of, nor should they, but it was an impact of these people not having representation. And on top of that, I think a lot of them went on probation and then later on we're dealing with probation violations where jail time became a real possibility.

Q You mentioned that judges in your area have been appointing you to cases on the waiting list over your objection. Have they appointed any other attorneys in your district -- in your area besides you?

A You mean other public defenders?

Q Other public defenders.

A Just today. They started doing that today. Well, one did.

Q Who -- I know you have been here, but do you know who was appointed?

A Yes.

Q Who was that?

A Brandon Schwartze and Tom Moser.

Q And who are they?

A Brandon Schwartze is an APD III in my office and Tom Moser is an APD I.

Q An APD III is a more experienced attorney?

A Yes. Brandon, I think he has three years maybe four; somewhere in there.

Page 119

Q APD I would be a first-year attorney?

A Yes.

Q Do you have any understanding of why a judge would appoint someone other than you into these cases?

A I have a hunch.

Q What is your hunch?

A So yesterday I got an e-mail from the prosecuting attorney of Pulaski County saying the jail was rioting. And I think he was -- not literally, but the people in jail were getting upset because they did not have attorneys or attorneys had not entered their case, or maybe I'm in their case and I haven't been by to see them because I have too many cases. And so the -- I think he was very concerned about the situation in jail and the sheriff had contacted the prosecutor and said we have to do something about the people in jail. So the prosecutor told me that he was going to tell the judge today that this has become a big problem. So my hunch is that he talked to the judge and the judge probably is aware of the fact that I'm not actually appointing -- or entering attorneys in my office unless they are able to take more cases and I'm the one entering. And, you know, unfortunately I'm not able to provide the representation that these people deserve and so the judge, you know, he's not a fool. He's an intelligent person. He probably thinks, okay, well I will appoint individual attorneys because now these people will probably get faster representation or he can order them to go see them or do whatever the judge feels is appropriate.

Q If you spent the time you thought necessary to effectively prepare one of your client's cases, say one that was going to trial; what would happen to your other clients?

A Nothing.

Q What do you mean by nothing?

A Well, nothing is happening in their cases that's what I mean. They get pushed aside.

Q Do you think the same would happen for other attorneys in your office if they were able to focus on a particular case, complex case, and give it the time that it deserved?

A With their current caseload, yes, I still think that would happen. It does happen.

Q Are there times you have to triage cases doing less on one to do more on others?

A Every day.

Q Do other attorneys in your office have to triage their caseloads?

A Yes.

Q Doing less on one so they can be more effective on others?

Page 121

A Yes.
Q Is there anything else you think we should know about your office's ability or difficulty in providing effective representation to people eligible for representation?
A I think we have covered a lot of it. But I would say the problem is getting worse as people continue to leave and as the quality of candidates we get continues to decline. One of the complaints that we haven't talked about but that's made, and Judge Pearson put this in his Order, is that the resources in the system are not spread equally. I don't know if that's true or not. I don't know what's going on in other offices. My experience has been that everybody thinks that their office is the worst and really it sounds like when I meet with other attorneys, we are all equally bad. So I can only speak to my office. But in my office, if things don't change things are only going to get worse. And we are not gonna -- I say that like it's not -- we're not going to maintain the bad representation we provided. It is getting worse. Our caseloads are going up and the quality of our attorneys is going down and the ability to train them and mentor them is decreasing.
Q Why do you think it will continue to get worse?

A Because the experience level of the attorneys continues to go down and we used to be able to get some really quality candidates. I have been very lucky in the people I have been able to hire in the last year. But every week we get a list of new openings and every week it seems it grows and, you know, every couple of months I have an opening. And every time there is an opening, there is fewer and fewer candidates and the ones that are there are really, quite honestly, terrible.
Q What do you mean by terrible?
A There are people I would never consider hiring for a position but that I'm considering now because there is nobody else.
Q Why wouldn't you consider them for a position?
A Well, for one, I generally would want somebody who is already licensed in the state of Missouri. So that would be -- most of the people I consider now don't even have a license. It's hard to say specifics but, you know, when you do a lot of interviews you begin to, you know, notice things about the person. Are they able to -- do you believe, you know, you're making kind of instant judgments about people, but do you believe they can handle your jurisdiction. Can they stand up to judges. Do they care about, you know, what we do and our mission or are they just looking for a job because, you know, private practice hasn't worked out for them and, you know, this provides a steady income. I think we are seeing the few applicants I have, either they don't have licenses or they are the people who couldn't cut it in private practice and are looking for a paycheck. They really don't have any drive to do what this job requires. They, just like I said, looking for a paycheck; a steady paycheck.

MR. SHAHABIAN: Thank you, Mr. Crowell. I have no further questions at this time.
QUESTIONS BY MR. RAMSEY:
Q Good evening.
A Evening. Is it evening already?
Q It's getting close, five minutes away.
Q Again, my name is Steven Ramsey and I represent the State of Missouri and Governor Eric Greitens. I have a handful of questions. If at any time, again, if you need a break, just let me know and we can take that break but I will try to power on through. To begin, to fill in a few of the gaps that I may have missed or may have not been asked. You came straight from undergrad into law school; is that correct?
A Yes.
Q What were your degrees in in undergrad?
A I had a political science degree.
Q And you have been with the public defender system since around 2008; is that correct?

A I got hired in the fall of 2008.
Q And within the past year or two or so, or as far as you can remember, who all have you spoken to concerning workload and caseload concerns? I presume judges from your earlier testimony. I presume some members of the private bar from earlier testimony. Have you spoken to nonprofit organizations or the press?
A Nonprofit, I'm not sure they are nonprofit, but I would say I have spoken to commissioners and I have spoken to city councilmen and I have spoken to the New York Times.
Q And by commissioners you mean county commissioners?
A Yes. Part of our funding comes from the commissioners. They provide the rent and utilities for our office. So I have spoke to them, you know, about our facilities and, you know, of course I talked to them about some of the problems we are facing.
Q And concerning the amount of expertise and the level of experience that you testified earlier to; when you started was in the heart of the recession or the beginning of the recession, 2008 or so?
A Yeah. I mean, yes.
Q And would it be fair to say that as the economy has improved, the quality of your candidates has decreased?

A I can't speak to what the quality of candidates were when I was hired up until, you know, I didn't get into management, I think until, 2013 or '14. I can't remember which. I think I was a good candidate. But no, I would say this, the people that I started with and that I saw for the first four or five years and my first couple of years in management were excellent candidates and went on to do great things. We used to have -- it wasn't uncommon to 20 or 30 applicants to kind of go through to determine who we were going to interview. We used to be able to screen out people. There is no screening anymore because if we screen, we wouldn't have any candidates. So, yes, the quality has gone down, but also the number.

Q And so the period of time since you have been in management has been relatively brief in terms of the quality candidates coming in and out of the door?

A Well, I can say yes. I mean, it's been about four years, but I can say I have seen a change over the four years.

Q Sitting here today how would you define a case as it's relatable to your district?

A A case is a client who has a criminal charge.

Q And how does a case become closed within your system -- or in your district? Pardon me.

A We close our cases based upon on the conclusion of the case. So whether that's through a guilty plea or if we go to trial after sentencing. When we close out a case -- so the only exception to that is when we have a client who goes up on a 120, so 559.115 or some other 120. We close the file at that time but we enter the hearing date for the 559 review because if the client is not going to get released, we will represent them at that hearing.

Q And for the record, what is a 559 review?

A So when a client, you know, when a client is sent to prison sometimes the court retains jurisdiction under Section 559.115 RSMo. Basically the client goes up. He does 120-days shock. He may get treatment; he may not in the Department of Corrections. As long as his behavior is good, he typically will get released, but that's up to the judge who sentenced him. So it allows the court to retain jurisdiction for that 120 days. The hearing would be if -- the only time there is a hearing if the defendant does something inappropriate or violates the rules of the 120. While in the prison, they are entitled to a hearing and we would represent them at that hearing, which is a farce, but we still do it.

Q Now am I correct in understanding your previous testimony to suggest that before Hinkebein, the decision, Missouri Supreme Court decision, you dedicated a substantially more amount of time to supervising and administrative tasks versus after Hinkebein?

A Yes. I mean, before Hinkebein, I was -- I allowed attorneys in the office to have much higher caseloads. So, again, the average case -- the highest caseload in my office was somewhere around 200 and the lowest would have been probably 120, maybe a little lower depending on how new they were. Since Hinkebein, I decided that I could no longer allow attorneys to have such caseloads. So that's the purpose of the waitlist and then not entering the attorneys on the case but entering myself.

Q And am I understanding your testimony to be that before Hinkebein when the caseloads were substantially larger, there was an issue effective assistance of counsel there and even after your caseload control mechanisms of waitlist in place that there is still a dramatic issue that's getting worse as opposed to -- I will stop there, yeah.

A Well, you said it's getting worse. I would say it's getting worse for me and I would say that if we -- as the judges become -- or as the waitlist fades away and as we go back to business as usual, as that seems to be what's probably going to happen despite my best efforts.

The caseload is going to get worse because, generally speaking, over the last, you know, twenty years or so there has been a steady increase in the number of cases across our jurisdiction and across Missouri. So I suspect the numbers, even if the plateau they are still extremely high, but I don't see that happening. But more importantly, and I think as it impacts my office, is the constant turnover that I have and the lack of experience that I have and the quality of candidates that I'm able to hire; those are the things that are going to make it continue to get worse.

Q You testified about an intake sheet. And I believe it was in the conversation of bond arguments and ascertaining whether or not there was a strong argument to argue for reduction of bond. Are there other, I guess one pagers, that would help train or alert your newer attorneys to the expectations of various levels of representation?

A I know I have seen different, you know, checklist-type things throughout my career as a public defender that various people use. So they probably exist. The intake sheet we use is actually I think three or four pages because there is so much information that you really need to get in that initial interview. I can't remember everything and so this just -- even me with experience, I would use this sheet. Are there other sheets that we could probably give to attorneys, yes, but sometimes it's only as good as the, you know, the user. And if user doesn't know what the words mean, like for example, you asked what's a 559. If I put on there, you know, 559 and they have no idea what that is, it's not going to be any use to them.

Q So you testified -- and I think the phrase you used was something to the effect of younger or newer attorneys don't know what they don't know or something along those lines. In what ways as their district defender have you gone about educating or training them to teach them what they don't know?

A Well, I try to lead by example. So, you know, when they are in court, I show by example. I would also tried to educate them when they are in court. When they bring cases to me, I would talk to them about the things they need to be doing. The guidelines I make sure usually on their first day or first day or two, I would make sure they have a copy of the guidelines and that they have gone through them. The guidelines give some guidance on how to work up a case. It's not really a how-to guide, but it does -- it gives you an idea. There is also an attorney workbook, a new attorney workbook, that I think was created by Wayne Williams in I think it's the 24th -- Area 24 Office of Public Defender. I give them a copy of that and that is kind of a how-to guide of how to work a case through the judicial system. So those would be the main ways. That and I guess I would pair them -- I try to pair them with a more senior attorney.

Q Have you noticed any trends in the cases that you're seeing and how they are being represented? What I mean by that are you taking more depositions now than say at the beginning of your tenure as district defender? Are you personally or attorneys that you supervise?

A So you're asking me as my tenure as a district defender not as a public defender?

Q Correct.

A I don't think the number of depositions I have had has. It's probably decreased for me personally. For my attorneys and in what timeframe are you looking at?

Q It can be within the past year or past two years. You have been district defender for around three years; is that correct?

A Yes. And then I was a deputy for two before that.

Q Yeah. Well, within the three years that you have been the district defender and if you have that's more than five, I'm just trying to get a sense.

A So I would say that it was pretty even throughout that period until the last couple of months and there has been an uptake in the number of depositions being taken.

Q How about the usage of experts?

A So with experts I would distinguish between mental health experts and other experts. The reason I do that is because I think they kind of cover two different areas. Mental health experts I'd say has been pretty level. Other experts, it's almost nonexistent. And that's, I guess, that's also stayed about the same.

Q And did I understand you correctly in that the way you assign your cases in your district is one by geography in terms of what counties the various assistant public defenders are in, but also by expertise or experience?

A Yes. So we would not -- I would not want to give a serious case to a new attorney.

Q And is the assignment totally done by yourself or do you, I guess, field that out to the deputy director or someone else within your office?

A Right now, there is kind of a mixed system. So I have one APD IV, that attorney has, like I said, 15 years experience. He is in one county and he's handling every case that comes into that county, which is at any given time 150 cases. So that -- every case that comes into Dent County, he gets. In all the other counties, since I have waitlisted, all the cases that are open to me, are being assigned out by me. And so I would determine what cases they should get based upon the priorities that the judge has already determined, which is basically are they in custody or not. The cases that I don't assign out, they come into my clerks and my clerks are tasked or I delegate the authority to them to kind of make that determination of whether or not the murder should go to this APD or this APD. Generally speaking, when a serious case comes in, they are going to let me know and I'm going to give them some feedback.

Q And when you say your clerks, are you using legal assistants or your clerical staff?

A Clerical staff.

Q And how many trials, say within the past year, has your -- have you yourself tried or your office tried? So that's a two-prong question.

A In the last year, I have probably tried maybe a half dozen. I say my office -- and it's a rough guess, but I would say probably maybe 20. That might be a little high, 15 to 20.

Q And are these jury cases?

A Yes.

Q Do you have a sense for how many bench trials are tried every year in your district?

A Maybe half a dozen. There is not a lot of incentive to do a bench trial.

Q Turning to your offices determination of indigency; who makes that determination in your office?

A It varies. So my clerical staff, if it comes into the office from our front window or over the fax machine, they are going to do it. If it's in court, it's typically going to be -- if the legal assistant is there, it's going to be the legal assistant. A lot of our counties, you know, there are one or two attorneys and we only have two legal assistants, so there is not really enough to send a legal assistant every time. So if it's just an attorney, then the attorney in court will make that determination.

Q Do you have any external or independent controls or verification procedures in place to verify whether or not someone is actually eligible for services or do you rely mostly on that application itself?

A Well, they are required by law to be truthful on the application, but that's obviously, you know, open to interpretation whether they are being truthful or not. It's rare that we would do an independent verification, but here is what we do. So when I get an application and I encourage everyone in my office to do this, if they put all zeros for income and, you know, everything is zero or if they write, you know, no income and whatever; I asked them follow-up questions. I do do follow-up with them. Like where do you live? How do you get by with no money? How do you eat? You know, I ask them those types of questions. Did you drive a car to court today? I lean on the side of denying. So, you know, generally speaking, if they posted bond, I'm going to deny them because, you know, I have to be a steward of taxpayer money and I think that at least some of these people might be able to hire counsel. I don't know. So that's kind of where -- we don't do independent verification. I have done it. I do it in rare cases, especially as the case moves forward. To give you an example, I had a case where an individual was appointed -- we were appointed. He posted a $100,000.00 bond. He was on GPS monitoring and paying for that somehow every day. As we were developing the case he kept telling me he owned the property that the alleged victim was living on. So once I finally got record of that, I filed a motion to withdraw based on the fact that he owned property. It was denied. We do -- where it's apparent that there may be some discrepancy with the application, we will investigate.

Q Do you have a sense of how often you reject applicants? And I understand your testimony earlier to be that even when you reject them, the court still sometimes appoints them. But how often would you say you reject applications?

A Well, most of our applicants are truly indigent, so it's not -- I don't know what percent. Like I said, when I'm in court and they are not in custody, it's pretty common to reject because, generally speaking, they have posted bond. But I don't know. I don't have a percentage or I don't have a number. Most of the people in jail are going to qualify.

Q And did I understand your testimony earlier to be that you had never been denied an expert that you thought you needed on the sole basis of funds?

A I have always gotten whatever expert I believe I needed. I may have had to have some additional discussion with the person -- the people that hold the purse strings. But generally speaking, I can't think of an incident where they out right denied me.

Q Have you ever denied an attorney that you supervised funds that you had discretion for or prevented them from moving onto the upper management?

A I have.

Q And have you done that for the sole basis of funds or for the similar reason that you were denied earlier?

A I would deny them because I would want -- again newer attorneys don't understand a lot of times when it's appropriate to do a deposition. So if they send a request and say I would like to depose this witness and I asked them well, who is that witness and it turns out it's a witness for them, for the defendant. Well, I would deny that request because that's foolish. Go interview them. They are a favorable witnesses. But generally speaking, the types of money that I control are for medical records. I can control that. I can say you can't get the medical records. I don't think I have ever denied that. Clothing for clients for trial, you know, Good Will, Wal-Mart; I approved those. I approve deposition request if it's under $500.00. I generally approve those except for what I was just talking about where they don't really understand when they can send an investigator out to interview. That's the -- those are the main things I have control over in my local budget.

Q Have you ever ran out of funds in your local budget and requested more for any of those various categories that you just listed?

A I don't believe I have. I will say this, I probably will this year because of the number of deposition request. In the past, there used to be a policy in my office for whatever reason that we were encouraged to -- not by Columbia, I don't think but by the former district defender to exceed $500.00 on a deposition request. That was so that the money would come out of the different budget than our local budget for fear of running out of money out of the local budget. I have never done that since I have been district defender. I have always used the local budget and I don't think I have ever ran out. At least Kathy Leer, my comptroller, has never notified me of such. We have ran out of postage before, but we got more money for that.

Q And when that happens, did you just request like hey, we are out of postage we need "x" amount more?

A Yeah.

Q When your attorneys go to trial or when you go to trial, do you normally send your attorneys with a second chair or third chair or do they try cases by themselves?

A I don't think I have ever had a third chair. Generally, the practice in my office is that when you go to trial that the deputy district defender or myself should be a second chair. For my trials, personally, I will often bring along a second chair, but there are cases where I don't. It just depends on the case. There is a few reasons for that. The main reason is, again, these attorneys don't have any experience. It's often their first trial and so I want to make sure that they don't miss anything important. They make the proper objections, that the record is preserved; that sort of thing. But -- and then with the experienced attorneys, I usually have a second chair who is, again, you know they are learning. So they go and they learn kind of how to do a trial. Generally speaking, we make them do portions of the trial like, you know, the instruction conference or, you know, maybe they cross a witness. So that's where they get their experience by second chairing.

Q And there was some conversation concerning continuances. My question is if there are any policies or customs within your local district that would be akin to a first in first out or this case has been on our docket for two-and-a- half years and we need to expedite this. Is there any controlling policy to expedite those cases that have been lingering?

A Well, the judges. I mean, they -- personal to my office or to the jurisdiction?

Q Personal to your office?

A When -- sort of. And the reason I say sort of is after a client has gone through so many attorneys, eventually it ends up on my desk because I know we can't push it any further for the client's sake but also because the courts aren't going to push it any further. The courts don't seem too interested in really protecting the client's rights. They are more interested in moving cases. So when it comes to that point where I can no longer pass it and I know the judge is going to make it go to trial, it goes to me.

Q Would that be after the third attorney?

A Typically, yes.

Q As on the side, do the attorneys that you supervise have laptops so when they are at their law days and they were waiting or if they are waiting to meet with a client where they can work remotely or is it all done back at the district office?

A The attorneys have laptops and they take them to court where there is WiFi. So we have basically three courts that have WiFi; three that do not. The laptop is useless where there is no WiFi. We can't access our network. The courts that have WiFi is sporadic and we borrow the prosecutor's WiFi in two of the three. So if they are new and they don't have the relationship with the prosecutor, they also don't have access to WiFi. But where there is WiFi, they do take their laptops. They do -- I mean, there is only so much you can do when you're in court and you're constantly being called up by the judge. But yeah, they do. None of the jails have WiFi. So the we don't -- the only time a laptop goes to a jail usually is if we are showing a video or some other discovery, pictures or things like that.

Q And does every attorney in your office have a laptop?

A Yes.

Page 140

Q Turning to your district's timekeeping history, if you will. Currently is your office tracking time in five-minute increments?

A No.

Q Currently is your office tracking time by tasks or by case?

A No. We stopped tracking time, I believe last year when Michael Barrett indicating we could stop.

Q And so currently the extent of your time keeping is how many hours per day or per case session --

A Sure.

Q -- your attorneys have worked?

A That's correct.

Q Did you ever receive training on how to effectively track your time when you were tracking your time in the five-minute increments?

A I don't know that we had. I remember at our spring training there was. It seems like Peter Sterling, then our general counsel, gave us training, but it's been a long time and I don't remember. I remember their being confusion over how to categorize time because there was some areas that overlap, so they changed I think some of the categories over time. But once the RubinBrown stuff came about, it became very -- they narrowed the categories. It was pretty clear, I think, from that point forward.

Q Turning to that I want to draw your attention to Plaintiff's Exhibit marked 50. I believe it's the Missouri State Public Defender system Fiscal Year Budget Request.

A Okay.

Q Now you had testified earlier that you felt that some of these numbers or potentially all of these numbers were fairly conservative; is that correct?

A For Rolla, I don't know about the rest.

Q For Rolla.

A Yeah.

Q Are you familiar or did you have any hand in the creation of the underlying RubinBrown data?

A Yes.

Q What was the extent of that?

A Well, I was the timekeeper. I was also part of the Delphi Group.

Q And do you have any history aside from your, I guess law degree or undergraduate degree, concerning statistics or sociology?

A No.

Q Is it your understanding that the capacity in some of the hours per assigned task, if you will, were averages under the RubinBrown study?

A It's my understanding they are all averages.

Page 142

Q So --

A Are you talking about the categories like, murder, C, D?

Q Yes

A Yes, those were all averages.

Q And your contention earlier is that they may or may not have taken into account the differences of experience of various attorneys?

A I don't know for sure how RubinBrown calculated, but it wouldn't be a very useful number if it didn't say that you understood how to actually handle a case. Maybe not that you can handle every case, but that you have some basic criminal experience. Like I don't think that these numbers are like well, if you're any attorney, if you are a tax attorney these percentage applies to you because obviously it's going to take you a lot more time than it is someone like a public defender.

Q And this is -- this or these are your assumptions sitting here looking at the numbers?

A No, not really. I mean, because the Delphi Group was both public defenders and criminal defense attorneys. It was not private attorneys -- or private civil attorneys or other government attorneys. So the averages that they came up with were averages for experienced -- because they were all experienced criminal defense attorneys, either private or public defender. So I can't imagine -- I know personally when I was there and we were coming up with averages, I was thinking in my practice how much time would this case take. That was what we were instructed. To you personally, how much time would you or if you had the ideal amount of time, how much time would you spend.

Q And that was your experience as a member of the Delphi Group that put data into the ultimate RubinBrown study?

A I don't understand the question.

Q Said another way; you're speaking from your experience of being a firsthand participant in the study itself?

A Yes.

Q But you didn't ultimately have a hand in the collection of the data after the fact -- after the fact? Pardon me.

A I think the data was collected when we were the Delphi Group. They gave us the averages and the numbers in the group and as the Delphi panel, we adjusted those based upon our experience.

Q That was after each round?

A Yes. But I don't sit here and say that I understand the statistics and the whole Delphi process. I was just part of it.

Q I see. Turning to the individual attorneys who have left your office. Did you conduct exit interviews for each one of them?

A Informally. Our HR division conducts the exit interviews, so I try not to interfere with that process.

Q The HR department for your district or for your system at large? Or a different question is do you have a HR, a local HR person within your district?

A We have two HR employees at least my understanding, maybe three if you count Ms. Shipma, for the entire MSPD. I don't have anybody local in my office.

Q So the extent of your knowledge of why people were leaving was based on the informal conversations you had with them prior to their departure?

A Well and after.

Q And after.

A They are still around most of them. They are just prosecutors.

Q So you still see them?

A I go against them now. So I train them to become prosecutors and hopefully they become a little more human in the process.

Q Turning to the waitlist: My understanding from your testimony was that this was not something that came down from central office, rather it was something that you had made a decision upon after speaking with the attorneys in your office and your deputy director; is that accurate?

A Yes. My office -- our offices in Columbia had nothing to do with my decision to waitlist.

Q And that had mixed results across the judges?

A Yes.

Q Within your area. Here is a question concerning the letter that you -- or the e-mail that you wrote to upper management concerning your potential departure from the Missouri State Public Defender System. Would you say or how would you describe your relationship with upper management?

A I think it's good. It was a little tumultuous before I became district defender. When I became district defender, I had to supervise two prior district defenders. One that had been removed from the district defender position. Well, both had been removed from their position and I had to supervise them. So there was very much an anti-Columbia feel to the office. Since that time, I think they have been very helpful. Very supportive. Since I have started waitlisting and I have been harassing them on a regular basis for resources, I have become much more familiar with them. I get phone calls more often for better or worse.

Q Would you say that you are or have been 100 percent satisfied with the support from upper management in terms of addressing this workload or caseload alleged crisis?

A No, it's not 100 percent.

Q In what ways do you think they have come up short, if you will?

A Well, I have sent a lot of conflicts to them and they have not resolved them. I need more resources, they have not provided them. They may not have them or have the resources, but that's not really my concern. I don't really care. I just want the resources. I feel that Rolla and my office has been left to fend for ourselves in some instances. Especially when I see that, you know, in the Kansas City office that Rick Petsch had Greg Mermelstein help her on a writ. So that bothers me because a writ is very time consuming process. Now to be fair, I didn't ask for help, but nevertheless. So, but I will say this every time I have asked for assistance or I have reached out to them, they have gotten back to me. They have responded. It's not always a response I like, but they are available. And I don't really have any major complaints. I think based in reality, like I said, I want more resources. I need more resources. That's my common complaint, but they don't have the purse strings, so-to-speak.

Q Turning to two exhibits. One is Petsch 5 and one is Plaintiff's Exhibit marked 54.

A Got them.

Q Did you -- looking at Petsch 5 first. Did you utilize this template when you drafted your writ or did you create it from scratch?

A We did not -- I don't know that we had access to this at the time. Greg Mermelstein prepared a lot of -- I think this it was Greg Mermelstein -- prepared a lot of guidance material. Not necessarily writs, but I mean I think, like I said, I think he prepared Exhibit 54. He prepared a power point that he provided after the management conference we had back in late September that had a lot of the, you know, case law summarized and that sort of thing. But we did not have a template that we followed in our writ. We did it on our own.

Q This was -- these documents to your understanding were created after the Hinkebein decision and after, I guess, the meeting with the various district defenders and upper management?

A I'm sure that this Exhibit 5 was created after. I don't know when Greg prepared the rest of this. It just -- he brought it to our attention at the management meeting. You know, I think we have a database that he puts motions on and these were all added at some point. I don't know when.

Q Throughout your testimony, if I understood you correctly, a reason that you or your office have been unable to do various tasks is because you lack resources and the time to accomplish those tasks; is that a fair assessment?

A Yes.

Q What tasks, if any, have you been able to complete to a reasonable degree, whether it was before or after the waitlist was instituted?

A Nothing as it related to the clients. We get our time sheets turned in, expense reports; administrative things. I would say that nothing that matters.

Q And I hate to toss a potential hypo at you. This isn't law school. But let's say you only had two cases and one case was coming up for trial, would your preparation for that one case going to trial hinder your representation of that other case, hypothetically speaking?

A Well, now you got me thinking like a law student. The answer is no. I mean, does it have the potential, yes. If one was set for trial on Monday and one was set for trial on Tuesday obviously the one on Monday is going to affect the one on Tuesday. But this isn't -- what we are talking about is not something where we are saying well, yeah, theoretically you could spend, you know, 100 hours on every case. You know, you could turn over every stone. I mean, you really got to look to the rule of what is being diligent? What is being competent? What is communication? Those are the things you have to look at and are we able to do that with our current caseload and the answer is no.

Q So your understanding and response to the question is not in a two case situation?

A Right.

Q Not currently at the level that you are representing cases, which I believe you said you have average about 75 cases for the attorneys that you're supervising right now?

A I would say probably somewhere around there, yeah.

Q So it's not two. It's also not 75 -- or I mean, I'm sorry, two would be fine, 75 is not fine?

A Yes. And of course it's not as simple as saying a number because the reality is, you know, maybe it would be okay if it were 75 misdemeanors, maybe. You know, but our caseload is not predominately misdemeanors. It is predominantly felonies. And a serious felony -- maybe two capital cases would be too much. I don't know. I don't do capital cases. But you can't -- it's hard to say what the right number would be because it varies depending the type of case, their experience level. There are so many factors that go in. That's why I don't use -- when I talk to my attorneys, I don't say you're over 50 cases, you're overworked. I would say something along the lines like, you know, your caseload is at 50. Do you feel that you can handle additional cases, if so let me know. And then the other thing I would look at is, okay, well they are 50 misdemeanors. They can handle another ten. Or whatever, I'm just throwing out numbers. But if it's 50 A, B felonies, you know, that's a big caseload in my opinion and those cases where you're looking at up to 15 years or life. Those people deserve -- they don't deserve better representation, but they take more time.

Q Even with them -- would you agree that even with then those higher felonies, if you will, so let's say a Class A, that there are different time requirements depending on the particulars of that particular case?

A Each case is unique, so I can't tell you that if I got one indictment on a Class A felony and another indictment on a Class A felony, they are not -- I'm not saying that's ten hours on each one or whatever. One client may say I want to plead. Let's try to get this done as quickly as possible. I'm guilty and the evidence is very strong against them. The other may be more iffy or -- you know, there is so many different permutations that you can think of that I really can't give you an answer on that. I don't know how much time an A felony is going to take until you finish the case.

Q Sure. Have you ever been judicially determined to have provided ineffective assistance of counsel?

A No.

Q Has an attorney that you have supervised been judicially determined to provide ineffective assistance of counsel?

A Not since I have been supervising.

Q Almost there. So you started off in responding to the Hinkebein decision with various letters and reaching out to the various judges that you work with in your district. You also sought a writ, which was denied by the Southern District Court of Appeals or are you in the Eastern District?

A Southern.

Q Southern. And that was also denied by the Supreme Court of Missouri; is that correct?

A That's correct.

Q And then you decided to file two chapter 600.063 motions?

Page 152

A I filed -- well first what I did after the writ was denied by the Supreme Court, I filed -- I don't know what you call it, but I call it a notice of 600.062 to the judge saying my whole office is overworked. I can't do 600.063, so I'm going to waitlist basically. Then I had a conversation with the presiding judge of the 26th Circuit, John Beger and he said look, if you want any relief at all, you've got to do 600.063 because that's the only way I can consider your waitlist. So based on that conversation, I went ahead that same day I filed a .063 in each circuit.

Q I just want to be clear that it was in the 42nd Circuit that relief was granted?

A Yes.

Q And in the 25th Circuit, it's pending for Wednesday?

A Yes.

MR. RAMSEY: No further questions.

MS. SHIPMA: I just have one -- well, one topic.

QUESTIONS BY MS. SHIPMA:

Q I think that I heard you say earlier that if you have a case where client has a 120, did you say that you close the file? So the system shows it closed but you schedule -- you're nodding your head. So do you close the case file; is that correct?

Page 153

A Yes.
Q But you schedule the hearing date on the calendar?
A Yes.
Q Then if it needs to go to hearing, you reopen the case; is that correct?
A I don't know that we reopen it. I mean, it would not be -- you would not see an additional case in our database. Like it would not be like okay, now we have a new case number. The file would stay closed. We would just take that closed file with us to court and say hi, Judge, I'm here representing so and so.
Q So those 120 cases aren't showing out there as open files on your system for that period of four months that the client is in treatment?
A That's correct.
MS. SHIPMA: Nothing further.
MR. SHAHABIAN: I just have a few follow-up questions. I will try not to be too much longer.
QUESTIONS BY MR. SHAHABIAN:
Q You mentioned in response to questions from the State that you thought the waitlist would fade away. What did you mean by that?
A You know, we are trying to be optimistic and hope that something changes and that the clients we represent get the representation they deserve. So you do things to facilitate that process, like waitlisting. But as you progress and as the courts deny your relief and as you fail to get any relief from upper management and as the court slowly chip away at what you have done by appointing you and as of today appointing individual attorneys in violation of the Supreme Court -- Missouri Supreme Court precedent; you see it fading. You know, what's a waitlist if it doesn't really matter if the judge is just going to appoint you anyway. You're just wasting time on a waitlist. So that's what I meant by fading is that the things that we are doing to show or to try to reduce our workload so that we can be ethical; nobody seems to care about. They don't really care that we are saying that we are unable to provide ethical representation. Probably more importantly, they don't really care whether or not a defendant receives representation at all. They just know that they have to have an attorney sitting there next to him to process him or her. So that's what I mean by fading is that at the end of the day, I think Hinkebein should have been a wake-up call to everyone that something needed to change, but it didn't wake anybody up.

Q You mentioned an attorney workbook. I'm going to hand you a document. I'm just curious if this is the workbook you're referring to. I'll ask the court reporter to mark it Plaintiff's 60. Do you recognize this document?

A I do.
Q What is it?
A It is the workbook that we provide to new attorneys.
Q Is that the document you're referring to during State's examination?
A It is.
Q You can put that aside. I was just making sure I understood what was going on. You mentioned that you were a member of the Delphi Group. Could you explain what that was and what your role was?
A So the way I understood the process of the whole RubinBrown study was that first they did a timekeeping -- well, first they had to identify categories to keep track of time. Once they identified those categories, they then asked the attorneys in the system to keep track of their time. I wasn't part of any of that. I just kept track of my time. Once they had enough time or they had the time that they needed to kind of reflect what we were spending our time on, they brought together a group -- and I don't remember how many of us there were, maybe 30, but it was half public defenders, half private attorneys and I don't know how they selected them, but anyway. They were all experienced attorneys. In fact, I was probably one of the less experienced in the panel and I had been around for maybe five years. We all came together several times, spent the day going through the averages of the times that they've collected, including the outliers. They asked us in the group, they said, "Do you think that the average is right or do you think it's low or do you think it's high? How should we adjust it? So we would adjust it however the group believed it should go up or down. And then if I remember correctly, we would go back and they would send another survey out and say like here is the new high; here is the new low and that sort of thing. Anyway, after we did that several times, that came up with -- that's how they came up the number to reflect the amount of time on average that an attorney should expect to spend on those case types.

Q And by -- when you refer to experienced private attorneys, were those attorneys experienced in criminal cases?
A Yes. Exclusively.
Q Exclusively in criminal cases?
A And they may have done other -- they may have had other practice, but they were brought in because they were criminal defense attorneys.
Q And when you were responding to questions from the State on hypothetical, you mentioned that you don't just look at the number of cases that an attorney has because the complexity of the case, such as whether it's a misdemeanor or an A, B felony affects the impact that that case has on an attorney's workload. Is your understanding that the metrics the RubinBrown study was attempting to establish to adjust for differences in the complexity of cases?

A Yes. They were meant to be averages taking into consideration some cases are going to take a lot of time and some cases aren't going to take as much time. So you try to come up with some number that reflects how much time, on average, you would spend on a particular case.

Q And when you say a particular case, you mean a particular kind of case, like an A, B felony?

A Yes. Based on the case types within the RubinBrown.

Q Do you remember what those case types were roughly?

A Murder, sex cases, C -- or A, B felonies, C,D felonies, misdemeanors, probation violations, appeals, and I think special sex cases like -- I can't.

Q That's fine.

A Yes, special sex cases, the civil ones.

Q If you could turn back to Plaintiff's 57. That's the e-mail you sent to upper management. You were discussing in the State's examination your request to upper management and responses from them and your relationship with them. If you would look at the first page of Exhibit 57. Do you see where Ellen Blau says, "I'm including Michael, Joel, Leon, Greg, and Jackie in your e-mail." She also says, "I will give you a call on Monday." Do you see where it says that?

A Yes, I do.

Q Did you speak with Ellen after sending her this e-mail?

A I'm sure I did.

Q Do you recall what if anything upper management told you in response to this e-mail?

A I know I have had several conversations with Ellen and Michael kind of related to this. They are, you know, they are concerned. They are supportive. They always let me know they'll do whatever they can for me. Obviously, the resource issue is really what this boils down to and that there is just not the resources available. In fact, Michael has even indicated to me in conversations, you know, when I say look I need more attorneys. He has indicated, he's like well, what if I gave you another spot. Could you fill it? Implying that he might give me another spot and the answer is no. I had to tell him no and I hated doing it because I would love another attorney spot, but we don't -- we didn't have -- we don't have the applicants.

Q So you wouldn't be able to fill that attorney spot because you don't have qualified applicants for it?

A Right.

Q What in your opinion would be ways to get more qualified applications?

A Well, I can think about what keeps people around. That's -- people generally don't become public defenders to get rich. They become public defenders because they want to make a difference and they want to help the least fortunate in society; those charged with crimes. When they are not able to do that and it's quite apparent that we are not able to do that, it's just -- you are not going to attract those people. I don't know where they go, but they go somewhere else. A lot of -- they go to the prosecutor's office. I have several friends that were public defenders that are now at the Attorney General's office. They don't stick around and they don't apply. In my area, you know, obviously money is an issue; $39,000.00 is a low -- you're not going to attract very many people when you're only making $39,000.00 a year and you're expected to work upwards of 60 hours a week or more. That's outrageous. You're -- I don't know if -- you're barely making $15.00 an hour. People make more than that working at restaurants and, you know, doing tasks that don't weigh on their mind all night long. That they can't sleep at night because they feel bad that their client is sitting in jail and they could have done more if they had only worked longer. So pay is a factor. The hours is a big factor. The lack of respect; nobody wants to be a public defender. It's not like it's a prestigious position. You know, if you want to be a judge some day, you're not going to be a public defender; you're going to be a prosecutor. All of the judges in my neck of the woods were prosecutors. They weren't public defenders. So there is a prestige issue. You know, some people overcome that. I don't necessarily care but for a lot of young people, you know it's difficult. There is not just a lot of pros to being a public defender. If you don't have the drive, you're not going to be able to do it. Even if you have the drive, we will stamp it out of you pretty quickly when you realize you can't do the work that you want to do.

MR. SHAHABIAN: I have no further questions.

THE WITNESS: Kathleen Lear, public defender.

VIDEOGRAPHER: Will you please swear in the witness?

COURT REPORTER: Do you swear or affirm that the testimony you are about to give in this proceeding will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?

THE WITNESS: I do.

EXAMINATION

QUESTIONS BY MS. ANAND:

Q. So thank you very much for being here today.

A. You're welcome.

Q. I'm Easha Anand. I represent the plaintiffs. Have you ever been deposed before?

A. No.

Q. Okay. So I'm going to just go over a couple of ground rules that may seem obvious, but -- so I'm going to ask you some questions relative to this case and you are going to answer truthfully to the best of your ability. Feel free to tell me you don't know. I don't really know what a comptroller is so I may ask some things that are outside your area of expertise.

A. Okay.

Q. But it's just as though you're under oath and testifying in court. Do you understand?

A. I do.

Q. This deposition can go no more than seven hours. It will be a lot less, but please feel free to ask for a break if you need one.

A. Okay.

Q. The -- the only request is that if I ask a question, you answer before the break. There may be objections from either Ms. Shipma or Mr. Moore, but except in a few very limited circumstances you're still going to answer the question even if there's an objection on the table. And Ms. Shipma will instruct you if you're not to answer the question. Got it?

A. Uh-huh.
Q. Okay. And then the last point is just a style one. So tell -- you know, just let me know if you don't understand, if you have trouble, you know, hearing me or are confused. Let me ask kind of the whole question before you answer so we've got a clean record and answer out loud, so no nodding, shaking your head, shrugging so the court reporter can say. Does that all make sense?
A. That makes sense.
Q. Okay. So are you aware that you were identified by your attorney as one of the MSPD employees designated to provide testimony under Rule 30(b)(6)?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. I'm going to show you the deposition notice, which has previously been marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 1.
(Exhibit 1, Previously marked exhibit.)
Q. (By Ms. Anand) Take a second and just look through it. Okay. And on -- if -- if you look -- I'm going to have you hold on to it for one more second --
A. Okay.

Page 10

Q. -- so I can just get this all on. If you look at the list of topics, you're aware that you've been identified to talk about that very last topic?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And you understand that your testimony is on behalf of MSPD, so you're representing MSPD in this?
A. I do.
Q. Okay. Okay. So how did you prepare for this deposition today?
A. I reviewed the documents that I provided, that were requested by your attorneys, I guess.
Q. By us, that's right.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Did you consult with anyone?
A. Just Jacquie.
Q. Okay. And --
A. Just my attorney.
Q. Just your attorney, that's right. And did you bring any documents with you here today?
A. A few.

Page 11

Q. Okay. Do you want to hand them over to me now?
A. Not really.
Q. I'll give you --
A. I brought work product.
Q. Oh, I see.
A. Yeah.
Q. Okay. My apologies.
A. Okay.
Q. Okay. So -- and just so I'm -- I'm clear, those are notes for yourself?
A. That is correct.
Q. Okay. Understood. Sorry. I didn't mean to --
A. No, that's okay.
Q. I didn't mean to steal those from you.
A. No.
Q. Okay. So let's just start with the basics. Tell me your job title and kind of what your role entails.
A. My job title is the comptroller for the Missouri State Public Defender System. I've held this position for 35 years, so --
Q. Congratulations.
A. -- a long time. I -- I do a lot of things for the public defender. We're a small enough agency that the comptroller does facilities management, does budget hearings with the director, prepares fiscal notes, monitors expenditures, prepares budgets, reports to the commission, public defender commission. Kind of whatever needs to be done.

Q. I see. Does one of your roles involve any kind of auditing?
A. More internal auditing than external auditing. So auditing of our agency, I would say yes. External auditing, absolutely not.
Q. Got it. Okay. And has your title been comptroller for the full 35 years?
A. It -- it has.
Q. And what was your job before that?
A. I was the deputy comptroller for the Office of the State Courts Administrator.
Q. Got it.
A. And prior to that I was the grants manager for the Supreme Court.
Q. Got it. And can you just tell me a little bit about your educational history?
A. I graduated from the University of Missouri -- I'm glad that fell here -- University of Missouri at Columbia in 1974 with a degree in accounting.

Q. Good. Okay. Okay. So I want to kind of talk about both kind of the allocation of resources piece and then about where you get your funding from piece. So starting with the kind of allocation of resources. Who decides how your funding gets allocated?

A. Our -- yeah, if you're speaking of our internal budget.

Q. That's right.

A. Our internal budget is approved by the state public defender commission at their June meeting --

Q. Okay.

A. -- typically at their June meeting for the year coming up. So we operate on a July 1 to June 30th fiscal year, so approximately the middle of June of 2016 they approve the 2017 budget. So in the middle of June just past, June 2017 they approved the operating budget for fiscal year '18.

Q. Okay. I'm sure I'm going to get the fiscal years and the actual years confused, so you'll try to correct me, I'll try to keep track of it.

Page 14

A. Okay. Thank you.

Q. So -- and in terms of the role that the commission plays, can you tell me a little bit about are they developing the budget, are you handing them something and they're signing off on it, what's the general process?

A. The general process is after meetings with the division directors of the Missouri State Public Defender System, we prepare an internal budget draft that is presented to the commission. It has all the payroll information. It has all the expense and equipment information. It has all of the budget information necessary to operate for the fiscal year, and the commission reviews it. I present it in significant detail to the commission. They have questions and then they either vote to approve or change, which they do occasionally or adjust, and then move to approve and adopt the budget. So right now we're operating on the fiscal year '18 budget.

Q. Okay. And when you say -- you said we consult with the -- with the district and division directors. You and who else is involved in that process?

A. Me and the division directors of the Missouri State Public Defender System.

Page 15

Q. Got it. And is there anyone besides -- anyone else outside the Missouri state public defender who is involved in developing this internal budget?

A. No. Other than the commission of course.

Q. Other than the commission. Got it.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. And who sets -- you -- you mentioned one of the big line items obviously is payroll. Who kind of sets the pay structure?

A. Again, the commission sets the pay structure. We try to mirror other state agencies as closely as we can.

Q. Okay. But there's no kind of statutory or other constraint?

A. No, absolutely not.

Q. Okay. So what is the approximate annual budget for fiscal year 2018?

A. That's why I brought my notes. May I refer to them?

Q. Please. Go ahead.

A. It is approximately -- well, I might as well tell you the exact.

Page 16

Q. I appreciate it.

A. The general oper -- the general revenue budget for the Missouri State Public Defender System in 2017, we're going to talk about 2017, was $37,997,456.

MR. MOORE: I'm sorry, what was that number again?

THE WITNESS: 37,997,000, general revenue dollars.

MR. MOORE: Thanks.

THE WITNESS: Okay. Sure.

Q. (By Ms. Anand) And then I just want to talk just to have a kind of high level overview, what are the kind of buckets of things that money needs to go towards? You mentioned payroll.

A. Payroll is a huge -- is the largest bucket by far.

Q. Okay.

A. The other buckets it goes to is the operation of the local offices, the local public defender offices. The other things that it goes toward is contract counsel and litigation expenses. We also have a bucket that I call statewide expenses. That is things that we pay on a statewide basis rather than an individual office basis. So those are the -- the large buckets that we pay out of.

Q. Okay. And so I'm just going to kind of take them one by one and make sure I understand what they entail.

A. Okay.

Q. So when you say operation of local offices, so -- so we've got bucket number one is payroll. Bucket number two, operation of local offices. What -- what falls under that?

A. Local travel, office supplies, postage, copy machine maintenance, any cleaning of the local office, toilet paper.

Q. Yeah.

A. Those types of things are included in the local office budgets.

Q. And what about the facility itself?

A. The facilities, the local district defender offices by statute are provided to us by the counties that each office supports.

Q. Got it.

A. That's 600.040.

Q. Okay. Thank you. And what about kind of the other sorts of overhead like electricity or air conditioning or those sorts of things?

Page 18

A. It actually varies office by office. Many of the leases are all inclusive, which means that the county provides everything, utilities, even cleaning services in the larger offices. In the smaller offices we generally pay for the cleaning services and occasionally in one or two offices we pay for some of the utilities.

Q. Okay.

A. Kind of depends on what kind of lease the counties are able to negotiate.

Q. Got it. Okay. So then the third bucket you mentioned is contract counsel. So tell me about what kind of falls in that bucket.

A. That bucket is for conflicts of cases, conflict cases that arise at the local office level. They're transferred to the state office level and then they're farmed out to local private attorneys.

Q. Okay. And is that the only situation in which you're using contract counsel?

A. It is with -- for conflicts.

Q. For conflicts is the only --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- case? Okay. And then in terms of paying contract counsel, what does the payment structure look like?

Page 19

A. Can I refer to my notes, please?

Q. Please. Yeah. You don't have to ask permission to refer to your notes.

A. Okay.

Q. And I'm sorry again for trying to steal them from you.

A. I can't -- I can't remember all these numbers off the top of my head.

Q. Of course.

A. Our fee schedule is again set by the commission, and it ranges from $375 for a misdemeanor to $10,000 for a murder first degree.

Q. Okay.

A. And it has a wide range in-between that.

Q. Okay. And that's -- that's sort of all inclusive?

A. It is not. Contract counsel can bill for mileage and litigation cost.

Q. Okay. And what would -- what would be a litigation cost they get billed for?

A. Deposition.

Q. To take an example at random.

A. Yeah. A deposition. Any type of DNA analysis, a mental health exam, things like that.

Page 20

Q. And what if they -- it's just going to take them a lot longer than the average misdemeanor, it's going to go to trial, something like that, can they -- can they bill you separately for that?

A. They can come back and ask for additional funds for a trial.

Q. Got it. And what is -- is there a set schedule for trials as well?

A. There is, and I don't know that number off the top of my head. It's in the documentation provided to you.

Q. I'm sure it is. Okay. So they -- they can ask for additional money for -- for a trial.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. What if they just came back to you and said, you know, this case actually took me 400 hours even though it's just a misdemeanor? Do you have any kind of contingent to pay them more for their time?

A. That's really not something I approve. That would be something that Mr. Elmer would approve, the division director --

Q. Got it. Okay.

A. -- deputy director.

Q. Got it. Okay. So let's move on to bucket number four, the litigation expenses bucket.

Page 21

A. Okay.
Q. So tell me what things fall -- fall in that litigation expenses bucket.
A. Again, that's not something that I necessarily approve, but we do -- we have worked together to come up with categories --
Q. Okay.
A. -- so that we can keep track of those types of expenses.
Q. Okay.
A. So the categories include adolescent brain development.
Q. Okay.
A. Autopsies.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. Copies, depositions, DNA experts, forensic experts of any type, immigration counsel, interpretive services. I mean, a lot of mental health things regarding mitigation. The other things include copies of records, copies of transcripts. Those are what we consider litigation costs.
Q. And how do you kind of ballpark that for the year?

Page 22

A. We know what the budget is and basically whatever is left is budgeted toward litigation cost.
Q. Got it. So -- so in your mind, these other buckets are sort of fixed costs?
A. Right.
Q. And then the leftover is what you got to cover all the litigation expenses?
A. That's correct. That's correct.
Q. Okay. And are those allocated on a district-by-district or division-by-division basis or does an individual attorney say in this case I need something?
A. An individual attorney says in this case I need this.
Q. Okay. And all the attorneys in the whole MSPD are trying to pull money out of this one litigation expenses bucket?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. Okay. The final category you talked about the statewide expenses.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. What are some of the examples of those?
A. Again, may --
Q. Please. Please.

Page 23

A. I prepared.
Q. Yes, you did.
A. I did. The things included in statewide are parking for the local offices. For instance, parking in St. Louis city is very expensive. Kansas City is expensive. So parking is a statewide cost.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. Printing of forms, printing of forms that are used by everyone, indigency determinations, lien forms, things like that are included in statewide. Any one-time purchases that happens over the years is included in statewide --
Q. Okay.
A. -- such as a copy machine replacement or a PC replacement, whether it is a shredder that we have to have now. Things like that are included in statewide. If we would have to purchase any type of system like a new telephone system, which we had to do last year, that's included in statewide.
Shipping, like UPS, shipping transcripts, shipping equipment, shipping laptops back and forth, backup tapes, the shipping is included. Any advertising is included under statewide for position replacements. Missouri bar dues is included under statewide. So that's -- that's statewide.

Q. Got it.
A. Those are the statewide costs.
Q. And again, that's sort of again the kind of fixed bucket you don't have a ton of choice in as compared to the litigation expenses where that's sort of the leftover?
A. I consider that direct cost. Those statewides are direct cost.
Q. Okay. When you say direct cost, what do you mean?
A. Parking. The same list.
Q. Got it.
A. It's -- it's something that's fixed.
Q. Got it. Okay. Thank you. I'm unfamiliar enough with some of the financial terminology that I may have to ask you some silly questions.
A. No problem.
MS. ANAND: Okay. So I'm going to show you what I'm going to mark as Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 30. Am I getting the numbering right? Okay.
(WHEREIN, Exhibit 30, FY17 Financial performance report, was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Ms. Anand) Okay. So can you tell me what this document is?

A. I call this a performance report basically, but it's a financial performance report, has nothing to do with the valuations or anything like that. But what it is is a listing of all of the moneys appropriated to the Missouri State Public Defender System by appropriation, and then how much was expended as of May 18th -- May 19th, 2017, what's balance left in that fund, and what percentage has been expended for all funds --

Q. Got it.

A. -- appropriated to the state public defender system for 2017.

Q. Got it. So this is kind of how you keep track of whether you're on track for the year basically?

A. This is a summary of that information, correct.

Q. Okay. So I just want to ask you about a couple lines in this document.

A. Okay.

Q. So do you see where kind of in the -- in the left-hand column the first line says expended does not include encumbrances?

Page 26

A. Correct.

Q. Tell me what that means.

A. I'm trying to come up with a short answer. The office of administration has a statewide accounting management system called SAM. And SAM for most state agencies requires that large expenditures be encumbered for the year. For instance, if I was paying off a lease, I would encumber the entire lease at the beginning of the year and then reduce that encumbrance each time I paid it.

Q. I see.

A. And there are no encumbrances under any of these.

Q. Got it. Okay. That makes sense. Okay. And then the first kind of category it looks like is legal services. What falls into the legal services category?

A. Legal services is the title of the appropriation as appropriated by the legislature and signed by the governor. It's House Bill 12.

Q. Okay.

A. And if you look at House Bill 12, legal services for the purpose of funding the state public defender system. It's that broad.

Page 27

Q. Oh, wow. Okay. You really are prepared, huh?

A. I try.

Q. And then it's a little bit cut off in this Excel spreadsheet, but it looks like the next bucket --

(Court reporter interruption.)

Q. (By Ms. Anand) -- cut off in this Excel spreadsheet, but it looks like the next bucket says something like expense and equipment?

A. It does.

Q. And is that -- that's the name of a separate fund?

A. It -- it's a separate appropriation.

Q. Okay.

A. It's separated by the office of administration.

Q. Okay.

A. It's not separated by the legislature nor the governor.

Q. Got it.

A. The office of administration takes that legal services and divides it into personal service and E and E.

Q. Okay.

Page 28

A. Expense and equipment. I'm sorry.

Q. Nope, that makes total sense. Okay. And then how about the -- the next highlighted bucket, which is homicide/conflict money, what is that?

A. Litigation cost.

Q. Okay.

A. And conflict funds. They're in one appropriation there.

Q. And that's again an appropriation by the -- it's separately appropriated by the legislature?

A. Yes, as a part of House Bill 12.

Q. Okay. Got it. Okay. And then how about personal service?

A. Further down?

Q. Uh-huh.

A. The only difference between that personal service and the personal service above is the funding source. On that funding source is the legal defense and defender fund.

Q. Got it. I had skipped a line. Thank you.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So the legal -- so tell me what the legal defense and defender fund is.

Page 29

A. The legal defense and defender fund is also established by our statute.

Q. Okay.

A. By statute we are required to charge our clients fees and the fees that we collect are put into the legal defense and defender fund. The dollar figures shown there, the total of the 135,187 and the 23 -- the 2,850,756, the total there is spending authority. We can spend up to that amount should we collect it. We have never collected it.

Q. Do you ever collect anywhere close to that amount?

A. Last year was a million 300,000.

Q. Got it. And when -- when there's a note at the bottom that says no lapse, what does that mean?

A. Up until last year, any moneys left in that fund at the end of a fiscal year greater than 150,000 by statute was subject to a biannual sweep by the legislature, took money out of funds that wasn't general revenue and said, whoops, now your general revenue in public defender, you don't have any authority to spend it anymore.

Q. Huh. Okay.

A. So last year legislation went through that changed that and any moneys left in our fund at that biannual sweep date are left alone.

Q. So you can kind of roll over --

A. Yes.

Q. -- amounts for that --

A. It provides for much greater management ability. The money is also used for training purposes and to have money available all year rather than at the end of the year just makes for better management.

Q. That makes sense. And then a couple lines down from that you've got other funds. What is kind of in the other funds bucket?

A. As you can -- the other funds is debt offset, another long story. The debt offset fund is a revolving fund that is established by the office of administration. What it is used for is we are participants in the debt offset -- debt offset program, sorry, which means if you are a prior Missouri state public defender client and you have an outstanding fee owed to the public defender, and should you be getting a Missouri state income tax refund --

Q. Okay.

Page 31

A. -- we take it.

Q. Oh.

A. And it goes into the debt offset fund, and that is a statewide fund and then the public defender system takes their share out of that.

Q. I see. Okay. And then how about that last bucket which is labeled federal?

A. As you can see, we don't have any expenditures there, nor did we get any federal funding in 2017. Again, that is appropriation authority to spend up to that amount should those funds become available. It's -- and we didn't have any.

Q. And have you historically gotten federal funding?

A. I think the last time we had federal funding, I don't know the exact date, but I'm guessing around 1994.

Q. Okay. I see. That's helpful. So I want to now turn --

A. You want this back?

Q. You can actually hang on to that. You -- you get a copy of all these for now.

A. Okay.

Q. And there's some chance as we tried to organize my questions, but there's a couple documents, particularly the kind of proposed budget to the legislature and the governor we'll refer to it at a couple different points, so I'll just ask you to hang on to it so you can flip back.

Page 32

A. Okay.

Q. Okay. So I guess now I want to just ask you a little bit about the breakdown of that payroll. How -- what are the categories of employees that you hire? So there's attorneys. What are some of the other kinds of --

A. There are multiple kinds of attorneys.

Q. Okay. That's fair.

A. There's assistant public defenders.

Q. Okay.

A. There's district defenders.

Q. Okay.

A. There's paralegals, there's investigators, there's mitigation specialists, and there are secretaries. That's basically the types of employees that we have. In addition, I think there are seven and a half computer people, something to that effect.

Q. Got it. Got it. I'm just going to show you --

A. This is part of -- that's a page out of the internal budget.
MS. ANAND: Got it. Okay. I'm going to show you what I'm marking as Plaintiff's Exhibit 31 just so we have it for reference.
(WHEREIN, Exhibit 31, FY2017 Payroll Summary, was marked for identification.)
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
Q. (By Ms. Anand) So tell us again now that you officially have it what this document is.
A. Uh-huh. It's part of the internal operating budget that's prepared for the commission at the beginning of every year that we discussed. They approve it approximately the middle of June the year -- for the coming-up fiscal year. This is a summary of a snapshot of payroll.
Q. Okay.
A. So this is -- if it was in the book I'd know the date. As of that specific date how many of those staff were allocated and what did I think it was going to cost --
Q. Uh-huh.
A. -- in 2017 to fund those positions.
Q. Got it. And can you tell me what the difference is between the two columns labeled FTE?

Page 34

A. There's -- it's really only one column of FTE. It's -- it allowed me to break out the assistant public defenders by their different classes.
Q. Oh, I see.
A. And I -- then I can total in that column.
Q. Got it. Okay.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. That -- that was -- that should have been obvious to me.
A. There was 335.5 total assistant public defenders.
Q. I see. Okay.
A. And 43 district defenders.
Q. And this reflects at -- you know, at the -- at the time it was created this was everyone who was working for MSPD, everyone would be on here?
A. It's all of the positions that were allocated on that day.
Q. Okay.
A. It may have been some vacant positions there, but we knew they were going to be filled.
Q. Got it. And if -- if you didn't know for sure that a vacant position was going to be filled, would it be on this sheet or no?

A. We hope all vacant positions are going to be filled.
Q. Got it. Okay. And then at the very bottom it says (quote as read):
In addition to budgeted positions, there are 6.12 over --
(Court reporter interruption.)
Q. (By Ms. Anand) At the very bottom we've got (quote as read):
In addition to budgeted positions, there are 6.12 overstaff positions. What are overstaff positions?
A. It means although there isn't an FTE -- do you know what FTE is?
Q. Full-time employee?
A. No, full-time equivalent.
Q. Equivalent, I'm sorry.
A. You're close. I guess I'm not supposed to ask the question.
Q. No, please. That was great. That was very helpful.
A. Okay. So it's full-time equivalent. In addition to those that are authorized by the legislature because we know there will be vacancies during the year we allocated 6.12 overstaff -- overstaff positions --

Page 36

Q. Uh-huh.
A. -- and so I know from history that we're going to have more than 6.12 full-time equivalent positions available to give. So we over budget. So the office may get an additional attorney, but with no FTE associated with that -- that position just because we know we have that much turnover.
Q. I see. So you know someone is probably going to leave office X, so you give office X an extra person at the start of the year?
A. It really doesn't matter because it's one total.
Q. Got it.
A. So if I know an office is -- if we know. It's not my decision. If we know, if MSPD knows there is an office that's struggling with caseload, we can allocate an overstaff to that office.
Q. Okay. And at any given time how does the number of FTEs you're budgeting for or that you've been allocated compare to how many I guess FTEs you actually have; that is how many vacancies are there typically at a given time?

A. That information is provided to you in a document and it's part of the legislative budget request.
Q. Excellent. Okay. Well, let me give that to you so we can refer to that going forward.
A. The 27 -- it'd be the 2018 legislative budget that I would need to look at. Not that one.
MS. SHIPMA: They may not have -- they may not have that one.
Q. (By Ms. Anand) So this is the legislative budget request and --
A. That's not -- that was prepared for the commission, yes.
Q. Got it. Okay. So let me just ask you then really quickly so that I know what to hand you for the next couple rounds of questions.
A. That's what I need right there.
Q. This is it? Okay. Thank you.
A. Uh-huh. Is that the '18 or '17?
Q. This is '17.
A. Okay. So that will give me the information for 2016, which will be comparable.
Q. Okay. Got it.
(WHEREIN, Exhibit 32, FY17 Public defender legislative budget request, was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Ms. Anand) So I'm handing you what's being marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 32.
A. Okay.
Q. So before we kind of dive into these documents, can you tell me first -- first tell me what this document is and then I also want to ask you what the other one was before we keep going. So what is this document, number 32?
A. Number 32 is the Missouri state public defender legislative budget request, which includes the governor's recommendations for fiscal year '17.
Q. Okay. And what does that mean?
A. This is what we're asking the legislature for.
Q. Got it. And what is the difference between that and a document labeled -- and the document labeled the -- the draft legislative budget request?
A. The document you're showing me there is what is provided to the commission for their approval. It mirrors the numbers in here. It's just a much shorter, much more concise version of it.

Page 39

MS. ANAND: Okay. And I'm going to get that admitted as Exhibit 33, the document that Ms. Lear was just referring to just so we have everything you would need to reference.
(WHEREIN, Exhibit 33, FY17 Public defender legislative budget request, was marked for identification.)
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
MS. ANAND: Of course. Thank you.
Q. (By Ms. Anand) Okay. Now that you've got Exhibits 32 and 33 in front of you, can -- can you tell me roughly how many of the FTEs that are allocated are actually filled by people working full-time? Thank you.
A. On page 17 of Exhibit 32 --
Q. Uh-huh.
A. -- it shows you that our total allocated FTE for 2017 was 585.13.
Q. Okay.
MR. MOORE: I'm sorry, what page are you referring to?
THE WITNESS: Page 17.
MR. MOORE: Page 17, thanks.
Q. (By Ms. Anand) So there's a couple different numbers. It also says page 1 of 11; is that right?

A. Yes. So we are allocated 585.13. This shows you what was totally expended if you want for FY16. In the FY16 column it was 585 -- well, it shows you the FY15 expended was 580.62. And so that's pretty representative of how it goes on a general year. We were five short of having it all the FTE. It just ...
Q. Can you tell me why you are typically five short?
A. It's the method in which FTE are calculated. An FTE is 2,080 hours no matter who, what, when, or where, whether it be annually taken, annual paid off or hours worked. So that all goes into calculating your FTE as expended.
Q. I see. And so when you say that there -- when you say that you're five short of the FTE number, does that mean you're actually five employees short or -- I see. Okay.
A. Not necessarily. What that means is we're five times 2,080 short of meeting our total authorized FTE hours.
Q. Got it. So it could be a vacancy in a position, but it could also be someone got sick and took leave or something like that?

Page 41

A. It could be.
Q. I see. Okay. Can you just -- while I have you in this report, the next page, page 18, in response to question number one you've written that (quote as read):
The office of state public defender is requesting full flexibility in our legal services appropriation.
What does that mean?
A. It means that we can transfer money from one appropriation line to another appropriation line. If you refer back to your Exhibit 30, the first two yellow boxes on the left-hand side of the paper is actually appropriated by the legislature and signed by the governor as one appropriation.
The office of administration splits that out into personal service and the expense and equipment. Therefore, they also allow us to move money back and forth between those two appropriations, and that's the hundred percent flexibility that we're requesting on page 12 of -- or 18 of the budget book.
Q. Got it. And does that apply to also for example the homicide and conflict moneys bucket?
A. No, it does not.

Page 42

Q. Okay.
A. Just between legal services.
Q. I see. Okay. And does that mean that you can -- as far as the legislature is concerned, you can move money across districts?
A. Yes.
Q. Yes, okay. And how about across kinds of expenses, so you could spend more --
A. Yes.
Q. -- on equipment and less on payroll in a given year?
A. Yes.
(Court reporter interruption.)
Q. (By Ms. Anand) More on equipment and less on payroll in a given year, for example. And that is all subject to approval by the commission, not by the legislature; is that correct?
A. I'm not clear on your question.
Q. So the -- the amount of money you're spending on a given district or amount of money you're spending on a particular kind of expense, like equipment versus payroll, that kind of internal budgeting goes through the commission, it's not something the legislature has to approve?
A. It's through management. The commission -- once it approves the internal operating budget, the information they receive on a quarterly basis is this Exhibit 30.

Q. Got it. Okay. That makes sense. Okay. So now I want to kind of go through how the decision is made to allocate funds on a district or division level. So I guess my first question is when you're looking at this pot of money, how do you decide how many people are going to be employed by a given division or a given district? How do you decide how to allocate staff?
A. The allocation of staff is really not my decision.
Q. Okay.
A. But what is -- is done is based on caseload, how many people do we need and how can we allocate what we have.
Q. And do individual districts request funds for themselves or put together a budget proposal?
A. No.
Q. Do each of the divisions do that, the trial versus appellate versus --
A. No.
Q. Okay. And do you supervise at all how the districts spend their money, so that is do you tell them I'm allocating this money and I want you to hire one paralegal and one attorney?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Got it. Okay. So I want to go back to the -- the legislative budget request draft -- yeah, there you go. I believe that's Exhibit 33; is that correct?
A. Uh-huh. Correct.
Q. Okay. So on page 14 of that you've got a chart entitled State Public Defender Cumulative caseload Metrics; is that right? So there's a couple different numbers in the bottom corner, but it's this small two-digit one. Okay, you got it?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. Who puts this together?
A. On page 14?
Q. Uh-huh.
A. That's put together by our IT staff.
Q. Got it. And are you familiar with kind of the methodology or how they're doing these calculations?
A. A little.
MS. SHIPMA: Can I just tell you that that was -- this -- a very similar exhibit was used

Page 45

I believe in Joel Elmer's deposition.
MS. ANAND: Yeah.
MS. SHIPMA: And he went through that, so --
MS. ANAND: Yeah, yeah. I just wanted to --
MS. SHIPMA: Yeah. I just wanted you to know that it's explained somewhere if she can't do it.
MS. ANAND: Right. Right.
Q. (By Ms. Anand) So I'm going to ask you a couple specific questions, but you may -- you may not know the answer so just let me know.
A. Okay.
Q. My first question is when you're calculating capacity there, do you know if you are looking at the full 2,080 hours of each employee?
A. Of attorneys, yes.
Q. Of attorneys, yes. And so that wouldn't take into account say if an attorney had vacation time?
A. No.
Q. Sick days?
A. No.
Q. Attending conferences?

Page 46

A. No.
Q. Attending trainings?
A. No.
Q. Doing any kind of noncasework?
A. 2,080.
Q. Got it. Okay. Does that number include the district director's time?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So this is assuming every single attorney, whether they're supervisor or not, is spending every minute of their full-time work on cases?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Got it. And then in terms of the workload numbers that you're looking at, does that include -- is that based solely on the RubinBrown numbers plus the log to travel in court time?
A. I'm not sure of that answer. I believe so, yes.
Q. Okay. And do you know if it makes a distinction by say type of client or complexity of the case or anything like that?
A. It does take into consideration the type of case, yes.

Page 47

Q. That's right. And -- and by that you mean misdemeanor versus --
A. Yeah. The entire breakdown is on page 15 there.
Q. Got it. Okay.
A. They each have different weights on page 15 of the same document.
Q. Got it. Okay. Okay. So now I want to turn to the kind of encumbrance process that you had described -- I'm sorry, the litigation expenses process.
A. Okay.
Q. So when an attorney is working on a case and says I need a litigation expense, what is their process? What do they do?
A. As part of our caseload database there's a button they push that says I need -- I need money basically.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. And they fill out the form. It's routed appropriately.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. So if I'm a local district defender in the Kennett office, it's routed to my district defender who provides approvals.

Page 48

Q. Uh-huh.
A. Provides an opportunity to chat with that attorney about that case.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. And then it's routed through the division director for final approval.
Q. Got it. And -- and what happens if you run out of money in that fund?
A. I don't know. We haven't.
Q. And what are some of the practices you use to make sure that you don't run out of money in that fund?
A. The full flexibility. That's the only reason we haven't run out of money.
Q. And where do you typically sort of pull the money from to make that --
A. Vacancy savings.
Q. I see. Okay.
A. That's why we have five extra FTE.
Q. I see. Okay. And I just want to make sure I'm -- I'm kind of covering the full suite of things that would be in that -- in that bucket. So we said experts would be under litigation expenses?
A. True.
Q. What about kind of if you wanted to get evidence independently tested, like the state did a DNA test and you wanted someone else to do --

Page 49

A. That would be part of it.
Q. Okay. How about if you wanted to hire -- you wanted to consult with a social worker?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. I think you mentioned interpreters; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Now, how does -- how does investigators work? I know that we've got -- you've got some staff investigators. If someone wanted to hire an outside investigator, would that be out of the litigation expenses bucket?
A. It would be.
Q. Okay. You mentioned depositions?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you mention consulting with an immigration firm?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. What about going to -- if you needed to travel for a case?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay.
A. It would -- it would come out of this -- the litigation cost.

Page 50

Q. Okay. What if an attorney wanted to attend a training of some kind, where would that come from?
A. It comes from our training fund.
Q. Okay.
A. Which is separate from litigation cost.
Q. Got it. Okay. And all those expenses I listed, those are coming out of your litigation expense fund, not the kind of -- a court or other outside fund?
A. That's true.
Q. Okay. Let's say a lawyer said I just need more lawyers on this case, it's really like a four-person case, not a one-person or two-person case. Is that something they could ask -- use the same process to request more manpower?
A. I assume they could. I don't believe they ever have.
Q. Got it. Okay. Are there any other kind of categories of litigation expenses you've seen that I haven't listed? I know that you said that --
A. Crime scene photos.
Q. Crime scene photos, okay. And you mentioned transcripts as the other one, right?

Page 51

A. Transcripts and records. Records are extremely expensive.
Q. And when you say records, what do you mean?
A. Hospital records, doctor records, records, yeah.
Q. Got it. Okay. And do either the assistant public defenders or the district directors get guidance from you or anyone else in management about kind of making this money last till the end of the year?
A. I think we do a very good job on being frugal with our funds. If we see something that we think we could do for less cost, we'll discuss that with the attorney and see if we can move forward that way. An example might be copying a large document. Maybe we could do that in-house at another office that has a better machine --
Q. Uh-huh.
A. -- rather than shipping it out to Kinko's that's going to cost you $0.50 a page. So things like that we try to get involved in saving as much money we can. Same thing goes for travel.
Q. Got it. And how about some of these other categories of kind of outside consultants, like experts or interpreters? Are there ways in which you're able to save money on those sorts of things?

A. Yes. We've gotten very serious with court reporters in making sure that we're getting paid -- that they're charging us a state rate and -- and only booking those court reporters that are charging us a fair price rather than the more expensive price if we can.
Now, of course, there's times when they're not available and we have to go with a more expensive person, but we try very hard to be as frugal as we can because we know the money is limited.
Q. And do you have a sense of how often someone who makes a request for say an expert is -- is turned -- turned down or said no to?
A. Very, very, very, very, very seldom. Mostly if there was something that happened, it would be adjusted or amended and not denied.
Q. And what do you mean by adjusted or amended?
A. I can do it locally cheaper, not taking it to Kinko's. So that would be an adjusted one.

Page 53

Q. Got it.
A. Or I can fly that person in on Southwest rather than Delta for $200 less.
Q. Got it.
A. So those are the types of things we'll amend, but I would say there's very few denials, very few. Less than -- less than, I don't know, a quarter of a percent --
Q. Got it.
A. -- I mean, over the years.
MS. ANAND: Okay. So I want to show you -- now I want to show you an e-mail that I'm going to mark as Plaintiff's Exhibit 34.
(WHEREIN, Exhibit 34, 5-3-16 Lear e-mail, was marked for identification.)
THE WITNESS: Okay.
Q. (By Ms. Anand) Okay. So can you tell me first -- this is an e-mail from you; is that right?
A. It is, yeah.
Q. And it's to Tony Roberts. Who is Tony Roberts?
A. Tony Roberts is our budget analyst within the office of administration division of budget and planning.

Page 54

Q. Got it. And so tell me what you were kind of conveying to him in this e-mail.
A. I'm -- I'm trying to remember the -- the time frame that this is involving. So it would be the end of fiscal year 2016, and that is the year -- well, I think I was just trying to tell him where we stood at the end of a fiscal year.
Q. Yeah.
A. It sounds to me like he may have asked a question, I was responding to it, how many vacant positions do you have. So I was trying to tell him that answer, and also trying to -- to make sure that he didn't think he could take those 41 vacancies away from us.
Q. Got it. And so what did you explain to him why the positions were vacant?
A. Because we were trying to meet the demands of the litigation cost.
Q. And then do you mind reading for me the last sentence of that full paragraph?
A. (Quote as read):
We are balancing MSPD's budget at the expense of our employees and our clients.
Q. Can you just tell me a little bit about why you felt like that was true?

A. Because we were holding positions open to meet litigation cost demands in 2016. We knew we were going to be approximately a million dollars short in litigation costs that year, and in order to meet the demands of our caseload and the cases that were open and pending and we knew how many bills were -- I knew projecting how many dollars of bills were coming in, I knew how many positions to hold open to come up with that amount of money.
And I felt that we balance the budgets at the expense of our employees by making those people that are still working for us work that much harder and that much longer to meet the demands of the caseload.
Q. And you also wrote you are balancing MSPD's budget at the expense of our clients. What did you mean by that?
A. Because they don't have as many attorneys to work for them.
Q. All right. So now I want to turn back to this draft legislative budget request, which I believe it's number 33.
A. Yes. Got it.
Q. Okay. I was hoping I could go through page 11 of that with you. So it's labeled Constitutionally Mandated Representation.

Page 56

A. Okay.
Q. Do you know who prepared this text?
A. It's a combination of folks, myself and the director.
Q. Okay. So -- and please take a minute if you need to kind of skim it. What does that $22 million number represent?
A. It's the calculation found on page 16.
Q. You said page 16?
A. Yes, the bottom of page 16 is $22,600,000, same as the 22,600,000.
Q. Got it. And so that's the amount of money you thought would be necessary in order to have attorneys meeting the kind of constitutionally mandated caseload caps more or less?
A. That's correct.
Q. Okay. And why did you put that in the -- in the request?
A. That's a hard question to answer. Can you ask it a different way, not why?
Q. Sure. I guess what I'm wondering is did you expect to get $22 million?
A. I was very hopeful we'd get

$22 million. The $22 million is a result -- it's a calculated result --

Q. Uh-huh.

A. -- of the numbers on page 15. It all ties together.

Q. Uh-huh.

A. It's a summary of the RubinBrown metrics applied to our caseload of 2016, the prior year. So it's not even a current year. You apply those metrics to a prior year. You multiply those -- you take away all the early withdrawals, everybody that got out early, and all of the conflicts come out, both to the sister office and from the office that was giving it. So you subtract conflicts twice.

Q. Okay.

A. You subtract the early withdrawals and you come up with a net adjusted caseload by case type. And then you --

(Court reporter interruption.)

A. Type. And you apply the RubinBrown metrics how many hours does it take to do that type of case to that result.

Q. (By Ms. Anand) Okay.

A. When you multiply them together you get the total number of hours needed to do our caseload from the prior fiscal year. You take those numbers, that a million $242,000 -- hours, a million 242,000 hours, you add to that travel time and court time, and you come up with the total number of hours needed to do our 2016 caseload using RubinBrown metrics. That total is a million I think it says 413,000 hours divided by 2,080.

That gives you the number of attorneys you need to do that assuming that every attorney works every day, no leave, no long-term disability, nothing, no annual leave, no sick leave, 2,080, everybody works 2,080, that's how many attorneys you need. Subtract that from the attorneys you got, that gives you the number that you -- the additional number of new attorneys that you require.

Q. And that's about how many?

A. 333.

Q. Got it. And so it's fair to say at this point you don't have nearly enough attorneys to devote enough time to meet the RubinBrown standard?

A. That's true.

Q. So what happens as a result, that is how is -- how is this time allocated? Are you -- are individual attorneys triaging cases, are you saying give enough time to these sorts of cases and not these, is it totally discretionary?

A. That's not -- that's not a question I can answer.

Q. Totally fine.

MR. MOORE: Can we take a quick bathroom break? Is that cool? Real quick, like couple minutes.

MS. ANAND: Sure.

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're going off the record at approximately 2:32 p.m.

(WHEREIN, a recess was taken.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record at approximately 2:40 p.m.

MS. ANAND: Okay. So I'm going to show you another document that's called a cost per case work sheet, and I'm going to label this one -- are we on 35? So this is going to be labeled Plaintiff's Exhibit 35.

(WHEREIN, Exhibit 35, FY15 Cost per case worksheet, was marked for identification.)

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

Q. (By Ms. Anand) Okay. So it's got a front and a back, and if you can just flip through it and then tell me what this document is.

Page 60

A. It's FY15 cost per casework sheet.

Q. And what is a cost per casework sheet? What are you trying to figure out?

A. Trying to figure out by office what was the total cost -- the average cost of a case that was disposed in this office.

Q. Okay. And when you -- when you're trying to figure out the cost, what numbers are you calculating in there? What counts toward the cost per case?

A. It's delineated in the spreadsheet here. We're including personal service, the district expenses, we're including some statewide professional cost, and that's your total expense and equipment and gets you total cost per district when you add it across.

Q. Got it. And when you say the total personal service, is that payroll?

A. Yes, it is.

Q. Okay. Got it. Now, we talked before about the fact that the sort of funds you have available are finite and may not be enough to devote as many resources toward each case as RubinBrown, for example, would require. So I just want to confirm, I just want to make sure I understand. All the lawyers are -- there's a finite sum of money that is being spent on all the cases?

A. That's correct.

Q. And so more money spent on one case means less money for another or more time spent on one case means less time spent on another?

A. I can't answer that.

MS. ANAND: Okay. Okay. I have another e-mail.

(WHEREIN, Exhibit 36, 8-17-15 e-mail chain, was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Ms. Anand) Okay. I'm going to show you what I am marking as Plaintiff's Exhibit Number 36. So first -- oh, I'm sorry. Do you recognize the folks who are on this e-mail? Do you know who they are?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. Do you mind just walking me through, who is Dan Haug -- Haug?

A. It's Haug.

Q. Haug, apologies.

A. He at that time was the acting budget and planning director, the director of budget and planning.

Q. And --

Page 62

A. For the office of administration under the -- under the governor's office.

Q. Got it. Judy Eggen?

A. She's a support person under Dan Haug -- Haug.

Q. Okay. And then Kyle Rieman?

A. It's Kyle Rieman, and --

Q. Rieman.

A. -- Kyle was our budget analyst at that time.

Q. Our budget analyst meaning he's the one who's responsible for coordinating with the --

A. He -- he was the budget analyst who worked for Tony Roberts and Tony Roberts is a budget ana -- senior budget analyst at the office of administration division of budget and planning under the governor.

Q. Got it. Thank you.

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So what's the request that Kyle is making?

A. I don't know. This is the first time I've seen this.

Q. Got it.

A. It appears to me that he's ask -- he's telling someone that I've requested to move money from the fourth quarter to the first quarter because we ran short of funds in the first quarter. Oh, it doesn't say that, I'm sorry. To move money from the first quarter to the fourth -- from the fourth quarter to the first quarter.

Q. Got it. And do you have any recollection of doing that?

A. Sure.

Q. Yeah. And why would you have done that?

A. Because we were out of funds. Yeah. At the beginning of a fiscal year there are many things that hit at one time. What the office of administration does is divide those funds up into four equal parts. So it's -- it's reasonable to assume that if you're going to pay lots of things in the first quarter, you wouldn't have enough money and you would move money from the fourth quarter to the first quarter to meet your demands there. So some things would hit at the first of the year and you wouldn't see them again.

Q. Got it.

A. So that's why you would want it loaded heavily on the front end.

Page 64

Q. Got it. I see. That makes sense. Okay. Okay. So I actually want to shift gears to talk a little bit about -- we've been talking so far about once you get the money kind of how you're spending it and allocating it. I want to shift gears to the kind of how you get the money piece.

A. Okay.

Q. So kind of walk me through the process. What are kind of the determinants of how much money you get and who is involved in making that decision?

A. So we already kind of talked about a draft budget proposal is prepared and presented to the public defender commission for the coming-up fiscal year. This is not the internal budget, but rather the draft budget that is Exhibit --

Q. 32 maybe, 33?

A. It's the skinny one.

Q. 33.

A. 33. That's -- Exhibit 33 is prepared for the Missouri state public defender commission, and in -- at their September meeting it's presented to them and approved by -- approved or changed or adjusted by the public defender commission at which time I take this little document that's, you know, 12 pages or whatever and put it in the format that's required by budget and planning.

Q. And budget and planning is?
A. Budget and planning under the office of administration under the governor.
Q. Got it.
A. Which is Exhibit 32. So I take that 12-page document and turn it into a fif -- an 80-, 100-page document --
Q. Okay.
A. -- because of all of the forms and the format that they want their budget request in. They require the same of all departments. So it's prepared. It's due to the governor by statute October 1st. We take it to the -- to the governor's office. We take copies to the House and copies to the Senate at the same time to deliver to the House, the Senate, and the governor on October 1st. So what happens after that is really not my concern.
But sometime soon the director and I will go meet with Mr. Haug and Tony Roberts. And the new budget analyst, Kyle Rieman is no longer there, I believe her name is Angela, we will go meet with them and say here's our FY19 budget. This is what we're asking for and this is why. They do that with all departments of the state.

Once we meet with them, until the governor makes his recommendations generally nothing else happens. He usually makes his recommendations mid January, January 16th to 21st, somewhere around in that time frame. Once the governor makes his recommendations for the funding, this is for all departments, not just for the public defender, then House appropriation hearings begin.
So you go to the House appropriations committee and you present your budget. They make their recommendations to the House budget committee. House budget committee finalizes their budget. About the time the House is finished the Senate starts the same process except for they only have a budget committee, they don't have an appropriations committee.
Q. Okay.
A. So once the House and the Senate budget committees are complete, they -- there may be three budgets. There may be the governor's rec, there may be the House, and there may be the Senate. So there could be three different recommendations as for the state public defender's budget.
So what happens next is that there is a conference committee appointed from members of the House and from members of the Senate. It's a small group of people. They get together and say whether they're going to take the House recommendation or the Senate recommendation. They can't do anything else. They can't go in-between.

They can't compromise. They just say House or Senate. House or Senate. So once the House or -- once they make their recommendation to the conference committee it goes back to the floor of the House and back to the floor of the Senate and they come -- truly agree to it and finally pass versions of appropriation bills. And those appropriation bills go to the governor for his signature or veto. Even after all of that work the governor can veto -- line item veto any budget back to his original recommendation.
Q. Is there anything else the governor can do with the -- with that budget in terms of altering it besides the line item veto or the veto of the whole thing?
A. Not at that point.
Q. Okay. Are you familiar with the term withholding funds?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So can you tell me a little bit about that and when that happens?
A. So once the governor even signs his budget --
Q. Okay.
A. -- he can, and has, withhold funds from agencies based on his determination of a shortage of revenue. And he ...
Q. And has he done that in recent memory?
A. Yes.
Q. And when and do you recall the amount?
A. The first time that the Missouri State Public Defender System ever had any funds withheld was in 2012.
Q. Okay. And do you remember what the total budget was and how much you actually got that was not withheld?
A. I know how much was withheld, let's go that direction.
Q. How much was that? Let's do that.
A. Okay. In 20 -- in fiscal year 2011, $250,000 of the appropriated amount was withheld and not released.
Q. And when you say withheld and not released, that means you never got the money, it wasn't that you got it later?

A. It was appropriated by the House and the Senate and approved by the governor, but the governor withheld 250,000 and we could not spend it.

Q. Okay. So in your internal budgeting, all the spreadsheets we were looking at, that kind of max. number was not the appropriation number, it was the appropriation number minus the withheld number?

A. That's correct.

Q. Okay. Got it. Does the MSPD commission have a role after they sign off on your -- this draft proposal you're giving to the governor? Are they involved at all in talking to any of the folks who you talked to in the House, the Senate, or the governor office lobbying in any way?

A. Occasionally.

Q. And can you tell me a little bit of what that looks like?

A. The makeup of the commission has changed over the years, so it kind of changes with the makeup of the commission.

Q. Got it. Okay. I was hoping you could kind of walk me through -- presumably the number you request from the governor changes from year to year; is that accurate?

Page 70

A. That is correct.

Q. And what are some of the determinants of what -- what changes that number?

A. Well, first of all, caseload drives most everything.

Q. Okay.

A. And as caseload changes year to year, you know, you never have the same number of misdemeanors and the same number of felony sex cases or whatever. The makeup of the individual cases change. So as you apply the RubinBrown metrics to the new number, therefore that number would change. So if you have more cases --

Q. More FTE?

A. -- more FTE. You have fewer cases, which hasn't happened in the recent past, fewer FTE. In addition, the other things driving our budget request this year is turnover, significant turnover in our attorney staff. So compensation, comparable compensation is a big item.

Q. And when you say significant turnover, do you have a sense for -- for how high we're talking?

A. That -- I do, but I think that was talked about previously. It's around 25 percent in our attorney staff right now.

Page 71

Q. Okay. And it was also discussed, there's some cost beyond -- there's some additional cost when there's turnover?

A. That's true.

Q. Why are there additional costs?

A. Training is a huge -- is huge. Just getting somebody up -- a seat in the seat basically and then getting them up to speed to be able to handle their own caseload independently is a huge cost. Plus we spend significant money just providing offsite training to new attorneys. We have a new attorney training workshop that we require new attorneys to go to, so --

Q. And has turnover -- was turnover higher last year than it had been in previous years?

A. Yes.

Q. And in general has the trend been increasing?

A. Yes, and that's part of your ...

Q. Exhibit 33 again. I think page 18 may be turnover is what my cheat sheet says.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And this is turnover for attorneys. Would you say turnover for support staff and investigators is comparable, higher, lower?

Page 72

A. It's lower. Because in my opinion, and this is just my opinion, I think that a state job as an investigator or secretary in a rural area of Missouri is a good job, and people tend to stay for a long period of time. On the other hand, when you're paying attorneys less than $40,000 they're not going to stay for a long period of time with the caseload and the types of cases they have to provide representation in.

Q. So you mentioned one of the things you're doing to try to reduce turnover is increase salaries. Makes sense.

A. We're asking.

Q. And are -- are there any other measures you're trying to take to reduce turnover?

A. That's not my answer.

Q. Yeah, of course. And when someone leaves, is there -- do you have any ability to fill their spot with some sort of temporary replacement or something of that or the position is just vacant until you can find someone willing to take it?

A. It's vacant until we find someone willing to take it. A temporary attorney gets in a case and gets out of a case, it doesn't really do a lot of good.

Q. Yeah. That makes sense. And if the -- we talked about this a little bit --
A. Uh-huh.
Q. -- in the past, but is it generally pretty easy to replace folks in these vacancies?
A. Absolutely not. It depends on the location again. The metropolitan areas are relatively easy to find an attorney to take the position initially. The rural areas, I think we've had three positions in Poplar Bluff that are vacant until filled, and they just stay vacant until we can find somebody to fill them.
Q. And is that because -- why is that, why do you -- why do you think rural areas have a harder time?
A. The rural areas are tough. Generally speaking, young attorneys don't want to live in a rural area. That's my opinion.
Q. And have you ever moved funds around to fill those spots that are remaining vacant for some amount of time; that is have you ever said we'll pay a higher salary in Poplar Bluff than you will in --
A. We do not pay a differential.
Q. Got it. Okay. I want to backtrack just a little bit to the withholding question.

Page 74

A. Okay.
Q. So you mentioned in 2012 there was $250,000 withheld. What about in 2013?
A. Okay. 2012 was the first time.
Q. In your -- in your entire tenure?
A. In my entire tenure.
Q. Okay.
A. And I've been with the public defender since it was a public defender.
Q. Right.
A. So 2012 was the first time that any governor had withheld any funds from the public defender system. Since 2012 -- in 2015 -- 2015 was quite a story because we had -- back to my story where the House and the Senate approved one budget, they took it to the governor, the governor vetoed back down to his original recommendation.
Q. And can you just tell me those -- those numbers if you have them off your -- on --
A. I don't.
Q. Okay. That's all right.
A. He vetoed it back to his -- to his original recommendation. Then there was a veto override session where the House and the Senate overrode the governor's veto of those funds. The veto override was $3,472,238. This is in -- in fiscal year 2015.

Q. Uh-huh.
A. Then even though the House and the Senate voted to override the governor's veto, the governor then withheld $2,972,238 of that money. So he released 500,000 of the 3,472,000, even though there was a veto override done. That was in 2015. In 2017, which is the year just finished, June 30th, 2017, the governor withheld $3,500,000, of which 542,880 was quote from the personal service budget and 2,957,120 thousand -- 120 dollars was from the expense and equipment budget. Because of a hundred percent flexibility it really didn't matter which fund he withheld -- which appropriation he held it from, but he withheld $3.5 million.
Q. And I know the money is fungible, so this may be a tough question to answer, but what would you have used that 3.5 million for?
MS. SHIPMA: Can I -- I want to object there --
MS. ANAND: Sure.
MS. SHIPMA: -- because this is subject to litigation that's currently ongoing.

Page 76

MS. ANAND: That's right.
MS. SHIPMA: And so I really don't want her to get in --
MS. ANAND: Too deep in the weeds on that?
MS. SHIPMA: -- yes, on this, and that's -- that's part of the -- that's part of the issue there is what -- what the money would have been used for.
MS. ANAND: Understood. Okay. Question withdrawn. Thank you.
MS. SHIPMA: You can see our filings.
Q. (By Ms. Anand) Okay. I'm going to backtrack even further.
A. Okay.
Q. We talked about federal funding.
A. Okay.
Q. And you had mentioned that you haven't gotten any since the nineties?
A. That is true.
Q. Why -- do you know why that is?
A. I don't.
Q. If you did get federal funding, would that supplement the amount of money you're getting from the state?

Page 77

A. It could by the tune of $125,000 because that's the total of our spending authority for our federal money.

Q. When you say that's the total of your spending authority, what's that mean?

A. It's the amount that's appropriated in House Bill 12 for federal funds and that's all you can spend.

Q. Okay. Do any districts or divisions have any other sources of revenue other than the state funding we've discussed?

A. No.

Q. Could they?

A. No.

Q. Could they apply for grants or privately fund-raise?

A. No.

Q. No, okay.

A. You -- no.

Q. And -- and why is that?

A. Sorry.

Q. No, this is great.

A. You -- you have to have spend -- to be able to spend money there has to be two things.

Q. Okay.

Page 78

A. You have to have House bill that creates your spending authority, and you have to have the cash to spend it. And if you don't have the House bill, you can't have the cash.

Q. Got it.

A. If you have the cash and you don't have the House bill, you can't have the cash.

Q. Okay. And I'm getting -- I'm getting close to the end.

A. Okay.

Q. I think we have like 15 minutes left. There's like two more big topics.

A. Okay.

Q. One of the topics I want to talk to you about is the Code 49 program. Are you familiar with that?

A. Okay. Yes.

Q. Can you just tell me a little bit about what that is?

A. I can tell you what it is although it's not my program. I just monitor the funds.

Q. Got it.

A. So Code 49 is conflict cases being moved from the local public defender offices to private counsel and paid out of our contract money.

Page 79

Q. Okay. So I have a couple of -- we heard a little bit about the program in more detail on Wednesday. I have a couple specific questions --

A. Okay.

Q. -- that you may know the answer to. So the first one is let's say a case goes to conflict counsel, you're paying private counsel for it, and private counsel withdraws for whatever reason. What happens to the funds that you gave that person?

A. We actually keep track of the money that we gave that person and try to give them a like case so that he -- and not pay him for that case.

Q. Got it.

A. So it's -- that's what we do.

Q. And let's say that it's someone who just is leaving the program altogether.

(Court reporter interruption.)

Q. (By Ms. Anand) Program altogether, the panel altogether.

A. We would attempt to get the money back from the panel attorney.

Q. Okay. And if you get the money back, does it go back into your fund or --

A. It goes back to general revenue. The state public defender would not be able to spend it again.

Q. And you don't -- do you have any mechanism to kind of claw back those funds?

A. Not at all.

Q. Got it. Okay. The second question I have -- so second specific question on the Code 49 program, we heard that if you have room in the budget you'll do overload contracting of nonconflict cases. What does that mean?

A. To -- to me it may mean something than it does to other folks.

Q. Okay.

A. And to me caseload overload is a conflict. So although it may be defined a little differently, overload is a conflict. So if we have money available, those overload cases could also be contracted out as conflicts.

Q. And when you say overload is a conflict, what do you mean by that?

A. I have a new -- a word. I call it a compency overload. Compency conflict.

MS. ANAND: Okay. My third question is -- I had it come from this fact sheet called MSPD Case Contracting by the Numbers and I'm going to label this one Plaintiff's Exhibit 36 -- 37. I'm going to label this one Plaintiff's Exhibit 37.

(WHEREIN, Exhibit 37, MSPD Case Contracting by the Numbers, was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Ms. Anand) So I just wanted to look at the -- the second graph on this where you've got the MSPD case contracting budget. And I was just trying to figure out what -- what the force to savings number is. What does that represent?
A. Trying to figure out what year I'm looking at.
Q. I think this is fiscal year 20 --
A. '15.
Q. No, it's not 2015, though, because we've got fiscal year 2017 on the chart, right?
A. Where?
Q. So if you look at the second chart you've got -- I'm sorry. The font is real small.
A. Okay. Here is -- here is the thing. This is budgeted numbers.
Q. Okay.
A. And because we knew we were going to be short again in litigation cost, rather than spending all the money on contracts, he set aside a million five to help us with litigation cost. So it was forced contract savings for litigation cost.

Q. And when you say he set it aside?
A. Division director Joel Elmer.
Q. And so -- go ahead.
A. And -- no, that's it.
Q. What I was going to ask you is so you have a set number of cases that are conflicted, right? There's a certain number of defendants where you can't -- MSPD can't represent them both?
A. True.
Q. So where do those savings come from? Were you just not paying the -- the panel attorneys?
A. Probably from overload.
Q. Got it, okay.
A. Not con -- not actual conflicts, but overload.
Q. Okay. One final bucket. This is for the -- my hodgepodge questions and then I'm going to consult with Mae and then I might be able to turn you over.
A. Okay. Sure.
Q. Okay. So question one. Did you have any involvement in implementing the RubinBrown study tracking the time of MSPD attorneys; that is were you involved in helping set that up, were you involved in administering at all the time tracking piece of it?

A. No.
Q. Okay. Question number two, do you -- does MSPD -- strike that.
Do retirement benefits and insurance for MSPD's FTEs come out of the MSPD budget?
A. No, it does not.
Q. And why is that?
A. It comes out of House Bill 12 -- 5. It comes out of the office administrations budget. As does all state employees.
Q. Got it. We've been reading in the news recently about some districts potentially turning away cases. How does that affect your job with budgeting; that is how do you account for that in your budgeting?
A. I don't think I can answer that question yet.
Q. Okay.
A. I mean, this is just starting to happen and I don't know how it's going to affect the budget.
Q. Okay. And has this happened before in your 35 years of MSPD?

Page 84

A. No. Not turning away cases.
(WHEREIN, Exhibit 38, 6-29-15 e-mail chain, was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Ms. Anand) I'm going to show you what's been -- what I'm marking as Plaintiff's Exhibit 38.
A. Thank you.
Q. Thank you. So I want to focus on the last e-mail in the thread from Kyle Rieman to Tony Roberts, and I want to take a look at his bullet point list under public defender.
A. Okay.
Q. So first could you just read out the five bullet points?
A. (Quote as read):
Caseload issues, lack of resources, juvenile representation issue, lack of resources, legal defense and defender fund collection issues, conflict cases, lack of resources and criminal code impact.
Q. So where -- what to your mind are those five bullet points?
A. First time I've seen this, okay? Caseload issues, that's my first decision item.

What year is this? 2016 legislative budget -- 2017 legislative budget request probably. First decision item was not enough people, which we've been talking about. That's probably the 333 attorneys that we asked for.

So I believe what -- what Kyle is doing here for Tony Roberts is just giving him bullet points of his budgets, he handled these four budgets for the state, and he's giving the highlights of what he thinks are the big issues for each one of his departments. So caseload was number one for public defender, lack of resources. Again, RubinBrown metrics applied to caseload, that type of thing.

Juvenile representation I believe in 2017 I know we did, and 2017 we asked to reopen our juvenile advocacy offices in both St. Louis and Kansas City. That was our second decision item that year. We weren't able to do it because, again, a lack of resources. The third thing, and I -- and I know that this is a Kyle thing and not a public defender thing is he -- and I know Kyle personally.

Kyle isn't happy with the way the legal defense and defender fund works in that the -- the debt offset system, the way that it was working, he wanted to change it, and this is his way to say, hey, I'd like to change that.

Q. And how did he want to change it?

A. I'm not a hundred percent sure that it is working yet. In fact, I know it's not working yet, but he did change it this year in that remember I talked about the debt escrow fund that was available in 2017, that first exhibit you gave me, 30, where the money came from the Department of Revenue. Missouri state income tax refund intercepts went into this big escrow fund and then the agencies would pull the money out of the escrow fund. And he wanted to change that so that the money would come directly from the Department of Revenue as a transfer to the public defender system rather than making it a circular route through the escrow fund. Does that make sense?

Q. Okay.

A. Okay. So that's what that one is. The third one is conflict cases, lack of resources. Again, even if -- this was to allow us to get out of all conflict cases and not have sister offices that do conflict cases. It's very inefficient to have an attorney run to a neighboring county to represent one client; rather, it's much more efficient to -- to contract those out.

So we wanted to contract out all conflict cases. It would require additional funds. And that's what that is on that bullet point. And the third I think criminal code impact, it wasn't anything that we did in particular, but the Missouri state criminal code was revamped in 2016.

Q. And -- so those are not issues if I'm understanding you right that you had necessarily flagged for Kyle, those are just the issues he thinks are the --

A. Yeah, that's the ones he flagged.

Q. Got it. Okay.

A. I don't -- I don't remember which budget year this is. I think it would be 2017 based on the date of this memo.

MS. ANAND: Okay. So I'm actually done with you, believe it or not. Well, for now. We may have to come back to me. Do you guys want to do a five-minute break before we get started?

MR. MOORE: Yeah, that's cool. We can take a break.

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're going off the record at approximately 3:15 p.m.

(WHEREIN, a recess was taken.)

Page 88

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record at approximately 3:20 p.m.

EXAMINATION

QUESTIONS BY MR. MOORE:

Q. Hi.

A. Hi.

Q. My name is Justin. I'm here for the State of Missouri and for Governor Greitens. I'm going to be asking you some follow-up questions here today. And you understand you're still under oath?

A. Yes, I do.

Q. Okay. Very good. So I'd like to refer first to Exhibit 30, that's the first exhibit that we looked at. And I'll be frank with you. I am not a math person, I'm not an accountant, so some of my questions might seem kind of silly. Just please be patient with me.

A. I will be.

Q. Very good. So you have Exhibit 30 in front of you there?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So I see a few different columns on this exhibit, appropriated versus expended and then a balance, right? And at the far right it says percentage expended?

Page 89

A. Correct.
Q. Okay. So in the balance column would that be like money left over at the end of the year that was not spent in the budget?
A. No, because this is dated May 19th, 2017. It's not the end of the fiscal year.
Q. Okay. So has there ever been a time whenever you get to the end of the year and there's still money left over in the budget that has not been spent?
A. The answer to that question is absolutely not. I spend every penny.
Q. Okay. Has there ever been a time where there was no money left and you had to actually exceed the funds that you were allotted and you owed people money?
A. We -- no.
Q. Okay. Was there ever a time that you couldn't make payroll for your public defenders?
A. No.
Q. Or you were unable to pay vendors like court reporters and things of that nature?
A. No.
Q. Tell me a little bit more about this federal funding. So I understand that you have not apparently got any since the nineties; is that right?

Page 90

A. That's correct.
Q. Tell me about like I guess the process of obtaining those funds if you know.
A. I don't know because we don't have any. Haven't had anything for a long time. Back in the nineties it was the Department of Justice moneys, and we applied for those funds through the Department of Public Safety. I believe the last grant that we had was for -- I don't even remember, maybe a drug court attorney.
Q. So just to understand the process I guess, would it be the public defender office seeking a grant with themselves, they write it up or it sounds like maybe it goes through Department of Public Safety instead?
A. It would be done at the state level, not an individual office level.
Q. Okay.
A. And it would come from the director's office, it would be under the director's signature.
Q. Okay. So would that be a process that you would personally be involved in or have knowledge of or would that be for some other --

Page 91

A. I imagine it would be me.
Q. Okay. But you -- you have not made such a petition or sought such a grant in -- since like the nineties, I guess?
A. There hasn't been any money available.
Q. Okay. And how do you know there was no money available?
A. The Department of Public Safety informs us.
Q. Okay. So do they kind of generate a report or something telling you, hey, for this year there's not -- there's no federal moneys available so there's no use making a request or how does that work?
A. It would probably go the other way rather than that way, where they would tell you there's money available. They probably wouldn't tell you there wasn't money available, but rather they would say money is available for public defenders.
Q. Okay. And that would be -- so the Department of Public Safety would just kind of inform you each year that there were funds available if there were any?
A. That would be on them.

Page 92

Q. Okay. And so the public defender's office to your knowledge doesn't like ask them, hey, how about this year, any money for us?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Apologize. There's quite a lot of exhibits here --
A. That's okay.
Q. -- so I'm going to be shuffling around a bit. So I'd like to refer to Exhibit 34.
A. Okay.
Q. And that's the e-mail that apparently was sent by you to Tony Roberts --
A. Okay.
Q. -- in 2016. Just let me know when you have that in front of you.
A. Okay.
Q. Okay. Very good. So you were asked to review the last sentence of the first paragraph and it says (quote as read):
We are balancing MSPD's budget at the expense of our employees and clients. Right?
A. Correct.
Q. So do you know whether you had any personal knowledge about what was happening with the employees and clients at that time?

A. I don't have any contact with clients.
Q. Okay. How about any personal knowledge of what was happening with the employees at that time, do you know if you had that knowledge?
A. Just general knowledge that our folks are overworked and if you take away a person then you're going to be more overworked.
Q. Okay. So you were just kind of looking at it from like a --
A. An overall viewpoint.
Q. An overall bird's eye viewpoint; you didn't have any specific knowledge at this time about instances where your clients or employees were being disadvantaged; is that right?
A. That's correct.
Q. Okay. Now this, the RubinBrown report has been talked about a couple times, and are you familiar with that report?
A. I am.
Q. So I guess backing up a little bit, your educational background is in accounting, right?
A. That's correct.
Q. Do you have any educational background in statistical analysis of any kind?

Page 94

A. Just classes in college which was a really long time ago.
Q. Right. Okay. But you've never, for example, like generated your own statistical analysis of a population of people and drawn inferences or conclusions based on those statistics, right?
A. A long time ago.
Q. Okay.
A. In the seventies.
Q. Okay. So for the RubinBrown report, for example, have you analyzed their methodology or anything of that nature?
A. I read it.
Q. Okay. And so as to their methodology and the data they collected, have you had any way of independently verifying --
A. I have not.
Q. Okay. But my understanding is that this RubinBrown report was incorporated into the way that you drafted the budget --
A. That's correct.
Q. -- is that right? And so did you pretty much just take whatever they had reported and just kind of as -- like at face value and then used that to extrapolate out your budget?

A. That's correct.
Q. But there's no like independent verification as to whether this report was accurate?
A. It is about the seventh report that's been done on the public defender system. So it's -- it's accurate, but I have no independent verification of it, no.
Q. Okay. So I did have a question about these off-campus trainings for public defenders.
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And I think you said that it was like a huge expense or like a large expense, right?
A. It's expensive.
Q. So what -- what is involved with these off-campus trainings exactly? Do they like go to a conference center somewhere or what -- if you know?
A. Well, we do have statewide training where people come in from all of the districts statewide. And we present training where there's experts on different matters to -- to talk to the group of people, whether it be management or new attorneys or support staff.
Q. Okay. And are these usually held -- I guess my question is where are they usually held?

Page 96

A. They're statewide. I mean, anywhere. It could be anywhere from -- from Springfield to St. Louis to Columbia to Jeff City. I mean, we hold them at different places. We bid out the -- the cost.
Q. Okay. Are they ever held like at the public defender offices in those locations so like --
A. There's some local training done, yes.
Q. But for the -- for the off-campus trainings, have those ever been moved like on campus instead?
A. No. Our offices are tiny, tiny, tiny.
Q. Okay. So it's like a space issue you're saying?
A. Well, it's partially a space issue, plus you want to -- you do have local training to deal with local issues, but then you want to have a larger training session so that you're sending the same message to everyone.
Q. Okay. So has anyone ever looked into, you know, trying to manage this large expense that you mention here by, for example, using teleconferencing software to, you know -- you know, send these speakers out to each of the individual branch offices?

A. Right now that would be a huge problem. We don't have sig -- significant WAN to do that.
Q. I'm sorry, significant WAN?
A. Wide area network.
Q. Okay.
A. Our Internet is incredibly slow. It would bring it to its knees.
Q. Okay. Sounds like a technological limitation you're saying as to the teleconference center?
A. That's not the only reason. There's huge value to getting folks together.
Q. Okay. And so what kind of value, like -- go ahead.
A. Just camaraderie. I mean, you -- you're doing the same job as the next person. You share experiences, you share tips and tricks.
Q. Uh-huh.
A. You learn a lot from the folks that you're with.
Q. Okay. Sounds fair enough. Do you know if anybody has ever like explored -- in the sense that it is a large expense, explored different options for these trainings?

Page 98

A. Yes, we do some videoconferencing, but we make sure it's a roomful of people looking at one screen.
Q. Okay. There was a discussion earlier about pay differentials for I guess what you would say less desirable areas of the state, more rural areas where you I think said, you know, attorneys just don't want to be, right?
A. (Witness indicates head motion.)
Q. I'm sorry, for the record you have to say like yes or no.
A. Yes. I said that.
Q. Sorry.
A. I was waiting for the question.
Q. All right. And so I guess my question is so why is there no pay differential? Why isn't that something the public defender does?
A. I don't know the answer to that.
Q. Okay. I mean, is this something that they --
A. I don't think any state agency pays differential for location.
Q. Okay. Do you know if there's any been -- ever been anyone who's explored that option? Have you for yourself ever explored that option?

Page 99

A. No.
Q. Is there a reason it's never really been explored?
A. Not that I'm aware of.
Q. One of my last questions is about the seeking of grants by public defender or the different offices. I think you had said that unless there's a House bill, you don't get to spend the money, right?
A. You have to have the spending authority to be able to spend the cash.
Q. So what would happen if you sought out and received a grant of some kind, but didn't have the House bill?
A. You wouldn't be able to spend it.
Q. What would happen to it, do you know?
A. You'd have to forfeit it. You -- I don't know why you would ask for it if you couldn't spend it.
Q. And is it something that's happened in the past before?
A. No.
Q. Okay. And has there ever been a time when you have received a request to have more attorneys put on file where you have had to tell someone that you can't do that because of budgetary reasons?

A. No.
MS. SHIPMA: Well, wait. I'm going to -- do you even understand that question?
A. Do you mean have multiple people on one case?
MR. MOORE: Well, she provided an answer.
Q. (By Mr. Moore) I mean, if you -- if the question was unclear, I can rephrase it.
A. Please rephrase it.
Q. Okay. So I think earlier there was some discussion about, you know, these people requesting more attorneys for cases and whether that would be a possibility. Do you recall that question being asked of you?
A. It was in terms of expert witnesses.
Q. Expert witnesses. I mean, I think my original question stands, right? So I mean, has there ever been a request for additional attorneys on particular cases where you've had to say no, we can't do that for budgetary reasons? Has that ever happened?
A. I don't think that's a question that I can respond to. If a local office had a case that was significant enough that they wanted to assign multiple attorneys to that case, they would be able to do that without any input from the state office.

MR. MOORE: Okay. I'll go through my notes. If you want to go ahead.

MS. SHIPMA: Nope. I'll wait for you.

MR. MOORE: Okay.

Q. (By Mr. Moore) I think earlier you had said that it's very, very seldom that there are any denials for experts, maybe less than one-fourth of a percent; is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And is that also true for other like litigation expenses, so for example, requests for like an investigator or you just --

A. That's all lumped together. It's one-quarter of one percent and that's a wild guess.

Q. Okay.

A. But seldom are there denials.

Q. Okay. So that would go for all the -- all litigation expenses?

A. The ones I read off, yes.

Q. Okay.

MR. MOORE: I believe that's all I have.

Page 102

THE WITNESS: Thank you.

MR. MOORE: Thank you.

MS. SHIPMA: I have a couple of questions.

EXAMINATION

QUESTIONS BY MS. SHIPMA:

Q. Kathy, are -- is a request for additional attorneys to work on a case ever made through an E request?

A. No.

Q. That's for outside experts; is that correct?

A. Yes, that's correct. Outside experts.

Q. And -- and that outside expert has not been defined to include more attorneys?

A. That's correct.

Q. If someone needs more attorneys, that would be filled by the current staff that we have?

A. It would be filled by current staff.

Q. And that would be something that the district defender would --

A. They could make that determination at the district defender level.

Q. Okay. Would you look at Exhibit 34, please?

Page 103

A. Sure.

Q. That's the e-mail from you to Tony Roberts on May 3rd, 2016.

A. Got you.

Q. Okay. Would you look at your fifth sentence and read that out loud, please? It starts as no additional funding.

A. Thank you. (Quote as read):

As no additional funding has been made available for litigation cost in nearly ten years in order to meet the projected $1.5 million shortage, vacated positions are being held open until the end of the fiscal year.

Q. Okay. And then read your last sentence of the e-mail.

A. (Quote as read):

There are currently 41 positions either vacant or will be vacant prior to the end of the fiscal year.

Q. Can you explain what was going on? Why were there 41 positions vacant?

A. Because as people left, either resigned, terminated, just left their position, those positions were not filled in order to save the money to transfer to expense and equipment so we could pay our litigation cost invoices as they came in and not hold them until a next fiscal year.

Q. Now, read the last sentence of that first paragraph.

A. (Quote as read):

We're balancing MSPD's budget at the expense of our employees and clients.

Q. Now, can you give me some -- an example of how you were balancing MSPD's budget at the expense of your employees?

A. They weren't given the positions that were allocated to that office because that money was being used for litigation cost. So therefore if there are five attorneys in that office, one leaves, now therefore -- so those four take those cases that are coming in the door. So therefore they're -- we're balancing the budget on their backs.

Q. And can you give me now an example of how you were balancing MSPD's budget at the expense of our clients?

A. It would be the same thing. So if there are four -- five attorneys are in that office, there's a hundred cases to be handled, one guy leaves, instead of handling 20 now you're handling 25. So your client gets less time.

Q. Okay. I think that there was a question about -- looking at Exhibit 30.

A. Okay.

Q. I don't know that this really has anything to do with Exhibit 30, it was just when the -- the question was asked in relationship to this, has there ever been a time when you reached the end of the year and there was a balance in the fund, and I believe you said you spend every penny or something to that effect; is that correct?

A. I do. I actually --

Q. And that's okay. We don't need any other exhibits.

A. Okay.

Q. I just needed to refresh you about your answer to that question.

A. Okay.

Q. And then the question was also asked if something along the lines of has -- has there ever been a time when you ended the year owing money that you weren't able to pay from that year's appropriation and I believe your answer to that was no, that hasn't happened?

Page 106

A. That hasn't happened. There -- there are cases where just in the general scope of things you're going to have bills for three to four weeks that are pending at the beginning of a fiscal year. I mean, that happens on a routine basis.

Q. Right.

A. The same as it is with your own personal finances. You don't -- you can't pay the bills the day they came in without -- with the approvals that are necessary and the -- and the double-checks that are necessary before invoices are paid.

Q. Okay.

A. So there's routinely a small group of bills that always are going to be paid out of the next fiscal year.

Q. Okay.

A. Which that's routine.

Q. And I believe state law provides for that; is that correct?

A. Yeah, state provides for that.

Q. Now, what I want to ask you, has there ever been a time that the MSPD has had to forego things that they needed during a year so as not to end the year owing money because the money wasn't available?

A. I think that happens almost every year.

Q. Can you give me an example?

A. You know, we're running with copy machines that are ten years old. We're running with laptops that are seven years old. We hold a lot of things together with spit and glue just to make them last longer.

I think public defender mentality is that if it's -- if it's not total trash, make do with it. I mean, I'm appalled when I go to some of the offices and they're sitting in chairs that really I want a towel before I sit down.

They're that nasty. Particularly, you know, clients come in with children and the chairs are soiled, the chairs aren't replaced. And that's routinely happened statewide.

Q. And so it's not necessarily the case that because you don't end the year in the red that you've had plenty of money to do everything that the system needed to do; is that correct?

A. That's a hundred percent correct.

Q. And in fact, we just spoke a moment ago about you saved -- you held 41 positions open so that you could end the year in the black; is that correct?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay.

A. It was a decision that was made to end the year in the black so we held the positions open.

Q. To pay litigation expenses --

A. Pay litigation.

Q. -- over the -- over employing more people?

A. Right.

MS. SHIPMA: Thank you.

FURTHER EXAMINATION

QUESTIONS BY MS. ANAND:

Q. I just have a couple -- couple quick questions --

A. Okay. Sure.

Q. -- and we might be done. Okay. I just have a couple minor follow-up things. First, Ms. Shipma referred to an E request. What is that?

A. It's a good question. It's -- we call it E number database --

Q. Okay.

A. -- and it's where you ask for money for litigation cost. So we -- we kind of went through that a little bit with your previous questioning.

Page 109

Within our caseload database there's a button attorneys can push, and then they fill out the form and it's routed to the appropriate people for approvals. So that's the E number. Once that -- that form is submitted for approval and funding, a number is assigned to it and it's the E number.

Q. Got it. Okay. Thanks. That's very helpful.

A. You're welcome.

Q. I -- I thought that was it, but I just wanted to make sure that they're not dumped to litigation expense.

A. Terminology.

Q. My next question is do folks in the public defender system generally know that if the number of litigation expenses are high for a given year there's going to be less hiring, positions are going to be hold -- held vacant, is that something that public defenders know?

MR. MOORE: I'll object to foundation and speculation. Subject to that, you can respond.

Q. (By Ms. Shipma) Go ahead.

A. Okay. I think it depends on their seniority --

Q. Okay.

A. -- you know. If it's a brand-new assistant public defender they may not have any idea, but if it's someone who's seasoned and been around a while, they've seen what, you know, 41 positions being held open does. So they -- they do know. The seasoned ones do. Maybe not the youngest of -- of our employees. Not -- youngest is not a good word. Newest.

Q. (By Ms. Anand) And who do you sort of officially talk to or to whom do you officially convey the information that hey, we're holding 41 positions open this year? Is it something you talk to only management about, is it something that you broadcast to the whole office?

A. It's broadcast pretty wide. Obviously I tell budget and planning --

Q. Uh-huh.

A. -- you've got documentation of that. We tell the commission. The local offices are well aware that they had to have approval. They always have to have approvals, but approvals were being withheld to fill positions. So they would say, yeah, we can fill it in six weeks or two months, but not now.

Q. Okay. Mr. Moore asked you a little bit about the off-site conferences.

Page 111

A. Yes.

Q. How many of those are there in a year?

A. It varies from year to year. It's -- those off-site conferences are paid with the legal defense and defender fund, not with general revenue money. I'd say routinely -- I don't know the answer. I would have to look. I can come up with it if you need it.

Q. And -- and just to remind me, the money in the legal defense and defender fund is not fungible with, for example, the legal services fund, you can't transfer money across those two?

A. That is true.

Q. Okay. And then I just have two questions from reviewing my notes. One is you mentioned right up front that you do internal but not external auditing. Can you just explain the difference for me? I realized I don't really know.

A. Okay. An internal audit is when -- I guess there's kind of two parts to an internal audit. To me an internal audit is when I go to an office, I make sure that there really is a seat in a -- a real seat in the seat. Make sure we're not paying any ghost employees. So that's the first part of it.

I go out, I do a physical audit of equipment sometimes. So that's part of my internal audit function. I make sure what we say we have is there. I make sure that people that we're paying are real people and not ghosts. I -- I look at the furniture and things to that effect to make sure that they're in operating order. So that's my internal type of audit.

The second piece of that internal audit is that I look at every expenditure that we make, be it for a deposition or a travel expense or ink pens. Those -- I don't actually see every bill, but I can go and pull any bills I want to review at any time. But I also get a report that's more than that thick every quarter and go through it line by line and make sure that those expenses are appropriate to be paid out of our appropriation.

Q. Got it. And when you say you don't do external auditing, what does that mean?

A. An external audit would be when -- when I would go to the jail or something to that effect.

Q. Got it.

A. I wouldn't do anything outside of the public defender system nor would we have an external auditor come in.

Q. Got it. And then final question, I just wanted to make sure I got your answer on the federal money correct. That $125,000, that is money that the legislature has appropriated, so if you hypothetically got that it would be on top of your budget?
A. That's not exactly correct.
Q. Okay.
A. The $125,000 is spending authority.
Q. Okay.
A. So that is included in our budget. We have that spending authority, but we don't have the cash. So remember we said we needed two things to have -- be able to pay a bill, have to have the spending authority and the cash. So all those things at the top of that page, we generally have both, but the federal money, we don't have any federal money to spend so we can't spend it.
Q. I see. Okay. That makes sense.
A. Okay.
MR. MOORE: I just have like two questions to follow up on.
MS. ANAND: Ready.
MR. MOORE: So are you guys --

Page 114

MS. ANAND: I'm done. Go ahead.
FURTHER EXAMINATION
QUESTIONS BY MR. MOORE:
Q. Okay. So looking back at Exhibit 34, that's the e-mail, I think that you had been taken through a couple more sentences in that e-mail, one of which was a projected shortage, right, the 1.5 million shortage?
A. Yeah.
Q. So this e-mail was from 2016; is that right?
A. The end of fiscal year 2016, correct.
Q. Okay. And do you know when the RubinBrown report came out?
A. I don't, not off the top of my head.
Q. Okay. Have you been given a copy of Exhibit 26 by chance?
A. No.
Q. I guess I'll just ask this question first.
A. Is that the Missouri report?
Q. Yeah. But this is a more general question, I'll just ask and see if you know. As -- as to that 1.5 million shortage projection, do you know if as part of that projection you considered and included the RubinBrown figures?

A. No. That's all litigation cost.
Q. So when you say in order to meet the 1.5 million shortage, it's just as to litigation cost?
A. That's correct.
Q. Right? And so there's no consideration of like the RubinBrown --
A. No.
Q. -- numbers for litigation costs?
A. No. RubinBrown is just caseload-driven.
Q. Okay. And so for the last line when it says currently there are 40 positions either vacant or will be vacant, you know, so as -- as to the will be vacant part, I guess does that mean that you had already received notices people were leaving --
A. That is true.
Q. -- or is it like a projection as to --
A. No. I had received the notices folks were leaving.
Q. Okay.
A. Generally speaking we get good notice from our folks before they leave, particularly attorneys.

Page 116

Q. Okay. And do you have any knowledge as to, you know, what the caseloads were in 2016 for public defenders?
A. That would be part of the documentation we provided. The annual report for 2016 has all of those numbers in it.
Q. And you think that you were looking at those numbers whenever you wrote this e-mail, if you know?
A. Probably not because 2016 wasn't over yet.
MR. MOORE: Okay. Okay. That's all I have. Thank you.
THE WITNESS: Okay. You're welcome.
VIDEOGRAPHER: We're going off the record at approximately 3:51 p.m.

MICHAEL K. BARRETT,

of lawful age, produced, sworn and examined on behalf of the Plaintiffs, deposes and says:

(Starting time of the deposition: 8:10 a.m.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're on the record. Today's date is October 4th, 2017, and the time is approximately 8:10 a.m. This is the video-recorded deposition of Michael K. Barrett in the matter of Shondel Church, et al., versus State of Missouri, et al., Case Number 17-04057-CV-C-NKL, in the United States District Court for the Western District of Missouri, Central Division.

This deposition is being held at ACLU of Missouri Foundation in St. Louis, Missouri. The reporter's name is Bill DeVries. My name is John Niehaus. I'm the legal videographer. We are with Midwest Litigation Services.

Will counsel please introduce yourself for the record?

MR. WILLIAMSON: Jason Williamson for the plaintiffs.

MR. SHAHABIAN: Matt Shahabian for the plaintiffs.

MR. MAUNE: James Maune for the plaintiffs.

MR. RAMSEY: Steven Ramsey for the state.

MR. QUINLAN: Michael Quinlan for the State of Missouri and Governor Greitens.

MS. SHIPMA: Jacqueline Shipma for the public defender defendants.

VIDEOGRAPHER: Can you please swear in the witness?

COURT REPORTER: Do you swear or affirm that the testimony you are about to give in this proceeding will be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth?

THE WITNESS: I do.

EXAMINATION

QUESTIONS BY MR. WILLIAMSON:

Q. Good morning, Mr. Barrett.

A. Good morning.

Q. My name is Jason Williamson. I represent the plaintiffs in this case. Mr. Barrett, have you ever been deposed before?

A. Never.

Q. So we'll just go over a couple of quick ground rules so that we're on the same page. I'm going to ask you a number of questions that are relevant to this case and you're required to answer those questions truthfully to the best of your ability. Remember that your testimony is under oath. So it is just as if you were testifying in court. Do you understand that?

A. I do.

Q. The deposition today will last no more than seven hours. I do not expect us to need that much time, but we will take breaks as appropriate, and please let me know if you need to take a break for the restroom or -- or any other reason.

VIDEOGRAPHER: One moment.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Your attorneys may object to one or more of my questions, but except in limited circumstances you're still required to answer the question truthfully and to the best of your ability. Is that clear?

Page 9

A. That's clear.
Q. Okay. And if you don't understand my question or you have trouble hearing me, please just feel free to let me know and I will rephrase or repeat -- repeat the question as necessary, okay?
A. Okay.
Q. When you answer the question, just please make sure to speak clearly and loudly enough for our court reporter, and when you answer please make sure you answer verbally as opposed to nodding your head or shrugging your shoulders, etc. Is that clear?
A. That's clear.
Q. And then finally just if you could allow me to finish answering my question before you answer just so that we can have a -- have a clean record here, make things easier for our court reporter. Okay?
A. Okay.
Q. Mr. Barrett, you are aware that you were identified by your attorneys in this case as one of the Missouri State Public Defender employees designated to provide deposition testimony under Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 30(b)(6); is that correct?

Page 10

A. I'm aware.
Q. Okay. And did you receive a copy of that deposition notice?
A. I believe I have, yes.
Q. Okay. Did you have a chance to review it before this deposition?
A. Generally, yes, I did read through it.
(WHEREIN, Exhibit 1, Notice of deposition, was marked for identification.)
MR. WILLIAMSON: Okay. I'm going to hand you a document that is marked Exhibit 1 for identification. Copy to the -- sorry, I only have one. One copy.
MR. QUINLAN: This is one?
Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Is that a copy of the deposition notice that you reviewed?
A. I believe it is.
Q. And you see attachment A there as well?
A. I do.
Q. Okay. My understanding is that you will be prepared to testify today with respect to at least numbers 6 and 13 on attachment A. Is that your understanding?
A. Six. And what was the other one?
Q. Why don't we do this? Can you -- can you read the description of item number six there? I'm sorry, for the record.

Page 11

A. Yes.
Q. Can you read it out loud, please?
A. Oh.
Q. Sorry.
A. (Quote as read):
Policies and procedures relating to the circumstances under which and process by which MSPD attorneys are permitted or required to refuse case appointments.
Q. Are you prepared to answer questions related to that subject?
A. Yes.
Q. And can you read the description of item number 13?
A. Number 13. (Quote as read):
Information regarding MSPD budget allocations and expenditures, including the amount or proportion spent on expert witnesses, investigators, and social workers respectively.
Q. And are you prepared to answer that -- questions about that subject?

Page 12

A. Yes.
Q. If there are any questions that I ask you that you are not prepared to answer, please feel free to let me know.
A. Okay.
Q. Okay? Mr. Barrett, did you prepare for the deposition today?
A. Yes.
Q. How did you prepare?
A. I reviewed some old budget books. I reviewed a study pulled together by the accounting firm of RubinBrown. I reviewed to some degree our previous year operating budgets.
Q. Did you meet with your attorneys?
A. Yes.
Q. Did you meet with any MSPD district defenders in preparation for the deposition today?
A. No.
Q. Did you meet with any assistant public defenders?
A. Not in preparation for this deposition today.
Q. Okay. Did you meet with any other MSPD staff as part of your preparation?
A. Yes, we -- I talked with deputies.

Page 13

Q. Okay. And particular people -- you said deputies that work in your office?
A. Yes.
Q. Who are those individuals?
A. Deputy director Greg Mermelstein. Deputy director Joel Elmer.
Q. Okay. And besides the documents that you've already named, did you review any other documents?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Mr. Barrett, are -- by whom are you employed?
A. State of Missouri, Missouri State Public Defender system.
Q. And what is your official title?
A. I'm the director of the Missouri State Public Defender system.
Q. And how long have you served as director of the Missouri State Public Defender system?
A. I began in this role on or about June 1 of 2015.
Q. And can you describe for us your professional responsibility prior to joining the public defender's office?

Page 14

A. Prior to joining the public defender's office?
Q. Correct.
A. Well, I held another position within the system prior to being director. Would you like me to speak to that?
Q. Please.
A. I was for about a period of one year before being appointed as the director, served as general counsel.
Q. And prior to that?
A. I worked for the State Emergency Management Agency.
Q. Okay. How long did you work for that agency?
A. Approximately seven months.
Q. And prior to joining that agency were you working here in Missouri?
A. I was. I was working in the office of the governor.
Q. Okay. And what was your job title in the governor's office?
A. Deputy general counsel.
Q. How long did you hold that position?
A. A little more than two years, including a brief stint as deputy chief of staff when there was a vacancy.

Q. And who was the governor when you worked in that office?
A. Jeremiah "Jay" Nixon.
Q. Can you describe your current job responsibilities as director of the state public defender's office?
A. Sure. I have to -- part of my responsibilities is to implement the operating budget. That is pulled together by the comptroller of the public defender system, passed by the general assembly.
I have to allocate resources throughout the state to make sure to the best of our ability that there is lawyers to handle cases that come in through the door in order to fulfill the rights of indigent accused.
I have to make sure that the lawyers under my charge practice within the rules of professional responsibility. I have to make sure that we are following state and federal law as relates to employees.
I have to report out to the Public Defender Commission, who I report to on -- at least on a quarterly basis. Those are my general -- I am responsible for hiring and firing decisions.

Q. And when you report to the Public Defender Commission, what kinds of things are you sharing with -- with the commission?
A. Sure. So the general practice is we have a quarterly meeting that is noticed up to the public pursuant to the sunshine law. The -- there's currently -- there's seven positions, three of which are vacant. So there's four active members of the Public Defender Commission.
When we pull together an agenda I propose it to the chair of the commission for his approval. Those things typically include caseload reports, whether cases are going up or down, such things as current operating budget, how we're doing this far into the fiscal year.
Are we ahead, are we behind in terms of projections? Some personnel issues with say for closed session, of course. Other -- other issues that are relevant to that date and time, whether it's our participation in certain initiatives or cases that we're dealing with.
Other issues could be facility reports for the reason that we do not control where our offices are. Those are controlled by the jurisdictions that we serve and presents a number of problems.

So we report out on that. Each one of the division directors and deputies will report out. For instance, we have a trial division director. She will report out on what's going on in her division.

Deputy will report out on what's going on in appellate or PCR as well as juvenile cases. These are the types of things that regularly occur on the agenda for commission meetings.

Q. So I want to return to the structure of the public defender's office in a minute, but first you were hired by the Public Defender Commission; is that correct?

A. That is correct.

Q. And what role, if any, does the commission play in the day-to-day operations of your office?

A. They don't play a large role in the day-to-day operations. When there's something going on that -- that I'd like to keep the commission informed on, I will -- if nothing else, a courtesy to the chair, brief him, but they are really responsible statutorily for approving the budget, and they have a number of other statutory requirements, such as to do some advocacy for us and our mission, as well as to prove some pay structure within the system.

Q. And is that advocacy with respect to the legislature or the general public or -- or some other --

A. I think it's all-encompassing, but I think the legislature is, if my memory serves me, specifically enumerated in the statute.

Q. Now, is the commission responsible for evaluating your job performance?

A. Well, I can say this. They have -- they hired me and they have the ability to fire me for cause.

Q. Did they conduct any kind of formal evaluations of -- of your work or of the work of the office?

A. I have not received a formal evaluation. They have shared in the past when, you know, we -- they think we are doing something well and when they think we're -- we can improve. So to that extent they share those things during the commission meeting, but I have not received a formal evaluation.

Q. You do receive verbal feedback, though, from the commission?

A. Yes.

Q. So let's talk a little bit about the structure of the office which you refer to in your -- one of your previous answers. Can you talk about how the office, the district offices are set up and what their relationship is to the central office?

A. Sure. So we are a statewide system. Not all public defender systems are statewide. And so we have several divisions. Let's start with central management. We have several divisions.

We have a trial division, which represents the lion's share of our cases. We have an appellate PCR division. We have a capital and division that also includes juvenile LWOP cases.

(Court reporter interruption.)

THE WITNESS: I'm sorry, life without parole cases, LWOP. My bad, sorry.

MR. QUINLAN: I'm sorry. I apologize. Can you just start that -- the name of that office again over for me?

A. Sure. My apologies. The last is the capital division, which also handles juvenile life without parole cases, and that's because both of those cases, capital and juvenile, LWOP, require mitigation.

So underneath me in the organizational chart you'll -- you'll see those three divisions listed. Within those divisions, as I mentioned, trial division is our largest division.

We have 30 some odd trial division -- offices throughout the state and some areas where there is -- where it is highly populated, for instance, St. Louis or St. Louis County, Greene, or Kansas City. The -- the local office, what's referred to as the area, area, and then a number will handle just one county.

However, in some other areas of the state that are less populated one area office will handle any number of counties. Could be up to nine I think is our maximum. The local office is -- is run or managed by a position called a district defender. District defender is responsible for the local office, including assignment of cases, managing their local office budget, etc.

Q. And there are 114 counties in Missouri?

A. Including -- and then the state -- city of St. Louis.

Page 21

Q. And there are 33 separate areas or district offices?
A. I believe that's correct, yes.
Q. Okay. And can you talk a little bit about how your office handles conflict cases?
A. Yes. So we have -- when there's a conflict -- by way of an example, if there's a robbery, arrest for a robbery involving two defendants in Columbia, for example. Obviously that local office, the Columbia trial office can only represent one individual.
That second defendant would ordinarily be represented by the public defender system if they are indigent, but by another public defender office. Whether it's the Cole County office, the Fulton office, or the Sedalia office.
When we have the funds, we contract out that second defendant to the extent that we are able to to a private lawyer who practices in the jurisdiction where the crime allegedly occurred. This keeps the public defender who -- in that second office from having to drive to another county to represent one, two, or a handful of individuals.
Q. And how often generally speaking is it the case that you have the -- the funds to hire contract lawyers as opposed to having lawyers in other districts handle conflict cases?

A. So going back two years to 2015, we were set to receive funds, additional funds to the tune of $3.47 million that was appropriated by the legislature for the purposes of handling these types of conflict cases. I believe this program that we run is called Code 49.
Deputy director Joel Elmer will be able to speak more specifically on that program. At the time we were -- there were several counties in our Code 49 program, but it was not a robust program. I don't know how many counties were in it, but when we were set to receive the 3.47 million, it was for the purposes of putting more counties in Code 49.
That means more counties were going to have their conflict cases contracted out to private counsel. That money, that funding was vetoed. The legislature overrode the veto, but then those funds were withheld.
We did not receive additional funds the second -- the subsequent year for purposes of Code 49 or contracting out conflict cases, but in the last legislative cycle we did receive additional funds to essentially contract out all conflict cases to the extent that lawyers, private lawyers are available and willing to take the cases in the state. We are currently in the process of administering that effort.

Q. So as it stands today, do you know how many districts or areas are participating in this Code 49 program?
A. I believe that all of them are.
Q. Okay.
A. It is fluid in that from week to week we have new private lawyers enter the program and withdraw from the program. As I stated, deputy director Joel Elmer will be able to speak more specifically on Code 49.
Q. Okay. And just to be clear, outside of the Code 49 program, when -- when one district is -- or area is responsible for handling conflict cases in -- in other counties, is it true that the -- the districts are assigned specific counties to handle in the event that conflicts arise?
A. Yes. For instance, one office will be responsible for their -- the county in which they sit, and if it's a rural area additional counties, but then above and beyond that as you stated, there are additional counties that they are responsible for handling conflict cases in.

Q. And you said that a -- any particular district office could have up to nine I think you said counties that encompass the -- a district?
A. My recollection is the Chillicothe office handles nine counties. I could be mistaken, but that's my recollection is the most number of counties covered by an area office.
Q. Okay. And then those offices will have a number -- multiple counties that they're -- where they're responsible for handling conflicts above and beyond the -- however many counties encompass that district?
A. I believe that's the case, but it varies for each --
Q. Sure.
A. -- office.
Q. Right. Okay. I just want to return for a second to -- I asked you about the commission's role in -- in your office's work. Are there any other state officials outside of the MSPD office that have any kind of authority over the work that you do?
A. I should mention that by statute we are an independent department within the judicial branch. So we have some relationship to the judiciary, but the statute also states that we are independent. I receive no operational control from any other entity other than the Public Defender Commission.

Q. Okay. Can you talk a little bit about your -- the MSPD's relationship with the governor's office with respect to budgeting or other operational issues?

A. Yes, I can. It's -- and the person who's most prepared to talk about this is the comptroller Kathy Lear, but sometime in the process for budgeting is MSPD prepares a draft budget request to submit to the Public Defender Commission, which we typically do at the September meeting.

The Public Defender Commission then votes on whether to approve or not approve or make changes to the draft budget request. Once approved, that draft budget request is then submitted to the legislature and to the governor's office.

I believe then the governor's office uses these submittals in order to prepare the -- the recommend -- budget recommendations, the governor's budget recommendations to the legislature.

Q. Okay. Do you receive any feedback from the governor's office regarding your proposal or do they just receive it and --

A. I have not. In my experience I typically just receive it. I don't think that prevents the governor's office from having conversations, but I have not -- in my experience I have not had conversations.

Q. Okay. Now, is it your responsibility as director to determine how to allocate the funds to the various district offices around the state?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. How do you go about making those allocation decisions?

A. Well, this is something I task the comptroller with, Kathy Lear, and I believe she looks at prior year cases to pull together a budget. That also includes funding for anticipated travel to the extent that they have to cover -- that office has to cover a number of counties.

She prepares a budget for each office. That then goes to each district defender who administers. And the primary driver of that budget is the caseload. Another factor is the available space, the office space for that office.

Sometimes the number of cases would suggest to me that an additional position is necessary, but there is no space in that office to put another person.

Q. So in that instance even if you have the funding to hire an additional attorney for that office, you're not able to make that hire?

A. Right. That's one instance. Another instance is approving a position for an office, but being unable to hire a person for that position. For instance, we've had at least one office where we've had a vacancy for a year because of the lack of interest in applicants.

Q. Okay. And do the district offices provide any kind of budget proposals to Kathy Lear or to you, anyone in your office?

A. Not directly to me. That might be a question for Kathy Lear.

Q. I want to ask you just a couple of questions about the district defenders. All of the district defenders ultimately report to you, correct?

A. Well, from the organizational chart and chain of command they would report -- for instance, the trial division, they would report to the trial division director.

Q. And the trial division director would then report to you?

A. In the ordinary course she would report to a deputy, but in practice, in practice she typically reports directly to me because the way the work is assigned.

Q. And who is the trial division director?

A. Her name is Ellen Blau. E-L-L-E-N. Blau, B-L-A-U.

Q. Okay. And are you involved at all in the supervision of those district defenders?

A. Not by -- not direct supervision by design of the position. However, I make it a practice to travel to local offices, sit in on staff meetings, listen to concerns. When I learn that there's an issue in an office, I will often directly interact with the management in that office, but not by design, but by practice.

Q. How often are you able to make those -- those kind of visits?

A. It occurs more frequently when the legislature is not in session. There is no normal from week to week. In one week I could visit upwards of three offices. In another week none depending where -- what I'm facing in terms of my schedules or to dos, but I try to at least visit an office a week.

Q. And you said you -- you would typically, in terms of deciding what offices to visit, if you're made aware of an issue in a particular office, that may be one that -- that you prioritize; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And how -- how would you generally be made aware of -- of an issue that would require your intervention?

A. It can happen any number of ways, but the management of that office may call our central office. We refer to it as Woodrail because that's the name of the office complex, either by call from the local office to Ms. Shipma, our general counsel, or to our human resources department, or vis-à-vis an e-mail from a local office or a phone call directly to me or to Ms. Blau saying there are concerns, or employees sometimes could use a little pep talk, and -- and then I try to make an effort to visit or call in during a -- or -- scheduled staff meeting.

Q. Okay. This may be a question that -- that should be directed to Ms. Blau, but is it your understanding that district defenders are expected to carry their own caseload?

A. They oftentime -- they -- in all but one circumstance I believe they do. I as director do not impose any requirements on a division -- on a district defender in terms of you must carry a caseload and you must carry caseload that looks -- that has X number of cases.

Because we have small, medium, and large offices they have varied management responsibilities. They also have responsibilities under the rules of professional conduct to oversee the lawyers in their charge.

Given the number of cases their office handles, the number of counties their office handles, whether they have new attorneys or senior attorneys, these are all factors that go into the size of their caseload, but I will say that all the district defenders save one has an active caseload that I'm aware of.

Q. Do you -- do you know which one does not?

A. I believe Kansas City district defender does not. I can't say with a hundred percent certainty, but if my recollection serves me, that's the case.

Q. One other funding question. Do the district offices receive any funding whatsoever from any other source besides the -- the central office?

A. I don't believe so. I know that the St. Louis office participates in several grants. I think most of those grants, if not all of them, involve not funds but, for instance, a social worker to help with cases.

The legislature I believe imposes a limit on the number of dollars that we can bring in from outside resources. I believe that's 125,000 or 150,000. I'm not sure.

Kathy Lear would know for sure. But I don't -- I do not think that we receive any outside funds for, say, a private organization or federal government.

Q. And/or local government, county government or --

A. Well, we -- we do receive the office space.

Q. The office space, okay.

A. And I believe in Kansas City we have some involvement in drug court, and I believe the -- the local jurisdiction may cover that cost or some cost associated with that if I'm not mistaken.

Q. And to be clear, the -- the counties are providing the office space, they're not paying for overhead, or are they?

A. I don't believe they're paying for overhead.

Q. So just the space itself?

A. I -- I believe so. As to electricity, I don't know the answer to that. That's a Kathy Lear question.

Q. Okay.

A. It might -- I will say this. It might vary from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. In some jurisdictions we -- we do not have privity of contract on the -- on the lease, and so we don't always know what the terms are as to who's paying for what. It varies by jurisdiction.

Q. How much discretion do chief -- or district defenders have with respect to setting policy in their respective offices?

A. They have some because each circuit, judicial circuit has its own culture. I'll give you by way of example, if a given circuit starts -- has court earlier than other jurisdictions they could amend policies to require attorneys to be there earlier.

We generally require I believe approval before they impose policy, but there are a number of policies that existed in local offices prior to my joining the system. So I'm not always aware of the local policies that are in place, but they have some.

Q. Do they have discretion around how -- how they allocate the funds that are given to them from the central office?

A. I believe that Kathy Lear comes up with a budget for each one of them that is lined out. The -- we have -- Missouri State Public Defender system has a hundred percent flexibility in our budget. It's not commonplace, but it gives us the ability to get through the fiscal year.

I believe the district defender works directly with Kathy Lear in the event that they need to make changes to how their local budget is administered, but there is some flexibility, yes.

Q. And so you said that the public defender's office has 100 percent flexibility say to move funds from here to there as necessary?

A. Yes, we -- I believe Kathy Lear needs to get -- provide notification to the office of administration. There is a budget analyst who is assigned to each department in the state and it requires their approval, but yes, we have -- the hundred percent flexibility that we've had is probably our best tool for getting through each year because we can't predict with much accuracy whether litigation expenses for the coming fiscal year will be higher or lower than we anticipated.

It's based on, you know, how quickly cases go to trial, particularly cases that involve a lot of litigation expenses, death penalty cases, sex offender type cases. So we need that flexibility.

Q. And you said that that flexibility is rare among agencies, among state agencies?

A. I believe so. I know the court system has some flexibility, but not as much as we do.

Q. And is it your understanding that the reason that you have that flexibility are for the reasons that you just stated, the uncertainties around caseloads?

A. Yeah. We don't know how many cases are going to come in through the door.

Q. Okay. Back to the district defenders for a second. Is there -- in your understanding, is there discretion with respect to staffing, either the number of attorneys or support staff, investigators?

A. That goes through me.

Q. Okay.

A. If they need additional staffing, they will need to make the request. It's not just a question of whether there is money -- money available. In addition to providing funds, the legislature also sets a cap on how many what's called full-time equivalents or FTEs we're able to use. And so we need to make sure that there's a FTE available.

And so if a -- if an office, if an area needs an additional FTE, whether it's an attorney, whether it's a support staff position, to include an investigator, they'll make their case to me. And there's a number of factors that we look at to determine whether it's approved. It's very rare that they get additional staffing.

Q. Do you -- let me back up.

I assume it is the legislature that created these limitations, the FTE limitations?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you -- do you know what the rationale was behind those limitations?

A. Well, I think the legislature, it's -- it's their responsibility to control the size of state government, and in addition, the one thing that our budget does not cover is fringe benefits, pension, insurance.

And so if we had the cash and we just added people, that would essentially add obligations on the state. And for that reason I believe that they control additionally the number of FTEs.

Q. Understood. Because employees who are not full-time do not get those fringe benefits?

A. Well, I think there's a threshold for when someone is eligible for benefits. But if I added five people tomorrow, that would be five additional people that the state would have to pay insurance for, pensions for, etc., and so for that reason they control the number of FTEs.

Q. Okay. Do district defenders have discretion with respect to the use of investigators in their office?

A. The use of investigators?

Q. Correct.

A. Yes.

Q. So not just the -- whether or not investigators or how many investigators are on staff, but how those investigators are used?

Page 37

A. Yes.

Q. Yes. And do the district defenders have discretion with respect to when it is appropriate or not to refuse to -- refuse case appointments from a court?

A. Well, it's a bottom-up type thing in that each lawyer is responsible to practice within the rules of professional responsibility or professional conduct. Additionally, managers have responsibilities under the rules of professional conduct as well as it relates to competence, diligence, etc.

(Court reporter interruption.)

A. Competence, diligence, etc.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) And if an individual lawyer raises a concern about taking additional cases, are they required to take that concern to the district defender?

A. That's my understanding.

Q. And then it's up to the district defender to decide how to proceed?

A. Within the rules of professional conduct, yes.

Q. Does the district defender have to give that lawyer permission to refuse cases?

A. No. They shouldn't. It's the individual lawyer's obligation. I believe there is some flexibility for the manager to engage the person to make sure that they're working hard, they're working sufficient number of hours, to see if they can do things better, etc., to make sure that they are unable to take additional cases, but ultimately it's my understanding under the rules that that obligation rests on the individual attorney.

Q. And those individual attorneys cannot be fired by the district defender as a result of refusing to take cases?

A. They should not be fired for practicing -- an effort to attempt to practice ethically. If they are -- if they can take more cases and they simply are not pulling their weight, assuming there's room within the rules to -- for additional work, then yes, you can terminate -- you can in turn terminate an employee for not working hard enough, not being diligent in the number -- in the cases that they have.

But I would not authorize a termination for someone who says that they are not available because they have -- their caseload is such that they can't take any more work.

Q. And can assistant public defenders only be terminated with your approval?

A. Yes. That's my communication to staff, yeah.

Q. Okay. Is it your understanding that these internal policies within the district offices are -- are all in writing?

A. There might be cultural policies as well that date back to a time that no one can put their finger on, but -- but I know a number of offices have written policies.

Q. And those policies don't necessarily have to be approved by your office or do they?

A. I don't remember communicating a directive on -- that I have to approve all local policies for the simple reason that I've approved very few. One of the ones that I do approve and we do have a policy on that I'm regularly engaged in is when we hire someone, one -- one of the questions we ask is are you able to wind down your existing practice, dispose of your existing cases before joining the public defender system. That is the preferred situation.

There are sometimes instances where someone is unable to wind down a case and they will seek approval to bring that case with them, provided that they don't use any MSPD time or resources to work on that case, that they share with us the extent of their representation, and that the scope of that representation does not widen after approval. Those are instances where they will need to get our approval.

Q. Thank you. I want to ask you just a few questions about the assistant public defenders, although I realize you -- you may not have a whole lot of contact with -- with them individually. And we've touched on some of this already. How much discretion are individual assistant public defenders given to determine the best way to represent their client in a particular case?

A. Well, as it relates to me there's a statute. I don't know the number, but it prohibits me from directing a lawyer in any way, shape, or form with respect to their representation of an individual.

So as it relates to the director, I don't have the ability to direct them, just that they follow the rules, professional response -- conduct which requires certain things, such as seeing your clients, investigating the case, etc.

Q. Do you know whether that statute prohibits just you from -- from directing those attorneys or does that also include the district defender?

A. My recollection is that it's -- it just states me.

Q. And those assistant public defenders are generally supervised by -- you made reference earlier to a manager in those district offices?

A. Well, in -- in a large office like Kansas City they will be under a team leader. They have a team leader in Kansas City. In some offices that are more medium-sized or even -- and larger will have both a district defender and a deputy district defender.

It's up to them how they divide their responsibilities. So some will break up their staff and have half report to a deputy, half report to the district defender. But it's up to them.

Q. And in terms of what that oversight includes, would we need to talk with individual district defenders to determine the kinds of things assistant public defenders are evaluated on? Does that vary from office to office?

A. Yes. I mean, there's -- there's more uniformity when it comes to being approved for promotion.

Q. What kinds of things do you consider in that instance?

A. Well, one of the things is client contact. Do you talk to your client? How often do you see your client? I believe we have a standard of within the first seven days is initial conduct -- contact, and then to the best of my recollection it's every 30 days after.

Q. And -- and that is in your mind the -- the most important criteria?

A. It's one of the few things that we could evaluate from an objective standpoint. And also the rules of professional conduct require, you know, regular contact with your client.

Other things are skills which are more subjective, your ability to handle more serious types of cases, but probably the most objective thing is do you follow office rules and procedures and do you see your client.

Q. Do you consider the number of cases taken to trial by an individual attorney?

A. In the trial division we want -- when someone -- there's four different levels for attorneys who are nonmanagement positions. There's assistant public defender I, APD II, APD III, and APD IV.

When you get to the higher levels, three and four, we want to see that you are able to go to trial and have the skills to go to trial because you're in the trial division and -- and we don't want to promote someone to a higher level within the system unless they have trial skills.

This proves sometimes to be a challenge because in some jurisdictions it's the culture or the practice that very few cases actually go to trial. My understanding of our numbers is that in the last two years only one percent of cases of among our total number go to trial.

MR. QUINLAN: I'm sorry, you say one percent?

A. One percent.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) How do you factor in caseloads in your evaluation of individual public defenders?

A. I'm not sure that I'm aware that we do.

Q. Okay. And you talked about criteria for -- for promotion. Does that suggest then that assistant public defenders are not promoted just based on number of years in the system or other criteria?

A. I believe the first promotion to APD II is primarily tenure driven. Obviously if you're creating mischief in the office or something like that, that would be at play as well, or not following policies, not showing up on time, not calling in or those things. But it's largely tenure driven and not skill driven. APD III and IV are -- by contrast have both a tenure component as well as a skill component.

MS. SHIPMA: Jason, I'd like to point out Joel Elmer will be able to give you more of the details of this.

MR. WILLIAMSON: Okay. Fair enough.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) And let me know if this is something that Mr. Elmer can or should speak to. If an assistant public defender has a complaint regarding the size of their caseload, for example, are they encouraged to submit those complaints to the district defender or do those complaints come directly to your office or is it some combination of -- of both?

A. I think that takes a number of forms. I mean, it's our most pervasive problem in the system, high caseloads. It's my understanding that APDs throughout the state regularly make mention of the fact that they have too many cases. Not in every instance, of course, when they make mention of their high caseloads is it to me.
It's primarily in their local office. I am fully aware, and when I meet with them it's typically brought up if I don't already concede knowing that it's a concern, and when someone leaves the system if they are willing to subject themselves to a -- an exit interview, it's what is almost always what they cite as the reason for leaving. Not -- may not be the exclusive reason, but it's the driver.
Q. Okay. And is there a formal -- I understand it may not happen formally all the time, but is there a formal complaint process for public defenders?
A. I don't believe there is. We -- in training, I know as part of training we say you -- you need to report certain things to the HR department when there's concerns about harassment or discrimination or those types of things, that we say you have to report these type of things, but not as it relates to caseload.

Q. Does your office receive complaints directly from indigent defendants regarding the -- the quality of their representation?
A. Yes, we do. We in addition to calls that the individual -- the indigent defendant often makes to their local office to the attorney who represents them and as well as to the district defender or deputy district defender, we utilize an ombudsman program.
Deputy director Greg Mermelstein is in charge of the ombudsman program, where indigent defendants will call -- will call the Woodrail office, either talking to Marsha Plank or Greg Mermelstein or Greg Mermelstein's assistant Lisa McGee, and we will try to resolve the complaint to the best of our ability.
A lot of times it has to do with not seeing the client for some time, not filing or not following the direction of the client as relates to filing certain motions. We will try to resolve it by Greg calling or e-mailing the specific attorney as well as the district defender for that office.

Q. And do you have any follow-up correspondence with the indigent defendant involved?
A. That's a question for Greg Mermelstein. I believe we also utilize a database for tracking complaints that come in through the ombudsman program.
Q. So let's talk a little more specifically about the funding that your office has received. What is the -- your current operating budget?
A. The specific number, I don't know. I think -- I believe it's around 40 million. Kathy Lear would know specifics. In terms of my perspective on the budget, I think of it in terms of how many more dollars do I have this year than I did last year.
Q. So can -- can you speak to that?
A. Yeah. So I began in 2015. That legislative cycle we were appropriated additional $3.47 million from the legislature for purposes of having a more robust Code 49 program as I alluded to earlier.
As I also mentioned, that increase in funding was vetoed by the then governor. The legislature overrode that veto, and then the governor exercised his withhold authority on that additional funds.

I believe the next year, 2016 calendar year, we were flat. We did not receive an increase, I believe. I believe that's the case. You know, I believe we received an additional million. Might have received an additional million dollars is my recollection.
MR. QUINLAN: Fiscal 2016?
THE WITNESS: I get them confused. That might have been fiscal 2017.
MR. QUINLAN: And that's -- I'm sorry.
THE WITNESS: The fiscal is a little ahead --
MR. QUINLAN: As I understand it, fiscal year runs from July 1st to June 30th.
THE WITNESS: July 1, yeah.
MR. QUINLAN: So -- so 2016 fiscal year would run from July 1st of '15 to July 30th of '16, right?
THE WITNESS: I think that's correct.
MR. QUINLAN: So when you said -- when you started in -- I'm sorry.
MR. WILLIAMSON: No, that's fine.
MR. QUINLAN: When you started in 2015, are you talk -- were you talk -- and the 3.74, was that the 2015 or 2016 budget?

THE WITNESS: I think it was the 2016 fiscal year budget.

(Court reporter interruption.)

THE WITNESS: 2016 fiscal year budget.

MR. QUINLAN: I've had to deal with that, so I thought it may help you.

MR. WILLIAMSON: No, I understand.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) So the $40 million -- roughly $40 million budget that you just mentioned that you're working with now is the -- is the FY18 budget, correct?

A. Yes. Yes. I think it might be a little more than that. Kathy Lear would know, and I think it's in -- might be in our operating budget, but we received an additional $4.5 million.

Now, the $3.5 million as I mentioned that we received in 2015 we never received. We are -- we filed a lawsuit on that and we're still litigating it. But for -- for this fiscal year that we're operating in we have an additional $4.5 million.

We are doing three things with that additional money. We are endeavoring to put every county in the state in that Code 49 program to the extent as I mentioned earlier there are private attorneys who are in the panel attorney program willing to take cases.

Separately we are using a set amount of funds to improve our IT infrastructure to include wide area network, which I believe is broadband. The reason we're doing that is we don't have sufficient broadband to download a discovery or, for instance, a police body cam video without disrupting every computer in the -- in the office.

In addition, we are trying to hire ten additional positions. We were given ten positions, ten FTEs in 2015 as a part of that increase, which was made part of our core budget going forward.

Although we were given the FTEs, we were not given -- as I mentioned, we're -- the money that was supposed to be used to fulfill those positions was withheld. This is the first year that we had the money to -- to fill those positions. Not all of those positions have been filled.

Q. Do you attribute the changes to your budgetary needs from year to year to increases in caseload or -- or other factors?

A. I can't -- I -- it would be speculative for me to guess as to the motivating factor or factors in the legislature making the decision, but one of the things that I did communicate to them was the increase in caseload that occurred from 2015 to present day.

I think there was a one-year jump of, if memory serves me, 12 percent, bringing us from 74,000 cases a year, rough number, to north of 80,000, I think closer to 82,000 cases.

And then in the subsequent year we received an additional increase to the tune of a few percentage points above and beyond that 12 percent increase. And so any additional funds that we received are in the context of more work having to be done.

Q. Do you have any sense of what is driving the -- the increase in the caseloads?

A. I can't speculate as to -- on that. I would imagine it varies from jurisdiction to jurisdiction. I can by way of one personal experience answer that question. I recently visited our Union office.

Although we had a statewide increase of 12 percent, the Union office jumped off the charts because it had a -- I believe a two-year increase of 60 percent increase in the number of cases that we received. I went there to try to kind of suss out what was driving it.

I met with the local prosecutor in addition to district defender Lisa Preddy, and he told me that in part he was able to hire two additional prosecutors. If memory serves me, that allowed him to file more cases to include misdemeanor cases that they previously were not able to move forward on.

So I could say that in that jurisdiction, based on the communication that I had with the local prosecutor, that it had something to do with being able to hire additional prosecutors. I can't speculate as to what's driving it in other jurisdictions.

I know in Springfield, which is the office that we had the second highest increase in our caseload, I believe it was around 25 or 26 percent memory serves me, they had recently passed a one percent sales tax for the increase for the purpose of public safety, hiring more law enforcement officers, hiring more prosecutors.

The -- the consensus in the local office from what I've heard from others and my own opinion, that this has driven an increase in more filings in that office.

Of course, in both the Union office and the Greene County office or the Springfield office, as well as other offices, we did not receive any corresponding funding to -- to match what was going on in the local jurisdictions beyond the funding that I mentioned earlier.

Q. Based on some of your prior responses, I'm assuming that Kathy Lear would be the best person to talk to about the budget proposal process? Is that fair?

A. Yeah. Yes, I spoke to it a little bit earlier based in terms of the commission approval, then the submission to the governor and the legislature, but in terms of specifics, how she pulls together the numbers that she does, it would be questions related to her.

In terms of what priorities are or in what the overarching budget should look like, I play a role in that. For instance, we had a study done that was completed I believe in 2014 which was an empirical data-driven study called the Missouri Project Report performed by RubinBrown, accounting firm, that established thresholds for how many hours we're supposed to spend on given cases by case type.

That -- that report provides some sort of calculation where we could input our current number or the last year's -- the previous fiscal year's cases and by case type, then subtract out the current resources we have, and that would yield how many additional resources we need. That is the primary driver of our budget formation is the RubinBrown calculus.

Q. And is the -- is it your understanding that the legislature has accepted those standards as reasonable?

A. I can't opine on that. I will say two -- two things to that. There was some criticism that preceded my involvement with MSPD as to how these -- how our then numbers were calculated. We received criticism in auditor Schweich's finding about how numbers were pulled together.

In addition, I know that the Senate budget chair at the time had concerns because Missouri was the only state I believe that had two Supreme Court -- state Supreme Court cases that discussed our caseload as well as an auditor finding that challenged or raised some concerns related to our -- our caseload standards at the time.

The American Bar Association thought that Missouri was the -- the right state to have the first caseload objectively -- objective data-driven caseload study performed in to formulate new data-driven empirically based caseload numbers.

When that report came out, that is the year, the next legislative cycle that we received the increase of 3.47 million. So I will just put those two together to suggest that it held some weight. Separately, part of the budget process is the House will pass -- there's two houses, the House and the Senate.

The House will pass its budget bill first and then it will go to the Senate. Because the number of budget bills and lines on budget bills that the Senate has to review and make decisions on, they will speed up the process by in Senate budget committee looking at, one, the governor's recommendation for each budget request, what the House passed, and what the department requested.

Typically when you sit in on that budget hearing you will hear either House and close, which means the Senate budget committee will go with the House version and then move on to the next, or governor's recommendation and closed, and more rarely go with the department request.

This past year the Senate budget committee or Senate appropriations I should say, that's the appropriate name for the committee, did not go with the -- in committee did not go with the House recommendation or the House-passed budget bill for MSPD.

It did not go with the governor's recommendation, but went with the departmental request given that the departmental request was based in large part on the RubinBrown numbers.

You may be able to make -- there might be a tacit acknowledgment that they accepted the numbers, but again, I'd only be speculating as to what's in their -- their minds. After that point because the House and the Senate differed on their positions, it goes to a joint budget committee where they reconcile their differences.

Q. And during this process you advocate at the legislature for that additional funding; is that correct?

A. Yes. I -- I provide testimony both in legislative budget committee hearings and I meet privately with staffers and key members on appropriations in the legislature.

Page 57

Q. And have you been asked formally or informally about the RubinBrown study generally or its role in -- in your development of your budget?

A. Yes. It's always a part of my proposal, my written remarks, my -- my oral remarks, as well as individual conversations when -- when I'm asked how did you arrive at this number.

Q. And has anyone ever challenged explicitly or implicitly the -- the legitimacy of those numbers?

A. Yes. Conversations with prosecutors. Again, they will -- I know the comments have been made questioning the report. What the specific concerns are, I don't recall.

Q. You said prosecutors have raised concerns?

A. Yes, I don't remember which ones, but I remember having conversations.

Q. Any legislators raise concerns?

A. Perhaps -- not to me directly, but perhaps.

Q. Okay. And you said it's your job to prioritize your budget or your -- your line items; is that correct?

A. Yeah.

Q. How do you go about that -- that process?

A. Well, I should say that in addition to generating a number that -- that's based on RubinBrown calculus, there are things that we additionally asked for in our budget. IT is an example.

Also, we do not have a -- an appellate office in the southern district. We have the Southern District Court of Appeals, but we do not have a southern district appellate office. Therefore, our attorneys in our central office or our western appellate office have to drive a long way to handle these types of cases.

Also, we have asked for juvenile advocacy units, which the system previously had, but had to get rid of in order to handle our rising adult caseload. They preceded me.

So we've asked for these types of things in our budget above and beyond what RubinBrown says we need to provide constitutionally competent representation for the number and types of cases that we have.

Q. Is it your understanding that Sarah Johnson will be able to talk about the juvenile advocacy units?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. Okay.

MS. SHIPMA: And Joel Elmer.

MR. WILLIAMSON: And Joel Elmer.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) And -- and does the Public Defender Commission play any role in determining priorities within your -- your budget?

A. Well, yeah, we propose the budget to them and they have to approve it, and there will be questions as to, you know, specific things and what's -- what I would -- it's always a question in the legislature of, okay, this is what you say you need, but what would you prioritize?

And in -- recently we have prioritized getting out of conflict cases because it's the most -- it's the thing that we can do to provide relief statewide in addition to make us more efficient because we're -- it reduces our travel time.

Q. At what point in the course of a given prosecution is the public defender's office typically assigned or appointed to represent an indigent defendant?

A. So again, it -- it will vary by jurisdiction in terms of how or when an individual receives an application for public defender's services. There are times when they are incarcerated pretrial and receive an application in the jail, and then the jail will by arrangement send us the application.

There are also times when the defendant is in court and will apply and the defendant may be approved or qualify for defender services there or the application may be taken back for clerical staff or someone else to assess the application for services. So it varies.

Q. But in every jurisdiction it is the public defender's office that makes the decision --

A. By statute.

Q. -- with respect to -- okay. And what is the basis for that decision?

A. So it's a little bit complicated. There was both a statute and a rule on this. And the ultimate goal is determine whether they can afford a lawyer for the charges that they are facing, but the calculus for it is -- is a little complex.

We use -- we are one of I believe 21 states that use as an objective component the federal poverty guidelines, and I believe the threshold is a hundred percent of the federal poverty guidelines, and they would not qualify, I believe, which means that theoretically because food stamps qualifications I believe is 125 percent, you could qualify theoretically for food stamps and not qualify for our services.

There are additional subjective components. For instance, if the individual bonds out, posts their own bail or bond, and that amount is -- suggests to our office that they have access to resources, for instance if they post a $10,000 bond or a $5,000 bond, we would inquire as to whether that individual has access to other resources, either physical property that can be liquidated to -- to hire an attorney or cash or liquid assets.

There are other things that are considered. For instance, whether the person is employed, whether they are -- how many dependents they have, whether they are receiving government assistance.

I believe if they are both unemployed and receiving governmental assistance, with the exception of disability, I think that's a per se quali -- qualified for public defender services. If we make a determination that the person is not indigent, also by statute the person can appeal to the judge who is then in a position to overrule our determination of indigence.

Q. And if -- if a -- if a defendant appeals that decision is there a hearing that's held?

A. I think the statute requires a hearing. I think in practice it's very different from that.

Q. And to the extent that a hearing occurs or that there's some sort of proceeding in front of a court, would the public defender's office appear in that proceeding?

A. I will say that it appears that that's the design, but I don't think it happens that -- I think it happens like that very rarely. I think the judge asks the individual a few questions, there's not a lot of investigation that's done by MSPD for the simple reason that it's not a good use of our time in light of our existing caseload.

And it's our experience that if the individual tells the judge that they can't afford an attorney, then the judge will find indigent and appoint us. So it's just our practice at that point to accept the representation. There are -- there are instances where we don't, but commonplace is we accept the appointment.

Q. Okay. To what extent formally or informally does your budget limitation factor in to the decision about whether or not someone is determined to be indigent?

A. It shouldn't. It shouldn't. I will use that to point something out, though. When our commission -- when the Public Defender Commission was made aware of a report that we had -- MSPD had one of the -- if not the most strict standard, and by that I mean you could theoretically qualify for indigent representation in the 49 other states but not in Missouri, they endeavored to review what other states did and consider expanding our eligibility for services.

They decided not to given the fact that we didn't have the resources to handle our existing caseload at the time, but we wanted to make sure that no one would was falling through the cracks. And one of the things that we identified was how bond was used locally to make a determination of indigence.

I'm aware that prior to me and a little bit into my tenure there was a per se determination that if you made five -- if you posted $5,000 bond, you did not qualify for public defender services. This had a number of drawbacks as it relates to making sure that people get a lawyer.

One, some judges would post bond just underneath $5,000 for the purposes of making sure they qualify. In other jurisdictions, this rule failed to account for instances where a relative would post bond, but they would not -- that same relative would not be willing to hire counsel.

So it's not a good basis for a determination. And so what we decided was to instruct local offices to use the bond amount as -- as a factor and a reason to make further inquiries as to the person's access to resources.

Q. Okay. And once it has been determined that a particular person does qualify for public defender services, is there a particular person that is then responsible for determining whether there are any conflicts?

A. I -- I think Joel Elmer would be able to speak to that, and I think who makes that determination may depend on staffing of local office.

Q. And do you have any insight into the process that -- and I imagine it could probably vary from office to office, but the process by which district offices determine which individual public defender will be handling a particular case?

A. Yes, it's -- it's by office. Some offices like the Chillicothe office that I refer to earlier, which covers a number of counties, lawyers are sometimes assigned to a county. In other jurisdictions there may be multiple lawyers assigned to the same county, so it will vary depending on the office who gets what case.

MR. WILLIAMSON: Can we go off the record for one minute?

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're going off the record at approximately 9:37 a.m.

(WHEREIN, a recess was taken.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record at approximately 9:51 a.m.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Mr. Barrett, are you familiar with the Missouri Supreme Court case captioned Missouri Public Defender Commission versus Waters?

A. Yes.

Q. What is your general understanding of the -- of that case?

A. I get that case and the Pratt case confused. One relates to the promulgation of a rural -- this all preceded me, my time at MSPD, but the promulgation of a rule involving when an office can essentially refuse to accept new cases if that's correct.

Q. And even though the Waters case preceded you, do you have an understanding of what the -- the practical impact of that decision was on -- on your office?

A. Well, my understanding is the promulgation of that rule would provide a mechanism that would allow a local office to essentially not accept or not be available to receive additional cases because a determination had been made that that office has too many cases.

Q. And are you aware of any steps taken by the Missouri legislature to -- to codify the decision in Waters?

A. I don't know if it was to codify. I would frame it as to nullify the -- the rule that was promulgated by enacting a statute that it would appear to me to be -- although I never administered it, more onerous than what was promulgated by MSPD prior to my joining the department.

MS. SHIPMA: And again, Greg Mermelstein and Joel Elmer both lived through that time with MSPD, so they can speak in more detail about the specifics.

MR. WILLIAMSON: Okay. That's helpful.

MR. QUINLAN: I -- there's a word that I missed. You said you never utilized the statute.

THE WITNESS: Not during my tenure.

MR. QUINLAN: I'm trying to remember what the word was you used. Do you remember?

THE WITNESS: Administer.

MR. QUINLAN: Administer. Okay. And I apologize.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Is it your understanding that your predecessor, Catherine Kelly?

A. Yes.

Q. Was told that if offices continue -- or started to turn down cases that the legislature would attempt to privatize the public defender system?

A. Secondhand coming -- information came to me that a -- that during a time when the office, or at least the Boone County office, utilized the rule that was promulgated and affirmed by the Supreme Court a judge by the name of Oxenhandler began appointing.

This stirred up some political backlash in Jefferson City. I was told that a representative from the House of Representatives, I believe it was Kelly who represented at the time Boone County or an area within Boone County, I believe, visited Cat Kelly.

I don't know the specifics of their conversation, but it was told to me that during this conversation the communication was stand down, stop refusing cases, or the legislature will proceed with plans to privatize. I don't know what happened after that, other than the legislature didn't pass the privatization bill, but --

Q. Did you ever have a conversation with Ms. Kelly specifically about this?

A. No. Not regarding details. And not even as to her being visited by representative Kelly on this point, just that in more general terms the decision to reverse course and not refuse cases was tied to concern about privatizing the system.

Q. Did you ever receive a similar warning from anyone?

Page 69

A. Yeah, recently as yesterday. I was on a conference call with several judges and a prosecutor and the district defender of my Kennett office. The judge -- the presiding judge --

(Court reporter interruption.)

A. Kennett office, K-E-N-N-E-T-T. Leslie Hazel is the district defender's name. She was following the direction of lawyers in her office that they were not available and she communicated that to the court.

She received I think some hostile treatment locally and I asked to be included on the conversations. The call was had yesterday at three o'clock which Judge Mayer, M-A-Y-E-R, I believe, who I think is the presiding judge.

Judge Satterfield, who I believe is an associate judge. As well as a prosecutor, elected prosecutor named Russ Oliver. I believe he represents Stoddard County.

They -- we talked through what directives I'd given or not given with respect to Ms. Hazel's decision, the events that led to it, what my position was on the law.

During the course -- I think it was at the end of the conversation Russ Oliver made comments related to privatization and good luck this legislative session.

And previous to that call it was related to me by a number of employees that Russ Oliver -- and I have no direct knowledge as to whether he did or did not -- was communicating with the Speaker of the House about reviving the privatization bill and was -- and having back channel communications with prosecutors on that subject. I cannot testify about whether that's accurate, just that it was related to me.

Q. We'll come back to -- to that shortly. Did the prospect of case refusal come up during the process of your -- your application for this job?

A. No, I don't think it -- during my interview?

Q. Right.

A. I don't think it came up. I don't recall it.

Q. Was it your understanding as you went through that interview process that the public defender's office was in the midst of a budget crisis at that time?

A. Yes.

Q. And did you talk with members of the staff or whoever was interviewing you about that problem?

A. Yeah, the lay of the land at the time within the system, which was my impression of the system, was that turning away cases, whether based on ethical obligations or otherwise, would result in privatization, and that made it all the more dire to try to get as many additional resources as possible.

Q. So is it fair to say that you didn't believe at the time that you took the job that refusing cases was a viable alternative?

A. I remember from day one to now being extremely conflicted because the proverbial rock and a hard place with what I know to be our ethical obligations, including my ethical obligations as a manager in the legal setting to what, you know, provided -- making sure -- doing what I needed to do to make sure that everyone received competent representation pursuant to the Sixth Amendment.

The -- I remember having some understanding of the privatization proposal, and it was my determination that it would -- it would -- it would not be an improvement on the current situation in terms of providing the right to counsel to the indigent accused.

For that reason I endeavored to improve the -- the system incrementally through making -- trying to secure more funding and then reporting back to the legislature on how I spent that funding and making a case for the benefit to the state of Missouri.

Q. And can you talk a little bit about what -- can you talk a little bit about your understanding of -- of what that privatization proposal entailed?

A. I don't really recall. I think it was a hybrid where MSPD would continue to take certain cases, but other cases would be privatized.

Q. In other words, assigned to private counsel?

A. Yeah. By -- by means that I'm not familiar with, whether it was -- I don't know whether MSPD would contract out those cases, whether it would be done through the court system or office administration. I think -- I don't even know whether that was determined.

MS. SHIPMA: Once again, Joel or Greg would have probably more details on that having been part of those discussions.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) So I want to talk

a little bit about the public defender's office, the current case refusal policy. What are the criteria, if there are a specific set of criteria, that would justify a public defender in Missouri refusing to -- to take a particular case?

MS. SHIPMA: Jason, I'm going to object. Just the way you phrased the question, assuming -- assume that there is a case refusal policy.

MR. WILLIAMSON: Okay.

MS. SHIPMA: So --

MR. WILLIAMSON: Let me back up.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Does your office maintain a formal case refusal policy?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether the district offices maintain their own case refusal policy?

A. I do not believe they do.

Q. So separate from any formal or informal policy, what in your mind would justify a public defender choosing to refuse a case appointment?

A. That there's a conflict. Conflict can be achieved I think in two ways. One, whether the -- representing the case to be received in any way conflicts with an obligation to an existing or previous client.

There's also a conflict when if a lawyer accepts an additional case and fulfilling the obligation to that new defendant in any way takes away or it deprives the lawyer of competently representing their existing clients because foremost an attorney has an obligation to their existing clients.

Q. And what documentation, if any, would that public defender have to provide, excuse me, in order to demonstrate that such a conflict exists?

A. Other than the rules of professional conduct, nothing that I'm aware of was generated by MSPD.

Q. And how does this generally work in a -- in a particular district. If a -- if an assistant public defender determines that there's a conflict and they feel the need to turn down a case, what happens then?

A. Well, taking the first type of conflicts, when taking -- representing a particular defendant would conflict with the duty to an existing or previous client, they would send it to either another office to represent that individual or to Joel Elmer to contract out pursuant to our

Code 49. That's the one type of conflict.

The second type, when -- that pertains more to caseload, I believe that it's the lawyer's obligation to refuse to accept that case. I will say that in the aftermath of the -- the refusing to accept cases that turn into a threat of privatization, I'm not aware of any lawyer asserting that, that type of conflict until recently I should say.

Q. Which I'll ask you about shortly. Are there -- you may have answered this, but are there circumstances in your mind under which a public defender in Missouri is required to refuse an appointment?

A. Yes, pursuant to the rules of professional conduct.

Q. But not necessarily pursuant to any policy or directive of the office?

A. None that I created or are aware of.

Q. Okay. Are you aware of any instances either before or during your tenure where public defenders refuse appointment as conflict counsel in other counties?

A. Can you say that again?

Q. You talked earlier about the -- how conflict cases are handled in your office and that one district office will be responsible for handling conflict cases --

Page 76

A. Yes.

Q. -- in other counties. Are you aware of instances where public defenders from that district because of caseload issues have refused to take those conflict cases?

A. As it relates to the counties that they have been assigned as an office to represent --

Q. Correct.

A. -- no, I'm not familiar with that.

Q. Do you have a sense of how such a situation would be handled, which is to say who would be next on the list if that -- if a public defender refused to take a conflict case, how would the court handle it?

A. I think Joel Elmer is in the best position because it gets into second- and third-level conflicts, and Joel Elmer is an expert on that issue.

(WHEREIN, Exhibit 2, 9-11-17 Barrett letter to MSPD attorneys, was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Handing you a document marked Exhibit 2 for identification. Do you recognize that document?

A. Yes.

Q. And can you describe what it is?

A. It's a letter that I crafted to be distributed to attorneys throughout the system following oral argument in a disciplinary case before the Missouri Supreme Court related to a MSPD attorney by the name of Karl Hinkebein who practices in our central PCR office or post conviction relief office.

Q. So I'm going to ask you about that disciplinary proceeding in a moment, but can you just talk about what motivated you to write this letter?

A. Sure. During oral argument in the case there -- the Supreme Court made comments related to what the expectations that -- on a lawyer who is in a position where they cannot take too many cases, and suggested that the lawyer, paraphrasing here, has two options.

To essentially tell their manager, assuming their manager is the one assigning the cases, that they are not available, or to resign, leave -- leave that employment. There were resignations by a few members -- a few lawyers around that time.

My concern was -- because I know that many, if not most, public defenders were listening or did listen to the oral argument, that there would be a concern that the employer would -- would insist that they take all the cases that came to them as a condition of employment, and that they could be -- I'm speculating.

Their concern might be that they would be expected to take the cases regardless of the condition of their employment. And on the other hand, if they did, that OCDC, the Office of Chief Disciplinary Counsel, would nonetheless hold them accountable for their practice under the rules.

I wanted to provide whatever relief I could that -- that I would not impose as a condition of their employment the acceptance of cases beyond which in their individual determination they felt they couldn't handle or would put them in jeopardy of violating the rules of professional conduct, and that if I did, that it would be their obligation to file a bar complaint against me.

Q. Did you receive any responses to this letter specifically?

Page 79

A. I spoke to several offices in the aftermath of this letter to answer questions, provide further guidance, reiterate what I said in the letter in terms of whether someone picked -- I don't remember anyone picking up the phone and calling, but we had a defender management training that district defenders and deputy district defenders attend that was already calendared for the following week or two weeks later, and we provide further guidance as to obligations under the rules for each office, but one of the other communications was that -- that I'm not issuing any directives related to turning away cases, but that they follow the rules of professional conduct.

Q. And that message was relayed at this subsequent meeting that you mention?

A. I think to include this letter, but yes, at that meeting, yes.

Q. Do you recall the date of that meeting by chance?

A. The defender management meeting?

Q. Right.

A. It was last week over the course of three days. Last Tuesday through Thursday. I don't know the dates.

Page 80

Q. And you said that there had been some resignations prior to you writing this letter to the staff?

A. Yes. Citing -- resignations that cited caseload and their -- their inability to practice within the -- the rules.

Q. And do you have a sense of how many resignations have occurred since you wrote this letter?

A. I know one manager has communicated to me that she will be leaving the system I believe in November. That's the head of the Union trial office.

Q. And is that the only other that you're aware of?

A. That I'm aware of.

Q. How was this letter communicated to your staff by the way?

A. I believe by e-mail.

Q. By e-mail.

(WHEREIN, Exhibit 3, Judge Crane e-mail response, was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Going to hand you another document marked Exhibit 3 for identification. Do you recognize that document?

Page 81

A. Yes, I do.
Q. Can you describe what it is?
A. Yes. It appears to be a communication between district defender of the Columbia trial office David Wallis and his deputy Sarah Aplin to judges in that circuit or Boone County regarding the unavailability of their lawyers to take additional cases.
Q. And this is an e-mail communication?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you tell me the date of that, of this communication?
A. September 27th, 2017.
Q. Do you also see the response from presiding Judge Crane in this document?
A. Yes. And I think the date that I just gave you September 27th, 2017, that appears to be tied to the response from Judge Crane. There doesn't seem to be a date tied to the underlying e-mail from Mr. Wallis.
Q. Can you take a look at the -- the first sentence of the judge's response?
A. Yes. Due to the correspondence received yesterday, September 26. That would indicate that the -- that Mr. Wallis communicated or -- or that Judge Crane received the e-mail from Mr. Wallis on the day prior, September 26th.

Q. Do you know whether that communication was sent before or after the district defender management meeting that you mentioned?
A. It's my understanding that it occurred before.
Q. Okay. What is your understanding of the import of -- of this e-mail from Mr. Wallis to the court?
A. I recognize the e-mail. I haven't read it from beginning to end in more than a week, but my understanding of the import is that the attorneys in Mr. Wallis's office had communicated either to him or to Ms. Aplin or both that given their caseloads, types of cases, severity of those cases, complexity of those cases, that they were unable to handle additional assignments.
Q. And were you made aware beforehand of Mr. Wallis's intention to send this e-mail to --
A. No.
Q. -- the court? When did you find out about it?
A. I don't know when I received it, but I remember being aware of it on the Monday which would be the day prior. I may have received it earlier, but I -- that's when I remember reviewing it.

Q. And was this decision by Mr. Wallis consistent with the guidance that you provided in your September 11 letter?
A. I believe it was.
Q. To your knowledge, what is the current status of representation in Boone County by the public defender's office?
A. That -- I can't speak to -- I know that we had a meeting with Judge Crane at the end of that week on Friday. Judge Crane made a request to Mr. Wallis that if he could somehow prioritize the in-custody cases, that Judge Crane would appoint lawyers private -- from the private bar on the out-of-custody cases.
With me present Mr. Wallis said that -- that that's going to entirely depend on whether lawyers in his office were available, and the last communication he had with the lawyers in his office that they were unavailable, but that he would go back and sit down with them and discuss their caseloads individually.
As I sit here today, my understanding is that the lawyers in the Boone County office are not available and that the -- Judge Crane has been assigning cases to the members of the private bar of Boone County.

MR. QUINLAN: Just if you don't mind, you said in custody and not in custody.
THE WITNESS: Yes. When I say --
MR. QUINLAN: That means they're in pretrial detention?
THE WITNESS: They're in local jail, yes.
MR. QUINLAN: Okay.
Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Do you have any idea how many private attorneys are available to take cases in Boone County?
A. I am not.
Q. Do you have any idea how many have been appointed to this point?
A. I am not.
Q. Do you know how many -- approximately how many additional attorneys would be required in order for area 13 to -- to be able to provide competent representation to all defendants in -- in that district?
A. I do not.
Q. Have you discussed with Mr. Wallis or anyone else in Boone County of the possibility of placing indigent defendants on waiting lists until attorneys in that office become available?

A. Yes. Both at the defender management training where we try -- one of the things we did was try to discuss practically and procedurally how we were going to deal with clients who would otherwise come to us.

We discussed with Judge Crane how we would handle it and that we would receive applications and essentially have a waiting list that we would communicate with the court.

Q. And has that -- has that happened?

A. I don't know.

Q. Since this decision was made by Mr. Wallis and the attorneys at his office, are you aware of other district offices that either have already or that intend to begin refusing case appointments?

A. I alluded to earlier conversation or phone conference I had yesterday involving the -- our Kennett trial office. It's my understanding that the Kennett trial office has communicated to the local judges their unavailability. I know the head of our St. Louis city trial office district defender Mary Fox has communicated to at least one judge --

MR. QUINLAN: That's city or county?

A. City. I'm not sure whether she has communicated that they are unavailable, but they had discussion with respect to the process in the event they're unavailable.

I know I received calls yesterday from district defender Steven Lynxwiler who covers the Poplar Bluff office, and there -- I believe at least one attorney was unavailable to handle cases, and I believe the counties were Butler and Ripley.

I also received a call yesterday from a deputy district defender in our Jackson office. She was asking for direction on a -- for an attorney who said they were no longer available to take new cases, but a client they had already had had picked up additional charges and wanted direction on that.

So I'm aware of at least one lawyer in that office. Whether they handle a specific county, I don't know who's unavailable. So there are a number of other counties where this is happening.

Q. And do you have a sense at this point of how things have played out in each of those counties?

Page 87

A. It has varied. As we discussed -- as I mentioned, Judge Crane has expressed that he either has begun or is going to appoint lawyers. I'm aware of at least one case where a private lawyer was appointed.

In other jurisdictions, to include Kennett, they were making arguments that we needed to do -- or the public defender system -- or at least the Kennett office needed to do additional steps before in their minds this was a legal thing.

The reports that I received from other district defenders were that judges were accepting that there was unavailability, but didn't say whether they were going to appoint private attorneys. So it's -- the response has been varied.

Q. And in Boone County is it your understanding that the private attorneys that are being appointed are not being compensated for that representation?

A. That is my understanding.

Q. Are you aware of any counties, either among the ones that you mentioned or others, where private attorneys are being compensated for taking these cases?

A. I'm not aware.

Q. Have you had any other interactions with judges in these other counties similar to the interactions that you've had with the -- the -- the court in Kennett county and --

A. No. I haven't. I've -- some local management has expressed to me that judges are in their words not happy, and I -- I said that to give the judge my cell phone number, which I -- one of the things that I reference in this letter is presenting to the presiding judges at the judicial conference, which was part of the Missouri Bar's annual meeting.

I also handed out -- I discussed the Hinkebein matter and the effect it was having on the system, and I provided judges with my cell phone number at that point as well.

Q. Have you gotten any phone calls from judges?

A. No.

Q. And -- and one other question about the private attorneys. Do you as the director of this office see appointment of private counsel as a viable alternative here?

A. No.

Q. Can you say a little bit about why?

Page 89

A. I am not aware of whether Judge Crane or any other judge who is contemplating appointing private counsel, whether they are going to appoint someone who is competent to provide representation in the area of criminal defense.

Q. So these private attorneys are not necessarily criminal defense attorneys?

A. The one appointment that I was aware of, one individual in Boone County, worked for a private business I believe as a regulatory attorney, and had no experience in criminal defense matters.

Q. And as far as you know, there is no screening mechanism to determine which private attorneys might be qualified to take these cases and which are not?

A. I'm not aware of any.

(WHEREIN, Exhibit 4, Cumulative caseload metrics spreadsheet, was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Handing you a document marked Exhibit 4, for identification. Do you recognize this document?

A. I recognize what this document represents.

Q. What is the heading at the top of the document?

A. Missouri State Public Defender Cumulative Caseload Metrics for the period beginning January 1, 2017 through March 31st, 2017.

Q. Do you know who created this document?

A. I do not. When I request this document, I request it from our IT department.

Q. And how often do you request these sorts of reports?

A. It's -- when -- I request it prior to any time I'm visiting or talking to a local office when I want to be educated on the most up-to-date metrics concerning that office, this is one of the documents that I request.

Q. And do you normally use this document then just for internal purposes?

A. We've shared this document both outside of Woodrail with the local offices, and I'm not shy about sharing it with outside persons or entities to include legislature or others.

Q. So I just want to -- we don't need to go through the numbers necessarily, but I want to just make sure I understand exactly what we're looking at here. So first of all, is it -- is it fair to say that this is a ranking of -- or an ordering of counties by the county that's got -- or the area that's got the highest caseload or the highest percentage of -- strike that.

This -- it is an ordering of counties that have the highest percentage -- or that are the furthest beyond their capacity from the highest to lowest, and the county that is at the top of the list is Kennett county, which we talked about a few minutes ago?

A. Yes. I would describe this as a ranking of -- as the most overloaded --

Q. Most overloaded?

A. -- offices using thresholds, workload thresholds established by RubinBrown and made part of the Missouri Project Report.

Q. Okay. So just so that I understand what each column represents, the column that is labeled cases initiated --

(Court reporter interruption.)

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Cases initiated --

MS. SHIPMA: And Jason, can I just -- you are probably going to get better, more thorough answers from Joel --

MR. WILLIAMSON: Okay.

MS. SHIPMA: -- on this. That's not to say that Michael doesn't know what it means --

Page 92

MR. WILLIAMSON: Right.

MS. SHIPMA: -- but if you want to get into the, you know, nuts and bolts of where that number comes from, what that number is drawn from, what it means, Joel will be the person to best tell you that.

MR. WILLIAMSON: Got it. Okay.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Have you shared these reports with the legislature? I know you said you shared --

A. I'm sure I have. I provide packets and materials and charts and supporting documentation. I certainly don't consider this privileged in any way, and I readily share it with whomever I come in contact with when discussing caseloads.

Q. And is it fair to say that this -- this -- these rankings are not static?

A. Right.

Q. And that a county or an area office that in this report is listed as say one of the top ten most overloaded could over the next several months drop down on this list and be replaced by area offices that are currently within the bottom ten let's say?

Page 93

A. I don't know if it's that volatile. Certainly an office can move a few spots if the -- volatility would come if -- if someone leaves a position in a given office and I decide to relocate that position to another office you'll have the volatility.

Q. And without getting into the details, is it fair to say that according to this document, during the first three months of 2017 none of the area offices were operating within their capacity?

A. Because none of the offices are within a hundred percent capacity, that is true.

Q. Okay. And tell me if this is a question for -- for Joel, and if so we can -- we can wait and share it with him. If you look at those -- those top ten counties or area offices on this list, are you able to go down this list and tell me which counties you would consider to be more urban areas versus those counties that you would characterize as more rural or less populated?

A. It's a subjective term, but I can -- yes.

Q. Fair enough.

A. I can do that.

Q. That sounds fair. So the Kennett

office?

A. I would describe the Kennett office as a rural office.

Q. St. Charles?

A. I would describe the St. Charles office as a suburban office.

Q. Sedalia?

A. I would describe the Sedalia office as a rural office.

Q. Harrisonville?

A. I would describe it as a more rural office.

Q. Jackson?

A. I would describe it as a urban office.

Q. Ava?

A. Rural office.

Q. Union?

A. More rural office.

Q. Monett?

A. A rural office.

Q. And Springfield?

A. I would describe that as more of an urban office.

Q. Is it fair to say that the caseload problems that are facing your office are not limited to any particular type of office within the system?

A. That's right.

Q. It's a statewide problem?

A. That's right.

Q. And if we look on this -- this same document, Exhibit 4, can you find Boone County? So I guess it would be the Columbia office.

A. Yes.

Q. And where is that located on this list if you can.

MR. QUINLAN: 23. Item 23.

A. According to the caseload metrics report for the period January 1 to March 31st, 2017, it appears that the Columbia trial office ranks 19th in the system -- in the MSPD in terms of caseload or percent of capacity.

Q. (By Mr. Williamson) And do you have any idea where that office falls currently?

A. As I sit here today, no.

Q. I think you may have answered this already, but have you encouraged any district offices to begin refusing cases beyond the September 11 letter?

A. At defender management training we stressed -- I stressed, others stressed that everyone has a present obligation under the rules of professional conduct.

To the extent that there's two mechanisms, at least two mechanisms to bring yourself within competent -- or ethical representation, a move to withdraw and in addition to declining to accept new cases, that if someone had -- were presently overloaded and were not in comport with the rules, that they would have an obligation to move to withdraw in existing cases.

Q. And do you -- as it stands right now, do -- how many additional lawyers statewide do you believe would be needed in order for the trial division offices to be able to operate within their capacity?

A. A precise number I do not know, but I know that given the number of cases and the type of cases for the last fiscal year, it was north of -- it was in excess of 300 additional lawyers. According to RubinBrown metrics.

MS. SHIPMA: Can I -- was that additional trial division lawyers or additional lawyers systemwide?

THE WITNESS: I think it was additional lawyers systemwide, but that's a good point. I'm not a hundred percent sure on that.

MS. SHIPMA: Because the question was about trial division. That's why I wanted to make sure.
THE WITNESS: Thank you.
MS. SHIPMA: Uh-huh.
MR. QUINLAN: You don't have a number for trial lawyers?
THE WITNESS: Not off the top of my head.
Q. (By Mr. Williamson) And by the way, I'm going to -- and we can ask Joel about this, but do you know whether these -- I see cases initiated here and then new net cases. Do you know whether this includes conflict cases?
MS. SHIPMA: That's a Joel question.
A. That's a Joel question.
Q. (By Mr. Williamson) Okay. Is there anything else that you'd like to share with regard to what you expect going forward with respect to case refusal or generally how your office intends to handle the caseload situation?
A. Well, it's -- my experience over the last week has been that it's fluid. As these issues arise in the local offices, I have been interfacing with both the local offices and some of the local judiciary as well as members of the private bar in Boone County.

Sharing both what -- what I know about our obligations and -- but my expectation would be that the lawyers in -- that I'm responsible for overseeing practice within the rules of professional conduct, and if they are unable to provide representation for their existing clients, that they have an obligation under the rules to move to withdraw.
If they cannot accept new cases, to notify their management that that's the case, and I would expect if -- if no one is available for those reasons in a local office that the district defender or the deputy district defender would notify me so that I'm aware what offices in the state are not accepting new cases.
Q. And -- and what in your view is the impact of all of this on indigent defendants in Missouri?
A. I think it's -- it's impacting their rights under the Sixth Amendment to have effective, competent representation that's not conflicted that they're entitled to prior to -- as part of due process and prior to their liberty being taken from them.

MR. WILLIAMSON: Just give me one minute.
(WHEREIN, Exhibit 5, Boone County Bar Association October 2017 Newsletter, was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Mr. Williamson) I'm just going to show you one last document. It will be marked as Exhibit 5. Do you recognize this document?
A. I don't. I know it to be the Boone County Bar Association's newsletter. I've received this before, but I did not receive -- I did not read this -- this number or this volume.
Q. Can you turn to page five of this document?
A. I have turned to page five.
Q. And can you read the heading on that page?
A. Letter to BCBA from the director of the Missouri State Public Defender's office.
Q. And this is a roughly two-page letter that purports to have been written by you; is that correct?
A. Yes.

Page 100

Q. And did you in fact write this letter?
A. Yes.
Q. And did you send it to the Boone County Bar Association?
A. I sent it to the chair of -- I think the committee is criminal defense committee within the Boone criminal law committee it might be. The individual's name is Jeff Hilbrenner.
Q. Okay. And do you recall when you sent this letter?
A. I don't precisely.
Q. Have you written any similar letters to other officials in other counties around the state?
A. No.
MR. WILLIAMSON: I think I'm done. I don't know whether Mr. Quinlan has questions or whether Ms. Shipma has questions. I will --
THE WITNESS: Can we take a bathroom break?
MR. WILLIAMSON: -- reserve the right to respond to that. Yes, why don't we go off record?
VIDEOGRAPHER: We're going off the record at approximately 10:47 a.m.
(WHEREIN, a recess was taken.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record at approximately 10:53 a.m.

EXAMINATION

QUESTIONS BY MR. QUINLAN:

Q. Mr. Barrett, I'll reintroduce myself. I'm Michael Quinlan, and I'm the chief of the litigation section for the Missouri Attorney General's office representing the State of Missouri and Governor Greitens. Listening to your testimony this morning it's -- my takeaway is that you view the -- the principal concern in your office statewide is the caseloads?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And it's the caseloads that are presenting the concern in your mind as to the constitutional adequacy of representation of indigent defendants that are represented by your office?

A. Yes.

Q. And I know we've spoken before, and I don't want to -- but I think we've -- one of the things we've talked about in other context is that there are two ways to reduce caseloads or reduce -- or to solve the problem of a caseload problem. One you've identified already, I think you said we need to have more lawyers in your office?

A. Have I said that before? Is that your question?

Q. Well, you said -- you said you need north of 300 lawyers and you weren't sure whether that was all for trial counsel or statewide?

A. Yes.

Q. But statewide you need more lawyers?

A. That's one way to solve it, yes.

Q. Okay. And then the other one we discussed in the past is to reduce the number of clients by I think we had talked about changing laws to -- to reduce who gets charged with crimes?

A. Conceivably, yes.

Q. And you've kind of experienced that as I understand your testimony today in a couple of counties, I think you said Greene County and Union, in which prosecutors made some changes, added some personnel, were able to bring more cases. So that -- that increased your caseload problem in those jurisdictions, correct?

A. I don't know if that's the only thing that caused those caseloads to go up in that jurisdiction, but I would -- I would say that yes, that's contributed to the caseload increase.

Q. So if prosecutors would -- in those cases anyway as I understand, that prosecutors have brought more cases in those -- in those counties?

A. Yes.

Q. And by -- by on the same token if they were to bring fewer cases you'd have fewer cases in your caseloads?

A. Mathematically, yes.

Q. Yes. And one of the things that we spent some time talking about this morning is -- well, we can just go right to the issue raised by I think it was the oral argument in -- in the Supreme Court case referred to in Exhibit 2, your -- your letter. Do you have that in front of you? And --

A. I do.

Q. -- what's happening in -- for example, in one particular instance is Boone County, where that office has indicated that they're not going to accept any more cases?

A. You started off talking about the letter and then you went to Boone County.

Q. Right.

A. What's the question?

Q. Well, I think that -- I thought there was a temporal correspondence between when you issued the letter and then this e-mail regarding Boone County? But --

Page 104

A. Yes, there's -- the Boone County action seemed to be subsequent to my letter.

Q. And -- and your letter was basically a reassurance of the assistant public defenders in the system that you're responsible for that they had the freedom -- in fact, I think you said the obligation to turn down cases if they felt their caseloads were too high?

A. That's my understanding of the rules of professional conduct, yes.

Q. I understand. That's my understanding as well. So what we have happening apparently in -- according to is it Judge Crane in Boone County is a partial privatization of the representation of indigent defendants; is that a fair statement?

A. I think it's a fair statement. I don't know to the extent to which Judge Crane has taken action toward that end. As I mentioned earlier, I'm aware of one -- one specific individual who received an appointment.

Q. Well, in Exhibit 3 he says due to the correspondence received today, so on --

MS. SHIPMA: You're referring to

Page 105

Exhibit 3 now?
MR. QUINLAN: I'm referring to Exhibit 3, right.
Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) Okay. (Quote as read):
Due to the correspondence received today, September 6 from Boone County public defender Wallis, the Boone County Court will begin effective today at 1:30 p.m. dockets to appoint members of the private bar to represent criminal defendants.
Is that an indication there's at least a partial privatization of the representation of indepen -- indigent defendants in Boone County?
A. It seems to represent what Judge Crane's intent is. I just can't testify as to the extent to which he's carried that out.
Q. He's carried that out. But that is one of the solutions to the caseload problem that your office -- that indigent defendants in Missouri face, isn't it?
A. Can you restate the question, please?
Q. Partial privatization is one solution to the -- the issue or the problem, the concern faced by indigent defendant -- indigent defendants in Missouri based on the caseload issues that your office is having?

A. I can't say that that's the case. I don't know whether Judge Crane's actions toward the end that he stated is going to provide adequate or competent representation for these individuals.
Q. But that's not your role, is it?
A. But you asked the question of whether that was a solution.
Q. That's one possible solution, correct?
A. I don't know the answer to that.
Q. Well, if Judge Crane as the chief -- apparently the chief judge of Boone County is able to assure to his satisfaction the satisfaction of the courts the competent nonconflicted representation of indigent defendants through this private appoint -- appointment of private counsel, that would be a -- a solution to the -- the problem you identify in Missouri of -- of indigent defendants having representation?
A. Judge Crane wouldn't to my understanding be an arbiter on the issue of conflicted representation. That would be borne by the individual attorney.

Q. No, but I'm asking you, though, is -- are you telling me that you don't believe that -- that the courts have the obligation to assure that the defendant has competent nonconflicted representation, whether private or public?
A. I believe that that's part of the court's obligation is that someone has competent nonconflicted representation, yes.
Q. It's part of the court's job is to ensure that each defendant has competent nonconflicted representation whether public or private?
A. I believe that's part of the court's duty.
Q. And that's -- so therefore that's -- that's something that is at least conceptually possible to have competent, nonconflicted representation, whether public or private?
A. I'm not being coy. I'm -- just my knowledge the public defender world is a small world and I'm aware of practices in other states. I'm not aware of any privatization, a state that's privatized that is achieving the ends of -- of competent representation.
Q. And again, that's not your job, that's the court's job to achieve that end?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So that's not really something you need to worry about?
A. But I don't know whether -- I don't know whether it's possible.
Q. Okay. Well, apparently Judge Crane thinks it is.
A. I can't testify as to what Judge Crane thinks.
Q. I believe your testimony was that you stated -- are you saying that you're not able to say whether partial privatization is a viable option conceptually?
A. To achieve competent representation, I'm not -- I'm not sure there are the number of lawyers in the private bar who practice criminal defense to take these cases competently given the number of cases that exist from year to year, so I can't say that that's a viable option, no.
Q. So if there was a -- if there was a system, say a voucher system in which the state gave a voucher to an indigent defendant and said find a private lawyer or the court appointed them a private lawyer from which they would be paid, are you saying that -- that conceptually speaking that it's impossible for that -- those criminal defendants to get competent representation?

A. I won't -- I won't testify as to whether it is possible or impossible. I will say this. We have areas of the state that are lawyer deserts, and one of the -- the things that we employ to get lawyers to certain areas of the court is if they're looking for a job in MSPD and there's not a position available in the office of their preference, we ask them to come to join the system and go to an underutilized area of the state for a period of two years, and that at which point they can be eligible for a transfer into another office. This is a tool that we use to get lawyers to counties where there are otherwise not a lot of -- or any criminal defense lawyers.

Q. Are you suggesting that the only way for indigent defendants in Missouri to get competent legal representation is through your system?

A. I'm not -- I'm not saying that, but I am saying I'm not sure that your suggestion I can state on the record is a viable alternative.

Q. Are you able to say definitively that it is not viable?

Page 110

A. Can you make another go at that one?

Q. You just testified that you're not able to say that a -- that conceptually a --

A. I understand.

Q. -- program of partial privatization, what I understand you to be saying is that conceptually you're not able to say, again, conceptually that a -- a system of partial privatization would provide effective assistance of counsel to indigent defendants. Are you able to rule it out categorically?

A. Yes, because I don't have an answer for how you would otherwise get lawyers to certain areas of the state who would be willing to take these cases in the volume that they're coming in because I don't have confidence on that. I can't -- I can't -- I can't -- I can't acknowledge that.

Q. So that's in those areas that you called I think lawyer deserts?

A. Yes.

Q. And those are rural areas?

A. Yes, I would categorize most of them as rural areas.

Q. Are there any urban or suburban areas according to the usage that you made with respect to

Page 111

Exhibit 4 that are -- that are deserts?

A. Can you restate the question, please?

Q. Yeah, are there any -- are there any suburban or urban areas as you used those terms in -- in relationship to your questions regarding Exhibit 4 that you would consider to be lawyer deserts?

A. I would not consider any of those areas that I've either previously labeled my term suburban or urban that are lawyer deserts.

Q. And so you would be limiting this con -- this idea of the lawyer desert to only those which you would characterize as rural?

A. No.

Q. Okay. What others besides the rural? Let me ask you this first. Would you consider rural -- are you saying then that not all rural -- let's just start over again, shall we?

Are you saying that not all rural offices are deserts?

A. I think that's true. Can I restate your question so I make sure I understand it?

Q. Sure.

A. Just because a rural -- an area is rural doesn't mean it's a desert.

Page 112

Q. You understood my question.

A. Yes.

Q. And so there -- so these -- these lawyer deserts that you refer to are -- are some of, but not all of, the rural offices that you have?

A. I think that's right.

Q. Okay. But with respect to the offices in the state that are not lawyer deserts --

A. Yes.

Q. -- conceptually a program of partial privatization is -- is potentially viable?

A. I don't know -- I don't know -- I don't know whether that's the case. There's other obstacles that I'm aware of.

Q. You can't say one way or the other?

A. I can't -- I don't know -- there's no particulars that you've provided of what privatization looks like for me to make an assessment as to whether it's viable or not.

Q. And I'm trying to be general on purpose --

A. I understand.

Q. -- because what I'm saying is conceptually -- because what we have apparently happening already in Boone County is a form of privatization.

A. We don't know whether --
Q. Would you agree with that?
A. We don't know whether that's working.
Q. We don't -- agreed. We don't know that that's working yet, but we don't know that it won't work either, do we?
A. I don't know one way or the other.
Q. You know, I've often referred to this -- this phrase as -- adage necessity is the mother of invention. It could be that the necessity that's created by what's happening with your local office in -- in Boone County could lead to the invention of some -- some solution that could be translated statewide, would you agree?
A. No, I wouldn't agree. I don't -- I don't know the answer to that.
Q. You don't know one way or the other?
A. I don't know one way or the other.
Q. Okay. So you're not able to say whether conceptually speaking -- and as I said before, I'm using that broadly because I think that there are a lot of potential proposals if you will for -- for partial privatization. In fact, I think you use one, don't you? Your Code 49 program is -- could be characterized as a form of partial privatization, isn't it?

A. Yes, to the extent that we contract with private lawyers to provide services --
Q. When you have conflict, right?
A. When there's a conflict.
Q. Right.
A. We would not label this program as ideal. It's got pluses and minuses.
Q. As all programs do?
A. Yes.
Q. In fact, your -- I mean, the Missouri public defender system is just such a system. It's got pluses and it's got its minuses?
A. As everything does.
Q. And I don't know whether you can answer this question. When I was doing a little bit of preparation, I was looking at the -- the lawsuit paper here, and -- pleading, the complaint in this case. And I know it's not your -- your document, but one of the allegations is is the public -- the public defender system as currently constituted over which you now preside was established in 1989. Is that your understanding?
A. Are you asking me as to what the complaint says or whether that is indeed accurate?

Q. Let's go over the facts regardless of what the pleadings are. I'm assuming the pleading is accurate and that, but if you -- if you have a different answer, let's go with that.
A. I -- I would refer you to either Mr. Elmer or Mr. Mermelstein, preferably Mr. Mermelstein. I heard another date, but I can't attest to whether one is accurate or another.
Q. What is the date that you heard?
A. I thought it was earlier in the eighties to be --
Q. But sometime in the 1980s?
A. I believe so.
Q. Okay. The reason I bring that up is because it seems like in paragraph 49 of the complaint, as early as 1993 we were already getting Spangenberg Group reports finding fault with the -- with the way the Missouri public defender system was -- was not providing adequate representation?
MS. SHIPMA: I'm going to -- if you're going to refer him to specific paragraphs in the petition, can we please provide that to him?
MR. QUINLAN: Sure I did.
MS. SHIPMA: He doesn't have that in front of him.

Page 116

MR. QUINLAN: Paragraph 49.
MS. SHIPMA: He doesn't have the petition in front of him.
MR. QUINLAN: I'm happy to show this. I'm going to move on from this. It's really an embellishment of my earlier question.
MR. WILLIAMSON: Are you entering this as an exhibit?
MR. QUINLAN: No, it's on the -- it's a matter of record in the case. So 49 --
MS. SHIPMA: But it's not -- it's not an exhibit to the deposition, so if you need him to refer to it --
MR. QUINLAN: I can just withdraw it. If you don't know whether there was a 1993 Spangenberg report --
MS. SHIPMA: That's not what you asked him. You asked him what paragraph 49 referred to.
MR. QUINLAN: No, I referred -- no, no, no. I referred to paragraph 49 --
MS. SHIPMA: Yes.
MR. QUINLAN: -- and the report that's referred to there.
MS. SHIPMA: So is your question whether there was a 1993 Spangenberg report?

Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) Yeah, I can -- are you aware that there was a 1993 Spangenberg report that found fault with a representation being provided to indigent defendants in Missouri --
(Court reporter interruption.)
Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) That found fault with deficiencies in the public defender system as it's currently constituted in Missouri?
A. Counsel, I'm -- I'm familiar -- I'm aware that there's been several Spangenberg reports that study the public defender system. I cannot tell you what years they were. Just that they were over a period of a number of years and they made a number of findings, and I can't specifically state whether that Spangenberg report made that conclusion.
Q. Have you ever seen a Spangenberg report that gave a clean bill of health to the Missouri public defender system?
A. I don't know what you mean by clean bill of health.
Q. That said that they were doing everything right, that they were providing adequate assistance to indigent defendants?

Page 118

A. To the extent that I'm familiar with that conclusion, it is my understanding that the Spangenberg report tied that conclusion in some way to the unavailability of resources.
Q. And my question, though, was are you aware of any Spangenberg report which basically said that the -- that the public defender system was functioning properly and appropriately in providing in all respects representation to indigent defendants?
A. Given the number of reports that started in the early eighties with the legislative report, I have to tell you, Counsel, I'm not being coy, they bleed together for me.
Q. Get it.
A. And to the -- my answer is to the extent that I'm aware of deficiencies of the MSPD as pointed out by any number of reports, that that conclusion is always in my memory tied to unavailability of the requisite resources to fulfill the charge of the --
Q. So what you're saying, though, is of these reports and they're -- and they're cataloged in the complaint in this case, the -- the diagnosis of the problem is is that the Missouri public defender system doesn't have enough resources?

A. That's my understanding of the -- of the general conclusions of each one of these reports over the course of a period beginning in the eighties.
Q. And is it your position as the director of the Missouri public defender's system the only solution to the caseload problem is an increase in funding?
A. No.
Q. What other solutions?
A. Fewer cases.
Q. Fewer cases. And achieving fewer cases, one of the ways of achieving fewer cases within your office is to -- to appoint other attorneys outside of your office to represent those indigent -- indigent defendants, correct?
A. No. No.
Q. That's not one of the solutions to --
A. I'm sorry, I thought you said the solution. My fault.
Q. One solution to reduce the number of cases that come into your office is to have a system by which indigent defendants are appointed an attorney outside of your system?

Page 120

A. That's the mechanism we currently utilize to handle conflict cases to the extent to which we are funded to do so.
Q. Right. And so -- right. And so -- and you talked about that. There's -- there's been funding allowed for your office to retain independent private counsel to represent indigent defendants whose case presents a conflict with cases that your office is handling, correct?
A. Notwithstanding the warts of that system, yes.
Q. And what are the warts of that system?
A. There are several. The research that I'm familiar with in the area of defense representation informs me that public defenders do as well as skilled criminal defense practitioners, what I would characterize my words as high dollar practitioners.
But where the results drop off significantly is utilizing what's referred to as flat fee contract lawyers because there's con -- some consensus around the idea that when you give an attorney a flat amount, regardless of the amount of work that they do, it will encourage them to do the least amount of work to receive those funds. For that reason the outcomes are not as good than using public defenders.

Q. And are you saying that that creates a distinction between the quality of work that the lawyers in your system provide compared to private lawyers?

A. We haven't measured that, but that's what the -- the research that I'm familiar with shows. I'm also familiar with, although I don't know the states, I believe they're in the western part of the country, at least in two states I believe have determined that flat fee contract lawyers are not appropriate or maybe it's even unconstitutional in capital cases because it encourages the least amount of work for the money received.

Q. So your -- so your position would be that the service that your Missouri public defender system lawyers provide to the indigent defendants entrusted to your service is at least as good if not better than services provided by private counsel at least in a flat fee arena?

A. As a general statement I would say that.

Q. Okay. So -- and is that the basis -- as I gather what you -- what you said is that that's one of the reasons you don't feel like your -- I should put it this way. That's what you've identified as one of the warts with your Code 49 system?

A. There -- there are at least two others that come to mind.

Q. Okay. But that's one of them?

A. That's one of them.

Q. Okay. And -- and what are the others?

A. Oversight, quality. We provide managerial oversight to the lawyers that we employ. If a lawyer who is part of our panel program, which is the contracting program, the Code 49 program, if they are not meeting with their client, if they are not reviewing the sufficiency of the accusing documentation or asking for discovery, we would not know unless someone in our local office or a judge as -- as occurs from time to time picks up the phone and raises concerns as it relates to that private attorney. So there are quality assurance issues.

Q. And what you're saying -- is it fair, I understand you correctly, what you're saying is that in your office you have supervising attorneys that -- that see to the -- the quality of services being provided by your APDs?

A. I will say that at least they endeavor to do that.

Q. They endeavor to do that. And that's one of the -- that's one of the bases in which you believe that the service provided by APDs in your system is superior to that provided by private counsel retained through your Code 49 system?

A. That's -- that's one reason, yes.

Q. Okay. So you've given me two now. You've given me the flat fee issue I think?

A. Yeah.

Q. And then you've given me the supervision.

A. Quality assurance.

Q. And you said there was one other or is there more?

A. Yeah, there's -- there's several others. One other is that if they decide to withdraw, if the private attorney withdraws for any reason, they take another job, they decide that there's a conflict, a lot of times they're not getting along with their client. And --

Q. Which is probably not an infrequent occurrence in the criminal practice?

Page 124

A. Not an infrequent occurrence, I concede that point. And judge allows them withdraw, we don't get that money back. And Mr. Elmer can go into more details on that.

Q. In that situation when they withdraw, apart from your not getting the money back then do you -- does your system then provide for the retention of a new counsel for that conflict client?

A. Mr. Elmer would probably be in the best position --

Q. You don't know one way or the other?

A. I have some indication. I can answer to the -- to the extent that I'm able to, but I would refer you to Mr. Elmer to be expert on that question.

Q. And is it -- and -- and again, deferring to Mr. Elmer, but just for my purposes presently, you have contracts with these attorneys?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And --

A. Agreements, yes. They're essentially contracts.

Q. Contract. I think you used the word they're contracted attorneys, but that's --

A. Yes, my phraseology.

Page 125

Q. Agreements are contracts. That's the way I learned it in law school.

But -- so you -- are these -- are these code 59 -- 49 --

A. 49.

Q. And by the way, what's the origin of that name?

A. When you find out from Mr. Elmer, if you'd let me know, I'd appreciate that.

Q. I will. You can stay and listen if you want. You have -- is it your understanding you have like a stable of attorneys that --

A. Yeah.

Q. -- you have a contract with?

A. Yeah.

Q. And they agree to take a number of cases?

A. Yeah.

Q. And you have a contract rate with them?

A. The contract rate, which I believe is -- I believe is promulgated in a rule is tied to the type of offense, seriousness of the charge, A, B felonies, C, D felonies, sex case, probation violation.

(Court reporter interruption.)

Page 126

A. Tied to the severity of the charge. For instance, an A, B felony would -- would yield a higher contract rate than a C, D felony or an E felony.

Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) Do you know what any of those rates are offhand?

A. I don't. Mr. Elmer would.

Q. And is it -- is it -- is it always a fixed fee or is it hourly, do you know?

A. It's a fixed fee, but there is some nuance there.

Q. Okay.

A. I think there's some nuance as it relates to complexity, going to trial, which would -- and that nuance would tie into some discretion by Mr. Elmer.

Q. And if there was a withdrawal from -- from a client, is there a provision in that contract for a recapture of fees paid that were earned?

A. I'd refer you to Mr. Elmer.

Q. Okay. So I think you've -- you've counted three for me, three warts as you characterized them on your -- your Code 49 process. Are there any others?

A. I would say that public defenders exclusively do public defense. That is not necessarily the case with the contract attorneys. I would also say that they do not receive the training that we receive, that public defenders receive as part of the MSPD.

Q. Is that -- is that just a way of saying that you have higher-quality lawyers representing the -- the clients in your system?

A. As a general rule, in addition to I have an obligation to train the lawyers and make sure that they can competently handle to the extent that that's a reasonable expectation in cases that they receive.

Q. So that's another distinction between the representation provided by your office and that provided by the Code 49 attorneys, the private placed attorneys?

A. As a general statement.

Q. Okay. So -- now, I want to back up a little bit, though. When you say an attorney withdraws, you identify the problem as not getting a refund of the fee or --

A. The extent that I'm familiar with is we have no way as a department of state government to receive these funds, and it's my understanding -- and I would refer you to Mr. Elmer for -- for precision on this, that the money reverts back to the state of Missouri, and that Mr. Elmer then must employ other means by which to balance out the till.

Q. He doesn't have the ability as far as you know to go to the office of administration and say funnel that money back to us?

A. I don't know whether there's a legal mechanism for that, but I will testify that that's never -- I don't believe that's ever been done before, and I -- I don't think there's a mechanism in place to do that.

MS. SHIPMA: That would be a Kathy Lear question.

Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) Okay. And is that the only drawback in regard to the withdrawal of private counsel?

A. No.

Q. Okay. What other drawback is there?

A. It presents the question then what happens to the client who has previously been determined to be indigent.

Q. Define --

A. There's oftentimes a push and pull that occurs with the judge who, again, I'd refer you to

Page 129

Mr. Elmer, but I'm aware of these instances where the judge would want us to take the case again.

We had this -- something of an elaborate fashion occur recently in Harrisonville where we contracted out a case and the judge took the lawyer off the case and gave the case back to us notwithstanding a conflict occurring.

Q. In that case you would either -- you have -- you still would have available to you, wouldn't you, that you appoint -- you'd assign it to another contract attorney or one in another district office? You'd be able to get coverage in other words for that client?

A. Possibly. It would depend on whether there are other attorneys in the panel, the panel program who have agreed to take clients in that circuit. Sometimes in these lawyer deserts if there's a contract attorney or attorney wants to participate in the program, and they want to participate only as it relates to county A, but we need coverage in county B, we will ask them to cover county B if they want to be in the program as a way to making more lawyers available.

Q. Do you have a method of collecting data on the incidents of that sort of thing happening?

A. I don't know the answer to that.

Q. Who would?

A. Joel Elmer would be the first person that I would ask about the capabilities on that.

Q. In your view as a -- are -- are you ruling out of order from the beginning any possibility of a partial privatization as a solution to the indigent --

MR. WILLIAMSON: Michael, I'm going to object. This question has been asked and answered --

MR. QUINLAN: I haven't finished it. I haven't finished the question.

MR. WILLIAMSON: -- three times.

MR. QUINLAN: May I?

MR. WILLIAMSON: Sure.

Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) Are you ruling out as taking off the table the possibility of any form of privatization as a partial solution to the -- the plight of indigent defendants in Missouri?

MS. SHIPMA: And this question has been asked and answered at least four times.

MR. QUINLAN: I don't think it's been answered, but --

MS. SHIPMA: He has told you what his answer is. Perhaps he hasn't given you the answer you want, but he hasn't -- but he has given you his answer.

Page 131

MR. QUINLAN: He's either taking it off the table or he's not. And I don't think he's been clear on that.

Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) In your -- in your judgment, is -- is any kind of program of partial privatization off the table?

MS. SHIPMA: And he has answered that. He's told you you're not giving him enough details.

MR. QUINLAN: So are you instructing him not too answer?

MS. SHIPMA: No, I'm making an objection because you've asked the question.

MR. QUINLAN: Then your objection is noted. You may answer.

A. I think we've covered that. We currently employ utilizing to a limited extent private attorneys for the purposes of attempting to carry out our mission.

I've testified that that program, while necessary given our current resources, has a number of deficiencies that in my estimation limit the ability to meet the -- the goals of competent representation under the Sixth Amendment.

Q. Then my next question is is it your view that the only solution to the -- and I think it's referred to in the -- the pleading as the crisis of representation for indigent defendants in Missouri, is the only solution to that problem increased funding for your office?

A. No.

Q. What other solutions are there?

A. Fewer cases.

Q. Fewer cases. And how would you recommend that that take place?

A. Prosecutors are more selective in the types of cases they file.

Q. So you want prosecutors to file fewer cases?

A. Ideally, yes, that would be part of the solution.

Q. And is that -- okay. Is that the only mechanism that you would recommend for the decrease of cases in your office?

A. Say that again.

Q. Is that the only mechanism that you recommend, to -- to not file as many -- prosecute as many cases?

Page 133

A. Is that the only mechanism I recommend?
Q. Yeah. See, I asked you -- my question was -- my first question was is increasing your funding the only answer to this problem and you said no, and I said what are the others, and you said not filing as many cases.
A. I'm stumped because I just thought -- I thought we were over this earlier.
Q. Okay. Other than prosecutors not filing other cases and increasing your -- what other mechanisms are there that you would recommend to solve the crisis of indigent defense representation in Missouri besides increasing funding for your office?
A. As I sit here, I don't have any other ideas to some other structure or -- or system that could given the number of cases in Missouri, the availability of attorneys who practice criminal law statewide, or in specific jurisdictions, that that's a viable alternative without knowing more specifics.
Q. Well, what more would you need to know?
A. We need to know -- I would need to know a lot more. Where -- where are the attorneys that are raising their hand to take these cases and what are their qualifications and how many cases can they take, for instance?

Q. If there was a mechanism to pay private lawyers, there would be -- wouldn't you -- wouldn't you agree with me, there would be lawyers willing to take cases?
A. I can't say that for sure.
Q. Well, that's your experience with the Code 49 cases, isn't it?
A. We have --
Q. Leaving aside the deserts?
A. But there's other things that we have done that I've alluded to earlier. For instance, a lawyer, private lawyer only raises his hand for two counties in a five-county circuit.
Mr. Elmer makes efforts to condition their involvement in the program on receiving cases in all the counties in the circuit. So there's steps that -- that I know that -- that I'm aware of that Mr. Elmer takes to achieve that.
Q. Are there any privatization proposals that you would find acceptable?
MR. WILLIAMSON: Objection.
A. I -- I don't know how to answer that.
Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) Apart from Code 49 because you obviously find that acceptable.

Page 135

A. That's not true. I -- I already testified I think on a couple occasions that there are deficiencies related to Code 49 that as director of MSPD gives me serious concern about whether for those individuals their constitutional rights are being upheld.
Q. Are you aware of any indigent defendant that your office has placed in a Code 49 representation who has received ineffective assistance of counsel?
A. I'm aware of quite recently a matter in, I alluded to it, in Harrisonville where a case was scheduled for trial. I'm going to do my best here to give you the facts as I'm aware of them.
That with trial imminent, that is to say the next week or so, according to the judge the private attorney with whom we've contracted the case had not seen his client in some time, had not -- that I'm aware provided discovery to that client, and with trial imminent the judge made the decision to take that lawyer off that case, give the case back to us. The judge made a determination -- oh, I thought it was odd because the case was not disposed of yet that the person was not competent.
Q. So the person that was assigned by your office under your Code 49 proceeding was deemed by the trial court to be incompetent?

A. According to the judge.
Q. Okay. And removed him from the case prior to trial?
A. Yes.
Q. And appointed your office to represent the defendant in the trial?
A. Yes. That decision was --
Q. Was the trial continued?
A. I'm not aware. I'm aware that that decision has since been reversed. I think the terminology is ordered vacated perhaps and that Mr. Elmer may know more on that, but that's the -- that's all I know on it.
Q. The order removing the incompetent counsel has been reversed?
A. I believe.
Q. Or the reassignment -- the reassignment to your office has been reversed?
A. I know the reassignment to my office has been reversed. I do not believe that we are in on that case.
Q. Do you know whether or not that defendant has suffered any prejudice as a result of the court's removal of the attorney?

A. I don't know if -- I don't think -- I'm not aware that the case has been resolved yet.
Q. Okay. So my question was are you aware of any case in which an attorney appointed by your office pursuant to your Code 49 program has -- has suffered an ineffective assistance of counsel whereby he was or she was prejudiced, wrongfully convicted?
A. I'm not aware one way or the other.
Q. Are you aware more generally in your office in -- either in your tenure or any information you have about issues prior to your tenure whether any public defender has been found to have ineffectively -- rendered ineffective assistance to a defendant?
A. Yes.
Q. In which there's been prejudice, wrongful conviction?
A. These -- these occur --
Q. I don't -- I don't need -- by the way, I don't need you to go through the cases one by one. Just are you aware?
A. Right. Where -- where there's been determination of a wrongful conviction.

Q. There's been a determination of ineffective assistance of counsel?
A. Not to my knowledge. Mr. Mermelstein may know more on that.
Q. And -- and how far back does your knowledge reach?
A. Well, temporally it would go back between two and three years, but that's not to say that just given that time period that I'd be aware of all instances that occurred during that time period.
Q. And you're talking about your tenure as the -- as the -- both the general counsel and the director?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And you've not been informed of incidents of -- of findings of ineffective assistance of counsel by attorneys in your office for anything happening prior to your tenure?
A. No final determinations on that have come to mind, no.
Q. And the ordinary mechanism for -- for determination would be a post-conviction relief proceeding?
A. Right. I believe so. I mean, I -- I know that the post-conviction relief units regularly get relief in whatever form they get relief in. It varies. And I'm aware of generally that they receive relief for their clients. The specifics regarding any one of them is not something I keep tabs on.

Q. But -- but does your post-conviction relief office team, function within your office, represent claims of ineffective assistance of counsel by MSPD lawyers?
A. Yes, and I'd refer you to Greg Mermelstein on that. He'll be able to answer those questions.
Q. But they also represent indigent defendants in post-conviction relief cases for indigent defendants not previously represented by the public defender system?
A. I'd refer you to Mr. Mermelstein on that.
Q. But whatever post-conviction relief may -- may be achieved in your office, you're not aware of any of that having ever been achieved because of a finding of ineffective assistance of counsel by a public defender?
A. I'd refer you to Mr. Mermelstein. I'm not --

Page 140

Q. You're not aware, though?
A. I'm not aware.
Q. Okay. Prior to your tenure I guess with the public defender system, I guess as general counsel, what was your -- you were with the governor's office? I believe you said that --
A. The -- the immediate job I had prior to joining general counsel was a tenure at the State Emergency Management Agency.
Q. Okay. I've got that here. And then prior to that you were with the office of the governor, deputy general counsel?
A. Yes.
Q. And a -- a brief stint as -- or you said including as deputy chief of staff?
A. Yes. Brief.
Q. When -- when did you begin in your -- your work with the office of the governor in any role?
A. It lasted for a period between two to three years. The start date.
Q. Year, you can put a year.
A. I can back into it. I think it was '12 to '14, 2012 to 12 -- '14 generally. Generally.

Page 141

Q. Okay. And prior to that what did you do?
A. I worked for a period of time at Department of Natural Resources, then the Department of Economic Development.
Q. So natural resources, then prior to that economic development?
A. Yes.
Q. And prior to that what did you do?
A. I was new to the state at that time. I worked previously as the deputy commissioner for criminal justice programs, public safety in the state of New York.
Q. Okay. And did -- and that -- what did you do in that capacity?
A. I ran statewide programs on juvenile justice, reentry, crimes against revenue.
Q. Crimes against what?
A. Revenue.
Q. Tax evasion?
A. You know, frauding workman's comp.
Q. Okay.
A. Not paying your taxes, a restaurant not paying taxes, that stuff.
Q. Okay. I understand. Anything else?

Page 142

A. Anything else as to?
Q. In that position.
A. Brief the governor and the deputy secretary for public safety on public safety issues. Was a counselor on efforts to combat crime in New York State and administration of general programs to assist localities in combatting violent crime.
Q. And prior to that what did you do?
A. I -- I worked as an attorney for the New York State general assembly in the majority caucus on the codes committee.
Q. And prior to that?
A. You're killing me here.
Q. I'm trying to get back to law school here. I guess what I'm getting at, is your tenure with the public defender's office your first work experience in the defense of criminal defendants?
A. You just had to go back one job prior and I was a public defender.
Q. Okay.
A. Before joining the New York State general assembly in the codes committee, I worked for the Albany County Public Defender's Office, and I also represented clients, criminal defense clients in private capacity. You were allowed to do both.

Page 143

Q. Okay. And how long were you doing that?
A. I think over a period of between two and -- two and three years.
Q. Okay. That's what I was getting back. Sorry to walk you back all the way back like that.
A. And I don't know the precise time period for that.
Q. And I'm not going to hold you to it.
A. Yeah.
Q. We'll ask you for your resumé if we need it.
A. Yeah.
Q. You mentioned that -- I guess you have did you say quarterly meeting of the commission that you attend?
A. Yes.
Q. You report --
A. We calendar out four quarterly meetings a year. In addition, as the need arises we'll have phone calls to discuss matters that require discussing.
Q. And are those proceedings recorded, taken down, minutes?
A. I don't know -- minutes, yes.

Page 144

Q. Okay. So minutes for the formal meetings?
A. Yes. Required by the -- the open meetings law, also known as the sunshine law.
Q. Okay. And -- and the phone meetings you have, are those formal meetings for which document --
A. When you say formal, I don't know what you're talking about.
Q. Well, is there a process whereby the commission can meet by telephone rather than in person and carry out its business?
A. Yes. Yes.
Q. And those would also be subject to the same sunshine law requirements for documentation?
A. Yes, appropriate notice is given, etc.
(Court reporter interruption.)
MR. QUINLAN: Requirements for documentation.
THE WITNESS: And I said yes, appropriate notice is required, etc.
MR. QUINLAN: You have two Northeasterners here going at it. We're very fast talkers.
THE WITNESS: I'm making efforts to slow down.

Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) You mention -- I just -- some questions I have in my margins from my notes. You indicated that -- that $3.74 million was appropriated. I don't have in my notes what year it was.
I'm not sure that -- I mean, the record will -- will speak for itself on that. That was first vetoed by the governor and then put back into the budget by veto override, and then it was again withheld by the governor?
A. Yeah, I just correct you. It's 3.47 million. Not 74 million.
Q. 47 million, okay.
A. Yes. Yeah, that's my correction. And I believe it was two budget cycles ago.
Q. Okay.
A. So whether you want to use calendar year or fiscal year, it was two years ago.
Q. That's fine. But my question is do you know why the money was ultimately withheld?
A. Well, I know insofar as to state why money was withheld generally, and that's because according to the governor, Nixon, revenues were not coming in as projected. As it relates to the specific withhold, pertaining to the public defender system, I can't say.

Q. So you've been in the general counsel's office of the governor. What is your understanding of that, the -- the broader withholding you refer to? What's the origin of that?
A. Revenue.
Q. Right. By what authority does the governor have ability to do that?
MS. SHIPMA: You know, I'm going to object. This is a subject matter of current pending litigation --
MR. QUINLAN: Okay.
MS. SHIPMA: -- to which he is a party and so I don't want him answering. I'm going to instruct him not to answer questions regarding this matter.
MR. QUINLAN: Sure. And any that you find, we can do that. I'm just trying to get some background.
MS. SHIPMA: This is one. Do not believe there is -- we do not believe there is --
(Court reporter interruption.)
MS. SHIPMA: Yes, our contention in the litigation is there is not constitutional authority --

Page 147

MR. QUINLAN: Okay.
MS. SHIPMA: -- for the governor to do that withhold. So any questions regarding his understanding --
MR. QUINLAN: Okay.
MS. SHIPMA: -- of that I'm going to object and instruct him not to answer.
MR. QUINLAN: No, fair enough. And I'm not -- and I'm not trying to invade anything.
Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) So it's your understanding that the -- that what the governor said, what the governor's position was was that he had constitutional authority to make a withholding because revenues did not -- were not sufficient to meet appropriations?
A. I'm trying to state what I believe he thought.
Q. Exactly. That's what I'm asking. I'm not asking to invade --
A. Yeah.
Q. -- anything that's -- would prejudice your litigation. Is that correct then?
A. That -- limited to that, yes.
Q. Yeah, okay. And again, you don't -- you don't have any specific information about why $3.47 million appropriation for the public defender system was among that?

MS. SHIPMA: I'm going to object to that question. That's the subject matter of our litigation. Michael, I'm going to instruct you not to answer.
THE WITNESS: Okay.
Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) You going to follow your attorney's instruction?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Did I understand your testimony correctly that your requested appropriation -- or I should say the appropriation made in the current fiscal year is fully funded, it's not been withheld?
A. Can I just take a step back so I understand your question?
Q. Sure.
A. You're talking about the budget that was pulled together as part of the last legislative budget cycle and is now in operation for the current fiscal year?
Q. Yes.
A. All the money that we were appropriate -- appropriated that can be expended at this point in the fiscal year to my understanding has been expended to our department.

Q. Okay. And that's your overall budget?

A. Yeah, I don't know there's a difference between them.

Q. I -- you know, I'm asking you for my benefit because I have Code 49 program in my note.

A. Okay.

Q. But I think my question was broader than that. And that was the question you answered, right?

A. Yes.

Q. So you're -- you're basically -- I understand your answer, okay. You mentioned that the operational control over the public defenders, your office, is held by the commission.

A. No.

Q. Okay. You're -- my note -- and correct -- and my notes say that -- that Missouri public defender system is an independent department within the judicial branch and it's only operationally controlled by the commission. Is that --

A. By the department. By the department.

Q. The department.

A. Not the commission.

Page 150

Q. Okay.

A. For instance, if I wanted to move an FTE from one office to the next, that's an operational decision. I take that to be an operational decision. That's not one that I would require commission approval.

Q. I understand. So -- and the -- what is then the authority of the commission?

A. So it's statutory. There's a number of enumerated responsibilities that they have. The one in addition to hiring me and firing, terminating the director, to approve the budget request that goes to the legislature and the governor.

To do some advocacy for the mission of the public defender system, and I believe there's something in there too about the approval of a pay structure for our org. chart.

Q. Okay. But your salary is fixed by statute?

A. Yes. I believe it says not more than what a judge makes. I don't remember whether it's an associate circuit judge or a circuit judge.

Q. But other executives in your department that you hire, they have different -- they can be paid what you and the board determine, commission?

Page 151

A. Yes, I think I have say. I think I drive that decision. But as a matter of practice, as a matter of courtesy, I will share and get their approval or I have shared and got their approval in establishing salaries for what I would describe as senior staff, deputy directors, trial division directors.

Q. And you also have -- so just so I understand, you -- you basically are the focus of the operational control department?

A. I would say that's an accurate statement.

Q. Okay. And so you are the one ultimately responsible for the pay scale for your APDs?

A. I think so. I think -- yes, I think that's -- I think that's -- I think we need -- there's some nuance there that I just can't willy-nilly make stuff up. I think we borrow --

Q. Don't I know that from my position.

A. We borrow I think -- I don't know whether it's compulsory or not a structure that OA creates. I don't know whether that's a guideline as I sit here or whether that's mandatory, but that's what we utilize.

Page 152

MS. SHIPMA: Kathy Lear can speak --

A. Yeah.

MR. QUINLAN: Understood.

Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) What is the authority, if any, that the Supreme Court has over your office as you're in the judicial department, and my understanding is constitutionally the Supreme Court is the supreme head of the judicial department?

A. Counselor, that's unclear to me. I've never been able to reconcile what it means to be in the -- in the judicial branch but at the same time be independent, the same end achieved by us being a stand-alone. I don't know the answer to that.

Q. Okay. I just want to confirm that you set the salaries for your APDs and your support staff and your organization and -- but you don't have budgetary responsibility for funding their -- their fringe benefits?

A. So if I understand your -- your question, their fringe benefits are not paid for out of my operating budget.

Q. That was my question. Okay.

A. And I believe the same is true for all departments, I believe.

Page 153

Q. I don't know. There was some discussion about -- I don't remember whether it was the district offices or the system as a whole, but -- and I'm just going to ask the question. Are there restrictions on the ability of your department to raise funds from sources other than an appropriation by the legislature?

A. I believe there is. Kathy Lear would be expert to answer that question.

Q. So would that -- does that rule out to your understanding private fundraising to fund different programs?

A. I believe it does.

Q. Okay.

A. I know that -- I'm mindful that if there's grant opportunities out there, and there seldom are, that we're somewhat limited as to what we can bring in from outside sources, but again Kathy Lear would be expert on that.

Q. But you -- but you are allowed to collect fees from clients?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. You have a system for assigning a value to a representation and -- and charging your client for that?

Page 154

A. We have -- yes, I believe the amounts are promulgated by rule if I'm not mistaken. I didn't set them. They're -- they're assessed as a fee to clients, yes.

Q. And do you know what the destination is of those fees when they're paid? Do they come in to your budget?

A. Kathy Lear would be expert on that.

Q. All right. And I presume you have a system in place to -- for billing and collections and keeping track of how successful you are in collecting those fees?

A. I -- to the extent that we are successful, I have general understanding of -- of what comes in the door, how it comes in the door, yes, but Kathy Lear would know more.

Q. And Kathy would be --

MS. SHIPMA: Or Joel Elmer would also --

MR. QUINLAN: Okay.

MS. SHIPMA: -- be able to speak to that as well.

Q. (By Mr. Quinlan) And as I understand it, the office space occupied by your defenders in the counties and the district offices is provided by the counties?

A. Yeah. Perhaps I should've provided more nuance to that. In the cities I believe -- I think those are provided out of our budget if I'm not mistaken. I'd refer you to Kathy Lear on that.

Q. And I have that in my notes to talk to Kathy Lear about. And did I understand you correctly that the number of FTEs that you have is restricted by the legislature?

A. Yes.

Q. So -- and you mention that you had received an authorization to hire -- to add ten FTEs recently?

A. Two budget cycles ago in the same budget cycle that had that 3.47 million, I believe in that budget cycle we were authorized as part of that 3.47 million for ten additional FTEs. We didn't have the money to -- to hire those positions, but because it was passed by the legislature that becomes part of your core funding for subsequent years.

Q. Okay. So that has been continued, that authorization has continued subsequently?

A. Yes.

Q. And you say you haven't filled all those?

Page 156

A. That is correct.

Q. Have you requested since then additional FTEs for your department through the legislative process?

A. We have submitted our -- our two thousand -- fiscal year 2019 budget proposal, which was approved by the Public Defender Commission at our September Public Defender Commission meeting. That has now been provided to the legislature, the governor's office, and additionally I believe the Supreme Court.

Q. And does that provide for more FTEs beyond the ten of the prior --

A. Yes.

Q. How many?

A. I don't know without looking at it.

Q. More than ten?

A. Yes.

Q. More than 20?

A. Keep going.

Q. More than 300?

A. That would be the number that I would give you.

Q. Okay. So -- so you're asking for what you say you need, you expect that that will be trimmed back?

Page 157

A. I asked for what RubinBrown tells me I need based on the thresholds that they pulled together using evidence-based data.

Q. And that's the RubinBrown report that's specific to Missouri that's attached to the complaint in this case?

A. Yes.

Q. And my recollection is -- and I confess I -- I haven't studied it meticulously. That was based in part on anecdotal information supplied by public defenders as well as some limited initial data from a new hour -- hour keeping system?

A. I think that's partially correct. I'd refer you to Joel Elmer, but I can speak to this. This predated me, but I --

Q. And exactness is not what I'm looking for. Because what I'm asking is my recollection of that report was that the -- the -- there was a timekeeper system that was recently put in place?

A. Yes.

Q. Do you know when that was?

A. It was --

Q. 2015?

Page 158

A. It preceded -- since the report came out in '14, it preceded that. So I would say sometime between 2012 and 2014.

Q. Okay. And has there been any subsequent data analysis based on the actual experience and history recorded from your mature use of your hour -- hourly keeping system?

A. I'd refer you to Joel on that one.

Q. Okay. You testified that one of the criteria for evaluating assistant public defenders that's an objective criteria is client contact?

A. Yes.

Q. So do you have a -- a data collection or recordkeeping system that -- that captures those client contacts for the purposes of your evaluation?

A. Yeah, I believe we do. I think that's captured in different ways. For instance, a -- to have a local office to measure that, you can choose to look at a -- some sort of database or pull a file. So you can do it manually or electronically. I think Joel would be able to give you more information on that.

Q. Okay. And in that connection the client contact criteria, is that -- is that something that is promulgated on a district office basis or is that systemwide?

A. To the extent -- I don't understand your question. There is not differing standards I don't think.

Q. Well, I think you mentioned something about a visit is expected within first seven days of appointment and then every thirty days thereafter. Is that -- is that criteria one that is -- that is promulgated systemwide?

A. I believe that's a systemwide criteria.

Q. Okay.

A. I'd refer you to Joel Elmer.

Q. Okay. Mentioned that -- I don't remember whether this is a broader historical perspective or just the last year, you said one percent of all cases go to trial. So that means 99 percent plead or are otherwise disposed of?

A. Can I take the first part of your question?

Q. Yes.

A. Yes. It's my understanding that for the last two years, whether fiscal or calendar, that the -- the data that we recorded and was communicated to me, that in each of those years we only went to trial on one percent of our cases. And to the second part of your question, the 99 percent would also include such things like dismissals.

Q. Exactly. Okay. Nolle pros and things like that? Yeah. You have to answer out loud.

A. My first -- yes.

Q. And when you use the term caseload in your testimony, you're referring to that phrase as it's used in the RubinBrown report?

A. No.

Q. Do you have a different understanding of caseload than is in the RubinBrown report?

A. Yeah. There's -- there's two different words that I use. Mr. Mermelstein and Mr. Elmer may differ. I use caseload and workload. Caseload would be raw number of cases without taking into account the complexity of the case or the severity of that case, whether it's an A, a B, a felony, or otherwise.

Workload would be a different number. Workload would take those things into account because as part of the RubinBrown process they assigned higher thresholds or more hours required to work on cases of greater severity. For instance, an A -- according to RubinBrown an A felony would require more hours worked generally than a C felony.

Q. Okay. And I'm -- and I'm just not remembering. My notes show that you said caseloads are most critical concern. Did I --

A. Yeah.

Q. Did I write that down correctly?

A. I think -- I think you did because I think that's what I said. If I could nuance that by saying I'm using caseload as an umbrella term there to include both caseload and workload. The number and severity of -- and seriousness of the cases that are assigned to a given lawyer.

Q. And -- and I gather that the assignment of cases within your office is -- is balanced based on severity so that you may have some lawyers that have -- with less severe cases, who would have more or less severe cases, whereas other lawyers with more severe cases would have fewer cases?

A. That's going to vary by office. There are other things at play. For instance, if it's a rural area, and they have several attorneys but those attorneys handle exclusively a county, they may get both severe --

Q. Right.

A. -- and less severe cases. So it -- it would depend on the jurisdiction.

Page 162

Q. Okay. We talked about the ombudsman complaints, and I think you mentioned that there's a database for tracking complaints?

A. Yes. If the complaint comes in through ordinary channels and not the phone is picked up by some other secretary and rerouted in an errant way, formal process is to record the -- or input the data concerning that call into some sort of database.

Q. Okay. So -- and that's a computerized system?

A. Yes. But that would only be calls that come to our office. That would not include calls by a client complaining to the local office.

Q. Or to their lawyer?

A. Or to their lawyer.

Q. Or to their lawyer. Do you have a mechanism for capturing the incidents of those kinds of complaints?

A. I don't believe we do.

Q. Okay. Even -- just practically speaking, I can understand as a practicing attorney you get a complaint from a client, you deal with it, you're not going to doc -- necessarily document that unless it's a letter or something like that, but when the complaint comes above so to speak over the attorney's head to the -- the management -- office management, is there any way of capturing those complaints?

Page 163

A. To the former, I think the determination is that the utility of recording it for the sake of recording it is outweighed by the time that it takes to do so. So the latter, if it comes -- the call comes in to our ombudsman program --

Q. Which is centrally located?

A. Which is centrally located. It is part of practice or procedure that we use to record it.

Q. Okay. What you're saying, though -- let me make sure I understand. If I'm a lawyer and I get a complaint from a client, I want to make some documentation that satisfied that complaint, do you know where that happens at the line level in your offices?

A. I don't -- I don't know that it does.

Q. Okay. One way or the other?

A. I don't know that it does one way or the other.

Q. Okay.

A. I would imagine it varies by lawyer.

MR. QUINLAN: All right. I went through my notes and I wrote that $3.47 million number down wrong every time. I'm getting close here. If you don't mind, we take a break. I'll check with Steven and see if we have anything more and wrap it up.

Page 164

THE WITNESS: That's fine with me.

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're going off the record at approximately 12:08 p.m.

(WHEREIN, a recess was taken.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're back on the record at approximately 12:16 p.m.

MR. QUINLAN: Thank you for the break to consider that. Having done so, we have no further questions.

EXAMINATION

QUESTIONS BY MS. SHIPMA:

Q. I do have a few questions. Okay. Michael, I'll try not to prolong this any more than necessary. Do you have any concept of on average the cost for the public defender system to defend a case?

A. I do have a concept --

Q. And what is that?

A. -- on average. I believe, and I'd refer you to Kathy Lear for a more precise answer, but in looking at trial division cases, when you take the number of cases and do some division as it relates to the total amount budgeted for those trial division cases, it comes out to be somewhere between 350 and 365 to the best of my recollection per case, and that includes some overhead.

I think -- I believe it includes litigation expenses as well. But I think there's certain overhead that's not included, but that's my understanding. Somewhere between 350 and $365 per case on average.

Q. And does that include the APD salary or the attorney's salary?

A. I believe it does. I believe it does, but I'd refer you to Kathy Lear for a more precise answer.

Q. And this -- do you -- are you aware of the amount of the fees that are paid -- the fees that are paid to contract counsel for specific types of cases, do you know what the dollar figure is for a misdemeanor, for instance?

A. I'd refer you to Joel Elmer.

Q. Okay. There were some questions about the various different reports that have been done of the public defender system. Are you aware of any findings in any of those reports that talk about fundamental problems with the system other than not enough resources?

A. That are not tied to resources?

Q. Right.

A. I am not.

Q. You referred to the fact that we -- that MSPD was given ten additional FTEs a couple of budget cycles ago and that those haven't been filled. What's the reason for not having filled those?

A. Some of them have been filled. Not all of them. The offices that I would provide one of those additional FTEs to are unable at the present day to fulfill their existing FTEs. So I'm holding back on assigning them as of yet.

Q. So there are vacancies in FTEs, not just those ten additional?

A. Correct.

Q. And what -- do you know, do you have a concept of what -- the reason for those vacancies?

A. That there's no person occupying the position.

Q. Do you know why the position is not filled?

Page 167

A. Not as to each specific position. I will -- I can say that the comptroller and the HR department has informed me that last year our turnover rate was around 17 percent for the year, and that that has increased and is projected to be upwards of 25 percent for this year.

We do do departure interviews, exit interviews with willing ex-employees, and the common reasons for leaving are that in the opinion of the departing attorney they're not able to do what they need to do for their client and are either leaving because of fear that their law license is in jeopardy or because there is some guilt associated with not being able to do what they need to do for their client. The other reasons that are most typical are salary.

Q. Not enough salary?

A. Salaries are low.

Q. Your duties as director of the public defender system are set by statute, correct?

A. Well, there are duties above and beyond statute, but there are specific duties that I must do, I believe.

Q. Okay. And are you -- I'm not asking you to quote the statute, but are you familiar with those duties that the statute sets out in general?

A. In general, yes.

Q. Can you tell me what those are?

A. Yeah. I have statutory obligation -- again, paraphrasing that -- specifics here to make sure that people who are charged with a criminal offense and who are otherwise unable to retain a lawyer receive competent representation by a member of MSPD or an MSPD attorney to ensure due process and -- under the law.

(Court reporter interruption.)

A. I'm sorry. Due process under the law.

Q. (By Ms. Shipma) So it's not only the judge's duty to worry about whether defendants are getting -- indigent accused are getting competent representation, that's something that you're tasked with as well; is that correct?

A. Yes, I would say that that's my primary purpose.

MS. SHIPMA: Thank you. I don't have any further questions.

MR. WILLIAMSON: None for me.

MR. QUINLAN: Just have a couple questions about the -- the FTEs.

FURTHER EXAMINATION

QUESTIONS BY MR. QUINLAN:

Q. Do you know how many of the ten -- do you know how many of the ten authorized FTEs have remained vacant, have not been utilized?

A. I want to say -- I want to say four.

Q. And each of those four cases, does that relate to an office in which you intended those to go to offices which still have vacancies that haven't been filled?

A. Yes.

Q. So in other words, you have an office that -- that has had one vacancy and you don't want to -- you don't want to assign another FTE to that office, there's just going to be a second vacancy in that office?

A. I don't see the utility in doing that, yes.

Q. Do you see utility in utilizing those FTEs in venues or jurisdictions, offices, districts where you can recruit attorneys and -- and filling those?

A. I do see utility, and there's a second obstacle. And the second obstacle is that next tier of offices that are in most need of an additional person are also those offices where they don't have at least space to have another person in them.

So they would -- so the high-need offices would either fall into one of the two categories, either they're unable to recruit or they're able to recruit, but there's no room in the office.

Q. And -- and in those offices where you lack space, have you -- have you made inquiry of the local county to obtain that space?

A. Yeah, it's both the responsibility of the local district defender as well as Kathy Lear, who is the point of contact with the localities regarding facilities.

Q. So have they categorically refused to give you additional space?

A. In every instance I would not say that they have categorically refused. It's complicated from -- from a number of perspectives. One because most cases -- excuse me -- it's an office that handles a number of different counties, although the office would be located in a single county.

Each one of the counties served would contribute a pro rata dollar amount to the cost of that office and would be involved in -- in the decision. A number of instances we're in space that's owned by a county and so we're currently in free space, and if we move to a different space it would not be free space and it would be a cost for the county.

Q. Well, in those cases where you don't even have -- not only do you -- why don't you just move that FTE to one -- to another office in the state some -- because according to Exhibit 4 all of your offices have workloads or caseloads multiple levels beyond a hundred percent?

A. And I very well may do that. The beginning of the fiscal year, as you alluded to earlier, was July 1. We're not too far into the fiscal year and I've started off by posting in those offices that were both high need, had the room, and was able to recruit.

I'm now at the point of having to make a decision to utilize those positions notwithstanding they may ultimately go to -- to an office that's not among the top four in need, but as you pointed out, all the offices have a need for those positions.

Q. And as far as the desert areas if you will or the other -- other offices where you're having difficulty recruiting, you mentioned that you had a hundred percent flexibility in the use of your funds with -- with approval by OA. Are you aware of any incidents in which you haven't received approval from OA for flexibility -- flexibility move you'd like to make?

A. I'm -- I'm not. That's a Kathy Lear question, and those decisions typically come at the end of the fiscal year as we spend down the lines.

Q. Would it not be within your flexibility to offer salary incentives or other financial incentives for -- for the desert offices in order to get people to work there, something akin to like hazardous duty pay or something like that? Do you understand what I'm saying?

A. We've had that conversation. There's some factors that go into that that create other inequities that I'm fearful of how they would resonate in the system and establishing precedent.

The things that swirl around in my mind, Counselor, is it's my experience painting with a broad brush that although it's difficult to recruit to the rural areas, that when were successful a lot of times in recruiting to rural areas it's because someone has a tie, a family tie to that area, and they stay for much longer.

The reality in more the urban areas, for instance, St. Louis, there's a dearth of -- of lawyers available who are interested in applying, but because of the proximity to other more high-paying legal jobs, they leave more frequently.

So that -- that concept that you mention has interested us. I don't know if it has as I sit here a greater utility in the urban areas or the rural areas given their different dynamics.

MR. QUINLAN: Okay. That's all I have. Off the record.

VIDEOGRAPHER: We're going off record at approximately 12:28 p.m.

COURT REPORTER: Signature of the witness?

MS. SHIPMA: Yes.

COURT REPORTER: And then transcript orders for all the depos today? Full-size, condensed, or E-tran?

MR. QUINLAN: Get an e-mail.

MR. WILLIAMSON: E-mail yes.

MS. SHIPMA: E-mail.

(WHEREIN, the deposition was concluded at 12:28 p.m.)

XIX. CONCLUSION 86

I. INTRODUCTION AND SCOPE OF THE REPORT

1. I was requested to provide an opinion about public defense services in Missouri in the context of the claim by the Plaintiffs in this case that Missouri "has failed to meet its constitutional obligation to provide indigent defendants with meaningful representation."

2. I am Director of The Defender Initiative and Professor from Practice, Seattle University School of Law. I joined the faculty in January 2007. I was Director of The Defender Association in Seattle for 28 years, and was a staff attorney at that office for nearly five years before that. I have been an expert witness in systemic litigation in New York and Louisiana. A full description of my qualifications appears below at paragraph 18 et. seq.

3. A list of the materials I have reviewed is attached as Appendix A. I have also reviewed this Court's ruling on the Defendants' Motions to Dismiss. Church v. Missouri, 17-CV-04057-NKL, 2017 WL 3383301 (W.D. Mo. July 24, 2017). I recognize that for purposes of deciding that motion, the Court "accept[ed] the Plaintiffs' factual allegations as true and construe[d] them in the light most favorable to them." Id. at *1 n.1. Because this Court's recounting of the history of studies of public defense in Missouri and the funding of public defense is concise and is consistent with my understanding of them, I have cited and relied upon this Court's account at various places in my report.

4. Based on my experience in public defense, my understanding of the relevant constitutional and ethical standards, and my review of the materials in this case, I have been able to reach a conclusion on the systemic ability of the Missouri State Public Defender (MSPD) to fulfill Missouri's constitutional obligation to provide counsel to indigent defendants.

II. OVERVIEW OF OPINIONS

5. In my expert opinion, Missouri's public defenders operate in circumstances such that even where counsel is nominally available, "the likelihood that any lawyer, even a fully competent one, could provide effective assistance is so small," that Plaintiffs are constructively denied counsel in violation of the 6th Amendment. See United States v. Cronic, 466 U.S. 648, 659-60 (1984).

6. Missouri's system for providing defense counsel for the poor fails to meet Constitutional and professional standards and creates an unacceptable risk that indigent defendants throughout the State who are charged with crimes carrying a threat of imprisonment will be denied effective representation by counsel. Missouri's public defenders consistently are failing to subject the cases against such defendants to meaningful adversarial testing, and, as a result, the State is failing to meet its foundational constitutional obligation to provide counsel to eligible persons.

7. There are numerous structural and systemic causes for the Missouri public defender system's failure to meet Constitutional and professional standards and statutory requirements: inadequate and inconsistent funding; excessive caseloads; inability to devote the necessary time to each client's case that results in triage representation; a material disparity of resources between prosecution and defense; insufficient supervision and training; insufficient attorney-client communications; and inadequate support from or access to investigators, experts, social workers and other necessary support personnel; significant travel requirements because of the geographic size of their districts and up until quite recently, the MSPD's conflict counsel policy that required defenders to take cases in other counties; and a wholly ineffective statutory remedy for declining cases for which MSPD defenders have feared reprisals.

8. Public defenders in Missouri regularly fail to provide adequate counsel at every critical stage of the criminal process, including arraignment, particularly where the initial bail amount is set by the court. Further, MSPD attorneys routinely fail to engage in sufficient attorney-client communications to prepare an adequate defense; conduct meaningful factual investigations; engage in necessary motions practice; prepare for and take cases to trial; and utilize the services of expert witnesses and social workers. Because of the pressures of excessive caseload, public defenders in Missouri frequently seek long and repeated continuances that leave their clients in jail, forced to choose either to waive their speedy trial rights or give up their trial and accept plea deals to obtain earlier release.

9. These failures exist in the MPSD's responsibilities to defend indigent clients in adult criminal proceedings and in juvenile proceedings.

10. This Court has outlined the claimed inability of the Missouri Defender system to provide counsel consistently at every critical stage of the criminal process:

> In Missouri, however, attorneys are often unavailable to represent each eligible indigent defendant at every critical stage of the criminal process—including at their arraignment, where bond is determined. Public defenders routinely do not meet their clients until several weeks after the client's arrest and arraignment. As a result, bond determinations, which normally occur at the defendant's initial appearance before the court, are almost always made without the benefit of advocacy from counsel. Unrepresented indigent defendants are therefore often forced to remain in jail simply because they are unable to advocate effectively on their own for release on their own recognizance or a reasonable reduction in their bond amount.

Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *3.

11. This Court noted that there is a right to counsel at post-arraignment lineups. The complaint, however, alleges that:

> …defendants in Missouri are routinely placed in lineups after arraignment without the benefit of counsel, even though the prejudice that results from an improper lineup cannot be cured later in the criminal process.

Id. at *4

12. This Court described the dilemma faced by clients whose lawyers cannot prepare for their cases:

> …defendants are often forced to choose between either consenting to the continuances, thereby waiving their right to a speedy trial and remaining in jail for an extended period of time, or taking their chances at trial with an attorney who has had little or no time to prepare.

Id.

13. This Court discussed the alleged failures of counsel caused by inadequate resources:

> MSPD attorneys are unable to ensure that those who plead guilty do so knowingly and voluntarily. Excessive pretrial detention—often due to public defenders' inability to represent defendants at bond hearings or their need for repeat continuances—put virtually unbearable pressure on many defendants to plead guilty merely to get out of jail. Many MSPD clients who plead guilty do so without a full understanding of the strengths and weaknesses of their case.

Id. at 4.

14. As discussed more fully below, an indication that the Missouri defenders are not able consistently to subject the state's case to meaningful adversarial testing is that there are few cases that are taken to trial. For example, in 2015, MSPD lawyers tried only 18 cases out of 12,327 total Trial Division misdemeanor cases. July 25, 2016. Letter from Jacqueline Shipma to Jason Williamson (July 25, 2016).

15. Many defenders rarely investigate the facts in their cases. Many defenders do not conduct motion hearings to the extent that they should, and most defenders rarely use expert witnesses.

16. Almost none of the districts use social workers. Although social workers and careful preparation by counsel can significantly improve plea bargaining results and result in better sentences for the defendants, they are rarely available as a resource to MSPD lawyers or their clients.

17. The situation in Missouri has grown to be so serious that the defenders and judges have come to accept routinely and openly a pattern of practice regarding indigent accused persons that falls well below what the Missouri Rules of Professional Conduct require and effectively disregards the ethical responsibilities of both lawyers and judges. The defenders have changed their approach to the excessive caseload in the wake of the recent Hinkebein state Supreme Court disciplinary decision. As detailed below, there are a range of problems raising serious ethical concerns.

III. QUALIFICATIONS INCLUDING A LIST OF ALL PUBLICATIONS AUTHORED IN THE PREVIOUS 10 YEARS

18. I am an attorney licensed to practice law in the State of Washington, admitted to practice before the United States District Court for the Western District of Washington, the United States Court of Appeals for the 9th Circuit and the Supreme Court of the United States. I am an inactive member of the California Bar Association. I am certified under the Washington State Superior Court Special Proceedings Rules as qualified to be appointed as counsel in capital appeals and post-conviction proceedings.

19. I graduated from Kenyon College in 1970 with a degree in Political Science and from Northwestern University School of Law in 1973.

20. For 28 years, I served as Director of The Defender Association in Seattle, a non-profit public defender program. In that role, I administered an office of as many as 125 staff, including as many as 90 lawyers. Among my duties as Director, I was responsible for negotiating our contracts with government funders at the city, county and state level, advocating for resources from local government, seeking foundation and other private funding, negotiating building and equipment leases, recruiting and hiring staff, addressing personnel and labor issues, and supervising and participating in training of staff. I also developed a successful proposal for a state capital defense assistance center funded by the Washington Office of Public Defense. I obtained grant funding to begin a Racial Disparity Project in the office.

21. As Director, I was co-counsel in two hearings in King County Superior Court that resulted in increased payments to The Defender Association for work in Wash. Rev. Stat. § 71.09 (i.e., sex offender commitment) cases. Our presentation included an analysis of the staffing requirements for and the financial impact of handling those cases, including extensive discussion of the budget.

22. My office had contracts with local government that had performance guidelines informed by the King County Bar Association Guidelines, Washington Defender Association Standards, Washington State Bar Association Standards, National Legal Aid and Defender Association Performance Guidelines, and Wash. Rev. Stat. § 10.101.

23. As a staff attorney with The Defender Association, I worked in misdemeanor, juvenile, felony, and appellate divisions. While in the appellate division, I was co-counsel on a trial-level capital case.

24. I have represented clients at every level of state and federal courts.

25. I have participated in state and national efforts to develop public defender standards and a model defender services contract, which have been published by the Washington State Bar Association ("WSBA"), the American Bar Association ("ABA"), and the National Legal Aid and Defender Association.

26. For many years, I have been a member of the ABA's Indigent Defense Advisory Group. I have also served on other ABA committees and a working group and on a number of state and local committees, all relating to criminal justice and public defense.

27. I was chairperson of the WSBA Criminal Law Section in 1981-1982 and 1984-1985. For more than ten years, I have served on the WSBA Committee on Public Defense and its successor Council on Public Defense.

28. I have been co-chair of a committee for the Council on Public Defense assigned to review standards and to develop performance guidelines. In that role, I have co-led an effort to amend the WSBA Indigent Defense Standards and to develop defender performance standards. The Council on Public Defense approved both the resulting amended Standards and the Performance Guidelines and recommended that the WSBA Board of Governors endorse them, which it did. The State Supreme Court has incorporated key parts of the WSBA Indigent Defense Standards into court rules.

29. I helped to draft the Washington State law requiring local governments to develop standards for public defense (enacted as Wash. Rev. Stat. § 10.101), initially passed in 1989. The law requires, among other things, that:

> Each county or city . . . shall adopt standards for the delivery of public defense services, whether those services are provided by contract, assigned counsel, or a public defender office. Standards shall include the following: Compensation of counsel, duties and responsibilities of counsel, case load limits and types of cases, responsibility for expert witness fees and other costs associated with representation, administrative expenses, support services, reports of attorney activity and vouchers, training, supervision, monitoring and evaluation of attorneys, substitution of attorneys or assignment of contracts, limitations on private practice of contract attorneys, qualifications of attorneys, disposition of client complaints, cause for termination of contract or removal of attorney, and nondiscrimination.

Wash. Rev. Stat. § 10.101.030.

The law provides that the WSBA Standards "should serve as guidelines to local legislative authorities in adopting standards" under § 10.101.

30. In 1983, I helped to establish The Washington Defender Association (the "WDA") and for 20 years served as its Founding President. During that time, the WDA established staff attorney positions providing technical assistance to defenders throughout the state and developed a legislative advocacy program working with the Washington Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers.

31. In 2007, I led a committee for the American Council of Chief Defenders ("ACCD") that wrote a Statement on Caseloads and Workloads (the "ACCD Statement on Caseloads and Workloads").

32. I currently lead a Washington Council of Public Defense committee that developed proposed Performance Guidelines for Juvenile Defense Representation in Washington. The Council has adopted the Guidelines and is recommending their adoption by the Washington State Bar Board of Governors and sending them to the Washington Supreme Court.

33. For many years I have been a member of the Washington State Minority and Justice Commission, a commission of the Supreme Court of the state of Washington that is charged with the mission of ensuring that all courts in the state of Washington remain free of bias so that justice may be adjudicated in a neutral and fair manner. I have participated with prosecutors, defenders, and judges in developing successful proposals for amendments to court rules and in presenting training programs.

34. I am a Professor from Practice at the Seattle University School of Law (the "School of Law") where I have been on the faculty since January 2007. I have taught a seminar on Right to Counsel, Law and Lawyering, a Clinic on Right to Counsel, and in the Youth Advocacy Clinic and Criminal Procedure Adjudicative classes. My teaching in the clinics has included classroom training on trial practice and ethical considerations, discussion of related criminal procedure issues, and representation of clients in prosecutions in King County Superior Court, in a misdemeanor appeal in Kittitas County, and in two habeas corpus proceedings in Snohomish County Superior Court (in Washington State).

35. I also serve as the Director of The Defender Initiative at the School of Law. The Initiative's first project was a comprehensive investigation of misdemeanor public defense in the United States conducted with the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers ("NACDL"). I was the primary researcher and co-author of a report published by NACDL in 2009 entitled Minor Crimes, Massive Waste, The Terrible Toll of America's Broken Misdemeanor Courts that surveyed the law on right to counsel in misdemeanor cases and examined actual representation across the country. For that project, I reviewed recent case law and ethical opinions relating to caseloads and conducted site visits in Pennsylvania, Arizona, and Washington State. The report analyzed issues relating to caseloads, available resources, and the components of effective representation, including use of investigation, training, supervision and compensation. The report discussed diversion of cases and ethical issues. The report has been cited in more than 60 law review and journal articles.

36. In 2009, The Defender Initiative received a grant from the Foundation to Promote an Open Society (the "Foundation") to advocate for increased provision of counsel in Washington's misdemeanor courts. The Foundation provided additional funding for 2010-2011 and 2011-2012, which allowed me to expand the work into Kentucky, New Hampshire, and South Carolina. The Defender Initiative receives grant funding from the U.S. Department of Justice to provide technical assistance on public defense.

37. Working with The Sixth Amendment Center, a sub-awardee from The Defender Initiative, I conducted site visits in a number of Utah counties culminating in a report to the Utah Judicial Council entitled The Right to Counsel in Utah: An Assessment of Trial-Level Indigent Defense Services (2015). The Defender Initiative and the Sixth Amendment Center are preparing a similar report for the Mississippi Supreme Court Task Force on Public Defense and the Mississippi Office of the State Public Defender for which I have conducted site visits in a number of Mississippi counties. We also are consulting with the staff of the Michigan Indigent Defense Commission. I recently visited and wrote a short report on the Berrien County, Michigan, Public Defender office. And I observed hearings and wrote a report about three courts in Michigan. In another project with The Sixth Amendment Center, I helped to research and write a report on compensation for assigned counsel in Wisconsin entitled Justice Shortchanged, Assigned Counsel Compensation in Wisconsin (2015). We recently received a grant from the Michigan Indigent Defense Commission to do a study of the Wayne County State Defender office.

38. I have participated in site-visit evaluations of public defender programs for the National Legal Aid and Defender Association in Idaho, Michigan, Louisiana (in Orleans and Avoyelles Parishes), Nevada, and Washington, D.C.

39. I serve as the Public Defense Assessor, City of Edmonds, Washington, January 2016—present. I also consulted for Edmonds in 2015 on the selection of its current public defense provider.

I will include here a list of all other cases in which I testified as an expert at trial or by deposition.

40. I have previously provided expert testimony and/or reports in several actions in state and federal courts relating to the ability of public defenders to provide effective assistance of counsel to indigent defendants.

In 2005, I served as an expert witness in a class action seeking injunctive relief from systemic ineffective assistance of counsel in Grant County, Washington. I provided deposition testimony, and, after depositions and motion hearings, the parties entered into a settlement that established per-attorney caseload limits and other requirements.

In 2009, I submitted an affidavit as an expert witness in support of a summary judgment motion filed by the Kentucky Public Advocate in a declaratory judgment action involving excessive public defender caseloads. I concluded that the defenders had excessive caseloads and inadequate resources. Although the trial court dismissed the lawsuit on ripeness grounds, the Kentucky Governor shortly thereafter announced a new $2 million allocation for public defense.

I submitted a declaration as an expert witness in support of a motion filed by the Miami Dade County Public Defender in State of Florida v. Bowens, 39 So. 3d 479 (Fla. Dist. Ct. App. 2010), to withdraw because of excessive caseloads. The Florida Supreme Court agreed that the Public Defender had demonstrated cause for withdrawal based on his office's excessive caseloads. Public Defender v. State, 115 So. 3d 261, 279 (Fla. 2013). My declaration is available at http://www.pdmiami.com/ExcessiveWorkload/Mo_to_Withdraw_Exhibit_D.pdf.

I was qualified as an expert witness by the New York Supreme Court, Appellate Division, Third Judicial Department in a class action litigation styled as Hurrell- Harring v. State of New York, 119 A.D. 3d 1052,1054 (N.Y. App. Div. 2014). In 2014, the parties entered into a settlement that included an agreement by the state of New York to develop caseload standards, provide counsel at all arraignment hearings, and improve the quality of public defense representation in five counties. As part of my work in that case, I conducted observations and interviews in Suffolk County and Washington County, New York.

In November 2015, I testified (by video) as an expert witness in the Orleans Parish Criminal District Court in support of a motion filed by the Orleans Public Defender to suspend the assignment of new cases. I testified that the defenders' excessive caseloads undercut their ability to provide effective representation to their clients.

In May 2017, I provided an expert witness report on public defense in Louisiana. That report was filed in support of a motion for class certification in Allen v. Edwards in court in Baton Rouge Louisiana, in a lawsuit that alleges that Louisiana has failed systemically to provide a constitutionally acceptable public defense system.

In August, 2017, I provided an expert witness report on a question regarding the timing of appointment of public defenders in Contra Costa County, California. That is for litigation in United States District Court.

In October 2017, I testified in a deposition in the Contra Costa County case referenced above.

41. I have also served as an expert witness in cases involving claims by individual defendants of ineffective assistance of counsel.

In 2007, I served as an expert witness regarding effective assistance of counsel on behalf of the defendant in an evidentiary hearing before King County Superior Court in Washington. The Court of Appeals granted the petition to withdraw the guilty plea. In re Pers. Restraint of Gay, 142 Wash. App. 1001 (Wash. Ct. App. 2007).

I served as an expert witness regarding effective assistance of counsel on behalf of the defendant in a federal habeas corpus proceeding challenging a persistent offender conviction. Thorne v. DuCharme, C97-1280Z (W. D. Wash.) (2001). After my report, the parties stipulated to an order to issue a writ of Habeas Corpus and to direct the Superior Court of the State of Washington to vacate the judgment and conviction in the state trial court.

42. I was invited to and did testify before the United States Senate Judiciary Committee at a hearing on Protecting the Constitutional Right to Counsel for Indigents Charged with Misdemeanors on May 13, 2015. My written testimony is available at https://www.judiciary.senate.gov/download/05-13-15-boruchowitz-testimony.

43. I have spoken at many continuing legal education seminars and public fora, including the following:

IV. COMPENSATION

46. I have agreed to be compensated at the rate of $200 per hour for the work in this case including testimony.

V. THE MISSOURI AND UNITED STATES CONSTITUTIONS REQUIRE EFFECTIVE ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL

47. The Missouri Constitution provides: "in criminal prosecutions the accused shall have the right to appear and defend, in person and by counsel." Mo. Const. art. I, § 18(a).

48. The Missouri Supreme Court has emphasized that "Effective, not just pro forma, representation is required by the Missouri and federal constitutions." State ex. Rel. Missouri Pub. Def. Comm'n v. Waters, 370 S.W. 3d 592, 607 (2012).

49. The Sixth Amendment to the United States Constitution provides in part: "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to …have the assistance of counsel for his defense."

50. Counsel must be "reasonably effective". Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 687-89 (1984) (citing the "[p]revailing norms of practice as reflected in the American Bar Association standards and the like" as "guides to determining what is reasonable").

51. The United States Supreme Court has made clear that "The right to the effective assistance of counsel is thus the right of the accused to require the prosecution's case to survive the crucible of meaningful adversarial testing." Cronic, 466 U.S. at 656.

52. The Cronic Court held that there are "some occasions when although counsel is available to assist the accused during trial, the likelihood that any lawyer, even a fully competent one, could provide effective assistance is so small that a presumption of prejudice is appropriate without inquiry into the actual conduct of the trial." 466 U.S. 648, 659-60, 104 S.Ct. 2039, 2047.

VI. RULES OF PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT REQUIRE COMPETENT AND THOROUGH REPRESENTATION

53. Missouri Rule of Professional Conduct RULE 4-1.1: COMPETENCE states:

> A lawyer shall provide competent representation to a client. Competent representation requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.

Available at https://www.courts.mo.gov/courts/ClerkHandbooksP2RulesOnly.nsf/c0c6ffa99df4993f86256ba50057dcb8/20fd60132de3411886256ca6005211b4?OpenDocument.

54. The Comment to Rule 4-1.1 states in part:

> Thoroughness and Preparation
>
> [5] Competent handling of a particular matter includes inquiry into and analysis of the factual and legal elements of the problem and use of methods and procedures meeting the standards of competent practitioners. It also includes adequate preparation. The required attention and preparation are determined in part by what is at stake; major litigation and complex transactions ordinarily require more extensive treatment than matters of lesser complexity and consequence.

55. Rule of Professional Conduct RULE 4-1.3: DILIGENCE provides: "A lawyer shall act with reasonable diligence and promptness in representing a client." The Comment to the rule states in part: "[2] A lawyer's work load must be controlled so that each matter can be handled competently."

56. Rule of Professional Conduct RULE 4-1.4: COMMUNICATION provides:

> (a) A lawyer shall:
>
> (1) keep the client reasonably informed about the status of the matter;
> (2)promptly comply with reasonable requests for information; and
> (3)consult with the client about any relevant limitation on the lawyer's conduct when the lawyer knows the client expects assistance not permitted by the Rules of Professional Conduct or other law.
>
> (b) A lawyer shall explain a matter to the extent reasonably necessary to permit the client to make informed decisions regarding the representation.

57. Because of excessive caseload, Missouri's defenders are not able consistently to meet these ethical obligations articulated in the Missouri Rules of Professional Conduct, including Rules 4-1.1, 4-1.3, 4-1.4, and 4-1.7.

VII. DEVELOPMENTS SINCE THE HINKEBEIN DECISION

58. The Missouri Supreme Court recently suspended a defender who was unable to meet all of his obligations because of an excessive caseload. The Court stayed the suspension and placed the defender on probation. This case, and the defenders' response to it, have increased attention to the structural deficiencies of the Missouri public defender system. The defenders are addressing the ethical issues raised by their excessive caseload. Chief Public Defender Michael Barrett wrote about the ethical obligations of his lawyers and the burdens on them:

> It was during oral argument where the Supreme Court again made itself clear – that there were no carve-out exceptions in the Rules for public defenders, and then stated that defenders have a choice to make when he/she has too many cases: (1) quit; or (2) refuse to accept more cases. Many have chosen the first option. We have a 25% turnover rate and given our starting salary of $39k, there is no line around the block of people looking to join our ranks. We received a number of resignations in the hours following oral argument in that disciplinary case.

Letter to Boone County Bar Association, Boone County Bar Association Newsletter, October 2, 2017, Joel Elmer Deposition, October 4, 2017, Ex. at 5.

59. Mr. Barrett was quoted in a public radio story, discussing the untenable situation he feels his lawyers face:

> If I was a cartoonist for a newspaper, I'd draw a picture of a public defender whose [sic] got two guns pointed at him from either side of their head: On one side, the (Office of Chief Disciplinary Counsel) and the Supreme Court saying, 'I dare you to take that case and I'm going to take your law license.' On the other side is the local court who says, 'I dare you to not take that case. And I'll hold you in contempt.' That's our world right now.

"Many Missouri Public Defenders Decline New Cases After State Supreme Court Disciplines Lawyer", By DAN MARGOLIES, St. Louis Public Radio (October 6, 2017), available at http://news.stlpublicradio.org/post/many-missouri-public-defenders-decline-new-cases-after-state-supreme-court-disciplines-lawyer#stream/0.

60. Mr. Barrett reported that some lawyers had resigned from the MSPD after the Supreme Court argument and before his September 11 letter, citing caseload and "their inability to practice within the—the rules." After the letter, a manager announced her November departure. Michael Barrett Deposition, October 4, 2017, at 80.

61. John G. Mermelstein, the MSPD deputy director of specialty practice and resources, has posted for all MSPD attorneys to use > a sample motion to withdraw from cases due to excessive caseload and a sample letter to – to the Office of Chief Disciplinary Counsel which our attorneys could send to them to report an excessive caseload. I also posted before September 11th the American Bar Association ethical opinion 06441 regarding excessive attorney caseloads. Now, after September 11th I have since posted a sample writ of prohibition and mandamus to allow us to litigate at an appellate level a court's failure to allow us to withdraw from an excessive caseload….

John G. Mermelstein Deposition, October 4, 2017, at 21.

62. As of October 4, 2017, at least several offices and individual lawyers in several counties had indicated their unavailability to take new cases. Barrett Deposition, at 80-81.

63. According to Mr. Mermelstein, in some counties when the defenders indicated their inability to take new cases, "The judges are frankly not reacting positively." Mermelstein Deposition, at 25.

64. According to a public radio story, the district defender in the "Liberty office, says he sent a letter on Monday to judges in Clay, Platte and Clinton counties informing them that his office would no longer accept new cases." "Many Missouri Public Defenders Decline New Cases After State Supreme Court Disciplines Lawyer", supra.

65. The public radio story reported that Boone County Presiding Judge Kevin Crane "has since appointed more than three dozen" private lawyers to take cases without pay. Id.

66. It appears that the lawyers appointed in Boone County are not experienced criminal defense lawyers. Mr. Barrett testified:

> A. I am not aware of whether Judge Crane or any other judge who is contemplating appointing private counsel, whether they are going to appoint someone who is competent to provide representation in the area of criminal defense.
> Q. So these private attorneys are not necessarily criminal defense attorneys?
> A. The one appointment that I was aware of, one individual in Boone County, worked for a private business I believe as a regulatory attorney, and had no experience in criminal defense matters.

Barrett Deposition, at 89.

VIII. THE MSPD HAS ADMITTED IT IS UNABLE CONSISTENTLY TO PROVIDE EFFECTIVE REPRESENTATION TO ITS CLIENTS

67. In a September 11, 2017, letter to MSPD staff, Chief Defender Michael Barrett recognized that public defenders in Missouri continue to be overburdened and encouraged his staff to abide by their ethical obligations to their clients. He told his lawyers:

> … it is a violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct for me or anyone else to impose on you more cases than you can handle within the Rules…. In the event I do, it is part of your sworn obligation to file a bar complaint against me. You simply have to say that you are not available. It is not just what you should say, it is what you are required to say.

Elmer Deposition, Exhibit 2.

Mr. Barrett added:

> Tomorrow I will be addressing the Presiding Judges at the Judicial Conference. I will be making clear that we have too many cases, and that the Supreme Court has made it quite clear that public defenders are risking their own professional lives when appointed to an excessive number of cases.

Id.

68. Mr. Barrett emphasized a statement from the Missouri Supreme Court: ""No exception exists to the ethics rules for lawyers who represent indigent persons." Id., citing Waters, supra.

69. Mr. Barrett has explained the ethical conflict caused by excessive caseload:

> There's also a conflict when if a lawyer accepts an additional case and fulfilling the obligation to that new defendant in any way takes away or it deprives the lawyer of competently representing their existing clients because foremost an attorney has an obligation to their existing clients.

Barrett Deposition, at 74.

70. Mr. Barrett explained his purpose in writing the letter to his staff:

> I wanted to provide whatever relief I could that -- that I would not impose as a condition of their employment the acceptance of cases beyond which in their individual determination they felt they couldn't handle or would put them in jeopardy of violating the > rules of professional conduct, and that if I did, that it would be their obligation to file a bar complaint against me.

Id. at 78.

71. Mr. Barrett testified that he needed more than 300 additional lawyers to meet the caseload needs. Id. at 96.

72. On September 26, 2017, District 13 Defender David Wallis and his deputy Sarah Aplin wrote to the Boone County and Cooper County judges that their lawyers were violating ethical rules because of excessive caseloads:

> As of today's date, Ms. Aplin and myself believe every attorney under our supervision is currently violating the Rules of Professional Conduct. Their current individual caseloads create a conflict of interest with existing clients because they are forced to chose effective representation of one client to the detriment of other clients. It is also our belief that assigning any new cases to any individual attorneys would create a conflict of interest because they would have no ability to adequately represent either their current or prospective clients.

Letter from David Wallis to Circuit Judges September 26, 2017.

73. On September 27, 2017, Boone County Presiding Judge Crane wrote an email to the Boone County Bar that the Court would begin assigning criminal cases to the private bar, for an unknown period of time. Email from Judge Crane to Boone County Bar.

74. The President of the Missouri State Bar, Morry Cole, sent a letter to Boone County attorneys in which he recognized "that appointing lawyers without criminal defense experience is not a long-term solution as the appointments are challenging to individual attorneys and may be problematic for defendants and the public." Elmer Deposition, Exhibit 20.

75. Chief Defender Michael Barrett wrote an op-ed in the St. Louis Post Dispatch published September 27, 2017, in which he discussed the problems facing "the tens of thousands of poor people who face incarceration each year" for whom "investigations are far less thorough":

> Defendants go days, sometimes weeks, without talking to an attorney. And if they want their constitutional right to a trial, most are forced to sit in jail and wait until the system gets around to them.

See, Michael Barrett, "A great system of justice — for some", By Michael Barrett, St. Louis Post Dispatch (September 27, 2017), available at http://www.stltoday.com/opinion/columnists/a-great-system-of-justice-for-some/article_bf2ee8c1-2814-5bab-b43c-4a784b45b2b9.html.

76. In a spreadsheet detailing the caseload for MSPD for the first three months of 2017, MSPD reported that its trial division lawyers on average were operating at 248.5% of capacity and its appellate division lawyers at 273.1% of capacity. All of the offices were over capacity. Barrett Deposition, Exhibit 4.

77. In its Legislative Budget Request for FY 2018, the MSPD requested an additional $22,600,965, which it "thought would be necessary in order to have attorneys meeting the kind of constitutionally mandated case load caps more or less." Deposition of Kathleen Lear, October 6, 2017, at 50.

78. That request was based on all the attorneys working 2080 hours a year, no vacations, and 333 additional attorneys would be needed. Id., at 51.

79. In an April 25, 2016, letter to Governor Jay Nixon, the Missouri Public Defender Commission recounted the five studies of MSPD that had concluded that the office "does not have near enough resources to meet its constitutional responsibilities" and cited the most recent study's conclusion that "the system's caseload requires more than 250 new lawyers."

80. In that letter, the Commission noted that MSPD had "not received any additional funding to account for the rising costs of practicing law (e.g., hiring experts) over the past decade." It reported that to address a forecasted deficit by the end of fiscal year 2016, "MSPD was forced in January to place a moratorium on hiring any new staff to fill existing vacancies until the new fiscal year. Forty-one vacancies coupled with a projected 7% increase in cases for 2016 is nothing short of unsustainable."

81. MPDC acknowledged that the combination of inadequate resources, rising costs, and increases in cases "forces Missourians who are too poor to post bail to sit in jail for weeks, months or even years until their cases can be resolved, which too often prompts them to accept a plea simply to secure their release despite the merits of their case." Id.

82. In an email dated May 3, 2016, the MSPD Comptroller wrote that the office was holding 41 positions vacant "to have dollars available to transfer to our expense and equipment appropriation", which was "necessary to meet required 2016 case related expenditures." She noted that the vast majority of those costs were required for capital cases and CDU [commitment of sex offender] cases. She added, "We are balancing MSPD's budget at the expense of our employees and clients." Email from Kathleen Lear to Tony Roberts, May 3, 2016.

83. Ms. Lear testified that MSPD knew they were going to be approximately a million dollars short in litigation costs that year, and "in order to meet the demands of our case load and the cases that were open and pending" she knew how many positions they needed to keep vacant. Deposition of Kathleen Lear, October 6, 2017, at 46.

84. The Missouri Public Defender Commission (MPDC) in its Annual Report for fiscal year 2016 admits that it is not able consistently to provide effective representation for its clients. The message from the Director admits that there is a substantial likelihood of wrongful convictions because of the high caseloads carried by each of his attorneys:

> Challenging the government's evidence and presenting a substantial defense for every individual defendant is not only our constitutional obligation, it is necessary to ensure that people are not wrongfully convicted of a crime. Given the high caseloads carried by each MSPD attorney, courts and policymakers must recognize that this is not only a realistic possibility, but a substantial likelihood.

85. In a press release about the MPDC lawsuit challenging the governor's withholding of $3.5 million in caseload relief funding, Riley Bock, Chair of the Public Defender Commission, said, "The Missouri Public Defender System, because of inadequate funding, is beginning to unravel." Press Release, Missouri State Public Defender, (July 13, 2016) , available at http://www.publicdefender.mo.gov/Newsfeed/20160713_PDFilesLegalChallenge.html (last visited October 15, 2017).

86. The July 13, 2016, press release added: "Because MSPD attorneys are well above 200% of caseload capacity, it is nearly impossible to investigate and competently defend each case." Id.

87. In the lawsuit about the governor's withholding of funding, the Public Defender Commission claimed:

> …the specific areas which were immediately impacted include, but are not limited to the following: the Office of State Public Defender is unable to proceed with case contracting to reduce caseload to ethically permissible levels, unable to fill vacant attorney positions, limited in its ability to pay litigation costs and unable to provide necessary technology for effective client representation.

First Amended Petition for Declaratory Judgment and Injunctive Relief, CASE NO. 16AC-CC00290, Circuit Court of Cole County, available at http://www.publicdefender.mo.gov/Newsfeed/FIRST%20AMENDED%20PETITION%20FOR%20DECLARATORY%20JUDGMENT%20AND%20INJUNCTIVE%20RELIEF.pdf (last visited August 23, 2017).

88. The FY 2016 MPDC Annual Report at page 8 states:

> Providing effective assistance of counsel in each case demands a well-trained, highly experienced corps of dedicated attorneys and support staff. However, excessive caseloads and low salaries lead to a high turnover rate among attorney staff, which makes fulfilling this important mission difficult, if not impossible.

89. In the FY 2016 Report, Director Barrett analyzed the time records kept by his staff in comparison to the conclusions reached by the 2014 American Bar Association-commissioned study by the RubinBrown accounting firm of how many hours are needed to provide effective representation in different categories of cases. FY 2016 Report at 17.

90. For example, RubinBrown found that an A/B felony requires 47.6 hours of attorney time, but the MSPD attorneys in 2016 were spending 8.7 hours. All of these hours were exclusive of court time, travel, and administrative tasks.

91. For misdemeanors, RubinBrown found that attorneys should spend 11.7 hours per case, and in 2016, MSPD lawyers were spending only 2.3 hours, of which only .9 hours was for client communication, .4 for discovery and investigation, and .9 for case preparation, which includes research and writing. Id.

92. Mr. Barrett wrote:

> The stark discrepancy between what work must be done in the proper defense of constitutional liberty and what is being done with the limited resources at hand reveals that MSPD is in need of 169.50[1] additional attorneys to meet constitutional requirements. Id.

93. It is helpful, in understanding why the time the MSPD lawyers are spending is insufficient, to review the list of duties MSPD prescribes for its trial division attorneys:

- bond hearings for those defendants who are confined pre-trial and seeking release, which can include verifying a place to stay, finding a sponsor the court is likely to trust, verifying an employer will take them back to work, etc.;
- preliminary hearings;
- tracking down and reviewing all of the state's discovery - police reports, lab reports, witness statements, hospital records, etc.;
- interviewing or deposing the key state's witnesses;
- locating and interviewing potential defense witnesses;
- tracking down records and evidence that may help establish the defendant's innocence;
- visiting crime scenes or re-enacting a described crime to see if the real thing matches up with what witnesses described;
- reviewing the results and original notes and data from forensic tests conducted by the state, determining whether an independent analysis by an expert who doesn't work for the state is warranted, and if so, finding that expert and arranging for the testing of the evidence;

[1] According to Mr. Barrett's recent deposition testimony, the MSPD is now in need of more than 300 additional attorneys. Michael Barrett deposition October 4, 2017, at 90.

- making initial assessments of the defendant's ability to understand the legal proceedings and, when the defendant exhibits developmental or mental disabilities, arranging for an expert to evaluate the defendant to make that determination;

- researching the law applicable to the defendant's case and litigating motions where it appears the defendant has not been properly charged, the law has not been followed, or the state is seeking to put on evidence of questionable admissibility or reliability;

- negotiating plea agreements with the prosecutor, as well as locating and litigating for sentencing options that could effectively address the problems that resulted in the defendant getting into trouble in the first place and thus reduce the likelihood of recidivism; or

- if the case is one that goes to a trial, conducting that trial, before either a judge or jury, as well as being present and advising the client concerning all the court appearances a defendant will be required to make as his case progresses through the criminal justice system;

- and of course meeting with and advising the client, and perhaps the client's family members if the client requests it, throughout each of the above processes.

FY 2016 Report at 18-19.

94. In my opinion, an initial client interview generally requires about an hour, longer if the client has mental health issues or needs an interpreter. Discussing possible defenses, identifying witnesses and other avenues of investigation, explaining plea offers from the prosecutor and sentencing options, understanding the client's history and the client's objectives in the case, all require time with the client. Reviewing the police report, developing investigation, preparing and arguing motions, and preparing and conducting trials and any sentencing, add considerably to the time required. In my opinion, having .9 hour to communicate with a client and a total of 2.3 hours for the work on a case is simply not sufficient and does not permit providing effective representation on a consistent basis.

95. MSPD has acknowledged that its lawyers are not meeting the duties MSPD has described. In the FY 2016 Report, at 19, MSPD wrote:

> As the above list indicates, an attorney's appearance in court on behalf of a defendant is a very small portion of the work they must do on a case. When they have too many cases, some of these steps are skipped or fall by the way side. The state's evidence is taken at face value, assumed by all to be accurate and mistakes fall through > the cracks, uncaught and uncorrected. The result is that individual defendants and justice as a whole suffers.

96. Given the amount of time that Missouri defenders spend on misdemeanor cases, it is clear that they do not have adequate time to communicate with their clients, to investigate cases, to conduct a significant motion practice, to prepare for and go to trial, and to prepare for sentencing by developing alternatives and written material for the court to consider. I discuss below a similar review of the felony and juvenile practice.

97. In his opinion finding that two cities had systematically denied the assistance of counsel to indigent defendants, U.S. District Court Judge Robert Lasnik could have been describing the Missouri Defenders' misdemeanor practice:

> Most interactions occurred in the courtroom: discussions regarding possible defenses, the need for investigation, existing physical or mental health issues, immigration status, client goals, and potential dispositions were, if they occurred at all, perfunctory and/or public. There is almost no evidence that Sybrandy and Witt [the defenders] conducted investigations in any of their thousands of cases, nor is there any suggestion that they did legal analysis regarding the elements of the crime charged or possible defenses or that they discussed such issues with their clients. Substantive hearings and trials during that era were rare. In general, counsel presumed that the police officers had done their jobs correctly and negotiated a plea bargain based on that assumption.

Wilbur v. City of Mount Vernon, 989 F. Supp. 2d 1122, 1124 (W.D. Wash. 2013).

98. In a letter to Governor Nixon, dated August 2, 2016, MPDC Director Michael Barrett recounted that the governor seven years earlier had "acknowledged that MSPD was operating 'under significant stresses' and committed to working with the General Assembly to fix the problem, but never did."

99. Mr. Barrett wrote based on the consumer price index that his current budget had less value than it did in 2009. Because of that, he had to hold open a significant number of vacant positions.

100. In his letter, Mr. Barrett wrote that the governor's action came

> …even after the Civil Rights Division of the Department of Justice found that poor black children are being systematically deprived of their rights in Missouri due in large part to the lack of public defenders. Choosing in the wake of that report to further debilitate the very organization that ensures an equal system of justice only adds to the escalating sentiment that the poor and disenfranchised do not receive a fair shake in Missouri's criminal justice system.

101. In a previous letter to Governor Nixon, dated August 7, 2015, Michael Barrett had noted the conclusions of the DOJ report and asked for "a $10 million supplemental budget to provide adequate resources to the state's public defender system." He wrote:

> In FY 2014, MSPD's trial division alone handled more than 70,000 cases. Given our appropriation for that year, that's an average of just $345 per case. No reasonable person can conclude that $345 is adequate to defend someone charged with a criminal offense.

Letter available at http://www-old.publicdefenders.us/?q=node/862

102. I note that in 2012, the Missouri Court of Appeals found that $100 per hour for an entry level lawyer was a reasonable attorney fee. Hill v. City of St. Louis, 371 S.W.3d 66, 81 (Mo. Ct. App. 2012).

103. Mr. Barrett added in his August 7, 2015, letter:

> Just as the DOJ found that the St. Louis County's juvenile caseload is nearly double the widely-accepted standard, 25 of MSPD's 33 trial offices are similarly situated, with the remaining offices so nearly equal in caseload distress that moving FTEs to mitigate the most overburdened offices would equate to reorganizing deck chairs on the Titanic.

Id.

104. In a more recent letter dated March 15, 2017, to current Governor Greitens, explaining why he would not extend parental leave to his employees as the Governor was recommending, Mr. Barrett described the defenders' crushing caseloads and the limited time they could spend on their clients' cases:

> Because of crushing caseloads, MSPD attorneys are only able to spend 8.7 hours on each class A/B felony, where clients often face life in prison, just 4.4 hours on a C/D felony, 2.3 hours for a misdemeanor, and 1.4 hours for a probation violation, which is a driving force behind Missouri's artificially inflated prison population. These dedicated and skilled attorneys for the poor know that for each additional hour they take as leave, it further reduces the amount of time that can be spent on a client's case, thus increasing the rate at which defendants plead guilty so that they can be released from county jail in hopes that their jobs and housing are still in place. Public defenders know that more time off, without expanding the current cadre of public defenders, only increases the chances of a wrongful conviction and enhances the likelihood that a person convicted of a non-violent offense will be sentenced to state prison (47% of Missouri's prison population is incarcerated for a non-violent offense).

March 15, 2017 letter from Michael Barrett to Governor Eric Greitens, available at https://bloximages.chicago2.vip.townnews.com/joplinglobe.com/content/tncms/assets/v3/editorial/9/77/977af4d4-0b49-11e7-b700-cb06fb1ef256/58cc3cb6a2c60.pdf.pdf.

105. Mr. Barrett also noted that "an alarming percentage" of his attorneys do not take the leave to which they are entitled. In 2016, 79 of them forfeited a total of 3431 hours of annual leave. [That is about one week each on average.] He noted that his clients face loss of liberty and excessive fines and fees, "including having to pay for the cost of their pre-trial jail stay because they are too poor to post bond during a time when they are presumed innocent." Id.

106. Mr. Barrett wrote that he believed that his attorneys would prefer that he work "to alleviate their impossible caseload burden and deliver them a salary that is worthy of their contribution to the state and its citizens." He noted that the attorneys "are drastically underpaid", with a starting salary of $39,708, and that many have student loans in excess of $100,000. The maximum salary for the most senior attorney classification is $63,912. Id.

107. Mr. Barrett noted that the low salary contributes to the high turnover rate among his attorneys, hovering around 20 per cent. MSPD has to spend a disproportionate amount of its budget training new employees. He wrote, "While employees regularly leave for higher pay and better benefits, the number one reason we lose experienced attorneys is because they do not have the time to do what needs to be done on their clients' cases." Id.

108. Comptroller Kathleen Lear testified: "…when you're paying attorneys less than $40,000 they're not going to stay for a long period time with the case load and the types of cases they have to provide representation in." Kathleen Lear Deposition, October 6, 2017, at 64.

109. Mr. Barrett wrote that the governor's suggested FY 2018 budget equals only what the legislature passed in CY 2014 and that MSPD's caseload had increased more than 13 per cent since then. March 15, 2017, letter, supra.

110. In his draft budget request document for FY 2018, Defender Director Barrett discussed the five different studies of its workload conducted in the past couple of decades: "Each of these investigations reached the same conclusion: Missouri's public defenders have too many cases and not enough lawyers or support staff to fulfill the state's constitutional obligations."

Fiscal Year 2018 DRAFT Legislative Budget Request, Michael Barrett, Director, Commission Meeting, September 21, 2016 (hereinafter FY 2018 Draft budget request).

111. In the draft budget request, Mr. Barrett applied the ABA case weights to MSPD's caseload and determined that he needed 332.9 additional attorneys to meet the existing caseload. Of those, 311 were for "Constitutionally Mandated Representation" and 11.5 for a requested Juvenile Advocacy team in two District offices. And 10.5 were to replace the positions restricted by Governor Nixon. Id.

112. Mr. Barrett, using the ABA case weights, said that his lawyers were operating at 240.1 per cent of capacity. Id., at 14.

113. Mr. Barrett ultimately requested a budget of $70 million. Brian Hauswirth, "Missouri State Public Defender requests $70 million in funding", Missourinet, February 28, 2017, available at http://www.missourinet.com/2017/02/28/missouri-state-public-defender-requests-70-million-in-funding/.

IX. LACK OF FINANCIAL PARITY AND INADEQUATE SALARIES

114. The Missouri Public Defender system does not comply with the American Bar Association principle regarding parity with the prosecution. Principle 8 of the ABA Ten Principles of a Public Defense Delivery System states:

> There is parity between defense counsel and the prosecution with respect to resources and defense counsel is included as an equal partner in the justice system. There should be parity of workload, salaries and other resources (such as benefits, technology, facilities, legal research, support staff, paralegals, investigators, and access to forensic services and experts) between prosecution and public defense….

115. As the MSPD Commission's annual report states:

> Missouri's full time elected prosecuting attorneys are required by state statute to be paid the same as an Associate Circuit Judge, $136,402. By comparison their Public Defender counterparts are paid an average of a mere $79,601. This level of pay inequity between the defense and prosecution sides of the criminal justice system is neither equitable nor sustainable.

2016 Annual Report at 8.

116. The salaries for line defender attorneys are also significantly lower than those for prosecutors.

117. Salaries for defenders as reported in the 2016 Report were as follows:

Assistant Public Defender Starting Salaries July 1, 2016
Assistant Public Defender I	$39,708
Assistant Public Defender II	$46,992
Assistant Public Defender III	$52,116
Assistant Public Defender IV	$69,528

118. As of August 19, 2017, the Boone County Prosecutor was advertising an assistant prosecution attorney II position with a salary range of $52,624 – $87,131. Missouri Association of Prosecuting Attorneys, Job Openings at http://www.prosecutors.mo.gov/employment.

119. Greene County was advertising for an assistant prosecutor with a salary of $48,235.20. Id.

120. Cape Girardeau County was advertising for an assistant prosecuting Attorney, with a starting salary of $42,000. Id.

121. On the same date, the Columbia, Missouri trial defender office was advertising openings as follows:

> Assistant Public Defender
>
> Salary:
>
> - APD I: $3,309/month (starting salary)
> - APD II: $3,916/month (eligible for consideration after 1 years' successful service)
> - APD III-IV: $4,343-$5,326/month (eligible for consideration after continued highly successful performance)

Web site at http://www.publicdefender.mo.gov/employment/job_descriptions/apd.htm.

122. Clay County, Missouri, reports having three assistant prosecutor II positions at salaries of more than $60,000, including one of $71,399.9. The prosecuting attorney's salary is listed as $137,744.88.

Web site at https://www.claycountymo.gov/Transparency/Salaries (last visited August 31, 2017).

123. As of September 21, 2016, Mr. Barrett reported having no attorneys at the Assistant Defender Attorney V and VI salary levels. Fiscal Year 2018 Draft Budget Request at 19. He was proposing to add 60 attorneys at level V and 15 at level VI, at salaries of $65,364 and $71,100 respectively. Id.

124. As of September 2016, MSPD had 153 attorneys whose salary was below $47,476, the new proposed U.S. Department of Labor threshold regarding overtime exemptions. Id., at 24.

125. The low salaries contribute to high turnover of staff, which, in turn, undercuts the ability of the defenders to provide effective representation. Mr. Barrett wrote in his Fiscal Year 2018 Draft Budget Request that the high turnover rate:

> makes it more likely that innocent persons will be incarcerated, that clients will languish in jail waiting until someone can get to their cases, and that non-violent offenders will be unnecessarily sent to prison, all at an extraordinarily high cost to Missouri's citizens, a much higher cost than what it would take to provide > salary parity and greater retention for our employees. Every time an attorney leaves, his or her cases are reassigned and an already overloaded attorney adds the case to his or her existing backlog. With MSPD operating at one quarter the support staff needed, it also is critical that MSPD is able to retain the existing investigators, paralegals, legal assistants, mitigation specialists, and other clerical staff.

Fiscal Year 2018 Draft Budget Request at 18.

126. Law graduates often have considerable debt from their law school education. The University of Missouri School of Law notes that "nearly 80% of law school students rely on student loans as their primary source for financing their J.D. The more a student borrows, the longer the debt will have an impact on life after law school." University of Missouri School of Law web page at http://law.missouri.edu/financialaid/.

127. The University of Missouri School of Law tuition and fees for in-state residents are $21,406/87 for the 2017-18 year, and the estimated living expenses are $19,610, for a yearly cost of $41,016.87. University of Missouri School of Law web page at http://law.missouri.edu/financialaid/cost/. The cost of three years of law school can easily exceed $123,000, and many law graduates are carrying undergraduate school debt as well. The MSPD salaries make it difficult for lawyers to accept and maintain positions as defenders.

128. An example of the financial challenges facing the district defenders is District 14. For FY 2016, the MSPD reported spending only $280.92 per assigned case in District 14. FY 2016 Report at 14. This was below the already low state average of $328.15 per case.

129. If the defenders in District 14 averaged 150 felony cases per year, which is the American Council of Chief Defenders recommended caseload limit and far above the limit recommended by the American Bar Association Rubin Brown study, the office would have only $42,138 available per attorney. $42,138 per year is inadequate to fund a fully-functioning defender attorney. The actual starting salary of a defender attorney is $39,708.

130. The financial strain goes beyond salaries to the equipment available to the defenders. Comptroller Kathleen Lear testified:

> You know, we're running with copy machines that are ten years old. We're running with laptops that are seven years old. We hold a lot of things together with spit and glue just to make them last longer. I think public defender mentality is that if it's -- if it's not total trash, make do with it. I'm appalled when I go to some of the offices and they're sitting in chairs that really I want to towel before I sit down. They're that nasty.

Deposition of Kathleen Lear, October 6, 2017, at 98.

X. THE MISSOURI DEFENDERS HAVE EXCESSIVE CASELOADS

131. The local district defenders are carrying caseloads that make it impossible to provide constitutionally required effective assistance of counsel.

132. Mr. Barrett has stated that his lawyers average double the nationally recommended maximum of 150 felony cases per attorney per year. "The ABA has endorsed a maximum caseload of no more than 150 felonies a year per attorney. We are currently more than double that number." Letter to Boone County Bar Association, Boone County Bar Association Newsletter, October 2, 2017, Elmer Deposition, Exhibit 5, at 5.

133. Mr. Barrett testified that the most pervasive problem in the system is high caseloads. Barrett Deposition, at 45.

134. Excessive caseloads are a primary reason why Missouri's defenders quit their jobs. Mr. Barrett testified:

> when someone leaves the system if they are willing to subject themselves to a -- an exit interview, it's what is almost always what they cite as the reason for leaving. Not -- may not be the exclusive reason, but it's the driver.

Barrett Deposition, at 45.

135. Mr. Barrett added:

> …the common reasons for leaving are that in the opinion of the departing attorney they're not able to do what they need to do for their client and are either leaving because of fear that their law license is in jeopardy or because there is some guilt associated with not being able to do what they need to do for their client. The other reasons that are most typical are salary.

Id. at 167.

136. Excessive caseloads prevent defenders from adequately representing their clients. High caseloads prevent lawyers from having enough time to provide effective representation because attorneys are unable to interview clients effectively, conduct investigations, counsel clients about pleas offered at arraignment, and do other necessary preparation. The ABA Criminal Justice Section Defense Function Standard 4-1.3(e) states:

> (e) Defense counsel should not carry a workload that, by reason of its excessive size, interferes with the rendering of quality representation, endangers the client's interest in the speedy disposition of charges, or may lead to the breach of professional obligations.

137. The U.S. District Court in the instant case, in ruling on a motion to dismiss, cited the long history of reports documenting the inadequate resources available to the MSPD, and quoted the 2009 report by The Spangenberg Group.

> TSG concluded that public defender workloads had worsened since its 2005 report and, as a result of those workloads, public defenders were failing to (1) conduct prompt interviews of their clients following arrest, (2) spend sufficient time interviewing and counseling their clients, (3) advocate effectively for pretrial release, (4) conduct thorough investigations of their cases, (5) pursue formal and informal discovery, (6) file appropriate and essential pleadings and motions, (7) conduct necessary legal research, and (8) prepare adequately for pretrial hearings, trial, and sentencing..

Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *(citation omitted).

138. The Court wrote:

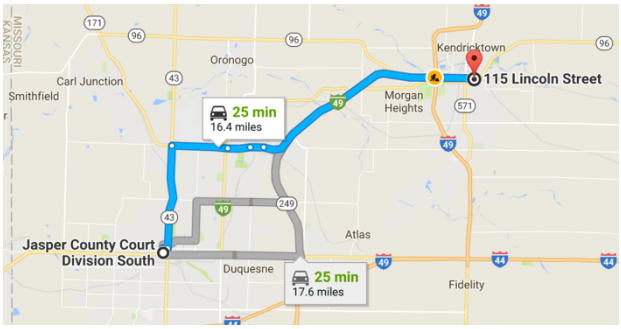
> MSPD Trial Division attorneys were able to devote the minimum required hours to only 2.4% of all A/B felony cases (or 97 out of 4,127 total A/B felony cases) and 1.4% of C/D felony cases (or 311 out of 21,491 total C/D felony cases).

Id. at *3

139. This Court added: "In February 2017, Defendant Barrett testified before the state legislature that MSPD would need 333 more lawyers to provide minimally adequate representation to indigent defendants." Id.

140. An example of the excessive workloads that Missouri defenders carry is the schedule of attorney Craig Lowe, counsel for Plaintiff Dorian Samuels. In the period from September 5, 2017, to September 7, 2017, Mr. Lowe had 23 hearings scheduled for 21 clients. [Data gathered from Case Net.] Four hearings were set for Carthage and the rest for Joplin. Four of the hearings were for pre-trial conferences.

141. It is about a 25- minute drive each way from Mr. Lowe's office in Carthage to the courthouse in Joplin.



142. The American Council of Chief Defenders (ACCD) Statement on Caseloads and Workloads "recommends that public defender and assigned counsel caseloads not exceed the [National Advisory Commission on Criminal Justice Standards and Goals ("NAC")] recommended levels of 150 felonies, 400 non-traffic misdemeanors, 200 juvenile court cases, 200 Mental Health Act cases, or 25 non-capital appeals per attorney per year." If a public defender or assigned counsel is carrying a "mixed caseload," including cases from more than one category of cases, "these standards should be applied proportionally. (For example, under the NAC standards a lawyer who has 75 felony cases should not be assigned more than 100 juvenile cases and ought to receive no additional assignments.)" Id.

143. "These caseload limits reflect the maximum caseloads for full-time defense attorneys, practicing with adequate support staff, who are providing representation in cases of average complexity in each case type specified." ACCD Resolution, available at http://www.oregon.gov/OPDS/docs/CBS/ACCD%20Caseloads%20Report%20Final.pdf. The maximum number of cases must be reduced when the lawyers have inadequate resources and when they have other obligations in addition to caseload representation, such as supervision or appearing at court calendars representing groups of clients. In addition, caseload numbers should be reduced when there is significant travel time required for the lawyers.

144. The ACCD strongly recommends development of local standards informed by careful case weighting, as was done in the RubinBrown study:

> The ACCD recommends that defenders, contract and assigned counsel, and bar association leaders in each state review local practice conditions and consider developing standards that adjust attorney caseloads when the types and nature of the cases handled warrant it. The increased complexity of practice in many areas will require lower caseload ceilings. The ACCD recommends that each jurisdiction develop caseload standards for practice areas that have expanded or emerged since 1973 and for ones that develop because of new legislation. Case weighting studies must be implemented in a manner which is consistent with accepted performance standards and not simply institutionalize existing substandard practices.

ACCD Statement, supra.

145. The ABA 10 Principles of a Public Defense Delivery System, Principle 5 states:

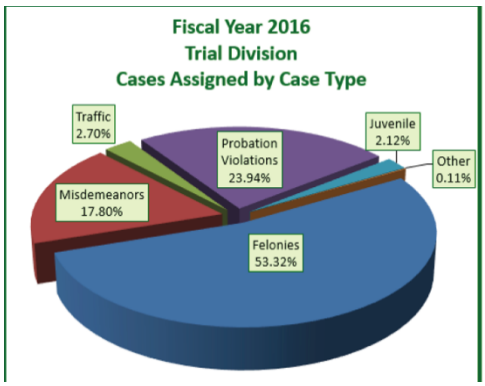
> Defense counsel's workload is controlled to permit the rendering of quality representation. Counsel's workload, including appointed and other work, should never be so large as to interfere with the rendering of quality representation or lead to the breach of ethical obligations, and counsel is obligated to decline appointments above such levels. National caseload standards should in no event be exceeded, but the concept of workload (i.e., caseload adjusted by factors such as case complexity, support services, and an attorney's nonrepresentational duties) is a more accurate measurement.

(emphasis added and footnotes omitted).

146. There is the potential for a conflict of interest when a public defender with an excessive caseload decides to accept additional cases because the lawyer will not have time to provide effective representation to all of the clients.

147. MSPD opened 80,755 new cases in FY 2016 with 349.5 attorneys. They needed 332.9 new attorneys to meet the Rubin Brown/ABA standard. Fiscal Year 2018 Draft Budget Request at 15,25.

148. More than half, 53.32 per cent, of the MSPD cases are felonies. FY 2016 Report at 5. The attorneys averaged 231 cases each. Appellate and post-conviction attorneys handled far fewer cases. 53.32 per cent of 231 is 123 felonies. That number of felonies is 82 per cent of a full caseload using the American Council of Chief Defenders recommended maximum caseload. And 123 felonies is far above what the ABA RubinBrown study concluded should be a maximum caseload. An attorney who had 123 felonies and then a mixture of misdemeanor, juvenile, and probation violations cases would have far too many cases.

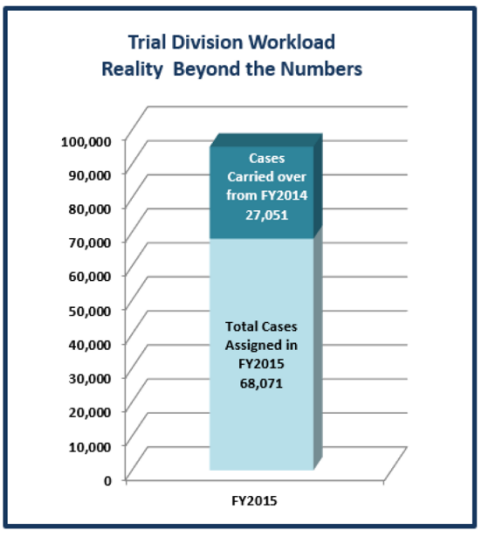


149. The ABA RubinBrown study concluded that A/B felonies require an average of 47.6 attorney hours per case, and C/D felonies 25 hours per case. The Missouri Project, at 21. Even if an attorney had only 123 C/D felonies, that workload would require 3,075 hours per year, at least 50 per cent more than a workable maximum. A lawyer who has a significant number of A/B felonies and has to travel considerable distances would have an even more crushing workload and be even less able to provide effective representation to his/her clients.

48. As outlined below, in my opinion defenders should not "bill" more than 1800 hours a year.

150. According to a recent article in the Columbia Tribune, the Boone County defenders "regularly juggle 100 or more cases at once". Alan Burdziak, "Barrett takes creative approach to public defender system", Columbia Daily Tribune, June 26,2017, available at http://www.columbiatribune.com/news/20170626/barrett-takes-creative-approach-to-public-defender-system.

151. In the 2015 Fiscal Year Report (at 24 and 5), MSPD pointed out that their lawyers carry over significant numbers of cases into the following year. They included these tables:



Trial Division
of Offices	33
Cases Carried Forward into Fiscal Year 2015	27,051
of Assigned Cases	68,071
of AΣ orney FTE	313.00

152. The trial division attorneys had an average pending caseload of 86.4 at the beginning of the fiscal year and they received an average of 217 new cases. If 52% of those new cases were felonies, that would be an average of 113 new felonies per lawyer, which is 75 % of a full caseload using the ACCD number, leaving only 25% of their time for the remaining 104 misdemeanor and juvenile cases. (In FY 2016, 53.32 per cent of the cases were felonies. FY 2016 Report at 4.)

153. Using the Missouri Project numbers, which concluded that a lawyer needs 25 hours to do a C/D felony, 113 felonies would require at least 2825 hours. In FY 2015, there were 253 homicide cases, 6362 A/B felonies and 28,345 C/D felonies. [FY 2015 Report at 23.] If a lawyer had one murder case (requiring 106 hours), 10 A/B felonies (requiring 476 hours), and 102 C/D felonies (requiring 2550 hours), the yearly requirement would be 3132 hours before even starting the misdemeanor and juvenile and probation violation cases on that workload of 217 new cases. This is an unworkable caseload. More experienced lawyers carrying a heavier mix of homicide and A/B felonies would be under an even more crushing workload.

154. In FY 2016, the office had even more cases carried over and more new cases assigned than in FY 2015. FY 2016 Report at 5. The trial division lawyers had an average of 101 pending cases at the beginning of the fiscal year, and received an average of 243 new cases.

Trial Division
of Offices	33
Cases Carried Forward into Fiscal Year 2016	31,738
of Assigned Cases	76,150
of Attorney FTE	313.00

155. District 22 Defender Mary Fox, City of St. Louis, discussed the crushing caseload her lawyers carry.

> On average, public defenders in District 22 handle between 80-90 cases per attorney at any given time. While this may be fewer than attorneys in some other districts across the state, almost three-fourths of the cases on the District 22 defenders' dockets are felonies, many of which must be prepared for trial because the prosecutor's office does not provide recommendations for resolution on such cases. This is consistent with the recent trend in District 22 on the whole, where we currently have approximately 2,200 open cases, of which roughly 1,600 are pending adult felonies, 50 are pending juvenile felonies, and 300 are pending felony probation violations. And of those nearly 2,000 felonies, approximately 60 are homicides and an additional roughly 400 are serious (A/B) felonies.

Affidavit of Mary Fox ¶ 8, September 29, 2016.

156. Ms. Fox noted that she has a high turnover of lawyers in her office because of the large caseload:

> The District 22 caseload also increased by 28% since 2015, without a corresponding increase in the number of public defenders hired to handle such cases. In 2015 and 2016, twelve attorneys resigned from the District 22 office. Most of those attorneys identified the personal stress caused by the large caseload as a reason for leaving MSPD.

Id. at ¶ 9.

157. A turnover of 12 lawyers out of 29 practicing staff attorneys in two years, which is a 20.5% annual turnover rate, can be crippling to an office, particularly one that has primarily felony cases and 60 open homicides at one time.

158. Ms. Fox described the impact of this turnover that exacerbates the workload problem:

> The vast majority of my attorneys are recent law school graduates or lawyers with very little previous criminal defense experience, who require ongoing and robust training—training which often cannot be provided in a timely fashion, given our lack of adequate resources.

Id. at ¶ 10.

159. Ms. Fox has considered declining conflict cases in her five conflict counties because of the large caseload.

> The challenge of handling the number of cases opened in District 22 has caused me to consider denying applicants for services in > misdemeanor cases, even where the defendants are in custody. I have also considered refusing incoming conflict cases because of the need to assign a dedicated attorney to the conflict counties who are then unable to assist in handling the St. Louis City cases.

Id. at ¶ 14

160. District 16 Team Leader Devon Pasley has seven attorneys under her supervision who each carry approximately 90 trial cases at any given time. "This does not include probation violation or appellate cases, which would add anywhere from 15-70 cases to each attorney's caseload count." She added, "Attorneys often meet clients with probation violations for the first time in court and are required to be prepared to resolve it in a short time frame." Affidavit of Devon Pasley, February 7, 2017.

161. District 19 Assistant Public Defender Walter Stokely stated:

> To put it simply, I have more cases than I can deal with. I handle both misdemeanors and serious and complex felonies, such as sexual assaults, in which my clients face the possibility of serving significant time in prison if convicted. I often handle these cases concurrently even though I graduated from law school just four years ago.

Affidavit of Walter Stokely ¶ 4, October 5, 2016.

162. Mr. Stokely added: "I am in court nearly every day, often for extended periods of time, and sometimes all day. This has made it very difficult to research, investigate, and prepare my clients' cases." Id. at ¶ 5.

163. Former Kansas City defender Joshua Peter estimated that in 11 years as a defender, he handled more than 8000 cases. Affidavit of Joshua Peter ¶ 2, December 21, 2016.

164. Assistant Defender Ruth Russell, who on the date for which MSPD reported open cases for attorneys had 156 open cases, wrote: "I have been a public defender for almost seven years. I am starting to burn out. I feel like I'm sinking. One of the other attorneys in my office was recently brought to the brink of tears because of the enormous caseload." Affidavit of Ruth Russell ¶ 2, October 27, 2016.

165. On a single date in 2016, some MSPD attorneys had more than 200 open cases, including the following:

7	Bates Nicholas	337
7	Hustead Michael	250
16	McGinnis Patricia	361
17	[illegible]	[illegible]
17	Fry Angela Weatherford	265
17	[illegible]	[illegible]
17	Napier Jr. Norman Craig	209
17	Wasson Alice	244

22	Mahaffey Matthew	252
29	Hatcher John	209
31	Chastain Charlton	221
31	Coulter Daniel	200
31	Egan James	284
31	Markin Shawn	300
31	Sawyer Christina L	405
31	Smith David B.	304
36	Cartwright Adam	239

37	Turner Bethany	217

Spreadsheet attached to July 25, 2016, Letter to Mr. Williamson from Ms. Shipma.

166. The average open caseload of the 351 attorneys was 91.93. Id. This is approximately double what a workable caseload would be.

167. A lawyer with 200 open cases who works 40 hours a week on cases every week for a month would have less than one hour per client each month. A lawyer with 300 open cases who works 40 hours a week every week would have about 40 minutes per client per month. With numbers like that, it is inevitable that lawyers go months at a time without meeting with their clients and that they seek continuances because they are not prepared.

168. Defender Director Mr. Barrett was quoted in a news article as saying, "A lawyer can probably only handle 40, maybe 50 cases at any one time." He added, "Our lawyers have three times that amount, and people are taking pleas because they're sitting in local jail waiting for their lawyer to get to them." Matt Ford, "A 'Constitutional Crisis' in Missouri", The Atlantic (March 14, 2017), available at https://www.theatlantic.com/politics/archive/2017/03/missouri-public-defender-crisis/519444/

169. With their excessive caseloads, the Missouri defenders are not able to comply with The MSPD Guidelines for Representation, Trial, Section 10-10-20-60, regarding consultation with clients, which state in part:

> (d) A Public Defender should make every effort to arrange for prompt and timely consultation with the client in an appropriate and private setting. Such consultation should occur within a week after representation of the client is undertaken, and must occur prior to the conduct of any preliminary hearing in the case. The Public Defender should maintain frequent contact with the client and keep the client apprised concerning developments in the case. At a minimum, the Public Defender must have contact with the client once per month during the pendency of the representation.

170. With 91.93 open cases, even if a defender could productively work on cases 160 hours per month every month, which in my opinion is more "billable" hours than attorneys should sustain, the defender would have only 1.74 hours per month per client. If the defender were to meet the requirement of the Guidelines and meet each client once per month, even if the meeting were only half an hour including travel and waiting time, that would leave only 1.24 hour per client to go to court, meet with prosecutors, research and write motions, prepare for hearings, consult with investigators and expert witnesses and supervisors, and otherwise prepare for cases. For the attorneys who had more than 200 open cases, they would have .8 hour available per client, and if they were to see their clients every month even for only half an hour per client, that would leave them about 20 minutes per client for all the rest of their work that month. And if the lawyers took any vacation or sick time or did not work on a holiday that month, they would have even less time.

171. It is no wonder that District 31 clients told an HBO VICE reporter that they had talked to him more than they had talked to their lawyers in a year.

HBO VICE, "Last Line of Defense", June 30, 2017, available at http://www.hbo.com/vice/episodes/05/68-68-last-line-of-defense-and-el-rostro/index.html.

172. The District 31 office did a performance review of their assistant PD IV attorneys in March 2017. In one review of a veteran attorney, the reviewer found "gaps of 3 months, 3 months, 5 months, 6 months, 6 months, 8 months, and even 13 months between qualifying contacts" with clients. The reviewer told the attorney:

> … given the huge caseloads, we understood that every 30 days may not be attainable. I asked him what he felt with his experience was attainable, and he replied that every 60 days could likely be done. I told him I agreed with that and asked him to devise a method to ensure he was seeing his clients at the jail, and contacting those in DOC, every 60 days regardless of whether there had been new developments in the case. He agreed…. For the most part, it appears that he is either visiting with clients within 7 days of receiving the file or, at the very least, visiting with them prior to the first court date. D said he does try hard to make sure > those initial contacts are done right away not just because of our guideline but also because it helps set a positive tone for the future attorney/client relationship.

Performance Review PD00292 3/2/2017.

173. This performance review demonstrates the untenable situation faced by the District 31 defenders. A veteran attorney had cases in which he had not seen the clients for six months or longer. The supervisors have come to accept that meeting with clients in jail every 60 days is acceptable, even though their guidelines for representation require a meeting every 30 days. They recognize that an early meeting with a new client helps to set a positive tone for the relationship, but they are willing to accept that an early meeting is one within seven days or at least before the first court date. And it appears that there are numerous cases in which there is no activity for three to six months at a time, indicating that the lawyers have done no work on the cases as there are no new developments to discuss with the client, or if they have done work on the case, their clients have not been informed and are not actively participating in their own defense.

174. The HBO reporter interviewed a defender named Brian Delleville after watching him represent 25 clients in about two hours. He asked Mr. Delleville if he had enough time. Mr. Delleville paused and sighed and answered,

> No. In a perfect world it would be best, you know, if I had enough time to meet with each of them well in advance of this hearing rather than those who are out of custody - a lot of times this [court proceeding] is their appointment. Unfortunately you almost have to pick and choose some of the cases you spend the most amount of time on. I'd love to be able to do that on every single case. I don't want to be somebody that's just standing next to somebody."

Id.

175. In his office, Mr. Delleville showed the reporter his piles and drawers of files and said it was "about 200 or so" open cases.

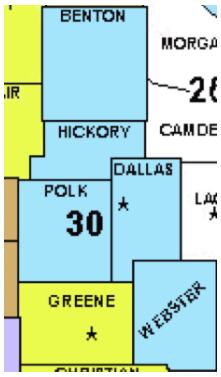
176. The HBO report showed a meeting at Mr. Delleville's defender office led by lead public defender Rod Hackathorn. Mr. Hackathorn told his staff that "everybody was somewhere between 400 to 600 per cent of capacity." Id.

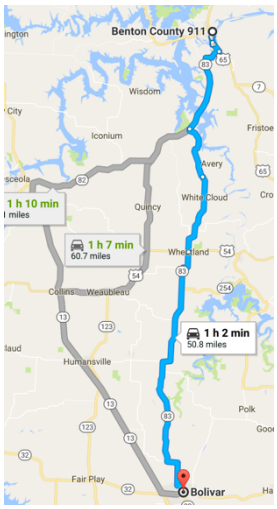
177. On the one date in 2016 for which MSPD provided open caseload information, there were four attorneys in District 31 with more than 200 open cases and another four with open caseloads between 100 and 200.

178. Anna Moench was a defender in District 31 until she resigned in June 2016. She resigned "due mostly to my unmanageable caseload. I was no longer able to provide my clients the kind of representation they deserved. I did not believe I could ethically continue to represent indigent defendants under those circumstances." Affidavit of Anna Moench ¶ 18, December 21, 2016.

179. Ms. Moench stated that her office had a policy of meeting in-custody clients within seven days of being appointed and out-of-custody clients within 30 days. She wrote, "I tried my best to adhere to this policy, but I frequently could not." Id. at ¶ 9.

180. Ms. Moench originally worked in the District 30 office. That office covers five counties, as indicated below. The District office in Bolivar is about a one hour drive from the Benton County courthouse, as shown below.





181. Ms. Moench stated that in Bolivar she had an open caseload of between 80 and 100 clients at a time, and that it was difficult to manage because it was spread over multiple counties and it was mostly felony cases. Id. at ¶ 4.

182. Ms. Moench said that in the Springfield office in District 31, she had a combination of felonies, misdemeanors, and probation violations and had between 150-200 cases at any given time. Id. at ¶ 6.

183. She stated that in Springfield, she spent most of her time "either in court or visiting clients in jail every day." She also "spent a fair amount of time on administrative tasks. This left little time, if any, for legal research and motion practice." Id. at 7.

184. Sarah Johnson, director of juvenile defense and policy for the public defender system, testified:

> Q. Have you handled cases of juveniles while you feel like your case load was too high for you to really manage effectively?
> A. Yes.

She added:

> I think that time is a big issue. So doing all of the detention hearings and ensuring that each client receives the effective representation, I think that sometimes the case loads are too high to be doing every single thing that I would like to do.

And she added about the cases that involve possibly sending children to adult court:

> Q. You don't feel like you met your ethical obligations to your clients with regard to certification procedures?
> A. Not in every case, no.

Sarah Johnson Deposition, October 6, 2017, at 119,134,170.

185. Because the Missouri public defense lawyers do not have adequate support staff, and some of them have long distances to travel between courts and between their offices and the jails incarcerating their clients, their caseload numbers should be lower than the recommended limits. Nevertheless, many districts have caseloads more than double the recommended limits.

186. In a 2015 Texas report, the researchers concluded that, "for the delivery of reasonably effective representation attorneys should carry an annual full-time equivalent caseload of no more than" the numbers in the chart below:

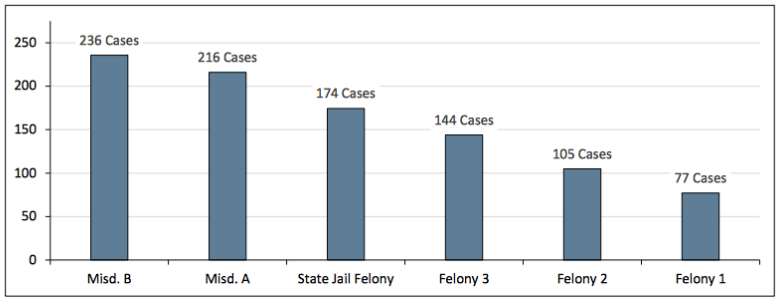
(Based on Delphi Time Estimates and FY 2014 Trial Rates)



Texas A&M University, Public Policy Research Institute, Guidelines for Indigent Defense Caseloads,(2015) at 34, available at http://tidc.texas.gov/media/31722/150114_WCL-Final_Reduced-file-size.pdf.

XI. EFFECTIVE ADVOCACY WITH REASONABLE CASELOADS CAN MAKE A DIFFERENCE AND CASELOADS CAN BE LIMITED

187. Effective advocacy by lawyers with reasonable caseloads can make a difference. Washington State examples provide insight. For example, in 2011, in Seattle Municipal Court, where caseloads are limited by local law to 380 per lawyer per year, 24.7 percent of charges resulted in guilty findings, whereas in Mount Vernon in the same state, where the lawyer caseloads were in the range of 2,000 per lawyer per year, 50.3 percent resulted in guilty findings.

188. Courts in other states have been successful in reducing public defender caseloads when they were excessive. For example, a court rule in Washington State limits defender caseloads to 400 misdemeanor cases or 150 felony cases per lawyer per year, which is consistent with NAC standards. CrR 3.1 STANDARDS FOR INDIGENT DEFENSE Standard 3.3 provides in part that "[c]aseload limits reflect the maximum caseloads for fully supported full-time defense attorneys for cases of average complexity and effort in each case type specified. Caseload limits assume a reasonably even distribution of cases throughout the year."

189. Standard 3.3 specifically addresses the need to reduce caseloads when cases are more demanding:

> The increased complexity of practice in many areas will require lower caseload limits. The maximum caseload limit should be adjusted downward when the mix of case assignments is weighted toward offenses or case types that demand more investigation, legal research and writing, use of experts, use of social workers, or other expenditures of time and resources.

https://www.courts.wa.gov/court_rules/?fa=court_rules.list&group=sup&set=CrR

190. The New York Office of Indigent Legal Services has recognized the critical importance of limiting caseloads. In a recent statement on its web site relating to an upcoming request for proposals for funding, it wrote:

> Excessive caseloads impair the quality of legal representation that indigent legal service lawyers can provide. Indeed, it is widely and properly recognized that maintaining reasonable public defender and assigned counsel caseloads is the sine qua non of effective representation. See Justice Denied: America's Continuing Neglect of Our Constitutional Right to Counsel (The Constitution Project, 2009) at 192, Recommendation 6; and Securing Reasonable Caseloads: Ethics and Law in Public Defense (American Bar Association, 2011) at 200 ("caseload limits . . . are the very bedrock of quality control").
>
> No lawyer, however well qualified, can provide the effective assistance of counsel that our Constitution requires if he or she is saddled with an excessive caseload.

NYS Office of Indigent Legal Services, Upstate Quality Improvement and Caseload Production, https://www.ils.ny.gov/content/upstate-quality-improvement-and-caseload-reduction.

191. In New York State, the Administrative Rules of the Unified Court System & Uniform Rules of the Trial Courts, Rules of the Chief Administrative Judge have the same maximum caseload numbers as Washington and the ACCD, and they became binding in New York effective April 1, 2014:

> 127.7 Workload of Attorneys and Law Offices Providing Representation to Indigent Clients in Criminal Matters in New York City

> (a) The number of matters assigned in a calendar year to an attorney appointed to represent County Law in New York City shall not exceed 150 felony cases; or 400 misdemeanor cases; or a proportionate combination of felony and misdemeanor cases (at a ratio of 1:2.66). Where staff attorneys employed by an indigent defense organization within the City of New York are appointed to represent clients in criminal matters pursuant to Article 18-B of the County Law, these limits shall apply as an average per staff attorney within the organization, so that the organization may assign individual staff attorneys cases in excess of the limits to promote the effective representation of clients.
>
> (b) The Chief Administrator of the Courts shall annually, at the time of the preparation and submission of the judiciary budget, review the workload of such organizations and attorneys, and shall take action to promote compliance with this rule. In undertaking such review, the Chief Administrator may consider: (1) differences among categories of cases that comprise the workload of the defense organization; (2) the level of activity required at different phases of the proceeding; (3) local court practice, including the duration of a case; and (4) any other factor the Chief Administrator deems relevant.
>
> (c) These workload indigent clients in criminal matters pursuant to Article 18-B of the standards shall constitute non-binding guidelines between April 1, 2010 and March 31, 2014, and shall be binding effective April 1, 2014.

https://www.nycourts.gov/rules/chiefadmin/127.shtml

192. There is a maximum number of human beings that a lawyer can meet and effectively represent in a year. In my opinion, criminal defense lawyers should not exceed 1,800 hours per year directly representing clients, and a more realistic number is 1,650 hours per year. When a lawyer has 231 cases per year, even at 1800 hours, the lawyer has an average of 7.79 hours available for the work for each client. At a more reasonable year of 1,650 hours, the lawyer with 231 cases has only 7.14 hours per client. This is far below the time required as found by the Missouri Project study.

193. A study for the Massachusetts Committee for Public Counsel Services determined that an appropriate number of hours to spend directly representing clients per year is 1,662 hours:

Case Available Hours
Description	Hours	Days	Total
Non-weekend days	8	260	2080
Holidays	8	11	88
Training	8	3	24
Annual Conference	8	1	8
Vacation (less than 5 yrs)	8	15	120
Personal	8	5	40
Sick (estimate)	8	5	40
Non case duties	2	49	98
total non case time			418
Available case time			1662

Center for Court Innovation, The Committee for Public Counsel Services Answering Gideon's Call Project (2012-DB-BX-0010) Attorney Workload Assessment, October 2014, at https://www.publiccounsel.net/cfo/wp-content/uploads/sites/8/2014/12/Attorney-Workload-Assessment.pdf

194. The Washington Defender Association standards recommend 1,650 hours directly representing clients per year. See Washington Defender Association, Standards for Public Defense Services, Standard Three, Commentary. The Office of Management and Budget ("OMB") has advised agencies that of the 2,088 hours attributable on an annual basis to a federal employee, each employee works only 1,744 hours per year, which reflects hours worked after the average amount of annual, sick, holiday, and administrative leave used. Performance of Commercial Activities, OMB Cir. No. A-76 (Revised) (Aug. 1983), at p. IV-8.

195. MSPD itself has calculated that an attorney has 1752 available hours per year to work on client cases. Defender Caseload Standards (2009) at 5.

196. The National Association for Law Placement ("NALP") reported in its May 2006 document, Billable Hours Requirements at Law Firms, NALP Bulletin that "[a]lthough billable hour requirements ranged from 1,400 to 2,400 hours per year in 2004, most offices reporting a minimum require either 1,800 or 1,900 hours (24 percent and 21 percent of offices, respectively)." A more recent report stated: "reporting of billable hours requirements in the 2013-2014 Directory of Legal Employers reveals an average requirement of 1,884 hours per year overall. . . ." NALP Bulletin, May 2014, at http://www.nalp.org/0514research. This average is brought higher by the 1,918 hours average of firms with more than 700 lawyers. The average for firms of 100 or fewer lawyers was 1,809 hours.

197. Taking reasonable standards for total hours of representation into account, Missouri defenders cannot, in my opinion, effectively represent their clients while carrying the caseloads currently imposed upon them.

XII. MSPD ROUTINELY PRACTICES TRIAGE TO THE DETRIMENT OF ITS CLIENTS

198. Ms. Moench's experience demonstrates the problems caused by an excessive caseload. She wrote:

> My caseload in Springfield was too much to bear. I was forced to do the bare minimum on many of my clients' cases. I would triage cases by placing misdemeanor and non-felony cases at the bottom of my priority list, regardless of the strength or weakness of the state's evidence in those cases, or the consequences of a misdemeanor conviction for my clients. I simply did not have the time or resources to give each of my cases the attention they deserved.

Moench Affidavit ¶ 8.

199. Former District 15 assistant defender attorney Matthew Gass wrote:

> When I left the Public Defender's office, I had a caseload of 110-120 cases. Lafayette County handles approximately 500 Public Defender-cases each year. On average, I would be assigned over 40 new cases per month.
>
> Before I resigned, I was the only MSPD attorney covering all of Lafayette County. Historically, two attorneys had always served Lafayette County. As of the date of my resignation, I had been the only public defender in the county for approximately seven months.

Affidavit of Matthew Gass ¶ 7-8, October 31, 2016.

200. Mr. Gass also stated:

> I did not have sufficient time to thoroughly review each client's discovery or investigate all of the issues in each case to my satisfaction. I could issue spot but did not have time to do the type of investigating each case and each client deserved. The situation was legal triage; almost without exception, my work was centered on dealing with the biggest crisis at the moment.

Id. at ¶ 16.

201. District 22 Defender Mary Fox also described triage in her office:

> Despite seemingly carrying a lighter workload than other offices across the state, the District 22 office is currently operating 165% above its caseload capacity. This means that we have been forced to triage our cases on a daily basis. Our attorneys are unable to spend an adequate amount of time consulting with clients, researching the relevant law, conducting factual investigation, reviewing discovery, engaging in motion practice, or otherwise litigating each of their cases so that they and their clients can make fully informed decisions as to how best to proceed.

Fox Affidavit ¶ 7.

202. Public Defender Devon Pasley, in the District 16 office, stated that during her time as a staff attorney, she handled misdemeanor and felony cases in juvenile and adult court, maintaining a caseload of approximately 90 cases at any given time. She said, "Because of my caseload, I often had to triage my cases rather than spend the necessary time investigating my cases, communicating with my clients, or otherwise preparing to challenge the state's case against my clients." Affidavit of Devon Pasley, February 7, 2017.

203. Assistant Defender Ruth Russell wrote: "This summer, I was scheduled for eight weeks of back-to-back jury trials. I remember thinking, "when am I going to have time to prep these jury trials? I'm going to have to triage." Nobody should have their cases triaged." Russell Affidavit ¶ 6.

204. District 16 Defender Ruth Petsch stated: "Although our attorneys are doing the best they can with the resources they have, we are unable to consistently provide constitutionally-sufficient representation to our clients." She added:

> The Jackson County office is currently 160% above its caseload capacity, which means we have become a "triage" office, like so many others across the state, and are forced to pick and choose which cases to prioritize and which to put on the back burner. It alsomeans that our attorneys are unable to spend an adequate amount of time researching the relevant law, conducting factual investigation, reviewing discovery, engaging in motion practice, or otherwise litigating each of their cases so that they and their clients can make fully informed decisions as to how best to proceed.

Affidavit of Ruth Petsch ¶ 6, October 3, 2016.

205. Ms. Petsch was quoted in a National Public Radio story about public defense in Missouri.

> MOXLEY: Ruth Petsch, a public defender in Kansas City, says the job can already be overwhelming.
> RUTH PETSCH: I think that's a real fear for people in my office. I didn't find that witness, or I didn't find that information. And I'm pushed to trial 'cause this is the date, and I don't - I'm not going to do the job I should do.

Elle Moxley, "Overwhelmed Mo. Public Defender Office Appoints Governor To Handle A Case", National Public Radio (August 4, 2016), available at http://www.npr.org/2016/08/04/488722448/overwhelmed-mo-public-defender-office-appoints-governor-to-handle-a-case.

206. The use of the word "triage" as applied to defender clients is jarring, and in my opinion, results from the recognition by the Defenders that their workloads are too high to provide adequate representation to indigent clients.

207. For example, the Florida Supreme Court identified the public defender's office's high caseload as resulting in a practice of "'triage' with the clients who are in custody or who face the most serious charges getting priority to the detriment of other clients." Public Defender v. State, 115 So. 3d 261, 274 (Fla. 2013) (footnotes omitted). The court called this "a damning indictment of the poor quality of trial representation that is being afforded indigent defendants by the Public Defender." Id.

208. "Triage" has connotations better suited to a battlefield or an emergency room. The dictionary definition of triage is:

> Noun
> 1. the process of sorting victims, as of a battle or disaster, to determine medical priority in order to increase the number of survivors.
> 2. the determination of priorities for action in an emergency.
> Adjective
> 3. of, pertaining to, or performing the task of triage: a triage officer.
> Verb (used with object)
> 4. to act on or in by triage: to triage a crisis.

Dictionary.com Unabridged, Based on the Random House Dictionary, 2013.

209. In my opinion, defenders should not liken their work to sorting victims in a disaster or an emergency room. A more appropriate medical analogy would be an internal medicine doctor greeting each patient individually and assessing their medical needs in a private, quiet room that inspires the patient's confidence in the doctor, rather than the fear that a person would have on a battlefield or surrounded by noise and chaos in an emergency room.

XIII. MSPD DOES NOT COMPLY WITH ABA GUIDELINES ON EXCESSIVE WORKLOADS

210. MSPD fails to follow the ABA Eight Guidelines of Public Defense Related to Excessive Workloads (2009), available at https://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/administrative/legal_aid_indigent_defendants/ls_sclaid_def_eight_guidelines_of_public_defense.authcheckdam.pdf.

211. Guideline 1 states: "The Public Defense Provider avoids excessive lawyer workloads and the adverse impact that such workloads have on providing quality legal representation to all clients." The Guideline then lists a series of tasks lawyers should provide. Because this list is useful to understanding the deficiencies of the MSPD and because it is similar to MSPD's own performance guidelines, I reproduce it here:

> In determining whether these objectives are being achieved, the Provider considers whether the performance obligations of lawyers who represent indigent clients are being fulfilled, such as:

- Whether sufficient time is devoted to interviewing and counseling clients;
- Whether prompt interviews are conducted of detained clients and of those who are released from custody;
- Whether pretrial release of incarcerated clients is sought;
- Whether representation is continuously provided by the same lawyer from initial court appearance through trial, sentencing, or dismissal;
- Whether necessary investigations are conducted;
- Whether formal and informal discovery from the prosecution is pursued;
- Whether sufficient legal research is undertaken;
- Whether sufficient preparations are made for pretrial hearings and trials; and
- Whether sufficient preparations are made for hearings at which clients are sentenced.

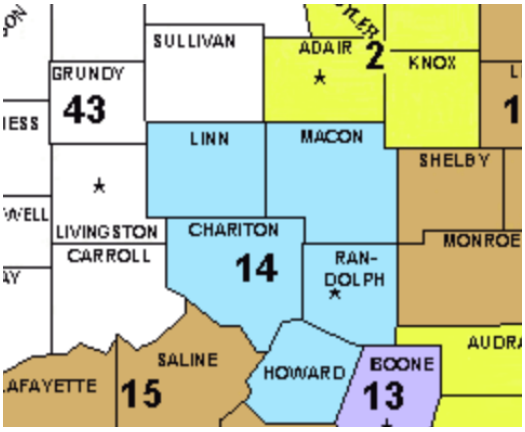
212. Based on the information I have reviewed, MSPD lawyers routinely do not devote enough time to interviewing and counseling clients; they routinely do not promptly interview their clients; they often do not conduct necessary investigations; they often do not pursue discovery; they often do not prepare sufficiently for hearings and trials; they often do not do sufficient legal research; and they often do not prepare adequately for hearings.

XIV. GEOGRAPHICAL CHALLENGES UNDERCUT DEFENDERS' ABILITY TO PROVIDE EFFECTIVE REPRESENTATION

213. An example of the problems caused when one district office has to provide representation in multiple counties is the challenge facing District 14. According to the MSPD FY 2016 Report (at 40), the office opened 1705 cases in FY 2016 in those five counties.

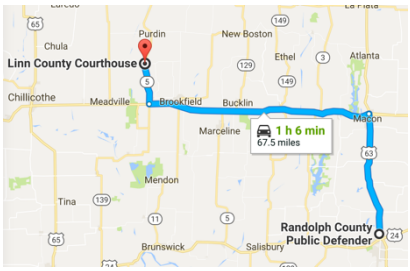
214. As of April 2016, MPDC reported having only five attorneys in District 14. They reported one investigator and two other support staff. It is my understanding that in the past year they have had as many as seven attorneys in that District, including the chief defender.

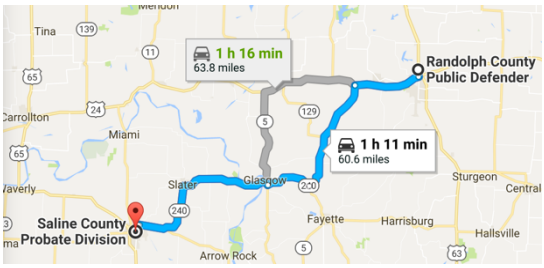
215. I am placing below a portion of the MPDC map of the districts, showing District 14's five counties. The map also shows some of the adjacent counties in which the Defender had conflict cases.



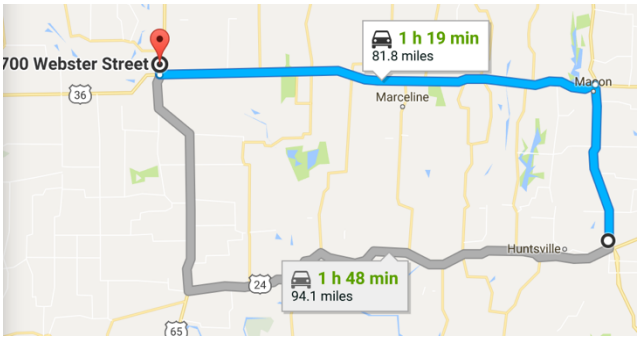
Map available at http://www.publicdefender.mo.gov/about/map_of_districts.htm (last visited August 23, 2017).

The District's office is in Moberly, Missouri. The Linn County courthouse is in Linneus, which is 67.5 miles from the Defender office. It is more than 60 miles to the Saline County court in a different direction.





216. The District 14 office also handles conflict cases in Livingston, Shelby, and Adair Counties. The Livingston County Court is more than an hour drive from the Defender office.



217. In the nine counties covered in some way by District 14, MPDC for FY 2016 reported 51 cases being sent to the private bar in conflict cases. FY 2016 Report at 67. Keeping track of those cases and the quality of the representation is an extra burden for the chief Defender who already has too much to do.

218. Former Defender Matthew Gass reported that "District 15 had been understaffed for some time due to a hiring freeze because of budget issues. Our office was supposed to have seven attorneys, but during the summer of 2016, we were working with just four attorneys to serve all four counties." Affidavit of Matthew Gass October 31 ¶ 10, 2016. He wrote: "Because the area where I worked was in rural Missouri, I spent a great deal of my time traveling to court, to three separate county jail facilities to see clients, and to my office in Sedalia." Id.

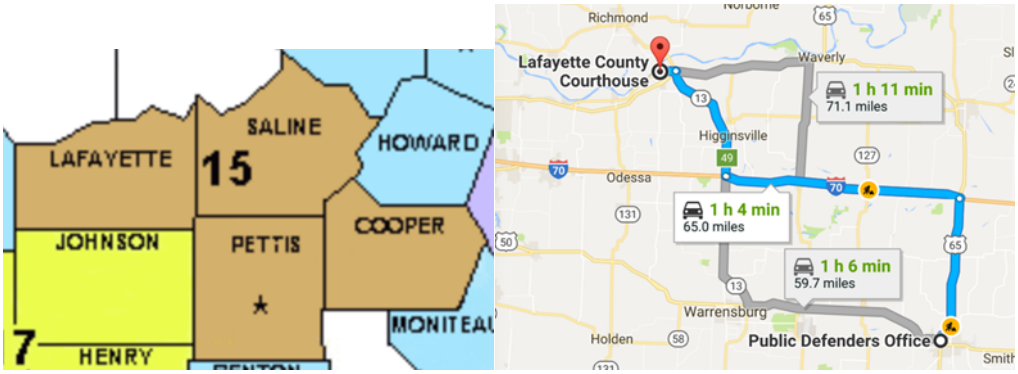
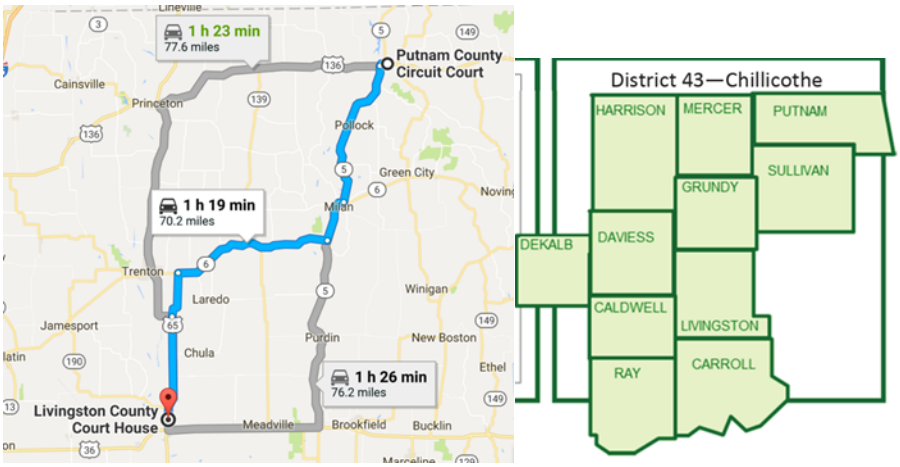
219. I am including here a map of District 15 and a map showing the driving time of more than one hour each way from the Defender Office to the court in Lafayette County.



220. District 43 has eleven counties. I am including here a map from the FY 2016 Report at p. 39. In FY 2016 the office opened 2,198 cases. In April 2016, the office listed nine attorneys, one investigator, and four other support personnel on staff. The District office is in Chillicothe, in Livingston County. Depending on the route, it is about 70 miles and about a one hour, 20 minutes' drive one-way between the courthouses in Livingston and Putnam Counties. To have one investigator to cover 2,198 cases in 11 counties over that kind of distance means that only a tiny fraction of the cases can be investigated effectively.



221. The post-conviction attorneys also are seriously affected by the need to travel. Mr. Mermelstein testified:

> So our Columbia attorneys have to drive literally from Iowa -- the Iowa border to the Arkansas border and like over to the Oklahoma border and over to the Illinois border. Our St. Louis office covers cases mostly from St. Louis south all the way to, again, Arkansas, so they cover all the Mississippi River counties kind of from St. Louis to Arkansas.

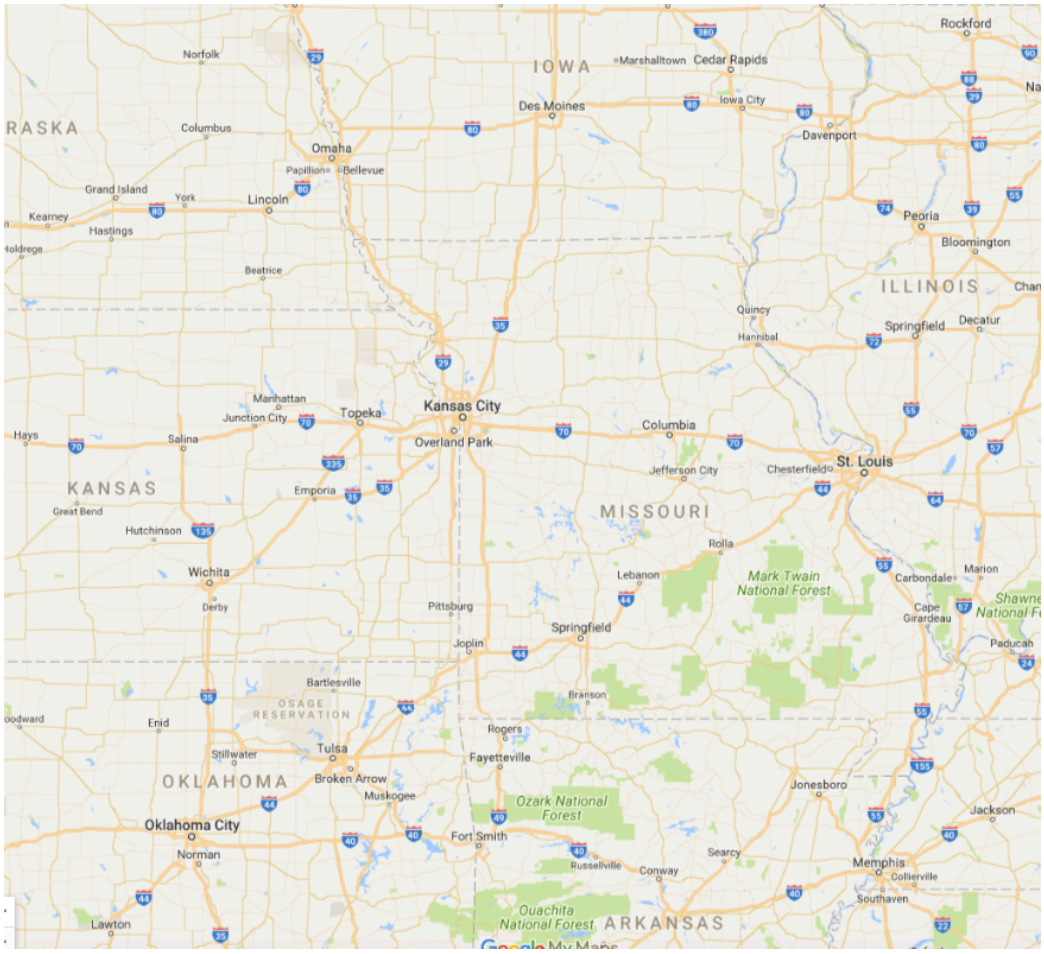
And our Kansas City office covers the counties from Iowa sort of down to a little bit south of Kansas City. So they travel that western Missouri border quite a bit. There's lots of driving if you're an appellate post-conviction attorney.

Mermelstein Deposition at 43.

For reference, I am placing here a portion of a Google map of the region.



XV. MSPD'S CONFLICTS POLICY PRESENTS MULTIPLE PROBLEMS

222. The Missouri Supreme Court recently reaffirmed that "the right to unconflicted counsel is an essential aspect of the Sixth Amendment right to counsel…." DePriest v. State, 510 S.W.3d 331, 339 (Mo. 2017). The Court, in vacating a denial of motions for post-conviction relief for a brother and sister who had been represented by the same lawyer at their guilty pleas, wrote:

> A potential conflict of interest nearly always exists when one counsel represents two or more criminal defendants facing charges arising out of the same facts and circumstances. … " '[A]n actual, relevant conflict of interests [arises] if, during the course of the [concurrent] representation, the defendants' interests do diverge with respect to a material factual or legal issue or to a course of action.' "

Id. at 338(citation omitted).

223. MSPD Director Barrett has explained that his office was assigning the first conflict of interest in a case to other district defenders and additional ones to private counsel. He recognizes that this is not a cost-effective approach > because it pulls lawyers out of their primary jurisdictions and requires them to drive significant distances to appear in court, conduct investigations, witness interviews and depositions, visit their clients in jail, all in a distant county. It is not uncommon for each trip to take a day of the attorney's time to deal with one or two cases. Instead, economies of scale suggest it is more cost-effective and efficient to contract all trial level conflict cases to local attorneys in the private bar and allow the defender offices to concentrate on effectively representing the cases that arise within the counties they are designated to serve.

FY 2018 Draft Budget Request at 8.

224. In fiscal year 2016, MSPD attorneys had to handle more than 7000 conflict cases, including 24 first degree murder cases, in other districts than their own. Id. at 10.

225. As of July 1, 2017, MSPD is no longer assigning first level conflict cases to their staff attorneys, but sending them to conflict panel counsel. Deposition of Joel Elmer, at 9. Because this is a new policy, I will outline below problems caused by the former policy, as well as problems that remain with how the conflict panel is administered.

226. There are issues with the way MSPD administers the conflict panel. There is no substantive assessment of the ability of the lawyers who apply for the panel and no tracking of how many cases they are doing in their private practice. Deposition of Joel Elmer, at 11,15.

227. The conflict panel fee schedule has not been adjusted in years, it is a fixed fee, and requests for extraordinary compensation are rare and often denied. Deposition of Joel Elmer, at 16.

Description	Contract Guideline
Murder 1st Degree	$10,000
Sexual Predator Trial	$8,000
Other Homicide	$6,000
AB Felony Drug	$750
AB Felony Other	$1,500
AB Felony Sex	$2,000
CD Felony Drug	$750
CD Felony Other	$750
CD Felony Sex	$1,500
Misdemeanor	$375
Juvenile - Non Violent	$500
Juvenile - Violent	$750
Probation Violation	$375
PCR Rule 24.035 Motion	$500
PCR Rule 24.035 Evidentiary Hearing	$250
PCR Rule 24.035 Appeal	$500
PCR Rule 29.15 Motion	$1,000
PCR Rule 29.15 Evidentiary Hearing	$500
PCR Rule 29.15 Appeal	$1,875
Direct Appeal	$3,750

228. The compensation rates are "ridiculously low" according to the attorneys who have commented about them. Id. at 24.

229. This is the fee schedule, produced in Elmer Deposition, Exhibit 7.

230. Director Barrett described one of the problems with a flat fee compensation plan: "there's con -- some consensus around the idea that when you give an attorney a flat amount regardless of the amount of work that they do, it will encourage them to do the least amount of work to receive those funds." Barrett Deposition, at 120.

231. District 22 Defender Mary Fox reports that conflict cases have undercut her main office's representation.

> The fact that District 22 defenders are required to cover conflict cases in surrounding counties only makes the workload that much more unreasonable. It is especially problematic for our office since I have assigned four of my more senior attorneys to the conflict cases, given the complexity of such cases.

Fox Affidavit ¶ 13.

232. MPDC reported that for Boone County in District 13, it sent 324 conflict cases to private counsel. FY 2016 Report at 67. In April 2016 MPDC reported having 13 trial lawyers, one investigator, and five support staff in District 13. For FY 2016, MSPD reported Boone County as having opened 3093 cases. FY 2016 Report at 40. That would leave 2769 cases for the staff defender attorneys, an average of 214 per attorney.

233. Districts other than 13 would have benefited from sending more conflicts cases to the private bar.

234. In addition to the logistical challenges, there are other issues presented by the former MSPD approach to conflicts, that is, having neighboring districts take cases for their colleagues. One is that lawyers are transferred from one district to the other periodically. It is unclear what kind of "walls" are established to make sure that they have no involvement with cases from their previous district that may present conflicts of interest.

235. More systemically, Director Barrett oversees the entire MSPD, and theoretically could be in a position of consulting with lawyers or their supervisors about cases in which confidential information would need to be revealed to him. Such a situation could involve personnel issues concerning how a case is handled or even strategy in the case. Those issues may not be readily identified when the conflicts case is first assigned to the neighboring district.

XVI. THE STATUTORY PROVISION FOR SEEKING APPROVAL TO DECLINE CASES IS UNWORKABLE

236. This Court has explained what the Plaintiffs report happened after the Waters decision when defenders tried to limit their caseloads.

> …[P]ublic defenders who attempted to turn away cases faced resistance from prosecutors, judges, and legislators. In some circuits, cases that were turned away were assigned to non–MSPD attorneys with no criminal defense experience who were not compensated for their time.
>
> The then-head of MSPD was told that if local offices continued to turn away cases, the legislature would pass a bill to privatize the entire system.

Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *3.

237. Missouri's Legislature passed the following law after the Waters, supra, decision:

> 600.062. Acceptance of cases
>
> Notwithstanding the provisions of sections 600.017 and 600.042 to the contrary, neither the director nor the commission shall have the authority to limit the availability of a district office or any division director, district defender, deputy district defender, or assistant public defender to accept cases based on a determination that the office has exceeded a caseload standard. The director, commission, any division director, district defender, deputy district defender, or assistant public defender may not refuse to provide representation required under this chapter without prior approval from a court of competent jurisdiction.

238. District Defender Cardarella pointed out one reason why this statutory process is not workable:

> According to recent legislation here in Missouri, public defenders can go to a judge and request case relief based on reaching an ethical limit. However, since we do not know how many active cases our attorneys have, this form of relief has become an impractical remedy.

Cardarella Affidavit ¶ 11, December 1, 2016.

239. Former Kansas City Team Leader Joshua Peter stated:

> In my office, we did not have the option of refusing cases. While attorneys could complain about their caseloads and not get assigned new cases for a while, this was not a real solution. These cases would simply be assigned to another overworked attorney.
>
> Everyone's caseload in the office was simply too much to handle.

Peter Affidavit ¶ 14-15.

240. As this Court has pointed out, "Since the legislature's enactment of 600.602, no MSPD office has refused cases in any consistent or systematic way." Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *3.

241. Mr. Barrett described what happened when his office attempted to respond to the Waters decision by declining cases:

> And so the system acted in 2012 and started to not accept every case that came in the door. The response was political backlash. Efforts to blow up the system were made and so MSPD attorneys stood down, the risk to their licenses notwithstanding.

Letter to Boone County Bar Association, Boone County Bar Association Newsletter, October 2, 2017, Elmer Deposition, Exhibit 5, at 5

242. Mr. Barrett added: "That said, the lawyers in MSPD are boxed in – on the one hand, if we accept every case that comes in the door, OCDC and the Court have told us that our licenses are in jeopardy; however, if we do NOT accept every case, our jobs are in jeopardy." Id.

243. Mr. Barrett understood from conversations with his predecessor, Cat Kelly, that her "decision to reverse course and not refuse cases was tied to concern about privatizing the system." Barrett Deposition, at 68.

244. An elected prosecutor recently conveyed an implied threat to Mr. Barrett in a telephone conversation about defenders declining new cases: "Russ Oliver made comments related to privatization and good luck this legislative session." Id., at 69-70.

245. Because of his determination that privatization would not improve the provision of the right to counsel, Mr. Barrett said, "I endeavored to improve the -- the system incrementally through making -- trying to secure more funding and then reporting back to the legislature on how I spent that funding and making a case for the benefit to the State of Missouri." Id., at 72.

246. While he acknowledges that individual lawyers have an obligation to refuse to accept cases when their caseload is too high, Mr. Barrett testified: "I will say that in the aftermath of the -- the refusing to accept cases that turn into a threat of privatization, I'm not aware of any lawyer asserting that, that type of conflict until recently I should say." Id., at 75.

XVII. EFFECTS OF EXCESSIVE CASELOAD AND LACK OF RESOURCES

A. District 7, Site of Plaintiff Bowman's Case, Is Committing Malpractice Every Day

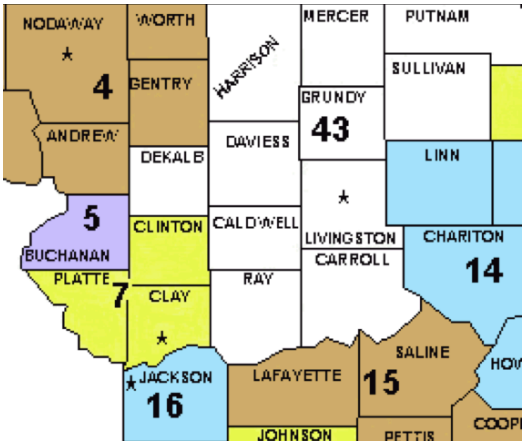
247. District 7 has excessive caseloads and had to represent clients in 12 counties.



District 7 includes three primary counties and at least until July 1, 2017, was covering conflicts in nine more, including Caldwell, Cass, Davies, DeKalb, Grundy, Harrison, Jackson, Lafayette, and Ray. Affidavit of Anthony Cardarella, December 1, 2016 ¶ 1.

248. District 7 Director Anthony Cardarella stated:

> Unfortunately, I do not believe that my office is providing quality representation to our indigent clients. In fact, I believe that, despite our best efforts, my office is committing malpractice every single day and has been for well over a decade.

Id. at ¶ 8

249. In December 2016, Mr. Cardarella had an active caseload of 224 cases, including two criminal dockets. Id. He also was responsible for supervising the entire office, which had 12 attorneys, two investigators, one legal assistant, and four clerks. Id. This is an impossible workload. As outlined below, a supervisor with ten or more attorneys should not carry a caseload.

250. In 2015, Mr. Cardarella was assigned 186 cases. Spreadsheet attached to July 25, 2016 Letter to Mr. Williamson from Ms. Shipma.

251. Mr. Cardarella said of his office, "Our attorneys are overworked and have excessively high caseloads." Cardarella affidavit at ¶ 9.

252. Mr. Cardarella stated: "Because of severe time constraints, our attorneys do not have enough time to write motions or to even inventory, catalogue, or review discovery in a professional and timely manner." Id. at ¶ 12.

253. He added:

> Since reviewing discovery in a timely manner is absolutely critical for intelligently approaching any case investigation, very few of our clients actually have their cases thoroughly investigated. In fact, our attorneys are rarely able to analyze their discovery early enough to make important investigative decisions, including which key witnesses to depose and whether or not an expert witness is necessary for the client's defense.

Id. at ¶ 13-14.

254. Because of time constraints, Mr. Cardarella stated, "crime scene visits are virtually non-existent in our office." Id. at ¶ 15.

255. Mr. Cardarella is counsel for the plaintiff Viola Bowman, who is charged with murder. Her case, which has been continued multiple times since her arrest in January 2015, was set for trial September 18, 2017. But on September 7, 2017, on an oral motion by the state, the court continued the matter until November 20, 2017, for a discovery hearing. On September 29, 2017, the court issued a certificate for attendance of an out-of-state witness to appear on November 20, 2017.

256. According to CaseNet, attorney Bates appeared for Mr. Cardarella at hearings on August 9, 2017, and August 17, 2017.

257. Ms. Bowman appeared at her arraignment, in custody, January 15, 2015, with no lawyer representing her. She requested a public defender. She had been in jail at that point for eight days.

258. Attorney Cathy Noble appeared for Ms. Bowman on January 22, 1015. Two other attorneys have appeared on the case in the intervening months.

259. Mr. Cardarella filed a notice of appearance and request for discovery for Ms. Bowman January 28, 2015.

260. As far as I can tell from CaseNet, the only motions Mr. Cardarella has filed for Ms. Bowman are for continuances and bond reduction.

261. On September 28, 2016, Mr. Cardarella moved for a continuance, citing his vast duties as Director and a health-related issue. He also stated:

> Undersigned counsel is presently still amidst efforts review the voluminous amount of discovery existing in this case as well as to continue to conduct relevant case investigation - - including the commencement of depositions of key members of law enforcement entrusted with the investigation of this case together with key lay witnesses - - in order to provide the effective assistance of counsel.

Defense Second Application for Continuance, September 28, 2016.

262. Mr. Cardarella had cited the same reasons for a continuance in his prior motion of March 2016:

> 6. Undersigned counsel is presently still amidst efforts review the voluminous amount of discovery existing in this case as well as to continue to conduct relevant case investigation - - including the commencement of depositions of key members of law enforcement entrusted with the investigation of this case together with key lay witnesses - - in order to provide the effective assistance of counsel.

Defendant's Application for Continuance, March 23, 2016.

263. In the March 2016 motion, Mr. Cardarella mentioned his responsibilities as Director as well as his having taken on additional caseload responsibilities in two counties because of the sudden departure of one of his assistant public defenders in early November of 2015. He added that the very recent sudden and unexpected passing of a senior member of his staff had added "an overwhelming burden of stress upon the entire staff." Id.

264. These motions for continuance indicate the inability of Mr. Cardarella and his staff to provide effective representation for their clients. Based on the motions, Mr. Cardarella had not begun depositions of key witnesses either in March 2016 or in September 2016, even though he had had the case since January 2015.

265. While the sudden departure of an assistant defender in November 2015 certainly would have put extra burden on him, to have that be a factor four months later in not being prepared for a murder case raises questions about his office's ability to hire replacement staff and to reassign cases internally to provide some relief for Mr. Cardarella. If Mr. Cardarella had not had an existing caseload, it would have been more feasible for him to take on the emergency allocation of cases. But as he already had an excessive caseload in addition to his supervisory responsibilities, he was not able to be prepared for Ms. Bowman's trial. His motions indicate that he had not done significant work on the case in the first ten months that he was representing Ms. Bowman. The recent sudden and unexpected passing of a colleague in March 2016 would have been a sufficient reason for a continuance, but not for a continuance of six months.

266. The situation described by Mr. Cardarella could have supported a motion for caseload relief, but as he stated in his affidavit, he does not know how many cases his lawyers have, making it more difficult to support a motion for caseload relief. It is not clear why he does not know how many cases the lawyers have.

B. The Missouri Defenders Do Not Provide Counsel at Arraignment and Are Limited in Their Ability to Seek Pre-trial Release of Clients

267. There is a right to counsel at critical stages of cases. Hamilton v. State of Ala., 368 U.S. 52, 54, 82 S. Ct. 157, 159, 7 L. Ed. 2d 114 (1961).

268. The United States Supreme Court "has held that the right to counsel guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment applies at the first appearance before a judicial officer at which a defendant is told of the formal accusation against him and restrictions are imposed on his liberty." Rothgery v. Gillespie Cty., Tex., 554 U.S. 191, 194 (2008). (citations omitted.).

269. The United States Supreme Court held that Alabama's preliminary hearing was a critical stage requiring counsel in part because "counsel can also be influential at the preliminary hearing in making effective arguments for the accused on such matters as the necessity for an early psychiatric examination or bail." Coleman v. Alabama, 399 U.S. 1, 9, 90 S. Ct. 1999, 2003, 26 L. Ed. 2d 387 (1970).

270. District 19 Assistant Defender Walter Stokely pointed out one of the problems with late appointment of the defenders. He wrote:

> There is a Missouri Supreme Court rule that requires preliminary hearings to be held within one week following arrest. The fact that public defenders are not assigned until clients fill out the indigent paperwork hinders the ability of public defenders to provide adequate and timely pretrial representation. Most often, Defendants are provided the paperwork to seek appointment of a public defender at their first court appearance.

Stokely Affidavit ¶ 10.

271. Mr. Stokely added that he is unable to provide effective advocacy for bail and pretrial release.

> It is very difficult and often impossible to zealously represent people during bail and pretrial release. This is because initial bail determinations are based solely on the prosecutor's recommendation, which happens before people even fill out applications seeking a public defender. Therefore, I am not even appointed to represent these defendants at their bail hearing. After bail is set, a reduction can be difficult to obtain and seeking one takes time away from working on their underlying case.

Id. at ¶ 9.

272. Mr. Stokely pointed out a serious negative impact of not being able to provide effective advocacy for pre-trial release and of having too much work to be able to advocate for system change:

> The difficulties of providing zealous representation at all phases of a trial are compounded in counties like Miller County, which has procedures in place that make the process much more difficult for defendants. For instance, Miller County requires those who post bond to be placed under court supervision. Those who are unable to post bond choose between accepting a plea offer and going to trial. However, the two judges in Miller County have only two jury trial dates every year, so some of these clients must wait in jail for years before their case will go to trial. As a result, a lot of people arrested and charged in Miller County plead guilty to crimes that they tell us they did not commit, but we do not have the capacity or resources to challenge this process.

Id. at ¶ 12.

273. Assistant Defender Ruth Russell also noted challenges in providing effective pre-trial release advocacy:

> It can be difficult to adequately represent clients during the pretrial and bond phase due to procedural restrictions. For example, it takes a week or two to open a case, at which point I am left with just seven days to meet with the client under the MSPD's Guidelines for Representation. However, there is a suggested bail schedule that is often followed and bail is routinely set before I am appointed counsel on a case, after which, courts require ten days' notice for bond modification hearings.

Russell Affidavit ¶ 11.

274. A recent report by the New York Office of Indigent Legal Services provided anecdotal support for the benefits of counsel at the first appearance.

> At arraignment, attorneys are often able to successfully argue for release on recognizance, release under supervision, or lower bail amounts that defendants can pay. …Attorneys generally report that in some cases their ability to argue deficiencies in the accusatory instrument have resulted in immediate dismissal of at least some charges, and hence led to release or lower bails….
>
> Attorneys have reminded us of the significant case implications of being released instead of detained while a case is pending. Research consistently shows that case outcomes are significantly better for defendants who are released.

> …Attorneys have also told us of instances in which their advocacy at arraignment has meant that innocent people are not incarcerated or that clients are not detained because of mistaken information.
>
> …Attorneys told us of several instances in which being at arraignment allowed them to conduct a quick and immediate fact investigation into the case, with positive case outcomes.
>
> …Many attorneys who spoke to ILS about the impact of counsel at arraignment emphasized the positive impact that it has on their ability to build better relationships and communicate more effectively with their clients. At arraignment, attorneys are able to explain the process and proceedings to their clients, prevent clients from making incriminating statements, and assist them in making a favorable impression. From the beginning of the case, clients sense that their attorney is helping them to navigate the court system. Even more importantly, they see the attorney representing their interests and often engaging in zealous advocacy.

Implementing the Counsel at Arraignment Obligations in the Hurrell-Harring v. The State of New York Settlement, 2016 Update, available at https://www.ils.ny.gov/files/Hurrell-Harring/Counsel%20At%20Arraignment/Hurrell-Harring%20Updated%20Counsel%20At%20Arraignment%20Plan%20111016.pdf.

275. The Missouri Defenders do not provide counsel at arraignment and are not able to provide the benefits to their clients identified in the New York report. I provide here several examples drawn from Case Net of accused persons appearing alone at arraignment.

a. Plaintiff Dorian Samuels was arraigned without counsel on June 2, 2016. He was in custody and appeared by video. He had been arrested May 31, 2016. His attorney, Craig Lowe, entered a notice of appearance June 8, 2016, and did not appear with him in court until June 15, 2016.

b. James L. Wainwright, Case No. 17AO-CR01041, was arraigned in-custody without counsel on August 17, 2017. His attorney, Craig Lowe, entered a notice of appearance August 25, 2017.

c. Quincy Earl Richards, Case No. 17AP-CR00643, was arraigned without counsel June 12, 2017. He had been arrested June 8, 2017. His attorney, Larry Dale Maples, filed a notice of appearance June 15, 2017. Mr. Maples appeared in court July 11, 2017. On August 1, 2017, attorney Richard King appeared for Mr. Maples. On August 3, 2017, Craig Lowe entered a notice of appearance for Mr. Richards. Mr. Richards was charged with felony possession of marijuana.

276. Without counsel at arraignment, the accused person is not able effectively to advocate for pre-trial release or to challenge the probable cause to detain him or her. A delay of one or two weeks before counsel meets with the client can result in a variety of harms, including losing evidence and not addressing mental and physical health needs of the client.

C. Because of Excessive Caseload, Defenders Are Unprepared and Seek Multiple Continuances

277. Ms. Moench said that occasionally she would meet her clients for the first time at their preliminary hearing, which sometimes would be several weeks after their arrest and arraignment. "In the meantime, many of my clients would sit in jail, unable to advocate for a reduction in their bond amount." Moench Affidavit ¶ 10.

278. Ms. Moench added, "In addition to sitting in jail longer than necessary, many of my clients risked losing their jobs or had difficulty attending to their significant childcare and healthcare needs. This also put a serious strain on my clients' personal relationships." Id. at ¶ 11.

279. Ms. Moench stated: "Because of my heavy workload, I often felt unprepared for trial—sometimes requiring me to seek multiple continuances—and was unable to negotiate a more favorable plea bargain for my clients." Id. at ¶ 12.

280. Ms. Moench added: "I only had time to skim discovery on some cases and would have to do so on the eve of many misdemeanor and some felony bench trials." Id. at ¶ 13.

281. Ms. Moench wrote: "I rarely had the time to take depositions, even in serious felony cases. I can count on one hand the number of depositions I took in my three and a half years as a public defender." Id. at ¶ 14

282. Ms. Moench stated that she "lacked the time and resources to track down witnesses or take other investigatory steps." She added, "I also did not use investigators as often as I should have, since my office had only two investigators for a staff of twenty attorneys. And, for several months in 2015, my office had only one investigator on staff." She said, "Many attorneys in the office, including myself, filed multiple motions for continuances in cases based on a lack of investigatory resources, which left us unprepared to proceed." Id. at ¶ 15-16.

283. Ms. Moench also said, "I rarely used expert witnesses in my cases." Id. at ¶ 15.

284. Assistant Defender Ruth Russell discussed having regularly to seek continuances even for clients in custody.

> While I was a public defender in District 17, I had approximately 150 to 200 cases on my docket at any given time. I never refused a case because of my caseload, but I had to regularly ask for continuances. This happened even when I had clients in custody. I recently had a close call in a shaken baby case. I almost didn't get a continuance to get a radiologist. If I hadn't, my innocent client would have been convicted and probably received a life sentence.
> Russell Affidavit ¶ 3.

285. District 16 Team Leader Devon Pasley reported that her overall workload, including her managerial and administrative responsibilities, "still makes it difficult for me to spend the time necessary to defend my clients effectively." She gave an example of a first-degree sodomy case set for trial in less than two weeks that, "Because of my other professional obligations, I just began to prepare for trial this week." Affidavit of Devon Pasley, February 7, 2017.

286. Ms. Pasley discussed another case in which her lack of time to prepare prevented her from being able to call an alibi witness.

> I recently tried a murder case involving a potential alibi witness. I did not have time to interview the witness prior to trial, but asked one of our investigators to do so. Based on the information gleaned from the investigators interview, I initially chose not to call the witness at trial. After speaking with the witness myself on the morning of trial, however, I realized that the witness's testimony could have been quite helpful to my client. The Judge did not allow me to call the witness due to the late endorsement. My client was convicted and sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole.
>
> Affidavit of Devon Pasley.

D. Because of the Excessive Caseload, Missouri Defenders Rarely Go to Trial

287. According to an evaluation of a District Defender, "The Sedalia Office tried 6 cases in FY 2014, 10 cases in FY 2015 and only 3 cases in FY 2016." This is an office with seven attorneys. Appraisal of Max Mitchell. That office disposed of 2215 cases in 2016. FY 2016 Report at 28. That district had two counties with the highest rate of sending non-violent felony offenders to prison. Appraisal of Max Mitchell.

288. Director Michael Barrett testified in deposition that in the last two years only one percent of the state defender cases go to trial. Barrett Deposition, at 38.

289. Ms. Moench said, "Almost none of my cases went to jury trial. I have first chaired only two jury trials in the last three years." Moench Affidavit ¶ 17.

290. Former District 15 assistant defender Matthew Gass stated:

> I tried just one case to a jury while working in District 15. The only reason I had time to properly prepare for this trial was because I had just moved over to Lafayette County and my caseload had not yet exceeded a manageable number.
>
> In other cases, I have had to ask for continuances of trial dates because I did not have the time to adequately prepare for trial. While the cases are continued, my clients have to sit in jail. I felt that these requests were in my client's interest at the time because I > owed a duty to the client to make sure I was thoroughly prepared before taking the case before a jury.

>
> Gass Affidavit ¶ 17-18.

E. Missouri Defenders Are Not Able to Have Adequate Communication With Their Clients

291. In many cases, the defenders do not have timely and confidential communications with their clients and they cannot exercise informed judgment on the type of investigation needed in their cases.

292. This Court described the claimed impact of the excessive workload on client communication:

> Finally, a defendant's right to consult with his attorney is an integral component of the right to assistance of counsel. ... But MSPD attorneys' excessive workloads mean that they are unable to meet with clients on a regular basis. In some instances, MSPD attorneys are only able to have a substantive meeting with a client for the first time a few weeks before trial. Without their clients' input, it is impossible for MSPD attorneys to investigate their clients' cases adequately or properly prepare for trial, plea negotiations, or sentencing. Nor is it possible, under such circumstances, for indigent defendants to participate meaningfully in their own defense.
>
> Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *5 (citation omitted).

293. District 16 Defender Ruth Petsch stated:

> Attorney workloads also make it very difficult for public defenders in Jackson County to maintain consistent contact with clients and their family members, including those in custody. Many attorneys are forced to choose between conducting regular jail visits on the one hand, and preparing for trial or other court proceedings on the other.
>
> Petsch Affidavit ¶ 7.

294. Former Defender attorney Matthew Gass wrote: "MSPD's Guidelines for Representation state that we should meet with a client within seven to ten days of being assigned a case. I tried to do this whenever possible, though I was rarely successful." Gass Affidavit ¶ 12.

295. Assistant Defender Ruth Russell wrote:

> I don't have time to regularly speak with my clients, especially those who are not in custody. I spend a significant amount of time > in my office returning calls to my clients and their families. Despite this effort, I am often unable to get in touch with each of my clients every 30 days, in violation of MSPD's Guidelines for Representation.

>
> Russell Affidavit ¶ 4.

296. Ms. Russell added:

> Because I spend so much time in court, I often have difficulty establishing the type of relationships with my clients I believe are needed for effective representation. For example, I sometimes cannot meet with a client until a few weeks before their trial because my schedule sometimes prevents me from attending that client's previous pretrial court proceedings. In such instances, I have to rely on other attorneys in my office to appear on behalf of my clients. Clients frequently believe that they don't have good attorneys because they don't hear from their attorneys and assume that their attorneys are not working on their cases.
>
> Id. at ¶ 7.

297. Defender Devon Pasley stated:

> One of the most significant implications of our large caseloads is that they make it virtually impossible to maintain regular contact with clients, including those in custody. This lack of consistent communication makes it very difficult to establish a rapport between attorney and client. Because of that lack of rapport, clients often do not trust their lawyer or feel comfortable sharing all pertinent information with them.
>
> Affidavit of Devon Pasley, February 7, 2017.

298. Former Kansas City Team Leader Joshua Peter stated: "I now work in private practice. I have significantly more time with clients than I used to. In fact, I now do free consultations for longer amounts of time than my previous jail visits as a public defender." Affidavit of Joshua Peter, December 21, 2016.

299. District 19 assistant public defender Walter Stokely stated:

> My workload also makes it impossible for me to spend adequate time working on cases, especially serious and complex cases. It is difficult to find the time to communicate with clients or even meet with some clients face-to-face, especially those clients who are being held in facilities several hours away from my office. It is also difficult to find time to conduct investigations, identify and interview witnesses, and meet with experts.

Stokely Affidavit ¶ 6.

300. Mr. Stokely explained the negative consequences of poor communication with clients:

> My workload has made it difficult, and in some cases impossible, to establish trust with my clients. Indeed, many never come to trust me as their advocate in court. This is partly because, due to the lack of resources and burdensome workload, we are not always able to do a good job on their cases and they do not feel as if we are adequately representing them. An inability to establish a trusting relationship makes it very hard to strategize with my clients about their cases.
>
> Id. at ¶ 7.

301. The Missouri Defenders are not able consistently to comply with their own office's policy regarding client communication.

F. Missouri Defenders Have Little Time for Effective Motion Practice

302. Matthew Gass worked for slightly more than two years as a defender in District 15, until he resigned in September 2016. He wrote: "I spent very little time writing motions, briefs, or working on discovery. I simply did not have time to do this type of work." Gass Affidavit ¶ 6.

303. Mr. Gass added:

> Criminal defense attorneys are often expected to file a variety of different motions in order to protect our client's rights and represent them effectively. In practice, however, I found I rarely had time to prepare and file these motions, or they were routinely generic in form when they were filed. At one litigation training I attended, I left realizing all of the things I could be doing for my clients that I simply did not have the time or resources to do.
>
> Id. at ¶ 19.

304. In a performance review of a District 31 defender, the reviewer wrote:

> D wishes he had more time available for creative motion practice. His caseload and busy court schedule usually only allow for the doctoring of our boilerplate motions. He also only has time to prepare and submit suggestions in support when specifically requested by the judge. I noticed while doing the file reviews that the request for discovery was either filed late or not at all in several cases.

Performance Review of PD00292 (2017).

G. MSPD Lawyers Have Inadequate Investigation and Support Resources

305. This Court recited the complaint that most MSPD attorneys are > unable to analyze the discovery they receive early enough in the proceedings to make important investigative decisions, including which key witnesses to depose and whether or not an expert witness is necessary for the client's defense. … Even when an attorney determines that investigation is necessary, investigators often do not have time to review discovery or gather other background information on the cases that they do investigate.

>
> Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *4.

306. The Court added the complaint that many MSPD attorneys rarely take depositions and MSPD attorneys rarely file suppression motions:

> Time constraints also mean attorneys are often unable to meet with witnesses or take other important investigatory steps to prepare adequately for trial or to negotiate a more favorable plea bargain. Many MSPD attorneys take depositions in just a small fraction of their cases, thus leaving on the table the valuable information that is likely to be gleaned from such depositions. MSPD attorneys are rarely able to file suppression motions because they lack the investigative resources to identify unconstitutional police conduct, the time to review pertinent discovery, and the resources and experience to conduct appropriate legal research. As a result, evidence obtained in violation of the Fourth, Fifth, and Sixth Amendments can be used against defendants at trial or to extract guilty pleas.
> Id. at *4 .

307. In the MSPD FY 2012 Report at 10, the MSPD noted that a recent survey by the Missouri Office of Prosecution Services "showed that most prosecutor's offices have 1 support staff person for every 1 or 2 attorneys, while some have significantly more support staff than they have attorneys, a ratio more in accordance with the practice of most private law firms."

Report available at http://www.publicdefender.mo.gov/about/FY2012AnnualReport2.pdf.

308. Sarah Johnson testified that she would like to delegate to her legal assistant scanning of large volumes of documents but she has to do the scanning herself because the assistant has so much work to do for other lawyers as well.

Sarah Johnson Deposition at 178.

309. The FY 2012 Report included the following charts that demonstrated the defenders did not have enough investigators or other support staff.

Trial and Appellate Divisions						09/24/20121
	Paralegal	Investigator	Legal Assistant	Secretary	Mitigation Specialist	Totals
Current Support Staff	6.50	56.50	43.00	67.50	3.00	176.50

Trial and Appellate Divisions
	Investigator	Legal Assistant	Secretary
Appropriate Support Staff for 348.50 Trial Division & Appellated Division Attorneys	116.00	116.00	116.00
Current Staff	56.50	43.00	67.50
Need	59.50	73.00	48.50

310. MSPD reported that as of April 6, 2016, it had a total of 53 investigators (fewer than in 2012), 45 of whom were assigned to trial offices. Only three district offices, St. Louis City, Clayton, and Kansas City had more than two investigators. 24 trial offices had only one investigator.

311. The defenders are not able to comply consistently with their own policy on investigation:

> Once the Public Defender has obtained information concerning the prosecution's version of the case and discussed the case with the client, the Public Defender should promptly conduct that investigation which he deems appropriate to allow for the fullest possible understanding of the facts, circumstances and merits of the case, as well as any penalty which might be imposed in the event of conviction.
>
> Guidelines for Representation, Pretrial Preparation, Investigation, Section 10-10-50-20 (11/01/92), Approval Date 11/09/2001.

312. District 16 Team Leader Devon Pasley stated:

> Our one investigator and one legal assistant are assigned to assist 8 attorneys with all of their cases. This limits the ability to sufficiently investigate cases and prepare for trial. Attorneys are required to maintain their own files and are responsible for doing much of their own clerical work.

Affidavit of Devon Pasley.

313. 22nd District Defender Mary Fox stated that her lawyers do not fully investigate cases:

> Although our attorneys are doing the best they can with the resources they have, we are unable to consistently provide constitutionally-sufficient representation to our clients. Because of the crushing workloads handled by public defenders in District 22, attorneys have cut corners in their representation. For instance, my attorneys often do not have the time to fully investigate cases, forcing them and their clients to make strategic decisions about how to move forward (including whether to plead guilty) without a full understanding of the nature and strength of the state's case.

Fox Affidavit at ¶ 6.

314. Assistant Public Defender Walter Stokely in Jefferson City stated that he rarely deposes witnesses.

> Missouri public defenders are allowed to depose the state's witnesses prior to trial. I would request depositions in every case if I had the resources and the time. As it stands, I'm rarely able to depose witnesses in my cases. Additionally, depositions cost money, and therefore eat into an already depleted budget.

Stokely Affidavit at ¶ 11.

315. Assistant Defender Ruth Russell does fewer depositions than she used to and fewer than she would like. "Up until a couple of years ago, my usual practice was to depose every witness for a jury trial. Now I only have time to depose around half of the witnesses in any given case. I will do an informal interview with the rest of the witnesses." Russell Affidavit at ¶ 5.

H. MSPD Does Not Make Adequate Use of Expert Witnesses

316. In my opinion, the rate of expert usage by Missouri Defenders is far too low.

317. This Court noted this complaint in its July 24, 2017, order:

> Additionally, MSPD attorneys also frequently do not have the time to identify experts or conduct expert consultations. Even when > MSPD attorneys identify the need for an expert, they are often unable to secure the resources necessary to retain an appropriate expert.

Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *4.

318. District 22 Defender Mary Fox stated that in St. Louis, the largest city in the state,

> The public defenders in District 22 seek out or retain expert witnesses in a limited number of cases. This is primarily because they are often too inexperienced to comfortably and competently utilize an expert witness to their advantage, or they are unaware of the need for an expert in a given case because they were unable to prepare a defense strategy until the eve of trial.

Fox Affidavit at ¶ 12.

319. District 16 Defender Ruth Petsch stated:

> The Jackson County office is also quite deficient in its use of expert witnesses. This is primarily because defenders, having been unable to review discovery materials in a timely manner, often do not realize the need for an expert witness until almost the eve of trial. This leaves little (if any) time for the attorneys to identify and secure an appropriate expert.

Petsch Affidavit at ¶ 11.

320. Assistant Defender Ruth Russell reported difficulty in obtaining funds for experts:

> Recently, I requested funds from the Missouri State Public Defender central office for a ballistics expert in a murder case I was handling. I anticipated that the expert would spend approximately 20 hours on the case at a rate of $200 per hour. In response to my request, I was asked why I could not simply rely on the testimony of the state's ballistics expert.

Russell Affidavit at ¶ 9.

321. Ms. Russell also noted that delay in discovery affects her ability to obtain experts:

> In my experience, there is a big problem in Missouri in obtaining timely discovery. Sometimes it does not come for months. Attorneys in my office routinely have to file motions to exclude evidence or witnesses because of delays in receiving discovery. In addition, some of the cases have a lot of discovery materials. I have a big stack of discovery that I haven't been able to go through. Due to delays and the amount of information I receive, I > am often unable to identify and secure expert witnesses until rightbefore a client's trial.

Id. at ¶ 8.

322. Mr. Mermelstein testified that he considers monetary resources in deciding whether to approve expert witness requests:

> Q. Okay. And have you -- have you denied
> 5 requests that you think are reasonable and necessary
> 6 solely based on lack of monetary resources?
> 7 A. Yes.

John Mermelstein Deposition at 34.

323. In its FY 2016 Report (at page 11), MSPD reported spending $3,721,071 on litigation expense and conflicts, which includes expert witnesses. These "expenses include the cost of experts, depositions, transcripts, exhibits, independent testing of evidence, etc." FY 2016 Report at 9.

324. I do not have a breakdown of this expense total, but expert witness expenditures clearly were less than $3,721,071 on the total caseload of 80,755 opened and 71,934 cases closed in FY 2016. FY 2016 Report at 6.

325. As a comparison, in 2016, the King County (Washington) Department of Public Defense, when it assigned 5,941 new felony cases to public defenders and assigned counsel, spent $1,962,547 on expert witnesses. This was for 2,206 requests for experts in 707 cases. The Defenders were obtaining experts in approximately 11.9 per cent of all their felony cases. The Department estimated that it declined 3-4% of the requests made by defenders in all program areas. The county spent a total of $2,357,162 in all practice areas, including misdemeanor, juvenile, and civil commitment. The expert witness expenditure for felony cases amounted to a per capita expense of $330.33, dividing the expenditure for felony case expert witnesses by the total number of new felony assignments.

326. Even if Missouri spent all of its litigation expense budget on expert witnesses, dividing that expenditure by the total number of newly opened cases would yield an average of $46.07 per case.

327. It is critical for defenders to be able to use expert witnesses both to challenge the prosecution's case and to be able to present affirmative defenses. In recent years, it has become increasingly clear that much of the forensic evidence presented by the prosecution may be subject to effective challenge.

328. The National Research Council published a report entitled Strengthening Forensic Science in the United States: A Path Forward (2009), which documented that:

> in some cases, substantive information and testimony based on faulty forensic science analyses may have contributed to wrongful > convictions of innocent people. This fact has demonstrated the potential danger of giving undue weight to evidence and testimony derived from imperfect testing and analysis. Moreover, imprecise or exaggerated expert testimony has sometimes contributed to the admission of erroneous or misleading evidence.

A Path Forward, at p. 4. [Report is available at https://www.nap.edu/catalog/12589/strengthening-forensic-science-in-the-united-states-a-path-forward.]

329. The Innocence Project has reported: "Misapplication of forensic science is the second most common contributing factor to wrongful convictions, found in nearly half (46%) of DNA exoneration cases." See, Innocence Project web page at http://www.innocenceproject.org/causes/misapplication-forensic-science/.

330. In September 2016, a report by the President's Council of Advisors on Science and Technology indicated the importance of challenging forensic evidence with expert witnesses.

> Starting in 2012, the Department of Justice (DOJ) and FBI undertook an unprecedented review of testimony in more than 3,000 criminal cases involving microscopic hair analysis. Their initial results, released in 2015, showed that FBI examiners had provided scientifically invalid testimony in more than 95 percent of cases where that testimony was used to inculpate a defendant at trial . . . .
> PCAST finds that latent fingerprint analysis is a foundationally valid subjective methodology—albeit with a false positive rate that is substantial and is likely to be higher than expected by many jurors based on longstanding claims about the infallibility of fingerprint analysis.

President's Council report at 3 and 9. There have been numerous instances of forensic experts' misconduct, poor performance, or lack of qualifications. See, e.g., Rene Stutzman and Gail Tziperman Lotan, "More than 2,600 Orlando-area lawyers get letters warning about fingerprint expert," Orlando Sentinel, February 6, 2017, available at http://www.orlandosentinel.com/news/breaking-news/os-marco-palacio-fingerpring-investigation-20170206-story.html?ct=t(DNA_Newsletter_144_28_2015); see also Tony Plohetski, "2,200 convicted persons to be notified of Austin DNA lab problems", KVUE News, February 9, 2017, available at http://www.mystatesman.com/news/200-convicted-persons-notified-austin-dna-lab-problems/jMMDFsc0HNNKSRU4S9sn4M/?ct=t(DNA_Newsletter_144_28_2015); Report, Forensic Science in Criminal Courts: Ensuring Scientific Validity of Feature-Comparison Methods (Sept. 2016).

331. In an article that concluded that "forensic science is in crisis", three British authors wrote:

> De facto deference to the weight ascribed to forensic evidence in the courtroom or indeed to the opinions of experts is being consigned to the past. Shortfalls inherent in the current system include operational problems related to the efficiency of the justice system and the way it is administered [1], the admissibility of expert evidence [2], reliability tests [3] and structural problems including the influence of the evidence tendered by experts on the jurors [4], the adversarial nature of the system in common law jurisdictions [5], the bias of legal representatives [6] and flawed assumptions in forensic sciences [7–10].

332. Expert testimony about the mental health of the client, for example, could be used both to establish a defense, including the absence of an intent element, and to provide mitigation for sentencing. It might also help to persuade a district attorney to offer a reduced charge. Failure to request an expert witness can indicate "a serious dereliction of his duty to investigate the facts and circumstances" of the client's case. See ABA Standards for Criminal Justice 4-4.1 (4th ed. 2015) ("Defense counsel's investigative efforts should commence promptly and should explore appropriate avenues that reasonably might lead to information relevant to the merits of the matter . . . . Counsel's investigation should also include evaluation of the prosecution's evidence (including possible re-testing or re-evaluation of physical, forensic, and expert evidence) . . . .

333. It appears that, in most of Missouri, Defenders make little or no effort to engage mental health experts, including mitigation specialist social workers, to assist them in their cases.

334. District 22, City of St. Louis, had only one social worker (who also was an attorney) in September 2016, in an office that in fiscal year 2016 was assigned 4,199 cases. Fox Affidavit ¶ 5, Fiscal Year 2016 Annual Report at 28.

335. Sarah Johnson from District 22 testified that there is only one social worker in the City of St. Louis office for 27 attorneys. She testified that all of her juvenile cases would benefit from the assistance of a social worker but she is not able to have that assistance. Sarah Johnson Deposition, October 6, 2017, at 93.

336. Assistant defender Walter Stokely wrote:

> One of the legal assistants in our office has a master's degree in social work and helps clients connect with social support services. Because support staff cannot work more than 40 hours per week, however, I am forced—when I can—to pick up the slack and play the role of social worker in helping people get their licenses > reinstated, or find housing or addiction treatment facilities, among other things.

Stokely Affidavit ¶ 8.

I. MSPD Suffers From Inadequate Supervision of Its Staff

337. MSPD has recognized the need for effective supervision. In its Public Defender Caseload Standards document dated June 19, 2009, at 5, the Commission wrote:

> MSPD's experience has shown that effective management and supervision within a district office require an average of 1.5 hours per week of supervisor time per employee supervised. E.g., in an office of 3 attorneys and 2 support staff, the District Defender should expect to spend an average of 7.5 hours per week [5 employees x 1.5 hours] on management and supervisory responsibilities.

338. There should be one full-time lawyer supervisor with no caseload for every ten attorneys supervised. See, e.g., the Washington State Bar Association Standards For Indigent Defense Services (2011):

> STANDARD TEN: Supervision
>
> Each agency or firm providing public defense services should provide one full-time supervisor for every ten staff lawyers or one half-time supervisor for every five lawyers. Supervisors should be chosen from among those lawyers in the office qualified under these guidelines to try Class A felonies. Supervisors should serve on a rotating basis, and except when supervising fewer than ten lawyers, should not carry caseloads.

http://www.wsba.org/~/media/Files/Legal%20Community/Committees_Boards_Panels/Council%20on%20Public%20Defense/Standards%20for%20Indigent%20Defense%20Services%20Approved%20by%20BOG%20as%20of%209%2022%2011.ashx.

338. A supervisor who carries a caseload should reduce his or her caseload by the amount of time that is required for supervision. For example, if a supervisor is supervising six attorneys, the supervisor should carry no more than 4/10 of a caseload. National Study Commission on Defense Services Guideline 4.1 includes numerical staffing ratios, e.g., there must be one supervisor for every 10 attorneys, or one part-time supervisor for every 5 attorneys. I interpret this to mean that if there are six attorneys to be supervised, that requires a .6 FTE supervisor.

339. Missouri Rule of Professional Conduct 4-5.1 states in part:

> (b) A lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyer conforms to the Rules of Professional Conduct.

> (c) A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of the Rules of Professional Conduct if:
>
> (1) the lawyer orders or, with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved; or
> (2) the lawyer is a partner or has comparable managerial authority in the law firm in which the other lawyer practices, or has direct supervisory authority over the other lawyer, and knows of the conduct at a time when its consequences can be avoided or mitigated but fails to take reasonable remedial action.

339. The ABA Opinion 06-441 makes clear an ethical responsibility for supervisors regarding workload:

> Lawyer supervisors, including heads of public defenders' offices and those within such offices having intermediate managerial responsibilities, must make reasonable efforts to ensure that the other lawyers in the office conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct. To that end, lawyer supervisors must, working closely with the lawyers they supervise, monitor the workload of the supervised lawyers to ensure that the workloads do not exceed a level that may be competently handled by the individual lawyers.

ABA Ethics Opinion 06-441, supra.

340. MSPD and its supervisors, as detailed in this report, understand that the caseloads carried by Missouri defenders do not permit them consistently to conform to the Rules of Professional Conduct and provide competent, diligent representation to their clients and maintain adequate communication with them. While some of the supervisors have made some efforts to comply with the requirements of ABA Ethics Opinion 06-441, more could be done.

341. As outlined above, District 7 Defender Mr. Cardarella at the end of 2016 was responsible for supervising 12 attorneys, two investigators, one legal assistant, and four clerks. In my opinion, he should not have had an assigned caseload. According to the MSPD's own calculations, he should have been spending 28.5 hours per week in management and supervision, which should have reduced his caseload accordingly. Yet he had 224 open cases. There was no way he could provide either effective management and supervision or client representation with that workload.

342. Mr. Cardarella is not alone in the state in having too many cases to be able to supervise his staff. On the day of the snapshot of caseload provided by MSPD, District 32 Director Christopher Davis had 105 open cases. Spreadsheet of open cases April 4, 2016, attached to July 25, 2016 Letter to Mr. Williamson from Ms. Shipma. As of April 2016, MSPD reported that District 32 had 11 attorneys. In my opinion, a District Defender supervising 11 attorneys should have no assigned caseload.

343. District 2 Defender Kevin Locke had 141 open cases. Id.

344. District 26 Defender Karie Comstock had 122 open cases. Id. As of April 2016, MSPD reported that District 26 had seven attorneys.

345. District 37 Defender Donna Anthony had 86 open cases. Id. As of April 2016, MSPD reported that District 37 had four attorneys.

346. District 30 Defender Dewayne Perry had 111 open cases. Id. As of April 2016, MSPD reported that District 30 had seven attorneys.

347. District 22 Defender Mary Fox in September 2016 was supervising 30 attorneys and 13 support staff, yet she had six open homicide cases on her own caseload. Ms. Fox stated: "If I was not forced to maintain a docket of cases, I would be able to provide more consistent and in-depth training, mentoring, and supervision for my attorneys. Fox Affidavit ¶ 4.

348. Devon Pasley is a team leader in District 16. In addition to her managerial and administrative duties, and her supervision of seven junior attorneys, she maintains her own caseload of approximately 25 cases, "all of which involve serious felonies or other complex legal issues." She says, "I am required to maintain an active caseload because our office does not employ a sufficient number of trial attorneys to handle the number of cases to which we are assigned." Affidavit of Devon Pasley, February 7, 2017.

349. It appears that there is minimal supervision of the work of the Missouri defender attorneys and while the MSPD Guidelines outline a comprehensive approach to the practice, in reality there are minimal expectations of what the attorneys can do for their clients.

350. The State's failure to provide adequate oversight and supervision of the management of the caseload and to respond to the requests for more attorneys results in the District Defenders violating their ethical obligation to limit caseloads to what the attorneys can reasonably handle. See, RPC 4-5.1.

351. An example of the failure to provide adequate supervision is reflected in the appraisal of Mr. M, District Defender in Area 15.

352. In a December 2016 appraisal of Mr. M's work an MSPD official wrote: "Your approach to the District Defender position is not within the range of other MSPD District Defenders in that there is no identifiable focus on management responsibilities or on caseload." [The appraisal is dated December 2017 but it appears that it was written in December 2016.]

353. While recognizing that his office had a caseload at 236% of capacity, MSPD criticized Mr. M because he did "not regularly review performance" and had "few if any systems or expectations for timely identifying strengths, weaknesses, opportunities and need for intervention and change, and accountability." Id.

354. MSPD criticized Mr. M for not having done timely appraisals of staff who could be eligible for promotion. Id.

355. MSPD wrote: "…this lack of effective leadership diminishes morale and the ability of the lawyers in the office to do their best work for clients in a collaborative, efficient, client centered environment, focusing on aggressive litigation." Id.

356. MSPD noted that Director Barrett had > let you know that if your lawyers believed they were significantly overworked, it would be an opportunity to invoke the rules on behalf of your lawyers as part of an effort to address their workload. You agreed that your lawyers were in fact overworked, that you would follow up with them about using the rules on their behalf but then you never followed up with Director Barrett.

Id.

357. Noting that the District Defender had long experience in the Trial Lawyer College, MSPD criticized him because he had "no regular, structured case review with individuals or groups within the office using the skills and techniques that" he had learned over the years. Id.

358. MSPD criticized the District Defender because "new lawyers are going to handle depositions on serious sex cases alone." In addition, even though he had second chaired seven jury trials in five years, he had not provided written assessments of the lawyers' work. And, "There is no identifiable system in place or expectation so that you ensure that lawyers who try cases in your office are adequately prepared and have 2nd chairs appropriate given the nature of the case and level of experience of the lawyer." Id.

359. MSPD criticized the District Defender because "You do not have an identifiable plan or strategy to address some of the systemic issues in your jurisdiction and have made no effort in this area." Id.

360. Apparently, the District Defender had been counseled in November 2015 and May 2016 and had made no improvements. Id.

361. This appraisal of a District Defender indicates both that that district had weak supervision for a period of years and that MSPD allowed that weakness to continue.

362. In my opinion, the lack of effective supervision in Public Defenders' Offices in Missouri violates Principle 10 of the ABA 10 Principles: "Defense counsel is supervised and systematically reviewed for quality and efficiency according to nationally and locally adopted standards." It also raises questions about the supervisors' compliance with Rule 4-5.1 of the Missouri Supreme Court's Rules of Professional Conduct.

J. Missouri's Public Defenders Are Unable Consistently to Meet Their Ethical Obligations

363. The Missouri Supreme Court has emphasized the ethical responsibilities of public defenders:

> This Court's Rules of Professional Conduct also impose on all counsel an "ethical duty to provide effective assistance of counsel to [their] clients." Pratte, 298 S.W.3d at 890; see also Rules 4–1.1, 4–1.3, 4–1.4., 4-5.1 Counsel violates these rules if she accepts a case that results in a caseload so high that it impairs her ability to provide competent representation, to act with reasonable diligence and to keep the client reasonably informed. See Rules 4–1.1, 4–1.3 and 4–1.4.

Waters, supra, 370 S.W. 3d at 607.

364. The Supreme Court emphasized "counsel's ethical obligation not to accept work that counsel does not believe he or she can perform competently." Id.

365. The Court held that the Sixth Amendment and ethics rules require that "counsel consider whether accepting an appointment will cause counsel to violate the Sixth Amendment and ethical rules, before determining whether to accept or challenge an appointment." Id. at 609.

366. The Court explained that "an attorney's acceptance of a new case violates Rule 4–1.7 if it compromises her ability to continue to provide effective assistance to her other clients." Id. at 607

367. The Waters Court cited with approval a California case noting that "a conflict of interest is inevitably created when a public defender is compelled by his or her excessive caseload to choose between the rights of the various indigent defendants he or she is representing." Id. at 608 (citation omitted).

368. The National Association for Public Defense has recognized that "Excessive workloads in public defense delivery systems are an ethical issue." NAPD Statement on the Necessity of Meaningful Workload Standards for Public Defense Delivery Systems (March 19, 2015), available at http://www.publicdefenders.us/files/NAPD_workload_statement.pdf.

369. The American Bar Association has a formal ethics opinion that lawyers with workloads that prevent competent and diligent representation should not accept new clients.

> All lawyers, including public defenders and other lawyers who, under court appointment or government contract, represent indigent persons charged with criminal offenses, must provide competent and diligent representation. If workload prevents a lawyer from providing competent and diligent representation to existing clients, she must not accept new clients. If the clients are being assigned through a court appointment system, the lawyer should request that the court not make any new appointments. Once the lawyer is representing a client, the lawyer must move to withdraw from representation if she cannot provide competent and diligent representation.

Formal Opinion 06-441 Ethical Obligations of Lawyers Who Represent Indigent Criminal Defendants When Excessive Caseloads Interfere With Competent and Diligent Representation, May 13, 2006, Available at https://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/administrative/legal_aid_indigent_defendants/ls_sclaid_def_ethics_opinion_defender_caseloads_06_441.authcheckdam.pdf.

370. Missouri defenders, as recounted above, recognize that they have too many cases but, at least until quite recently, they continue to carry them or they resign. Former defender attorney Matthew Gass wrote: "Because of the extremely high volume of cases and shortage of attorneys in District 15, I believe that we were rarely providing the type of quality representation to our clients, as a whole, that they are entitled to." Affidavit of Matthew Gass.

49. Mr. Gass added:

> I joined the public defender's office because I truly care about helping indigent defendants who cannot afford representation. The reality I found was that due to extremely high caseloads, understaffed office, and lack of resources, I was not able to provide the level of representation I believed was my duty to provide. I felt obligated to resign as a result. Since July of 2015, I am the fourth attorney from the District 15 office to resign.

Gass Affidavit ¶ 20.

371. Missouri's public defenders are not able consistently to comply with Missouri Rule of Professional Conduct 4-1.1: COMPETENCE:

> A lawyer shall provide competent representation to a client. Competent representation requires the legal knowledge, skill, thoroughness and preparation reasonably necessary for the representation.

372. The Commentary to RPC 4-1.1 provides in part:

> [1] In determining whether a lawyer employs the requisite knowledge and skill in a particular matter, relevant factors include the relative complexity and specialized nature of the matter, the lawyer's general experience, the lawyer's training and experience in the field in question, the preparation and study the lawyer is able to give the matter, and whether it is feasible to refer the matter to, or associate or consult with, a lawyer of established competence in the field in question. In many instances, the required proficiency is that of a general practitioner. Expertise in a particular field of law may be required in some circumstances….
>
> [4] A lawyer may accept representation where the requisite level of competence can be achieved by reasonable preparation. This > applies as well to a lawyer who is appointed as counsel for an unrepresented person. See also Rule 4-6.2.

>
> [5] Competent handling of a particular matter includes inquiry into and analysis of the factual and legal elements of the problem and use of methods and procedures meeting the standards of competent practitioners. It also includes adequate preparation. The required attention and preparation are determined in part by what is at stake; major litigation and complex transactions ordinarily require more extensive treatment than matters of lesser complexity and consequence. An agreement between the lawyer and the client regarding the scope of the representation may limit the matters for which the lawyer is responsible.

373. Missouri's public defenders do not fully comply with Rule of Professional Conduct 4-6.2: ACCEPTING APPOINTMENTS which is referenced in the rule on competence:

> [2] For good cause a lawyer may seek to decline an appointment to represent a person who cannot afford to retain counsel or whose cause is unpopular. Good cause exists if the lawyer could not handle the matter competently, see Rule 4-1.1, or if undertaking the representation would result in an improper conflict of interest, for example, when the client or the cause is so repugnant to the lawyer as to be likely to impair the client-lawyer relationship or the lawyer's ability to represent the client. A lawyer may also seek to decline an appointment if acceptance would be unreasonably burdensome, for example, when it would impose a financial sacrifice so great as to be unjust. [Emphasis added.]

374. When lawyers have too many cases to be able to investigate and prepare their cases appropriately, they are not able to comply with the ethical rule on competence.

375. Missouri's public defenders are not able consistently to comply with Missouri RULE of Professional Conduct 4-1.3: DILIGENCE, which provides: "A lawyer shall act with reasonable diligence and promptness in representing a client." The commentary provides in part:

> [2] A lawyer's work load must be controlled so that each matter can be handled competently.
>
> [3] Perhaps no professional shortcoming is more widely resented than procrastination. A client's interests often can be adversely affected by the passage of time or the change of conditions; in extreme instances, as when a lawyer overlooks a statute of limitations, the client's legal position may be destroyed. Even when the client's interests are not affected in substance, however, unreasonable delay can cause a client needless anxiety and undermine confidence in the lawyer's trustworthiness. A lawyer's > duty to act with reasonable promptness, however, does not preclude the lawyer from agreeing to a reasonable request for a postponement that will not prejudice the lawyer's client.

376. Missouri's public defenders generally do not have a controlled workload that allows them to handle each matter competently.

377. Missouri's public defenders often seek continuances of their clients' cases because they are not prepared. In many cases, these continuances adversely affect their clients and cause their clients needless anxiety and undermine confidence in the lawyer's trustworthiness.

378. On September 7, 2017, the Missouri Supreme Court heard oral arguments on a case involving bar discipline for a public defender who had, according to the chief disciplinary counsel, failed to communicate with six of his clients. As the Supreme Court summary of the case noted, "circuit courts had found Hinkebein had abandoned these clients after failing to file an amended motion for postconviction relief on the clients' behalf, despite having received extensions of time to do so." In re: Karl William Hinkebein, Summary Case No.SC96089, formerly available at https://www.courts.mo.gov/file.jsp?id=115188.[2]

379. The Court's summary continued:

> Evidence also was presented that Hinkebein suffers from chronic, severe health problems that detrimentally affected his performance in the time frame in question; has a strong work ethic and a high-quality work product; and was carrying a large workload with little flexibility for the office to refuse to accept cases. In its October 2016 decision, the hearing panel concluded Hinkebein failed to represent his clients diligently, violating Rule 4-1.3, and failed to keep his clients reasonably informed about the status of their cases, violating Rule 4-1.4. The panel recommended he be placed on probation for one year with certain conditions. The chief disciplinary counsel now asks this Court to suspend Hinkebein's law license with no leave to apply for reinstatement for one year; Hinkebein argues a reprimand is the appropriate sanction.

Id.

380. The defender attorney admitted that he violated Rule 4-1.3 in that he did not diligently represent his clients, and that he violated Rule 4-1.4(a) in that he failed to keep his clients reasonably informed about the status of their cases. Respondent's Brief (May 17, 2017), available at https://www.courts.mo.gov/file.jsp?id=115189.

381. The defender's attorney argued for him: "Respondent's violations of the diligence and communications rules are primarily attributable to his severe health problems and excessive caseload. Both are factors outside Respondent's control. Respondent had no viable options related to his workload." Id. at 8.

[2] I had read this summary from the Supreme Court's web page. I can no longer find it on their web page.

382. The attorney noted the defender's supervisor's testimony:

> I made a poor assumption and probably did a very poor job of deadline with that because my impression was -- or else I was turning a blind eye to his ability to continue on. Karl, out of all the people in our office, may be the last person to ask for help. He just doesn't function that way. He is dedicated and has a very good work ethic. It's just his personality. I think I made a poor assumption that he was able to keep up and he wasn't and ultimately things snowballed from there to where we realized there were several cases in trouble.

Id. at 9.

383. The appellate attorney added:

> Respondent does not have the option to reject assignments, unless he has a conflict of interest. If he refused an assignment, he believes he would be fired.
>
> If Respondent had gone to the District Defender and informed him that Respondent was missing deadlines, the District Defender really would not have had any options. Individual public defenders are trapped.

Id. at 10 (citation omitted)

384. The appellate attorney also argued:

> During the time frame in question, MSPD was using the Public Defender Commission Caseload Crisis Protocol as its caseload standard. During the time frame in question, MSPD was over the caseload standard 46 of the 48 months in Area 67. MSPD was taking in more cases than it believed it could handle and this was a period of very high workload.

Id.

385. Appellate counsel also pointed out the extensive travel the defender had to do. Id.

386. Appellate counsel emphasized the heavy caseload that the defender carried and recounted the supervisor's experience of assigning him more cases than other attorneys received.

> Respondent testified that he puts his best effort into every case, even though no one would probably know if he did less than his > best. Respondent is always looking for an edge for his clients and trying to challenge the law and raise claims to the benefit of his clients. As of the date of the hearing, Respondent's caseload was approximately 110, which was higher than anyone else in his office. The District Defender believes that he cheated on his normal approach to caseload parity regarding Respondent and assigned Respondent a heavier caseload because it included a lot of serious cases, based on Respondent's work ethic and willingness to work. Respondent typically works more hours than any other attorney in the office. From 2010 until 2014 when the cases at issue were reassigned, Respondent believes he had an unreasonable number of cases assigned to him.

Id. at 12 (citations omitted)

387. The appellate attorney added: "Respondent was working far beyond what should have been expected of him in an effort to do his best to represent all of his clients, despite his health and unreasonable caseload." Id. at 15. The attorney concluded: "Respondent had no intent to violate the rules. Respondent was doing the best he could under impossible circumstances." Id. at 21

388. This discipline case presents several problems. First, it appears that at least in part, the defender's struggle with an excessive caseload, (110 open post-conviction cases), resulted in a court finding that he had abandoned his clients, in violation of ethical rules.

389. Second, the defender's supervisor admitted that he did not pay close enough attention to the lawyer's ability to meet his workload obligations. See RPC 4-5.1.

390. Third, the supervisor apparently assigned the defender more cases than his colleagues were receiving.

391. Fourth, the defender thought he would be fired if he declined to accept a case.

392. Fifth, the defender felt trapped by his caseload situation.

393. Sixth, it appears that MSPD and the District in question were taking on more cases than they felt they could effectively handle.

394. This case supports the conclusion that the defenders routinely accept caseloads that they know they cannot effectively represent, that the supervision system is not effective, and that the defenders see no way to address their ethical concerns.

395. This case also supports the conclusion that the defenders are not able to comply with their ethical responsibilities to their clients regarding diligence and communication.

396. This case also supports the conclusions identified elsewhere in this report that the MSPD does not comply with Principles 5 (controlled workload) and 10 (supervision) of the ABA Ten Principles of a Public Defense Delivery System.

397. This case also demonstrates MSPD's failure to follow the ABA Eight Guidelines of Public Defense Related to Excessive Workloads (2009), available at https://www.americanbar.org/content/dam/aba/administrative/legal_aid_indigent_defendants/ls_sclaid_def_eight_guidelines_of_public_defense.authcheckdam.pdf. I will highlight several of the Guidelines here that apply to this case.

398. Guideline 1 states: "The Public Defense Provider avoids excessive lawyer workloads and the adverse impact that such workloads have on providing quality legal representation to all clients." The Guideline then lists a series of tasks lawyers need to complete for their clients.

399. Guideline 2 states: "The Public Defense Provider has a supervision program that continuously monitors the workloads of its lawyers to assure that all essential tasks on behalf of clients, such as those specified in Guideline 1, are performed."

400. Guideline 3 states: "The Public Defense Provider trains its lawyers in the professional and ethical responsibilities of representing clients, including the duty of lawyers to inform appropriate persons within the Public Defense Provider program when they believe their workload is unreasonable." As it appears the defender in this case thought he would be fired if he declined a case and that bringing his workload issues to the supervisor would have led to no remedy, it appears that MSPD, prior to the Court's decision in this case, had not been training its lawyers on their duty to report unreasonable workload.

401. Because the supervisor was not paying attention to the defender's failure to meet his obligations to his clients, MSPD was not complying with Guideline 4: "Persons in Public Defense Provider programs who have management responsibilities determine, either on their own initiative or in response to workload concerns expressed by their lawyers, whether excessive lawyer workloads are present." See also, RPC 4-5.1.

402. The Missouri Supreme Court suspended Mr. Hinkebein indefinitely but stayed the suspension and placed him on probation for one year. Supreme Court Order, Supreme Court No. SC96089, September 12, 2017, available at https://www.courts.mo.gov/page.jsp?id=117575.

XVIII. THE MSPD IS NOT PROVIDING EFFECTIVE REPRESENTATION TO ITS JUVENILE CLIENTS

403. This Court noted the 2013 report by the National Juvenile Defender Center that "concluded that approximately 60 percent of court-involved children in Missouri do not receive appointed counsel." The Court added:

> The report also noted deficiency in those cases that do include representation similar to those discussed above, specifically regarding lack of representation at detention hearings, lack of investigations, failure to file motions or challenge charges or evidence, and failure to represent clients after disposition during probation review or on appeal.

Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *5.

404. On July 31, 2015, the United States Department of Justice issued "Investigation of the St. Louis County Family Court St. Louis, Missouri". Available at https://sites.ed.gov/underservedyouth/files/2017/01/Report-Investigation-of-the-St-Louis-County-Family-Court.pdf

405. The Report found that children in delinquency proceedings in St. Louis were denied their due process right to adequate representation, for a variety of reasons including the "staggering caseload of the sole public defender assigned to handle all indigent juvenile delinquency cases in St. Louis County". In addition, there was "an arbitrary system of determining eligibility for public defender representation", and significant gaps in representation between detention hearings and subsequent court appearances." Id. at 2.

406. The Justice Department also found equal protection violations, finding that "Black children are subjected to harsher treatment because of their race. Id. at 3.

407. The Justice Department wrote that "The MSPD continues to be stretched beyond reasonable capacity" and cited the MSPD 2012 Annual Report that stated: "We now face the situation where there are many more cases than there are lawyers to handle them." Id. at 9.

408. As of the date of the Justice Department report, "there continues to be just one public defender assigned to handle all juvenile cases in St. Louis County." Id. at 12. It is my understanding that in 2017 there now are two defenders to represent juveniles, including on diversions and on possible certifications to adult court.

409. Sarah Johnson, director of juvenile defense and policy for the MSPD and Deputy District Defender for the city of St. Louis trial office, testified that there are now two "defender type attorneys," one of whom is paid from funds outside of the MSPD budget, in St. Louis County. Deposition of Sarah Johnson, October 6, 2017, at 43.

410. Ms. Johnson testified that some young people who are entitled to counsel are going without counsel in Missouri's juvenile courts. Id at 24.

411. Ms. Johnson testified that for the most part the NJDC Report's conclusions "ring true" today. Deposition at 28.

412. This Court cited the Justice Department report on the deficiencies of the one defender's practice:

> In 2014, that lone defender handled nearly 400 juvenile cases. The DOJ further found that during the same period the public defender's office in St. Louis County appeared to engage in little investigation, resolved 277 of the cases but took only three to trial, filed just seven pretrial motions, never challenged probable cause during detention hearings, never called a defense witness other than, in one instance, the child respondent, and did not hire a single expert witness.

Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *5 (citation omitted).

413. According to the MSPD FY 2016 Report, statewide the defenders did not open a single juvenile appeal that year and closed only one. FY 2016 Report at 58. The office was assigned 1,677 juvenile cases that year. FY 2016 Report at 6.

414. The state reported 2,615 delinquency and 638 status offense cases—for a total of 3,253 juvenile cases— being filed in FY 2016. Missouri Judicial Report Supplement Fiscal Year 2016 at 161.

415. These statistics suggest two major disturbing conclusions: 1) More than 900 children likely went unrepresented that year and 2) Almost none of the juvenile delinquency cases went to trial, as no appeals were filed.

416. MSPD recognized the need to have a specialized approach to juvenile representation, having established Youth Advocacy Unit attorney positions in St. Louis and Kansas City. MSPD website at http://www.publicdefender.mo.gov/legal/youth_advocacy.htm (last visited August 27,2017). The Unit's attorneys, according to the web page, "participate in a variety of national training opportunities that specifically address the special issues involved in juvenile defense." One can infer that the other districts in the web page did not provide this specialized training. But "Missouri's ongoing budget crisis resulted in the elimination of the MSPD Juvenile Advocacy Units in 2007." MISSOURI: JUSTICE RATIONED, An Assessment of Access to Counsel and Quality of Juvenile Defense Representation in Delinquency Proceedings (Spring 2013), at 25, available at http://njdc.info/wp-content/uploads/2013/11/Missouri-Assessment.pdf

417. According to the web page, the unit had "staff disposition specialists" with master's degrees in social work and counseling who "conduct social investigations and locate available resources to help the client with treatment needs." One can infer that the other districts in the state did not have these disposition specialists available.

418. Mr. Barrett cited the findings of the 2013 National Juvenile Defender Center Report in his Fiscal Year 2018 Draft Budget Request (at 21):

> …children facing criminal or status offenses in Missouri's juvenile justice system frequently do so without the benefit of counsel or without adequate representation through all critical stages. There are significant gaps in both access to and quality of representation provided to youth….

419. Mr. Barrett reported that in 2012 approximately 4000 children went unrepresented in offender cases. Id.

420. Mr. Barrett's 2018 draft budget sought $1,055.751 to reinstate the two juvenile units in St. Louis and Kansas City, as well as "one additional attorney in each office to represent juveniles certified to stand trial as an adult and to serve as a statewide juvenile resource attorney to assist local offices across the rest of the state." Id.

421. Sarah Johnson testified about the specialized requirements of representing youth:

> Juvenile defense is an absolute specialty. It requires knowledge in adolescent brain development. It requires knowledge in specific laws. It requires knowledge in procedural rules that are different. It requires an ability to work with families to a greater extent in my opinion than in other cases. It also requires a knowledge of disposition resources and it requires an ability to work with and understand children.

Deposition of Sarah Johnson, October 6, 2017, at 18-19.

422. There is minimal training for MSPD attorneys about juvenile practice. In the two training sessions for new attorneys, there is no juvenile specific component. Id., at 50.

423. There is an annual juvenile training session, but it is not mandatory and only a small percentage of MSPD attorneys have attended it. In 2017, 20-25 attorneys attended. Id., at 52.

424. Five MSPD attorneys have attended a juvenile immersion training program organized by Georgetown University and the National Juvenile Defender Center. Id., at 53.

425. Even though Ms. Johnson and St. Louis City defenders seek to be a model for other attorneys doing juvenile public defense in the state, Ms. Johnson is not able to do everything she thinks she needs to do on her cases. Id., at 61.

426. Ms. Johnson gave an example of what she is not always able to do for her clients because she does not have enough time or sufficient support staff:

> Q. Are there things that you would like to do in cases, but are unable to do?
> A. Yes.
> Q. And why are you unable to do things that you would like to do in other cases?
> A. Because of time constraints, because of obligations to other clients and limitation. When you are tasked with a child who is sitting in a detention center, a number of children who are sitting in a detention center, you know, you don't want them to languish.
> 12 Q. Can you give me one example of something that you can think of that goes by the wayside because of time?
> A. I was asked specifically about placement in inpatient or residential facilities.
> My ability to investigate options such as those, I'm not able to do on every single case.
> Q. Why don't you assign that task to someone else to investigate?
> A. Because they -- either the investigator or the social worker who would be doing that is also over loaded.

Sarah Johnson Deposition at 179.

XIX. CONCLUSION

427. This Court has cited with approval the U.S. Department of Justice Statement of Interest in the New York case of Hurrell-Harring, the language of which applies to Missouri:

> The United States explained the cognizable obstacles to indigent defense outside of the Strickland context:
>
> Substantial structural limitations force even otherwise competent and well-intentioned public defenders into a position where they are, in effect, a lawyer in name only. Such limitations essentially require counsel to represent clients without being able to fulfill their basic obligations to prepare a defense, including investigating the facts of the case, interviewing witnesses, securing discovery, engaging in motions practice, identifying experts when necessary, and subjecting the evidence to adversarial testing.

Church v. Missouri, 2017 WL 3383301, at *19 (citing U.S. Statement of Interest, Case No. 8866–07, Hurrell–Harring v. State, 15 N.Y.3d 8, 904 N.Y.S.2d 296, 930 N.E.2d 217, 227 (2010)).

428. The statement of District 16's Team Leader could apply to most of the practice of Missouri defenders:

> While I am familiar with the MSPD's Guidelines for Representation and support the model of representation that they reflect, the realities of our day-to-day practice in District 16—including having to manage overwhelming workloads—make it very difficult for me and the attorneys I supervise to meet those requirements.

Affidavit of Devon Pasley, February 7, 2017.

429. Since the recent state Supreme Court disciplinary decision in Hinkebein, defenders and their supervisors have begun to confront and to challenge their inability to meet their own office's standards and their ethical obligations. Until the caseloads are dramatically reduced and the support resources significantly increased, it is likely the defenders will be unable to provide consistently effective representation to their clients.

I declare under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States that the foregoing is true and correct.

EDWARD GUINN,
of lawful age, being produced, sworn, and examined on behalf of the Plaintiffs deposes and says:
DIRECT EXAMINATION
BY MR. SCHERZER:
Q. So, Mr. Guinn, my name is Aaron Scherzer. I represent the plaintiffs in this case. Other than just when I introduced myself five minutes ago, have we ever met before?
A. No.
Q. Have you ever been deposed before?
A. Yes.
Q. How many times?
A. I think twice.
Q. And on what kind of cases?
A. They were civil litigation cases.
Q. Okay. Related to your job at the MSPD or ...
A. No.
Q. Okay. And have you taken depositions yourself?
A. Yes.
Q. About how many, ballpark?
A. More than a hundred.

Page 7

Q. Okay. Great. So you're obviously very familiar, then, with the ground rules of depositions and how everything works. I'll just go over it quickly -- not to bore you with things you already know, but just for the record. I'm going to ask you questions relevant to this case; you'll do your best to answer them truthfully and accurately, and remember that, of course, your testimony here is under oath. Does that all make sense?
A. Yes.
Q. There's a court reporter here, obviously, transcribing the deposition. If you could answer verbally rather than with hand gestures or headshakes so the court reporter can record your responses, that would be very helpful. Please just wait for me to finish my question before answering, and I'll, of course, wait for you to finish your answer before asking a follow-up question. Any of the attorneys here may have an objection. Unless they direct you not to answer, please just go ahead and answer the question. Of course, if you don't understand the question that I'm asking, feel free to just let me know that, and I'll rephrase or explain. You can take a break whenever you need it. Just let me know. The only thing I ask is if there's a question pending, just answer that question before we take a break.

Does that all make sense?
A. Yes.
Q. Great. How did you prepare for this deposition, Mr. Guinn?
A. I reviewed the case numbers on cases initiated in the last fiscal year and in this fiscal year so that I would have some familiarity with the case numbers that are coming through our office, and that's really about all I looked at. I did meet with counsel to discuss having my deposition taken, but that's all of the preparation I've done.
Q. Okay. When you say with "counsel," you mean with Ms. Shipma?
A. Correct.
Q. Did you bring any documents with you here today?
A. No.
Q. Okay. Mr. Guinn, by whom are you employed?
A. By the Missouri State Public Defender.
Q. And what's your current title?
A. District defender of Area 14.
Q. Okay. And how long have you been in that position?

Page 9

A. Three years.
Q. Okay. Since 2014?
A. Approximately.
Q. Okay. And before that what -- what position did you hold?
A. I was an assistant public defender.
Q. In which office?
A. In the Area 14 office.
Q. In the Area 14? Okay. And when did you join that office?
A. In 2011.
Q. From 2011 to 2014, you were assistant public defender in Area 14, and from 2014 to the present, you're the district defender in that office?
A. Correct.
Q. And before 2011, what was your job?
A. I was a partner in the law firm of Ford Parshall & Baker.
Q. Sorry. Can you spell those last two names?
A. Parshall is P-a-r-s-h-a-l-l, and Baker is B-a-k-e-r.
Q. Okay. And for what time period were

Page 10

you --
A. I started working at Ford Parshall & Baker, I believe, in 1992 or '3 and retired from there in 2011.
Q. And were you a partner during that entire time period?
A. Not the entire time period. I -- honestly, today, I couldn't tell you when I became a partner. I'm guessing it would have been 2002 or '3.
Q. Okay. And before you worked -- you were first -- I presume before that, you were an associate?
A. Yes.
Q. And so before you joined Ford Parshall & Baker as an associate in 1992, what job did you have?
A. When I graduated from law school in 1991, I worked for Cullen Klein & Milt Harper, and went from Milt Harper's office to Ford Parshall & Baker. So I was with Cullen & -- I worked as a law clerk while I was in law school, and then was in their office a year, year and a half.
Q. And who are those -- Cullen Klein & Milt Harper, just for the record.

Page 11

A. They were lawyers here in Columbia, Missouri.
Q. Got it. Okay. So you worked for them for a year, and then you joined Ford Parshall & Baker as an associate?
A. Correct.
Q. And so then you said you retired in 2011 from Ford Parshall & Baker; is that right?
A. Uh-huh.
Q. And what made you join the Area 14 assistant -- the Area 14 office as an assistant public defender at that time?
A. I did -- I did not like being retired, and I had always wanted to do more public interest type law, and I've always practiced criminal law, so there -- there was an opening, and I applied, and I'm very pleased that I was selected to work there.
Q. So you decided to come out of retirement to become a public defender?
A. I did.
Q. And for how many months were you retired, approximately?
A. I'm guessing maybe four.
Q. Okay. So you realized pretty quickly that you -- retirement wasn't for you?

Page 12

A. I had some assistance from my wife in making that decision.
Q. Fair enough. And so -- thank you for explaining that.
So during the time that you were the -- the almost 20 years that you were at Ford Parshall & Baker, you were practicing criminal law?
A. I did criminal law and civil litigation.
Q. Some of each?
A. Yes.
Q. And in terms of the criminal law, was it all kinds of criminal law or anything in particular?
A. I think it would best be described as a general practice in a small town. I would classify Columbia as a small town. I did not do any murder cases -- what I would classify as serious felony offenses. We did do the lower-level felony and misdemeanor offenses.
Q. Got it. Okay. And was all of that work in the state courts in Columbia or was it around the state or ...
A. Civil litigation was all over the state. The criminal representation was primarily in Boone, Randolph, and Cooper County, which would be central Missouri.

Page 13

Q. Got it. Okay. So you mentioned you work in the -- or you're the district defender in the Area 14 office. Which counties are included in Area 14?

A. Randolph, Howard, Macon, Linn, and Chariton Counties.

Q. Okay. And that -- well, I'll come back to that in a second.

That covers a fair amount of geographical distance; is that right -- those five counties?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And your office represents people in each of those five counties at any given moment; is that correct?

A. Correct.

Q. And are the courthouses in -- is there one -- how many courthouses do the attorneys in your office practice in?

A. Each primary county -- Randolph, Macon, Chariton, Howard, and Linn County, each one of those counties has one courthouse. They're all rural counties. The courthouses are situate at the county seat for each county.

Q. Okay. And where is your office located?

A. Our office is located in Moberly,

Page 14

Missouri.

Q. Okay. And the furthest -- what is the furthest courthouse from your office?

A. Well --

Q. Of the five that you practice in.

A. Of the primary counties, Linn County -- the courthouse is located in Linneus. That's approximately a 150-mile round trip from our office.

Q. Got it.

A. There are -- and just to expand slightly, there are additional travel requirements because of changes of venue and conflict representation in other counties. The farthest counties we service, as far as conflicts are concerned, we go to Chillicothe to the west and Kirksville to the north. Chillicothe is an additional approximately 30 miles from Linneus, so it's about a 180-mile round trip, maybe a little more.

Q. And have those conflict cases slowed down as a result of the recent budget allocation for conflict cases?

A. Yes, they have. We still have some cases that are still being resolved, but it has significantly reduced in the last year.

Q. Okay. Prior to this most recent year, when there was a specific allocation for conflict cases, what percentage of your docket was conflict cases, approximately?

A. I don't think I -- I can't give you a number because I've never really looked at that number. I can tell you anecdotally that depending on where the conflict came from -- in other words, from Livingston County, you would average approximately five to ten conflict cases all of the time. Adair County would be generally less, maybe five on average.

Q. Okay. So given -- does that geographical distance create additional -- putting aside for the moment the conflict cases but just the geographical distance that your office has to cover that you just described, does that create any obstacles for you or your line attorneys' representation of clients?

A. Well, certainly, it involves more time because of the travel. It does not just include going to court, because the clients themselves live in smaller rural counties -- Linn County, for example. Our clients come from towns of Brookfield and Marceline, who are very small. And, generally, the clients don't have adequate transportation, as a general rule, so it requires that the attorney go to -- typically, would go to the courthouse in Linneus or the library in Brookfield to actually meet with clients to try and accommodate their ability to travel and meet with their lawyer. It gets a little more complicated with clients that are in custody because Linn County does not have their own jail facility, so they house our clients and other -- that are in custody in other jails. It may be in Macon or it may be in Keytesville, Missouri, or it can be as far west as Pattonsburg, Missouri, which is about an hour and 45 minutes to two-hour drive from our office.

Q. Okay. And in those -- so you mentioned a few places. The -- even just putting aside for a second the individuals who are in custody, but the individuals who are not in custody and the individual -- the attorneys in your office need to meet with them at -- you mentioned the library or the courthouse. Are there confidential places there where your attorneys can meet with clients?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. And are there confidential places -- now, turning to those who are in custody, are there confidential places where your attorneys can meet with clients who are in custody in those areas?

Page 17

A. The county jails do have confidential meeting areas.

Q. Okay. And just while we're on the topic of client communication, what about phone calls for those who are -- for those of your clients who are incarcerated? Do they have ready access to phone calls to your office?

A. Typically, no. There is -- there are some exceptions to that in a couple of the counties. The typical arrangement in the jails in central Missouri are that they have a pay-to-call system that is not secure; it's recorded by the sheriff's office. It also requires our clients to spend anywhere from $2 to $5 per call for them to call out -- to call our office, if they're in custody, and they simply can't afford that.

Q. And even if they could afford it, it would be a recorded phone call and not a confidential attorney-client communication?

A. That's correct. And most of the facilities that we deal with do not have the ability for us to call in through a secure line to speak with our clients.

Q. Okay. So if for those -- speaking now to those of your clients who are in custody, if your -- if you or your attorneys want to have confidential communication with them, you need to visit them in prison; you don't have another means of communicating with them?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And, obviously, as you described, that requires sometimes quite lengthy travel times in order to make those visits?

A. Depending on where the individual is being held, certainly, there -- it has -- the lawyer has to leave our office and drive to the jail to meet with them.

Q. And it could be for up to a two-hour round trip?

A. That would be the longest drive time.

Q. Okay. So, Mr. Guinn, I want to ask you -- you're a district defender, as you've described. Tell me about your day-to-day responsibilities.

A. Well, I'm responsible for the running of the office, the supervision of the assistant public defenders that are in my office and the office staff. I also carry a caseload, so I have responsibilities of representing clients and meeting and maintaining contact with my clients.

Q. Okay. And I'll come back to your caseload in a minute. Can you describe your oversight and supervision of the attorneys in your office, in terms of how frequent it is, what that looks like?

A. Since we are a smaller rural office, we have six total lawyers, including myself. Since we're a smaller office, we have what I would call more of an open-door policy, so far as the attorney's access to me. We're all -- since we're so close in proximity to each other -- I mean, my attorneys come in and ask me questions, you know, as they have them daily -- sometimes more than once daily. We also -- as far as contact with the attorneys, we have staff meetings monthly where we look at cases, talk about cases, we try to have a component of reviewing current decisions that may have come out of the court of appeals and also discussions of problems that they are having either with their caseload numbers or just clients and cases in general.

Q. Got it. So it sounds like at least one of the topics that comes up fairly frequently is caseload and workload is that fair to say?

A. Correct.

Q. And that's both in the monthly meetings and in your individual contact with the line attorneys in your office?

A. Yes. I send an e-mail -- or try to send an e-mail out once a week talking to -- you know, asking, Do you have too many cases? Where are you at in the process of -- you know -- and, also, looking at the new applications that are coming in, trying to keep some idea of how many cases each individual -- each lawyer has and, kind of more importantly, what kind of cases they have.

Q. And when you say "what kind of cases," do you mean what class, in terms of seriousness of cases?

A. Yes. I think there -- I think it's important that we keep a handle on the -- how many serious felony offenses each lawyer has in their inventory of cases because of the time that's required to effectively represent someone in a serious felony case.

Q. Got it. And when you say you send an e-mail once a week, do you mean to the other five attorneys in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. Is that a group e-mail or an individual e-mail to each of them?

A. It's a group.

Page 21

Q. Okay. And do each of them respond just to you or to everyone?
A. Just -- no. Just to me.
Q. Okay. So you ask them, Just let me know what you're --
A. I ask them to let me know how -- if you've had too many cases, if you need to have some assistance in the current caseload you have, or if you're in a position to be able to take new cases.
Q. And do you ask them, Are you in a position to take new cases, like, say, for this upcoming week or ...
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And what is typically -- I'm sure, obviously, it depends week by week, since you're sending this every week, but what is typically the response from your attorneys?
A. For the most part, I think the -- well, for the most part, the response is that, I'm okay. From time to time, lawyers will say, you know, I've got a lot on my plate, I need -- you know, I need some -- not be assigned some new cases. It really -- it's not something that you can determine, this is going to happen every week. There are other factors. How many cases are the prosecutors filing?

I mean, there's -- so it's kind of the dynamic. And it also changes if -- you know, if a murder case comes in the door, that changes how many cases an individual lawyer can take at one time.
Q. Got it. Understood. And if someone says they are unable to take cases for any -- for either the next week or another time period for -- a longer time period, what actions, if any, do you take?
A. Well, we talk to other lawyers. I look at their case numbers, I look at how many cases each person -- each lawyer in our office has. I will ask other lawyers, Are you free to take the case? It sometimes depends on where it is. Since we have multiple counties that are a fairly good distance between courthouses, we can't always assign a case to another lawyer because of conflicting law days and because of the distances, they can't get from one court to another court to cover a case. Then, ultimately, I may take the case, if no one else is available.
Q. So when you said that -- at least a fair amount of the time, your attorneys respond, I'm okay, do you mean that they say, I'm okay to take more cases for this upcoming week? Is that --
A. Well, yes. I mean, that's --

Q. That's the gist of it?
A. That's the gist of it. Even having them say that, it's not that I don't trust their judgment, but I do look at their numbers because I think it's human nature not to want to admit that you have more than you can handle or more than you can do.
Q. Is it also fair to say -- I mean, since it's such a small office, and it sounds like, you know, a pretty tight-knit office, given the close proximity you mentioned before, that the line attorneys in your office realize that if they say they can't take cases for a given week, that's putting cases on to either you or another attorney in your office?
A. Sure. I understand that.
Q. So there's not some -- if they say, I'm not available to take a case, there's not some knight in shining armor who can come and do something with that case, other than someone in your office. Is that right?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. Do you think that may be part of the reason why they often say -- or some -- you know, in some frequency say that they are available to take at least some more cases for that upcoming time period?

A. I think that the lawyers in my office are very dedicated, and, certainly, they want to do their job and they're very diligent in how they do their job. And, again, as I said, I think it's human nature not to want to say, I can't -- I can't work as hard as someone else. There again, that's why I look at their cases and their case types so that they know that it's not a negative action if a case is assigned to someone else, it's because we're -- we need to do the best for the client -- what's in the client's best interest.
Q. So is it correct, then, that at least some of the time when someone says, I am able to take on some more cases for this week, you look at their caseload and determine that actually they aren't able to in order to provide effective representation for a client?
A. And that would be my opinion, of course.
Q. Right.
A. Because I look at them, and if the combination of the type of cases, the location, and the number of cases are such that I think they need help, I'm going to assign it to someone else.

Page 25

Again, that's my -- that's my best judgment of the situation as it is at that time. Again, it's very dynamic, because two or three days later, those numbers may change.

Q. Got it. Understood. And is it correct -- it sounds like you've testified, but just to confirm this for the record, it's correct that at least part of the time, even despite the human nature that you talked about and despite, you know, not wanting to put cases on others in the office, et cetera, that attorneys do write back, at least some of the time, and say, I'm not available to take further cases given my already high caseload at this time?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. So you mentioned you have five line attorneys in your office other than yourself; is that right?

A. Correct.

Q. And is that the total number of positions -- attorney positions allocated to your office?

A. Yes.

Q. So there's not currently a vacancy in the office?

A. No.

Page 26

Q. What other staff do you have in the office other than the five attorneys -- line attorneys, plus yourself?

A. We have an investigator and we have two legal assistants.

Q. And what do the legal assistants do?

A. Open files. They also assist with filing. They do some of the initial e-filings with the court when they're opening cases, and they assist with -- I would call -- since I'm an older lawyer, I would call what were traditionally legal secretarial work. They will schedule depositions, they will call clients to set up appointments, if we ask them to. One of the more important functions is that they assist in getting our clients into drug or alcohol treatment programs. Again, they work at scheduling depositions and -- you know, pretty much most legal secretary functions.

Q. Great. Any other staff in the office other than those individuals that you've already identified?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Given your daily interaction with the other -- with the line attorneys in your office, would you say you're familiar with the standard litigation practices in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. So just for the remainder of the deposition, unless I indicate otherwise, if I'm asking a question, I'm asking it about your practice and the practice of the attorneys in your office in Area 14, rather than the statewide practice of the Missouri Public Defenders. Is that clear?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And you mention that you had a caseload. About how many cases do you handle a year?

A. Well, I don't -- I can't answer you how many cases I handle a year. Currently, I have my -- I have 80 cases that I'm representing individuals on. That will vary. I would estimate my average would be 55 to 65.

Q. Got it. So it's -- at least -- so you said 80 cases, so that means 80 open cases?

A. Eighty open cases.

Q. As of yesterday?

A. Yes.

Q. And that's sounds significantly higher than what you -- you said your average is about 55 to 65. Is there a reason for this -- that it's 80 as of yesterday or ...

A. Because -- well, because in about or November of this year, we were looking at the case numbers for individual lawyers. I had a couple of lawyers say, We're maxed out, we need some relief, and so I've -- I took a lot of cases not from them but the new cases that were coming in the door out of Randolph County so that they would be given the opportunity to work through their case numbers and work through their cases without getting more new cases.

Q. Got it. So you said "a couple." Is that two or three?

A. It was two lawyers out of -- it was out of Randolph County, because there had been a big influx of filings.

Q. Got it. And so -- you sorted of mentioned this earlier, but are there certain attorneys in your office who are assigned to each of the five counties that your office covers?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And how many attorneys are assigned to Randolph?

A. There are two lawyers that are primarily assigned to Randolph County.

Page 29

Q. And so both of those lawyers that you said in October or November of this year said, We can't handle any more cases, at least for the time being?
A. Yes.
Q. And so then you took on -- did you take on all of the additional cases in Randolph County for a time period -- all of the new cases? Sorry.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And are you -- has that -- are you still continuing to take on all of the new cases?
A. No.
Q. Okay. For about how long did you take on the new cases, approximately?
A. About a month.
Q. Okay. And then they indicated that they were able to take on some more cases for the time being?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And you mentioned you looked at the fiscal year numbers for your office. If you recall, about how many cases from the last fiscal year -- and I'm speaking of fiscal year '17 now, which is July 1st 2016 to June 30th, 2017 -- did your office handle?
A. It was -- well, initiated in that time period was something over 1,500.

Q. Okay. And can you explain for the record what "initiated" means?
A. That would be opening a new case -- a new file for an individual.
Q. Okay. And, obviously, you come in on the day -- June 1st -- scratch that -- on the day July 1st, 2016, you don't come in -- your office doesn't come into that day with a caseload of zero, correct, you have all of your cases from -- all of your open cases that were existing on the day prior to that?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you have -- you mentioned, perhaps, that you had looked at an additional year back, is that right or ...
A. I looked at fiscal year '17 and looked at this fiscal -- 2018 fiscal year.
Q. Got it. So the fiscal year to date, the first six-ish months of the fiscal year?
A. Uh-huh. Yes.
Q. And do you recall the numbers for that?
A. I didn't total them up. I can tell you that so far, it's -- the numbers are less compared to the fiscal year of 2017. How much less, I honestly can't tell you a number. I'm going to guess 30 percent, maybe, right now.

Q. Got it. Any reason why -- that you know of for why that figure is --
A. Well, I can speculate as to some of the reasons why. Each county has its own prosecutor. The prosecutors file cases at different rates. I can't tell you the why of how it happens. Some prosecutors hold files until the end of the year, or, for some reason, don't file cases until the end of the year, and then you'll get inundated with a lot of new filings.
In Randolph County, there's been a fairly substantial decrease in filings, really, September, October, November, but I -- based on history, I fully expect that to change. Some of that could be attributed to -- the prosecutor of Randolph County has made an application for being a judge, and he's a little bit distracted right now.
Q. Got it. Okay. So you don't think this is some -- from your experience, it doesn't appear that this is some broader trend that's going to relieve the burden on your office?
A. I don't believe so, based on the history of the office.

Q. Got it. And you had mentioned that the two attorneys in Randolph have gotten an influx of cases. Was that in the time -- but then you also said that in September, October, November in Randolph, there was a decrease. So just when did they get the increase and --
A. Well, it would have -- I won't say it was necessarily an increase, but with their carryover the prior fiscal year, they had just built up a large number of case that needed -- they needed time to work through.
Q. Okay. And when you say -- so you mention that often, for whatever reason, the prosecutors will file a number of cases at the very end of the year. So does that mean that you expect that in the next -- obviously, it's December -- almost the middle of the December, that you expect in the next couple of weeks, there'll be an influx of new cases?
A. I think it's very possible that that could happen, but it -- but it also -- I can't say that with any certainty because -- because it could easily happen later on, too. It depends, really, on the prosecutors.
Q. And what is this -- the election for the judicial seat that you were mentioning earlier?

Page 33

A. Well, I think they expect that to be an appointment made before the end of the year.
Q. Got it. Okay. At which time there'll be a new prosecutor in Randolph County, assuming he's appointed?
A. Yes.
Q. How many of the attorneys in your office handle felony cases?
A. All of the attorneys handle felony cases.
Q. And how many of them -- and that's all of the attorneys in -- all six of them -- five line attorneys, plus yourself?
A. Yes.
Q. And how many of them handle misdemeanor cases?
A. All of them handle misdemeanor cases.
Q. And how many of the attorneys handle juvenile cases?
A. All of them do. I have one attorney that -- she likes doing the juvenile work, and I give -- and she wants the opportunity to do juvenile cases as often as she can, and so we've migrated toward, if possible, allowing her to enter into all of the juvenile cases.
Q. But other attorneys in your office still have at least some juvenile cases?

A. I think at this time there's only one other lawyer that has a juvenile case that's pending. It's a little different in the rural counties. We don't always get appointed into juvenile cases. It's not a high volume part of our practice, as opposed to some of the larger metropolitan areas, where it's a big part of the practice.
Q. And do you know who does get appointed, if your office is not appointed to those juvenile cases?
A. Many times the court will appoint local lawyers into juvenile cases.
Q. Okay. Other than yourself -- obviously, you've been practicing for almost 30 years -- or 26 years. How long has the -- other than yourself, how long has the most experienced attorney in your office been practicing?
A. Robert Flemming in my office has worked for the state public defenders for 25 years. When Rob started practicing law, I can't tell you -- I'm guessing four or five years before he started with the public defender's office. Then the next two lawyers would have approximately three and a half to four years of experience, and then I have two lawyers that have two years of experience.

Q. Got it. So after Robert Fleming, who, obviously, has a couple of decades of experience, the next most experienced attorney -- line attorney in your office has three and a half to four years of experience?
A. Yes.
Q. Got it. Are there any other -- other than yourself, you mentioned you have supervisory responsibilities. Are there any other supervisors in the office -- supervisor attorneys?
A. No.
Q. I just want to talk for a second about initial appearances. Can you describe -- and I know you -- I understand that you represent -- that you represent individuals in five counties, so the practice may differ, but in the line run of cases, what the practice is at initial appearances, in terms of when an individual is arrested, what happens next?
And let me know if that question doesn't make sense, and I can clarify.
A. Well, the question makes sense, but it -- it varies from county to county. I will give -- I can give you a general scenarios for a couple of different ways.

In certain counties, an individual when they're arrested and are in -- and they can't post bond, the jails will fax to our office an application for services, and we'll review that application and determine whether or not the individual qualifies. That person may not have a court date for another week, or it could be two weeks before they will actually go in front of the judge, because the rural counties schedule differently. They don't have a -- necessarily have a law day every week. In those counties, we certainly would appear with that individual when they have their next court date.
In other counties that have a higher volume, the jails will either fax us the applications, or when we go to the jail seeing other clients, we will pick up those applications. Again, making the determination as to whether or not they qualify. And in those cases in those counties, generally, they would, depending on what day of the week the individual was arrested, they would go in front of a judge within five or six days.
Q. Got it. Okay.

And when is bail set, for the most part?
A. At the time that the judge issues a warrant, they will issue a bond -- they will set a bond amount.
Q. At the time the judge issues a warrant for someone's arrest?
A. Yes.
Q. So before they're even arrested?
A. Well, someone could have been arrested on view and brought to jail, and then they'll apply, but, typically, the bonds are set before they go to their first court appearance.
Q. Okay. And are those bonds set, then, before your office represents the individual?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And when -- again, in a typical case, understanding that there are some geographical and other differences -- when is your first contact with your clients? When and where does that occur?
A. I'm going say, generally, it would be at their first appearance in court.
Q. Okay. And is that, generally, again -- forgive me for the general question, but, generally, does that contact mean that the communication is occurring at counsel table or in the well of the court or something while court is in session -- and court is in session on other cases, not necessarily on that -- on the case --

A. I think that's relatively fair to say, that a lot of communication goes on that way. Some of the courthouses do have available rooms where you can meet with an attorney, but, certainly, it is a brief contact, at best.
Q. Okay. What -- and when you say "brief contact at best" -- sorry -- does that mean that sometimes there's very little contact before that initial appearance?
A. Yes.
Q. The initial time at least -- forget the initial appearance, because you could not have been there for that, but the first time you're appearing --
A. Again, it varies, but I think for the most part, it's fair to say that the first appearance at court -- when you're first having first contact with the client is brief, just because the court is -- the judge is on the bench, the court is moving at that time, and there's not an opportunity to have a lengthy conversation with the client.
Q. Okay. And what -- is it at that first hearing -- the first hearing that you're describing now, at least the first time that your office traditionally appears on the case for a client, is that at that hearing that bond reduction applications are made?

A. We would ask for -- we would make an oral application for bond reduction. Depending on what type of case, it may not be heard at that time, but, certainly, for some of the lower-level misdemeanor and felonies, the judges generally will take it up, but -- by oral motion.
Q. Okay. So, obviously, at that time, you and the attorneys in your office haven't had much time to investigate either the details of the case or the background --
A. We would have had no time to investigate the details of the case at that time.
Q. Would you have had time to investigate the background of the individual --
A. No. It would be based on what they were able to tell us and what was on their application.
Q. What they were able to tell you in that brief conversation you described earlier?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. What resources are available to the attorneys in your office for social work help, if any?

A. Well, what we try to do for the clients is, primarily, individuals that express a desire for drug treatment, that we will assist them in making applications for treatment, we will call treatment providers, get people on wait lists to try to get them into either in-patient -- to an in-patient treatment program. And it's primarily only substance abuse, because in Missouri, there's just not any available good sources for mental health treatment.
Q. All right. And in terms of experts, what resources are available for the attorneys in your office?
A. Do you mean, like, for use at trial experts or ...
Q. We can start with that, sure. For use at trial or for use at any stage. My general question is for use at any stage, you know, for pretrial motions or at trial.
A. I mean, we do have access to an expert database that we can look at, if we determine there's a need for an expert in the case to locate experts to hire to use in cases.

Page 41

Q. Okay. On average, how frequently do the attorneys in your office file pretrial motions, would you say?
A. I believe we're pretty aggressive on filing motions to dismiss, motions to suppress, and bond reduction motions.
Q. Okay. I want to show you an exhibit which I'll mark Plaintiff's Exhibit 29.
(Deposition Exhibit No. 29 was marked for identification.)
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Let me know when you've had a chance to look this over.
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. Do you recognize this exhibit I've marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 29?
A. Yes.
Q. And what is it?
A. It's a letter that I sent out in October to -- this letter is addressed to the circuit judge of Randolph County, Scott Hayes, and it -- and the purpose of the letter was to alert Judge Hayes that we may have issues with the number of cases and accepting new cases in the months to come.
Q. Okay. And is Judge Hayes the only judge in Randolph County?

Page 42

A. Well, Judge Hayes is the circuit judge. There is an associate judge. At that time, it was Cynthia Suter in Randolph County, and there's an associate judge in Howard County, Mason Gephardt.
Q. Okay. And you see at the top the letter is dated October 2nd, 2017; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And if you turn to the -- looking now at the Bates stamp numbers at the bottom, it's MSPD39410. Do you see that -- the last page of the letter?
A. Yes.
Q. And who is the letter signed by?
A. It's mine -- well, it's my electronic signature.
Q. Your electronic signature. Fair enough. And that's -- under your -- above the caption, "Edward L. Guinn Area 14 District Defender"?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And who drafted this letter, if you know?
A. Well, I drafted it. Quite honestly, it was -- another office had sent out a letter that -- here's an example of what we sent out to alert the judges in their circuit, and rather than reinvent the wheel, I just redrafted that letter.

Q. So you adapted it for your office, but the general template was one used by another office previously?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And do you recall which office that was?
A. I believe that this was the letter that came out of the Boone County Area 13 office.
Q. Okay. All right. So I'd like to refer you, then, to a few portions of the letter, if I might.
So you talk in the first paragraph about -- in the seconds sentence, I'm sure you're aware of the recent action taken by OCDC against a public defender." Do you see?
A. Yes.
Q. And is that referring to the Hinkebein decision?
A. Yes.
Q. And the Hinkebein case -- not just the decision, obviously, since you're talking about OCDC's recommendation, et cetera?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And then you see in the second paragraph -- can you read the first two sentences in that paragraph for us?

A. "The Supreme Court referenced Rule 4-1.7, which states, in part, that it is a conflict of interest if there is a significant risk that the representation of one or more clients will be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client. MSPD recognizes that while each attorney is employed by the office of the Missouri State Public Defender, it is the individual and personal responsibility of each attorney to comply with the rules of professional conduct."
Q. And, obviously, you -- you know, you sent this letter. I presume you agree with this -- the statements expressed. You still agree with the statements expressed in the first two sentences in that paragraph?
A. I do.
Q. And at the bottom of that page, you'll see that it says, "Attorneys violate those rules --" meaning the rules of professional conduct -- "-- if they accept a case that results in -- " I presume there's an "in missing -- "-- that results in representation to act with reasonable diligence and to keep the client reasonably informed." Do you see that?

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And then if you turn to the -- on the next page -- again, I'm talking now about 39409. Do you see the paragraph in the middle of the page that begins with "As of today's date"?
A. Yes.
Q. Can you just read that paragraph for us?
A. "As of today's date, I believe the attorneys assigned to Randolph County are currently violating the rules of the professional conduct. Their current individual caseloads reflect a conflict of interest with existing clients because they are forced to choose effective representation of one client to the detriment of other clients. I believe assigning any new cases to any individual attorneys would create a conflict of interest because they would have no ability to adequately represent either their current or prospective clients."
Q. Okay. And do you still agree with the sentiments expressed in that letter -- in that paragraph?
A. Well, yes. Again, based on -- this was based on the case levels at that time.

Page 46

Q. Got it.
A. The sent -- I mean, the -- and I believe the interpretation of law remains the same.
Q. Okay. And -- so what motivated you to send this letter?
A. Well, primarily, the Hinkebein decision was the primary motivating factor.
Q. And can you tell us your understanding of the Hinkebein case and decision?
A. Well, I suppose in a nutshell, is that the rules of professional responsibility apply to lawyers employed by the state public defender's office, and that we have to comply with those rules, and that it's each individual attorney's obligation to conduct themselves in a way that follows the rules of professional conduct.
Q. Got it. Okay. And so your opinion, based on your many years of experience, at least at the time you sent this letter, was that the attorneys in your office weren't able to ethically take on additional cases?
A. At that time, yes.
Q. Okay. And then if you look at the next paragraph, also still on 39409, the next sentence after the one you read said, "The Randolph County Public Defender will no longer be immediately entering into cases in which a defendant has qualified."

Page 47

A. Correct.
Q. And then a couple of sentences later it says:
"If the perspective client qualifies, I will not assign an attorney until there is an attorney who can assume the representation without violating the rules of professional conduct."
Is that right?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And then the next sentence:
"We cannot file an entry with individual attorneys bar number if we and the attorneys know that doing so violates the rules of professional conduct."
Is that right?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And I'll just read the rest of the paragraph, actually .
"To be clear, there are not hidden agendas or motivations with regard to this decision. This is simply about ensuring all Area 14 public defenders are able to maintain their license to practice law without threat of discipline by OCDC."

Page 48

Is that right?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. And so you wanted to ensure that the -- you and the line attorneys in your office for whom you're responsible were not threatened -- that their bar licenses were not threatened by virtue of their representation of additional new clients that they weren't able to represent?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And then I want to look at 39410, the next page of that letter. The first full paragraph on that page says:
"We have started an internal wait list for defendants who qualify for representation but who do not yet have an attorney assigned to them."
And then the -- skipping a sentence.
"We will be providing defendants on the wait list with a letter advising them they qualify and that we will notify them as soon as an attorney is available to take their case." Is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Did your office at any point have such a wait list?
A. We did.

Q. Okay. Can you tell me about that -- how it was set up, who was on it, and the like? I'll have some follow-up questions, but ...

A. I can't tell you who -- what clients were on it. I can tell you that after this letter was sent out, that as applications came in, they were reviewed to determine eligibility. And the hierarchy for placing people on the list was individuals that were in custody were at the top of the list. Cases where the individuals were not in custody were still on the list, but they had a lower priority, and that's how it was maintained. Also, I was very concerned about individuals that were in custody and moving them off of that wait list as quickly as possible. I quite honestly think that the longest anyone was on the wait list was a little over a week at that time.

Q. Okay. And is that -- was that wait list limited to Randolph County?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And does your office still have a wait list?

A. We do not.

Q. Okay. And is that because -- is that at least in part because you took on a number of -- a fair number of additional cases to your own caseload?

A. Yes. And the fact that, as we discussed earlier, the prosecutor in Randolph has not been filing as many cases the last month or so.

Q. Got it. And, again, your opinion, based on your many years, both in this office and practice generally, is that that's a time limited caseload slowdown due to some -- the vagaries of that particular prosecutor's office?

A. I believe, based on the history of how cases come into our office, that this is a temporary slowdown.

Q. Certainly, the prosecutor -- either an individual prosecutor or the head prosecutor in that office hasn't indicated to you that he now believes fewer criminal defendants should be charged and brought to court for any reason?

A. We have not had a discussion like that at all.

Q. And if there's a time when the caseload, as you expect it to, picks up again, is -- are you -- is a wait list something that you are contemplating as a possibility for the future, if and when that occurs?

Page 51

A. Yes. I mean, this is a dynamic process. I -- next -- you know, the next time we have a wait list, it may not be Randolph County, it may be another county. Again, it depends on how many cases are filed, what type of cases each attorney has in their inventory of cases, and what their individual -- I mean, this is -- it has to be an individual determination by each lawyer that -- are they meeting their obligations in the representation of their clients?

Q. Okay. And I just -- I would like you to just read one final sentence, if you could, on 39410. It's the sentence in the second-to-last paragraph, "The only ends."

A. "The only ends I am aspiring to achieve is the effective zealous and diligent representation of poor persons by counsel who are not under threat of bar discipline by OCDC."

Q. Okay. Thank you. And what was the response, if any, from the judges or the court system in Randolph County to this letter?

A. I believe it was very positive. Judge Hayes contacted me, and we scheduled a meeting, and Judge Hayes and I met and talked about the caseloads and moving cases through the court and what the court could do to help with the caseloads and -- and it was kind of a far ranging discussion about bonding and aspects of court procedure that might make things more efficient for lawyers to alleviate some of this burden.

Q. And what -- if you can give -- you don't have to give every example, but an example or two of things that were discussed at that time.

A. Well, the judge certainly had ideas of how he wants his court run, and he was -- had -- was making suggestions about how he would schedule cases and utilize other judges to perhaps move dockets, make them more efficient, and that's probably the -- a primary discussion with the judge as to how to make his court more efficient so that lawyers aren't sitting for extended periods of time on long all-day dockets.

Q. And what, if any, was the response of the prosecutor in the prosecutor's office in Randolph County to this letter?

A. There was no conversation with the prosecutor about the letter.

Q. Okay. And you mentioned, again, the waiting list and that you were concerned about moving those in custody off the waiting list as soon as possible. I take it, therefore, that there were at least some individuals who were in custody who were on the waiting list for at least some short period of time.

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. I'd like to show you what I'll now mark as Plaintiff's Exhibit 30.

(Deposition Exhibit No. 30 was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Let me know when you've had a chance to look it over.

A. I have.

Q. And do you recognize this letter?

A. I do.

Q. And what is it?

A. It a letter, again, dated October 2nd that was sent to Judge Fred Tucker in -- who is the circuit judge of Macon County.

Q. Okay. And, again, if we turn to the last page, 39407, there's your electronic signature there; is that right?

A. That's correct.

Q. And, again, over the signature caption of "Edward L. Guinn Area 14 District Defender"?

A. Correct.

Page 54

Q. And if you recall, is this letter -- other than substituting in Macon County for Randolph County and similar changes for attorneys and the like, is this, in all substantive respects, otherwise identical to the letter that you sent to Judge Hayes in Randolph County, Plaintiff's Exhibit 29?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And you explained before why you were motivated to send the Randolph County letter. I presume, since this was sent on the same day, that similar motivations inspired you to send this letter -- the Macon County letter. Is that fair?

A. Yes. And -- but I suppose I'll have a caveat. When this letter was sent to Macon County, I had not had a discussion with the attorney that's primarily responsible for Macon County to determine his -- whether or not he believed that he was in need of help or in need of case relief.

Q. Okay. I'll show you one additional letter, if I could, which I'll mark Plaintiff's Exhibit 31.

(Deposition Exhibit No. 31 was marked for identification.)

Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Let me know when you've had a chance to look at that.

A. Yes.

Q. And do you recognize this letter?

A. I do.

Q. And what is it?

A. This is also a letter dated October 2nd, 2017. It was sent to Judge Terry Tschannen, who is the circuit judge of the Ninth Judicial Circuit of Linn -- which is Linn County and Chariton County.

Q. Got it. And, again, other than substituting in Linn County and any related ministerial or logistical changes to account for that, is this letter, in all substantive respects, otherwise identical to Exhibits 29 and 30?

A. It is the same letter, yes.

Q. And, again, it's signed -- if you look at page 39404, it has your electronic signature above the caption, "Edward L. Guinn Area 14 District Defender"; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. And were the same reasons that motivated you to send the -- Plaintiff's Exhibit 29 to Judge Hayes in Randolph County the reasons that you sent this letter to Judge Tschannen in Linn County?

Page 56

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. You mentioned -- forgive me -- that Judge Tschannen covers Linn and Chariton Counties. Do these three letters, given which judges cover which counties, cover all five counties that your office is responsible for?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And what, if any, changes -- I guess we can go look back to Plaintiff's Exhibit 30, the letter to Judge Tucker in Macon County. What, if any, changes occurred in your office's practice in Macon County as a result of this letter?

A. There was not a wait list instituted in Macon County because the attorney that was handling that county believed that he was in compliance with the rule. I did meet with Judge Tucker and had the same kind of discussion about what things could the court do to make the court dockets more efficient and to assist in making, I guess, court appearances easier and assist in not necessarily appointing the public defender's office in certain types of cases that weren't, perhaps, necessary for an individual to have a lawyer appointed: Namely, probation cases. Because Judge Tucker acknowledged that he had a bad habit of appointing the public defender's office in cases where there really wasn't a constitutional need for a lawyer. He was appointing the public defender's office to assist people -- to use them as a social agency to assist people to get into drug treatment.

Q. Got it. When you say "probation cases," do you mean probation revocation cases?

A. Probation revocation cases, yes.

Q. Okay. And do some of the individuals in probation -- who are facing probation revocation cases face jail time as a result of -- as a possible result of that probation violation?

A. They do. Our discussion with Judge Tucker is that they were -- he acknowledged that there were certain cases he had no intention of sending someone to prison. He wanted the individuals into a drug treatment program, and since he had been a former public defender many years ago, he believed that the public defender's office had an ability to get people into drug treatment much faster than probation and parole officers did.

Q. And was the agreement that you came to with Judge Tucker that your office would not be appointed in any probation revocation cases going forward, or just in a subset of probation revocation cases or ...

A. No. There was -- I mean, there was no agreement. The judge indicated to me that he would do his best efforts. If it was, again, an individual that he had no intention of sending to prison, that he would use other avenues to get them into drug treatment and not just always appoint the public defender's office as a stopgap, that he would rely more on probation and parole officers to do what, you know, we believed to be their job, to assist their -- people that are on probation to get into treatment programs.

Q. Okay. Now, turning back to Plaintiff's Exhibit 31, the letter to Judge Tschannen in Linn County -- or responsible for Linn and Chariton Counties. What, if any, changes occurred in your office's practice in those counties as a result of this letter?

A. Really, no changes in our practices. Again, the lawyer that's assigned to that -- to Linn County has indicated that he's able to meet his obligations. That's true to an extent. I have taken some of the serious felony cases from that area, so -- in order to alleviate his case numbers. We did -- I did meet with Judge Tschannen and

Judge Othic at their request, and, again, the conversation was, What can we do to assist, what can we do in terms of court procedure to help your lawyers -- because they understand the distance that we're traveling -- and we had a discussion about bonds and the court setting bonds and talked about potential changes into their local court practice.

Q. So did -- it sounds like in addition to the cases you've talked about previously that you took in Randolph County to -- because the attorneys there weren't ethically able to take on new cases, you also, then, took on cases -- some serious cases, you mentioned, in Linn County because you -- sorry. That was a long preface.

Was the reason that you took on those additional cases -- serious cases in Linn County because you didn't think that -- in your opinion, that the attorney in Linn County could ethically handle those additional cases?

A. Correct. The attorney that is currently assigned Linn County is two years out of law school, and even though he is working very hard and does a good job, there was an incident back in October in which the prosecutor filed five, what I would call, serious felony, sex crime cases, and that lawyer would not be able to work his current caseload and effectively represent five individuals with those type of serious felony charges.

Q. Got it. So as a result, you took on -- how many of those cases did you take on? How many -- of those five that you're speaking of.

A. There's -- I have three of them.

Q. And he took the remaining two?

A. No. The other -- they were conflicted out because there were conflicts in the office.

Q. Got it. And so those were sent to a private attorney?

A. Uh-huh.

Q. So all of the cases of those ones, at least, that you're just speaking of that remained in your office, you took all of them onto your own docket?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Any other cases from Linn County that you took on recently that you otherwise would not have?

A. No.

Q. Okay. And where are the bulk of your cases? I mean, you've described that each of the other attorneys sort of have their geographic areas of expertise, but -- that they're responsible for. Are your cases limited to a particular geographic area or not?

A. No. I have cases in Randolph, Linn, and Adair County and Shelby County, and that's -- yeah, that's all.

Q. Okay. And I take it, again, you read the -- the letter about Rule 4-1.7, which the Supreme Court referred to in the Hinkebein decision, which talks about a conflict of interest, if there's a significant risk that the representation of one or more clients will be materially limited by the lawyer's responsibilities to another client. Do you recall --

A. Yes.

Q. -- that sentence from your letters? And I take it that was your ethical concern with this attorney in Linn County, that he wouldn't be -- it would be a conflict of interest if he took on those -- these additional serious cases, given his ethical responsibilities to his existing clients?

A. I think that's -- certainly, that is part of it. The other part is, he's a new lawyer, and he will be involved with this case, he will be second chairing, if the cases go to trial, he will be involved with the cases, but he could not, I don't believe, ethically represent these individuals because of the combination of inexperience and his case numbers.

Q. Okay. And for the attorneys in Randolph County -- the two attorneys you mentioned who -- for which you took on a number of cases to your own docket because of their ethical concerns about their caseload, was that also because of a conflict of interest rule and other rules of professional conflict that we're talking about here?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. It sounds like -- because you said that the -- other than -- and I believe his name was -- was his name Mr. Flemming?

A. Rob Flemming, yes.

Q. Rob Flemming. Other than Mr. Flemming, the other four attorneys -- line attorneys in your office, none of them have been there longer than four years; is that right -- or four and a half years, I think you said?

A. Correct.

Q. So in the time that you've been at the Area 14 office, first as an assistant public defender, and now as the district defender, which is since 2011, four of the five line attorneys have left the office and been replaced by new attorneys. Is that fair to say?

A. Yes. I was counting the numbers of -- trying to remember who is coming on in that time. We've been very fortunate in that we haven't had a huge turnover in the last two years.

Q. But in the last four years?

A. Yes. There's been four lawyers that have left.

Q. Out of five?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And where, if you know, did those attorneys go?

A. One lawyer transferred to the -- what's designated as the SVP unit in the public defender system. One lawyer left to go -- move back to St. Louis to work -- I believe he went to work in the juvenile court in some way in St. Louis. A third lawyer left and went to Springfield to the prosecutor's office, and then a fourth lawyer, she left and moved with her husband to be to Milwaukee -- no, Detroit, and she works in the state juvenile system. It's the Division -- it's kind of like the Missouri State Public Defender, but she represents juvenile clients.

Q. Got it. Okay. And what effect on clients, if any, is there when there's turnover in the office and the individuals -- the line attorneys who are working in the office on that -- on the previous individual's clients, what effect, if any, is there?

A. Well, I think -- it's never good to have a change in representation in the course of the representation of a client. It makes the clients uneasy, it -- you know, a new lawyer has to spend time familiarizing themselves, and so it -- more than anything, it just adds time. If it's an individual that's in custody, that means they stay, potentially, in custody longer. I think ultimately there's not a negative impact but for the increase in time and the increase in workload on the other lawyers in the office.

Q. Got it. Okay. How many of your -- approximately what percentage of cases in your office are resolved by plea deals or agreements?

A. I'm going to estimate that it's probably at least 90 percent.

Q. Okay. Do you know how many trials your office did in the -- say the last fiscal year --

fiscal year '17?
A. I believe there was ten.
Q. Approximately.
A. Yeah.
Q. Okay. And remind me, again, if you could of the -- you said the total case number was about 15- --
A. It was -- it's over 1,500. I want to say it was 1,560, somewhere around that number.
Q. Okay. So without getting into heavy math here --
A. The bench trials -- I can't tell you how many bench trials were done because I don't really look at those.
Q. Got it.
A. There would have been some number of bench trials done also.
Q. As an estimate, do you think more than 50 bench trials?
A. I don't think it would be that high. I don't think that trials -- it isn't always the measure of what happens in the life of cases. There's a -- you know, there's a substantial number of cases that are dismissed. I mean, they all don't -- all cases aren't pled out, is what I'm getting to. But all of them are not tried, either, because you do have dismissals, you have alternate dispositions, and I don't keep track of dismissals. At that time -- I don't keep track of dismissals or deferred prosecutions, those type of dispositions.

Q. Got it. Okay. And, typically, when in the life of a case would your office file motions? Would it be closer to the eve of trial or early in the case, or does it depend?
A. It certainly depends on what motions you're talking about. Bond reduction motions are filed early on in the case. Suppression motions, something of that sort would be filed -- they might be filed prior to preliminary hearings, or they might be filed after preliminary hearings. Motions to dismiss, though -- there's not truly a motion to dismiss provided for in the rules -- are filed, typically, after preliminary hearings.
So it's -- it's an ongoing process. I can't give you a hard and fast rule because every case is so fact dependent.
Q. Got it. That's fair. What steps, if any, do you take -- do you or the attorneys in your office take to evaluate the immigration consequences a client might be facing as a result of a criminal prosecution recommendation?

A. That's part of our intake when we meet with a client, is we always ask if they are a United States citizen or if they can tell us what their immigration status is. If we have clients -- and we do from time to time, though our area is not -- doesn't have a large population of immigrants, but when we do have that issue arise, there are resources within the state public defender system that we can access to evaluate that person's status and how these -- our particular case that we're representing them on will affect their immigration status up to -- ultimately, if necessary, trying to get them counsel to represent them regarding their immigration status with INS.
Q. Got it. Okay. Have any -- just jumping around for one second, have any private attorneys been -- other than in conflict cases like you've described, have there been any private attorneys appointed to represent clients who -- appointed by the courts in the five counties that you work in -- any private attorneys been appointed to represent individuals who are otherwise qualified to -- qualified for public defender services?
A. No.

Page 68

Q. Okay.
MR. SCHERZER: I think actually -- should we take -- I'm going to pull up another couple of exhibits, but should we take a break for a couple of minutes -- five minutes?
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 10:08 a.m., and we're off the record.
(A recess was taken.)
VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 10:19 a.m., and we're back on the record.
Q. (By Mr. Scherzer) Okay. So, Mr. Guinn, I'm going to show you what's been previously marked as Plaintiff's Exhibit 21, which is this -- we're laughing because the cover page to -- there's some corruption in the files, and the cover page is a little messed up. I guess I'll show you the cover page.
So if you could, at the top of the page, do you see this seal starting in the middle of the page -- or the top third of the page, I guess, to be fair?
A. Yes.
Q. And does that say "Missouri State Public Defender Commission"?
A. Yes.

Page 69

Q. And then underneath it, it says, "Fiscal year 2018"; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And it says, "Approved, October 25th, 2017"?
A. Yes.
Q. And then there's a star, but it looks like it's saying, "Supplemental Legislative Letter Request. Is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And underneath it says, "Michael Barrett, Director, Commission Meeting October 25, 2017"?
A. Yes.
Q. Prepared by Kathleen Lear, comptroller?
A. Yes.
Q. And that is all on page 38970; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And then if you don't mind turning to page 38976, if you could -- the last page of that exhibit. And do you -- maybe not this particular chart, but do you -- have you seen a chart that looks like this for the 33 areas or districts in the Missouri State Public Defender System previously?

Page 70

A. I have seen it, yes.
Q. Okay. And do you -- and do you see at the top it says, "State public Defender Cumulative Caseload Metrics, Fiscal Year 2017"?
A. Yes.
Q. And then start date, July 1st, 2016, just below that?
A. Yes.
Q. And end date June 30th, 2017?
A. Yes.
Q. And do you see -- sort of in the lower third of the page, you see Area 14, Moberly?
A. Yes.
Q. And it says number of attorneys, six in the next column?
A. Yes.
Q. And number of case initiated, 1,547 -- 1,547?
A. Yes.
Q. And then it says, "Minus cases withdrawn." What does that mean, if you know?
A. I don't know.
Q. Okay. And then it says, "Net new cases, 1,367." Is that right?
A. Yes.

Page 71

Q. And then if you go to the percent of capacity, do you see that in the second-to-last column?
A. Yes.
Q. And that says -- or what percentage does it say -- or I can tell you, I guess, because it's a little hard to trace the line. It's 247.5 percent.
A. Yes.
Q. Is that right? Okay. And what does that mean, if you -- if you know?
A. I don't know.
Q. Okay. If I -- so this chart, if I -- if I were to represent to you that this chart is based on the RubinBrown numbers, do you -- do you know what the RubinBrown -- are you familiar with the RubinBrown study?
A. I know there was a RubinBrown study, but outside of just the general knowledge that it occurred, I know nothing else about the RubinBrown study.
Q. Got it. Fair enough. I think I'm done with that for now.
I want to talk, then, about your caseload, and, in particular, the caseload that you have taken on recently in order to try to ensure that your line attorneys meet their ethical obligations. You said it was about 80 cases; is that right?

A. Yes.
Q. And that's in addition to the other responsibilities that you have in the office, in terms of supervision, budget, hiring, and the like?
A. Yes.
Q. Is that right? Okay. And you mentioned that it's significantly higher than your caseloads have been previously; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And when we say that, is that -- have there been any other times, since you were the district defender, where your caseload was higher than 80 cases, other than this most recent time period that we're talking about?
A. Yes.
Q. And what was that time period?
A. During fiscal year 2017, I had a lawyer that was on Family Medical Leave, and so I took over the Macon County docket for the time period that he was gone, and at that time, I would have had in excess -- you know, had been around the hundred cases, maybe a little more. During times when -- if -- we've been -- I've been fortunate that I've not had a large turnover in attorneys, but whenever there is a turnover attorney, at those times, I typically will take over that county until I am able to hire another lawyer.

Q. Got it. Okay. So other than times where you're taking over an additional load, either because of ethical concerns for your line attorneys or because someone has left the office or is on leave, your caseload is typically around 55 or so cases; is that right?

A. Yeah. In that area. I -- my criteria for taking cases has to do with the seriousness of the felony, and sometimes there is -- not so much now, but there used to be a geographic consideration, because I would try to save the assistant public defenders from being tied up driving extended distances, if that was at all possible.

Q. Okay. And when you said not so much now, can you explain that?

A. Because of the funding for conflict attorneys, that has alleviated some of those cases.

Q. So you -- prior to that, which is -- for this fiscal year, 2018, additional funding, prior to that, you took on more than your share of conflict cases?

Page 74

A. Well, I don't know that I would describe it as more than my share, but I took conflict cases that required -- that weren't in -- venued in our normal counties or that were not venued close to where an assigned attorney was already practicing.

Q. Got it. Okay. And when -- what percentage, if you know -- or what portion -- of your caseload -- not speaking of your office's caseload but your individual caseload, are serious -- let me ask it this way: Are felony cases versus misdemeanor or other, you know, probation revocation cases? And a ballpark is fine.

A. I'm going to say 90 percent or more.

Q. Okay. So is it fair to say, then, that you -- for your individual caseload -- again, not the caseload of your office but your individual caseload, you take on a higher percentage of the more serious cases than the general percentage for the line attorneys in your office?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And it sounds like we've already -- you have already testified to this, that that's because you want to ensure that your line attorneys are able to meet their ethical demand -- the ethical requirements to their other clients and, thus, not have many -- you know, too high a number of more serious cases?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. And do you have any sense of what fraction, portion of your cases -- you said more than 90 percent are felony, but what portion of those are A and B felony or murder or the more serious types of felony charges?

A. Percentage-wise, I don't. I mean, I -- I can tell you how many -- I have -- currently have two murder cases and I have six or seven multi-count A and B -- well, actually, now ten multi-count -- what I would classify as serious felony child sex cases.

Q. Got it. So you're not saying you have ten A and B felonies, you're saying just -- you have two murder cases and ten multi-count child sex cases?

A. Yes.

Q. And, obviously, each of those ten cases is, as you've said, very serious?

A. Yes.

Q. What's the maximum penalty that the individual in those cases is facing, if you know?

A. Life in prison.

Q. Okay. In each of those ten cases?

Page 76

A. Well, not in every case, but --

Q. Okay.

A. -- certainly, in the -- as the murder cases are charged right now, there could be a maximum penalty of life. In a couple of the -- of the child sex cases, they're facing -- they could potentially face a life sentence.

Q. Okay. And so that's 12 cases, which is already a significant portion of your docket, but other than those cases, do you have a general sense of how many A, B felonies you have?

A. Well, B felonies, the -- no. In real numbers, I do not. Certainly, the vast majority of my caseload, once you exclude out the serious -- what I would classify as serious felony cases would be drug-related crimes, which could be -- well, typically -- what used to be called a B felony, drug distribution or -- but, primarily, I think a larger majority would be drug-related crimes that have to deal with possession.

Q. Got it. Okay.

And when your caseload spikes, as it has now, to 80 or in previous times where it spiked to, like, as you said, a hundred, what effect, if any, does that have on -- let's start with on your time and ability to communicate with your clients.

A. It's a true struggle to maintain communication. My view is that numbers in excess of 80 cases are not sustainable for long-term periods of time, because I believe that you'll -- that the individual lawyer will start falling below the standard of care for representation of clients.
Q. Okay. And that's 80 cases, generally, and, of course, as you've described you have a higher percentage of more serious cases on your docket than is normal?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So it sounds, then, like you have serious concerns that you either are at or are approaching a level at which you may not be able to meet your ethical obligations to your clients?
A. My current caseload is not sustainable.
Q. When you say -- sorry.
A. I don't believe that the caseload that I have right now should be carried and still meet the standard of representation.
Q. Okay. So to clarify, if you were to continue carrying this caseload for any lengthy period of time, you would feel like you could not meet your ethical obligations to your clients?

Page 78

A. If I -- yes. I would feel that, and I would be put in a position that I would have to self-report --
Q. Okay.
A. -- to the Office of Disciplinary Counsel.
Q. Okay.
A. In all fairness, to the clients.
Q. Understood. And are you aware that others of your colleagues -- other district defenders I'm speaking of now -- have self-reported?
A. I don't know if they have or not. I mean, I suppose that's an option, but I've not talked to any other district defenders or, in fact, talked to anyone else about self-reporting. To me, that's an individual lawyer's obligation to do.
Q. Okay. But it's something that you have at least -- is at least something that you are aware of as a possibility you would need to do, if your caseload continues --
A. If I'm not able to provide effective representation to my clients, I will do that.
Q. Got it. And, as you've indicated already, if your caseload continues as it is currently, at 80 cases, you feel like you will not be able to provide effective representation to your clients?

A. I believe that that is not a sustainable number, yes.
Q. And tell me about -- let's say -- in the world in which your caseload does continue at 80 cases, tell me about some of the repercussions that that has for -- we talked about client contact. What other repercussions does that have for your clients -- or would that have for your clients? And I can break it down, if that's helpful or ...
A. Well, I can't -- I mean, here -- I can't really give you an answer to that question, but to see that the -- that the -- each individual case is fact dependent. The work that needs to be done and the -- and the representation that the clients are entitled to, that doesn't change. And so what needs to be done on an individual case will vary from person to person to person. While I am -- what I am saying is, that I believe that I -- that as a lawyer, I've got an obligation to provide each client with effective representation. When my case numbers are too high or when any lawyer's case numbers are too high, they do not have the time to physically provide effective representation to every client, and that is -- I believe that's a violation of the rules, and I don't believe that it's fundamentally fair to the individual client.

Q. And the rules that you're speaking of --
A. The Missouri Rules of Professional Responsibility.
Q. Okay. Also known -- the Missouri Rules of Professional Conduct, same thing; is that right?
A. Yes.
Q. And, in particular, Rule 4, is that --
A. Correct.
Q. -- fair? And is your understanding that that -- that those rules and Rule 4, in particular -- as well as all the other rules, but including Rule 4 governs public defenders -- district defenders and line defenders, just as it governs other attorneys in Missouri?
A. Well -- and I don't mean to be argumentative, but there is no difference between a public defender and a private lawyer in the State of Missouri as the rules of professional conduct are applied. We have the same rules. And I believe that my opinion is that it is inaccurate to try and say there's one set of rules for public defenders and another set of rules for private attorneys.
Q. Your opinion is that those rules govern you -- the --

A. It is irrelevant who you are employed by. That you are -- if you are a lawyer licensed in the State of Missouri, the rules of professional responsibility apply to you, and you have an ethical obligation to each client to provide them with effective representation. And if you're unable to do so, then you need to protect the client in any way -- by any means necessary.

Q. And do you have a duty as a supervisor to ensure that your -- under the rules of professional conduct, that your line attorneys are able to meet their ethical obligations to their clients as well?

A. I believe that I do, yes.

Q. Okay. And -- so we were talking about some of the ways that a caseload that's too high can impact your ability to represent your clients, and we talked about client contact, which is, obviously -- or perhaps you could explain why client contact is so important not just to the client but to the actual legal -- the legal case that each client faces. Why is client contact important?

A. Well, client contact is important on several different levels. I mean, first and foremost, if you are representing an individual who is in custody, that person has to have some confidence, they have to have some trust in their lawyer, and the only way that you develop a good attorney-client relationship is by having contact with your client. You can't do that -- and I believe it has to be in-person, face-to-face contact. I don't believe that you can do that by written letter, and I don't believe that you can do that by telephone to be effective -- to effectively represent your client.

So, first and foremost, contact, so you can have a positive attorney-client relationship. The other is communicating with your client about all aspects of his case. Explaining to them this complicated court system and the complicated environment of a criminal lawsuit is difficult for people to understand, and it can't -- and, again, I don't believe that it can be done by writing a letter or by telephone, and it takes a series of meetings with individuals before they have some confidence in the system and in their representation.

Q. Okay. And are there also things -- and you touched on this a bit, but there are things that you can learn from the client, not just in terms of what you can explain to them, but that you can learn that are critical to their case?

A. Sure. You have to have contact with the clients in order to be able to effectively investigate their cases. The information that you receive from your clients through face-to-face meetings is invaluable, and it takes -- it's always a process. Some clients are more forthcoming, others, it takes more time.

Q. Okay. Is one of the other ways that your representation of clients can be impaired when your caseload approaches an unethical level, that you don't have time to conduct investigation into the facts and circumstances of what the offense charged?

A. I believe that there's a real possibility that that could occur, yes.

Q. And is that something that you're concerned about -- is that one of the things that you're concerned about, if your caseload were to continue at its current level going forward?

A. That is one of the areas that I am concerned with, as I am with the lawyers -- other lawyers in the office as a supervisory position. I mean, the policies of the state public defender's office and the policies within our office is that we investigate cases, that we -- and that there are certain minimum standards that I personally impose on my lawyers on how they conduct their investigations and contacts with their client.

Q. Okay. And there have been -- it sounds like there have been times, at least where you -- I mean, you've said already there have been times where you've been concerned that the attorneys in your office were not able to meet their ethical requirements as to their individual caseload, if they were to take on new cases?

A. It is -- yes. And as a supervisor, I am going to do my level best not to put my attorneys in that position. I -- you know, I have young lawyers on my staff, they are starting their careers, and they need an opportunity to practice law and develop those skills and habits so they can be effective lawyers. It takes time to do that, and I am -- my personal opinion is that I'm going to do everything that I can do to make sure that that happens and that they are successful in their career.

Q. Okay. Just give me one second, if you could, Mr. Guinn.

Let's go to Exhibit 20.

I'm showing you, Mr. Guinn what's been marked previously as Exhibit 20. Do you recognize that document?

Page 85

A. Yes.
Q. Okay. And what is it?
A. Well, this would be labeled as Rule 4-5.1, "Responsibility as partners managers and supervisory lawyers."
Q. Okay. And is that one of the rules of professional conduct that we -- one of the portions of Rule 4 of the rules of professional conduct that we were discussing earlier?
A. Yes.
Q. And that, as we have already established, is a rule that governs public defenders, just as it does every other attorney in the State of Missouri?
A. Yes.
Q. And that rule, in particular, applies to you, is that right, because you're a supervisor in the district -- you are the supervisor in the Area 14 office; is that right.
A. Yes.
Q. Could you read Subsection B out loud for us, the sentence there?
A. "A lawyer having direct supervisory authority over another lawyer shall make reasonable efforts to ensure that the lawyer -- other lawyer conforms to the rules of professional conduct."

Q. And then if you could, could you read C and -- Subsection C and Subsection C(1), the one underneath C, just those two sentences?
A. "A lawyer shall be responsible for another lawyer's violation of the rules of professional conduct if (1) the lawyer orders, or with knowledge of the specific conduct, ratifies the conduct involved."
Q. Okay. So is it fair to say that -- and so do you believe that this -- is it your opinion that this rule applies to you -- every portion of this rule applies to you as director of -- district defender of --
A. This rule does apply to me as a supervisor of other attorneys.
Q. Okay. And is it fair to say that one of the reasons that you've taken on this additional too high of caseload for yourself is because you're concerned that, otherwise, you would violate your role as a supervisor -- your duties and responsibilities as a supervisor to ensure that your line attorneys comply with the rules of professional conduct?
A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Is there -- other than giving additional -- you've described this caseload of 80 that you have currently and your concerns that if that continues, you will have to self-report as committing an ethical violation. Other than assigning those cases to -- or new additional cases back to your line attorneys, do you have any other means of meeting the caseload in your counties? And I can rephrase, if that's confusing.
A. No. I think I understand your question. And the answer would be, I would have to assign cases to other lawyers in my office.
Q. Great. Okay. So there -- and so another way of saying it is, there aren't attorneys -- public defender attorneys from outside of your district that could come in and take a good portion of the cases from your office's hands and represent clients in those cases, other than -- you know, an occasional conflict case or something, but in terms of any significant number of cases in your office?
A. I don't believe there is, but that would be a discussion that would have to be with the upper management.
Q. Certainly, you don't have the authority to ask an attorney from another office to come in and take those cases?

A. I do not have the authority to send cases to another office.
Q. And are you generally aware of caseload concerns and problems in other district offices in MSPD?
A. Yes.
Q. Okay. So then just circling back to the choice you're faced with, is it fair to say that that choice is -- you can either take on cases for yourself -- additional cases to your own caseload, which cause you to be concerned about violating your ethical responsibilities to your clients, or you can assign those cases to your line attorneys, in which case you're concerned about them violating their ethical obligations to their clients?
A. I think both of those are potential options. Also, what we originally did in Randolph County was putting people on wait lists until case note -- until lawyers were able to work through cases already assigned to them so that they had -- their time would be freed up to take new cases.
Q. Okay. Is there any -- other -- so that's an additional option. Any other option available to you on a regular basis, other than those -- taking on too many cases for yourself, giving your line attorneys too many cases, or a wait list that would be available to you in your role as a district defender in Area 14?

A. At this time, I don't know of any other options available.

Q. Okay. And what concerns, if any -- I mean, you mentioned some concerns, especially about folks who are in custody being on a wait list. What concerns, if any -- if you could explain them further -- do you have about putting additional people -- additional defendants who are eligible for public defender services on wait lists to receive those services?

A. Well -- I mean, as far as practical considerations are concerned, the longer that cases lie without representation -- I mean, you run the risk of witnesses favorable to our clients leaving, disappearing. You know, any number of practical things can occur, which would be detrimental to the -- to our client's ability to have a fair trial. It's never good to allow -- you know, for people to go for weeks or months without having anyone working on their case. So I -- that's a big concern to me, that we're not meeting our -- the constitutional standard to provide effective representation for people, when we have to put them on a wait list, and they -- if they're having to wait for an extended period of time.

Q. And, obviously, despite that concern, you created a wait list, which was just for a short period of time, presumably -- was that because you felt like you had no other option?

A. Well, I don't believe we had any other option, and I -- again, you know, my -- the two lawyers involved came to me and said, We're at our max right now; we can't take anything new. And I have to represent their evaluation of their situation.

Q. And did they say, We can't take anything new, because if we do, we'll violate our ethical obligations to our clients?

A. I think -- was it phrased in those? Terms? No.

Q. Okay.

A. But that -- I mean, that was our discussion, is how many -- you know, we were -- we looked at how many cases they had, we looked at what type of cases they had going, we looked at what their circumstances were in those cases, and there was a discussion as to, Are you really overloaded? And after that discussion, we made the determination that they legitimately did not feel they could meet their ethical obligations with their current case numbers.

Q. And you've described daily interaction with the attorneys in your office. It sounds like you're a hands-on supervisor; is that fair?

A. I believe so, yes.

Q. So in addition to their telling you that they felt like they couldn't ethically take on more cases, did you have an independent knowledge or opinion about their caseload and whether or not they were accurate in their representation about their ability to take on more cases?

A. I looked at their caseload, I looked at the type -- the number -- not just the number but the type of cases they had, and after looking at it and in talking with them, I had to agree that at that time, they shouldn't take on new cases.

Q. So, in other words, you didn't just take their word for it that they were busy -- I mean, you believed them because you knew them and their experience, but you also independent -- you also looked at their case numbers and came to a determination that they were correct that they could not ethically take on more cases. Is that fair?

A. Yes. I looked at their inventory of cases and -- I mean, it's -- the protocol is that we -- it's not just the number of cases, it's the type. And, also, I have to look at the age of the cases, that if the case -- if the cases are getting chronological age on them, that they've been -- you know, they're six months, eight months into the cases, I mean, that's a big consideration also.

Q. And you touched on some of this previously, but what is the problem if the case is -- has been going on for six or eight or more months?

A. Well, again -- I mean, there could be any number of -- as a practical matter, I mean, you run the risk of evidence favorable to the client evaporating, you know, witnesses being unavailable. I mean, there's just any number of negative aspects that can happen to the client. And I suppose emotionally it's not good for the clients to have these cases hanging over their heads for long periods of time. They become dissatisfied and it's -- and it's just -- I look at it as if my mother or my brother or sister was in the same position. Would I want them to be treated in such a way, that they are waiting for months to have a resolution of their matter? And I have to believe that's not how I would want my family to be treated.

Q. And as part of the concern -- of course, in addition to your general concern about your client's satisfaction -- which, of course, any lawyer would be concerned about it. Is part of the concern, if your -- about the rapport and relationship that you have with your clients, which is necessary to conduct -- to fully advocate on their behalf at pretrial and at trial?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And so it sounds like one of the -- is one of the ways that attorneys handle -- attorneys in your office, yourself and the line attorneys, handle caseloads that are quite large, is to seek continuances in order to gather more information and do the investigation necessary to work up the case?

A. Yes.

Q. And your concern is that those continuances can lead to adverse results for your clients or --

Page 94

A. I believe that -- I believe that they contribute -- can contribute to negative outcomes for the client.

Q. And it's not that your attorneys are seeking continuances because they feel like it just for fun. I mean, the reason that they're doing so is because their caseload is too high. Is that correct?

A. Well -- yes. I think it's -- you know, certainly, it is a combination of caseload, and, also, it's -- again, this is a dynamic process. When you are trying to prepare a case for trial, there is more to it -- I mean, investigation is one aspect of it, but there are -- you know, there are depositions, there is preparation -- you know, for trial, there's pretrial motions -- there's a whole series of work that needs to be done, and if you have too many cases, you are unable to effectively do all of the steps necessary to effectively represent your client.

Q. Is surveillance video something that is important in a number of your cases? And I'm talking about, like, store video -- you know, videos from store surveillance and the like.

A. I mean, it plays a part in some cases. I mean, it's -- the use of video as a police technique, yeah, it's more common now. There are body cams, there is in-car cameras, there are miniaturized cameras that the confidential informants are being given to use. So, yes, video is a very important part of many different kinds of cases.

Q. Okay. Just give me a second here. I want to ask you about lineups, Mr. Guinn, if I could. I know it depends, in part, on the geographic differences in the five counties that you work in, but, typically, are there lineups -- are there in-person lineups held, at least in some cases in your district?

A. Typically, no.

Q. Okay. And so how are identifications done?

A. Normally, photo arrays are given to individuals. I can only recall maybe one instance where -- and it really wasn't even a lineup, it was a sheriff's deputy driving someone by. I mean -- and them looking out the window. They don't do in-person lineups.

Q. Okay. I want to ask you about post trial if I could. In your district -- at what point does representation by the trial attorneys in your office end?

A. After -- well -- in a trial context, we would go through trial, through sentencing. We would file a post-trial motion for new trial, and then if those are denied, then the case would -- a notice of appeal would be filed, and that case would be sent to the appellant division.

Q. Okay. And who files the notice of appeal?

A. The trial attorney does.

Q. Okay. And then your office sends the case on to the appellant division; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. And if there were a motion for a new trial, who would file that motion?

A. The trial attorney.

Q. Okay. I want to talk about sentencing for a minute. Is that something that your office spends time preparing for, sentencing of your clients?

A. In the entire trial sequence, as a general rule, the preparation for a final sentencing is -- probably the least amount of time is spent on that. Most of our cases have a -- sentencing assessment report is ordered by the court, and the individual attorney will go over with the client what to expect in the sentencing assessment report phase, but outside of that, it's pretty limited as to the other -- any other work being done to prepare for sentencing.

Q. Would you -- in an ideal world, would you like to spend more time, you and the attorneys in your office, on preparing for sentencing?

A. I think it would be helpful, yes.

Q. And do you think that could have positive results for the sentences that your clients would receive?

A. I think that it would -- there's a great probability that that would help in final sentencings of clients.

Q. And is one of the concerns -- when either your caseload or the caseload of your attorneys gets to this unethical or borderline unethical area that we've been discussing, is one of the concerns that you then have even less time for preparing for sentencing proceedings?

A. I think that's a consideration, yes.

Q. Okay. Now, you talked about the -- your 80 cases, and just returning to that for a second. And you said -- we discussed at length about your concerns, that if that continues, you'll need to self-report and you won't be able to ethically represent your clients. And, obviously, that's -- that's despite the fact that you have almost 30 years of experience as a criminal attorney in a law firm setting, and then as -- in a public defender's office; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. In other words, you're an extraordinarily experienced attorney --

A. Well, I don't know if I would say "extraordinarily," but I am -- I am an experienced attorney, and I think that I -- because of my experience, I do have the ability to look at the cases that are -- that come into our office and that I can make decisions about, Are we being effective in how we are representing our clients?

Q. Got it. And I appreciate that. I'm not trying to -- your humility. I -- in addition to knowing -- for that experience, being that you have a good understanding of what your office is and is not able to ethically handle, is it also fair to say that you, with those almost three decades of experience, you -- individuals with only two years of experience would be able to handle ethically fewer cases than you're able to handle? Is that fair to say?

A. I think that's a fair statement, yes.

Q. In other words, if the attorneys in your office who have two to four years of experience, as four of the five line attorneys do, if they had your caseload -- not just the number, as you said, but 80, and many of which are serious cases, you would be even more concerned about their ability to handle that caseload ethically; is that fair?

A. I would be very concerned about their ability to handle a large caseload of serious felony offenses.

Q. Okay. Which is part of the reason you have taken on these additional cases for yourself?

A. That is the reason, yes.

Q. Okay. Do you know -- and it's okay if you don't -- the number of open cases your office has currently? I may have asked that already, so forgive me if I did, but ...

A. And I looked at the number before -- I believe that -- and this is kind of a guess on my part, but I believe that it's around -- it's a little over -- it's around 500, I'm pretty sure.

Q. Okay. So if it's around 500, and you have 80, that means that there are 420, approximately, cases split among the other attorneys your office; is that right?

A. Yes.

Q. Which means that each of those attorneys -- if they're divided -- on average, those five attorneys then have 84 or more than 80 cases on their dockets?

A. I would say that's pretty close.

Q. Okay. So even with your taking these additional cases to the level where you're concerned about your own compliance with the ethical rules, the attorneys in your office still have about 80 cases on their own dockets?

A. I think that's pretty close across the board. And understanding that this is a mixture of cases. It's not -- they're not all serious felonies. Primarily, they are felony grade offenses, but there are a mixture of misdemeanor and probation violation cases in those numbers.

Q. And those numbers, the 80-plus cases on each of those attorneys dockets, you know, on average, would actually be significantly higher if the Randolph County -- if there weren't this sort of vague -- what's happening in the Randolph County prosecutor's office?

A. If -- and I would -- if Randolph County was filing cases at the rate in which has typically historically been done, we would be in a very different situation. We would probably be back to the wait list and looking at ways to handle the volume.

Q. And, again, you -- although you can't predict because you don't charge the cases, you anticipate that that is going to -- that the Randolph County prosecutors are going to pick up cases at some point?

A. I think historically it would -- I would agree that the numbers are going to increase.

Q. Okay.

MR. SCHERZER: Can we go off the record, just take a quick break for a second?

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 11:13 a.m., and we are off the record.

(A recess was taken.)

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 11:21 a.m., and we're back on the record.

MR. SCHERZER: So thank you very much, Mr. Guinn. That's all of the questions I have for you.

Page 102

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MR. RAMSEY:

Q. I have a handful of questions. Again, my name is Steven Alan Ramsey, and I represent Governor Greitens and the State of Missouri. I will try not to interrupt you as you're answering various questions. Sometimes I get impatient, so I apologize in advance for that.

Before you attended law school, was there a gap between your undergraduate degree and law school, or did you go straight through?

A. There was a gap.

Q. And what did you do during that gap?

A. I worked for Brady's Columbia Glass and Paint Company.

Q. What type of work was that?

A. I ran construction jobs for Brady's. They were a commercial glass installation company.

Q. And your undergraduate degrees, what was it in?

A. Agriculture economics. I actually did law school and undergrad at the same time.

Q. Wow. I wish they had that nowadays.

Turning to your history of supervision, if you will, as a partner at the firm, I presume you supervised a number of attorneys that were in the firm?

A. Actually, I did not. I had my own practice. I did supervise -- I had four legal assistants, so I -- they were who I supervised.

Q. And if I understood your testimony correctly, in your current position as a district defender, you're more of a hands-on supervisor.

A. I think that's fair, yes.

Q. In what ways would you describe yourself as being hands-on? I know you mentioned that you have a very open-door policy in a small office. Are there any other ways that you train or mentor the attorneys that you supervise?

A. We do have monthly staff meetings. In those staff meetings, we look at cases, we talk about -- if they have upcoming trials, where they're at in their trial preparation, and we also try to review what we believe to be important cases that might have come out of the court of appeals. So far as my observations of the lawyers, I think -- it's fortunate that I do have a large number of cases, because I'm in court with most of them at least once or twice a month because we have the same dockets. So I get to have the opportunity to see how individual attorneys are handing a specific docket or how their -- kind of how their cases are progressing through a docket.

Q. And if you do not have an answer to this next question, that's fine. Do you have a sense of whether the way you supervise attorneys in your offices differ similar to any district defenders that you know?

A. I don't know.

Q. Turning to the e-mail that you sent -- I believe it was mentioned about once a week -- when did that process begin? Was that alongside the October letters that you sent out, or has that been a process that you've done for some time?

A. The e-mails to the lawyers regarding their caseloads, that started in October.

Q. And it's still going on today -- or currently presently?

A. Yes.

Q. And in your office, are you the one to decide how cases are assigned, or do you give that responsibility to another staff member?

A. Each lawyer is assigned a county. The lawyer that is assigned that county is responsible for reviewing the applications that are presented in that county, and then they give those applications to the legal assistant who opens the cases and enters their appearance. The only time that I become involved, generally, in that practice has to do if it's a sex offense or if it's a B felony offense that's a violent felony or a murder, then the attorneys will come and talk to me about the case so that I'm aware of it, and then a decision is made as to who will be assigned that case.

Q. And so if I understood you correctly, your attorneys in the various counties, they're the first line, if you will, in terms of the screening for the applications for public defender services?

A. That's correct. And I will caveat that. There will be times when applications are faxed into the office or people may come into the office, and then the legal assistants will review those. If they have questions, they'll come see me or some other attorney, but since the legal assistants have been trained as to the guides for determining representation, they are allowed to make a determination if we're going to accept a case, and if they don't know, then they will come and ask a lawyer.

Q. Aside from the application itself -- and I believe I've seen a second sheet that provides some guidelines on determining indigency. Does your office or do you personally have any type of an independent verification system, or do you, by and large, rely on the application itself?

A. Well, the process we use -- and I guess the short answer is, yes, we rely on the application. The application is reviewed. If it is incomplete, then the client is contacted. If it's -- if it is a situation where they simply just sign their name and sign the application, that will probably be denied, since they've not -- they're not filing out the application completely. If the individual completes the application, primarily, and signs it that they have done so, then I'm going to rely on what they've put in their application, and further investigation is not going to happen, probably.

Q. And do you have a sense for -- this isn't a term of art, but the rejection rate for applicants or the indigency rate -- do you have a sense of how often your office rejects applications?

A. I don't have numbers or percentages. Do we accept -- I can say we accept more applications than we reject. We do reject applications, again, primarily based on the criteria that they will either list an asset that takes -- that makes them ineligible or they will list an income that makes them ineligible. And in those situations, we will send a -- a rejection letter, denial letter to that individual advising them that they do have the right to request an indigency hearing with the circuit judge, and many times, people do, and then the judge will make a determination as to whether or not he's going to appoint in some case.

Q. Switching gears slightly, the two attorneys that you have assigned to Randolph County, those two attorneys came to you, whether it was -- it was shortly after the Hinkebein decision, or whenever the date occurred, they came to you and said, Hey, we're really slammed, could you not provide us any more cases.

A. In -- that's not exactly how it happened. I -- I sent an e-mail out to all of the lawyers to say, you know, they've all -- they had all seen the Hinkebein decision, and I said, you know, we need to -- I need to know from you if you are in a position where you don't feel that you can meet the standards of representation, and you need to tell me, and I -- and I -- as part of that e-mail, I said, you know, don't do it by this e-mail; you'll come and see me individually. Because I -- I didn't want to be in the position where people didn't feel -- or they felt it would be a negative impact on their employment if they said, Hey, I need some help. And so those lawyers individually came and talked to me.

Q. And was that before or after these letters that were sent to the various judges in your district?

A. I believe that I sent the e-mails pretty close to the same time. So I'm going to say that they were probably -- the letters to the courts were probably sent out first, and then the e-mails were sent -- or contemporaneously. I mean, it was all very close in time, but which came first, I can't tell you.

Q. And so turning to Plaintiff's Exhibits 29, 30, and 31, I'm going to be speaking about them generally. So you sent these letters around the same time you sent the e-mail to your attorneys asking -- or at least in the hindsight of the Hinkebein decision?

A. Correct.

Q. And am I understanding each of these letters -- and we can look at them one at a time, if we have to, but at the time you sent these letters, there was a belief by yourself or by the attorneys that you supervise that they were all operating outside of the rules of professional conduct.

A. There was a belief on my part that they were. Quite frankly, I expected every lawyer in my office to come into me and say, I've got a problem. That didn't happen, but didn't change the fact that I still met and talked with them about their caseloads. One of the motivating factors behind this was my belief that there was -- that I was going to have every lawyer in my office contact me, and I believe that my office is a part of the court system and that we've got an obligation to be up front with the judges, and I've always maintained that -- tried to maintain that kind of relationship.

So these letters were sent out to the judges so -- for want of a better way to describe it -- we didn't blindside them that we have a problem. I was very pleased that the judges, for the most part, were pretty positive in their response in wanting to accomplish a couple of goals. I think one is to treat the clients fairly, but, also, to make their courts as efficient as they could to try to accommodate.

Q. And you mentioned that you utilize -- I believe it was the Boone County letter as a template of sorts while you were drafting this letter. And I don't have the Boone County letter in front of me, but what would you say were the major changes? Was there a change in tone that you thought was more appropriate for your counties or ...

A. I think there -- and, honestly, I don't remember the Boone County letter either. I think there was a change -- a slight change in tone. I think that there was some aspects of the Boone County letter that just didn't apply to the courts that my office services, so we took it out.

Q. And turning to your relationship with the Randolph prosecutor, was -- am I understanding your testimony correct to suggest that after this letter was sent, there were no conversations with the Randolph prosecuting attorney in relation to this letter or relation to the caseload work concerns?

A. No. And we didn't meet -- if there was any kind of conversation, it certainly would have been in passing. It wasn't something where we were discussing that there was any kind of problem with case levels between the offices or there was no discussion about how many cases he was filing -- the prosecutor's office in Randolph County was filing.

Q. Switching gears again, you testified that your office -- you and your office, pardon me, have been fairly aggressive in filing pretrial motions, and I'm curious where that trend comes from, if you will. Is that something that you as a district defender has placed an emphasis on, the pretrial motions, or is it just something that the attorneys are doing on their own?

A. It's me.

Q. Okay. And how have you gone about, I guess, effectuating that custom or that expectation?

A. Early on when a new lawyer -- I mean, I guess it's -- some of it stems from our monthly staff meetings, some of it is generated there. When new lawyers come into our office, certainly, they receive very good training from the state public defender's office, but I have expectations about -- I want them to look at cases and to evaluate that we have a basis for filing a motion to suppress or to do the work necessary to do -- because I believe that's very important in the representation of criminal cases. We win more cases based on motion work than we do on jury trial work. And -- so that's where it's come from. I believe that it's a very important aspect of the cases and that that's work that has to be done.

Q. And, again, if you do not have a sense, it's completely fine, but do you have a sense of whether or not your office is more aggressive in pretrial motions than any other district defender's office --

A. Oh, I don't know.

Q. Okay.

A. I don't know that.

Q. Do you have any rules in place or any expectations concerning the earliest point in representation when you or your attorneys that you supervise may counsel a defendant to accept a plea deal?

A. Yes. I mean -- and I have to speak in generality. The general rule is that we don't do -- talk about pleas until we have discovery from the state and that discovery has been reviewed and reviewed with the client, and we're not going to talk about offers until we do that. Sometimes that involves the preliminary hearing. I'm not big on waving preliminary hearings because I think it's an opportunity for the client to hear the evidence, it's an opportunity to see the strength of the state's case. So the general rule is, is that we don't talk about doing any pleas prior to receiving discovery in some form. There is times when the clients don't want to do that. There are times when clients have been sitting in jail, and they want to get out, they want to take a deal. We try to avoid those situations, but, ultimately, it is the client's choice. And so I do believe that it's necessary that we at least explain what the deal is, what it means before they actually enter into a plea, so I think that is the exception more than the rule.

Q. And out of the ten or so trials that you could recollect within the last fiscal year that your office has tried, do you have a sense or a policy or custom of never sending an attorney into a trial alone? Said in another way, do you send second chairs to trial?

A. We do, except I'm the one who breaks the rule on that. I don't typically have a second chair with me because I take my -- I do take the investigator with me. Again, it depends on the case, but, yes, all of the other lawyers will always have a second chair.

Q. Is that the same for bench trials as well?

A. No. Bench trials, typically, they will not have a second chair.

Q. Could you help me understand a bit more of the substantial nature of how many cases are dismissed or ultimately disposed of? I think you testified that a substantial number are dismissed but ...

A. And I do not know statistics on that. It's not something that has been tracked. I think that's going to change in the future, but we just never tracked it before.

Q. Turning briefly to the previously marked Plaintiff's Exhibit 21. I believe it's the Missouri State Public Defender Commission fiscal year report type of -- yeah.

I'm sorry. Did you testify that you had seen this document before?

A. I don't think that was -- I don't think that's what I was asked. They showed me page -- it would be your page 38976 and asked if I had seen that. I had seen this -- a form of this before. I can't tell you that it was from 2017, but I've seen it before.

Q. Okay. And so you've seen information that appears to be like this before?

Page 115

A. Yes.

Q. But not necessarily for the time listed?

A. It could have been, I'm just not sure.

Q. And in addition, opposing counsel had you look at a number of the numbers in the Moberly column -- or row, pardon me. Is it my understanding -- did I understand your testimony correctly that you cannot independently verify what, you know, cases initiated means or the percent of capacity is, et cetera?

A. The cases initiated, I understand what that is. The rest of the criteria here, since I don't -- quite honestly, I don't deal with that, so I don't know what that really means. Of the cases initiated by fiscal year, I understand what that is -- I mean, because I look at that quite frequently.

Q. Okay. Now I'm going to shift more into form questions. Those are my free willing questions, if you will, and so I'm going to take probably 20 steps back.

Not in preparation for this deposition, but in terms of conversations you've had concerning caseload or workload concerns, have you spoken to any organizations about those concerns?

Page 116

A. You mean outside of the Missouri State Public Defender System?

Q. Yes, sir.

A. No.

Q. And I presume, after reviewing the letters, that you've spoken to a number of judges concerning workload and caseload concerns?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you talked to the press at all?

A. No.

Q. Okay. Do you have any public defenders that are on call 24/7?

A. No.

Q. Have you, while being at the Missouri State Public Defender System, ever been denied a deposition that you felt was necessary for your case due to funding?

A. No.

Q. Have you as a supervisor ever denied a deposition request from one of the attorneys that you supervise on the account of lack of funding?

A. No.

Q. Are the same answers true for expert testimony? Have you ever been denied an expert when you thought an expert was necessary for your case?

Page 117

A. No.
Q. Have you ever denied an expert testimony to one of the attorneys that you supervise that they felt were necessary to their case?
A. Based on funding?
Q. Based on funding.
A. Not based on funding.
Q. Since joining the public defender system, caseloads and workloads have been a persistent concern. Am I understanding your testimony correctly on that front?
A. Yes.
Q. And as a district defender, it's my understanding that you have discretion to implement local policies or local trainings or things to supervise and run your office. Is that also correct?
A. Yes.
Q. Have you instituted any new policy -- any new local policies for your office since becoming the district defender?
A. No. I mean, all of our policies are based off of the policies and procedures manuals that -- from the -- that the state office has put together.

Any policies in my office, so far as individuals, you know, would be something like, you know, you have to be at work at 8:30, you take -- you know, when you go to lunch, those kind of things, but those aren't written policies because -- I mean, we use the state guidelines as the basis.
Q. And turning to timekeeping. When you were at the private firm, were you under a billable hours type of a system where you would track time, you know, in either five-minute increments or by task or 10-minute increments?
A. Yes.
Q. And so you have some experience with that timekeeping -- or timekeeping to that extent?
A. Yes.
Q. Since being the district defender, it's my understanding that the public defender system has gone through periods of tracking time.
A. Yes.
Q. Aside from yourself, was there anyone else who was tracking or managing how the attorneys were tracking time while you were in the timekeeping periods?
A. I'm not sure how that information was used. When we were tracking time, we -- everyone in the office -- I mean, lawyer-wise did track their time. How that information was used after our -- after we tracked the time, I do not know how -- what -- how it was used.

Q. Currently, are you tracking time in five-minute increments?
A. No.
Q. And so the extent of your timekeeping now, is it simply just the -- how many hours an attorney has worked per day, essentially?
A. Yes.
Q. Do you have a sense for when the last period of the five-minute tracking of time occurred? And if you don't, that's more than fine.
A. I can't tell you when we stopped doing that. My recollection is it was, like, December of 2016, but I could be way off. I know we're not doing it now.
Q. Got it. And this is a foundational question I should have asked a long time ago. What is your understanding of how your district and how your office measures a case? And so when I say "a case," what does that entail to you?
A. It's based primarily on the court cases. Each individual -- in other words, an individual, if they have three cases -- what I would call three cases, that's because they have three different case numbers assigned to the court, there are three separate cases. So that's when we open a case for -- if an individual has multiple charges filed, then they have multiple cases in my office.

Q. Are you aware of the Chapter 600.063 motion for caseload conference?
A. I'm aware of it. We have not utilized that.
Q. And is there a particular reason why you haven't utilized that, or is the reason because you sent the letters and the issue was resolved shortly thereafter?
A. Well, we haven't -- I don't -- in my opinion, I don't believe we have got to that point where we would do that. I can't predict what the future will bring, but it -- but I did not do that initially because I wanted -- we were trying to handle it, I suppose, informally with the courts.
Q. How many times have you as a district defender been judicially determined to have provided ineffective assistance of counsel?
A. I don't think I have yet.
Q. And do you have a sense for any of the attorneys that you've supervised while being a district defender have been judicially determined to have provided ineffective assistance of counsel?

A. I know that Robert Flemming has. I don't believe any -- and none of the other lawyers in my office have had that determination made yet.

Q. And Mr. Flemming was the person who has the most experience aside from yourself?

A. Yes.

Q. You're also tasked with managing the budget overall of your district; is that correct?

A. That's not correct.

Q. That's not correct. Have you ever run out of money that's been -- I don't know if appropriate is using the appropriate word, word but it's been given to your district?

A. I don't know. I have -- I know we track the office budget, and to the best of my recollection, we've never ran over, but I really -- certain items like phones and those type of things -- I mean, I don't have any control over that -- those budget amounts. So I suppose it could be a possibility that those went over budget.

Q. And you've never had to request a supplemental budget to get through the fiscal year?

Page 122

A. No. No.

MR. RAMSEY: No further questions.

CROSS-EXAMINATION

BY MS. SHIPMA:

Q. I just have a couple of ...

Ed, so what does your local office budget cover? What items are included in that?

A. Well, telephones, rent, you know, postage. There is a local item for Internet service, there is -- I mean, that budget is compiled by, I believe, Kathy Lear, and that's based on, I think, historical numbers. And most of it is items that I have no -- the local office doesn't have any control over because they're -- I don't want to use the word "fixed expenses," but they -- rent is a number that -- it is what it is, and it doesn't change with the passage of time.

Q. Okay. And with respect to rent, does the county not provide your office space?

A. They do. And I just put -- I'm assuming that the county -- yes. The county pays for it, but I -- you know, I'm assuming that's just part of the overall budget.

Q. Okay. And is there some system whereby funds are transferred to your office from Kathy Lear or from the state office?

A. There's not --

Q. Let me ask you -- do you get any cash?

A. No. There's -- no money comes into our office. No funds -- any funds that are expended by our office I -- such as depositions, expert expenses, those type of expenses are reviewed by the attorney that requested them, then reviewed by me and approved, and then those bills are sent to the -- to the -- as I call it, the home office, and they're reviewed by management and then paid out of there. We have -- the local office has no funds with which they pay for anything.

Q. So to ask if you ever run out of funds, you may overspend in an item that's allocated to you, but you don't have any funds, really, to run out of; is that correct?

A. That's a better description than how I described it, yes. We have no funds to run out of.

MS. SHIPMA: Okay. Thanks.

REDIRECT EXAMINATION

BY MR. SCHERZER:

Q. I just have a couple of questions, Mr. Guinn.

In terms of the indigency determinations, is it fair to say that time spent -- time that you or your -- the attorneys in your office spend on investigating whether someone has stated their income accurately, as an example, is time that you then couldn't spend on existing client's cases?

A. Yeah. I think that's fair to say. I mean, we do not do extra investigation if a client completely fills out the application because that individual is saying that I have accurately stated and completed this -- the information in the application, so I rely on that.

Q. And because -- just by the nature of time being a finite measure in this world, we -- any time you spend on investigating that is time you could not -- you would not spend on --

A. That's true.

Q. -- case work; is that right?

All right. And is the same true for something like depositions? Say, that time spent -- that time spent taking a deposition in one case is, of course, time that you -- if you have 79 other cases, is time that you then cannot devote to those cases, at least on that particular day when you're doing a deposition. Is that fair?

A. That's true, yes.

Q. So is that one of the calculations that you need to make -- you and the attorneys in your office need to make when you're thinking about whether to do a day-long deposition, for example, is whether or not that's -- in addition to whether it's good for that client and that case, whether or not you're able to do so without harming the other clients on your caseload or the caseload of your line attorneys?

A. I think it's a factor. And, again, that's why we're looking at these case numbers and how many cases, because we are attempting to avoid the situation where we neglect one client because we have too much work to do on another client.

Q. And you said that you -- when you said that -- I guess that first e-mail to your line attorneys, that you expected that they would come to you and say, We have a problem -- that each of them would come to them, rather than, you know, two out of the five or -- as it turned out, was that expectation that each of them would say they had a problem based on your understanding of their caseload prior to your sending that e-mail?

A. Well, certainly, I'm always concerned about the number of cases they had. I thought that

I would hear from the other lawyers because of being overwhelmed by the court decision or the -- in the Hinkebein case. I know that they -- the lawyers in my office all read the opinion and were concerned that were they measuring up correctly.

Q. Okay. And that was something that was discussed in the office?

A. Yes. Yes.

Q. Was that directly after the Hinkebein decision?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. And how do you know that each of them read that -- the decision there?

A. Because I printed it off, and they -- each one of them -- and they had to read it and initial.

Q. Got it. Okay. So you instructed them to do so?

A. Yeah. Because I suppose I was as -- I didn't know anything about the Hinkebein case before that opinion came out, and when I got it and read it, I was quite frankly very concerned about the entire situation, and so that's why -- and I was concerned about the opinion, and I wanted to make sure that all of the lawyers were aware of it.

Q. You were concerned about it because of your own concerns about whether the line attorneys in your office were able to comply were their ethical obligations?

A. Yes.

Q. And how did you hear about the opinion, if you recall?

A. I believe the way I heard about it was by e-mail, either from Greg Mermelstein or Michael Barrett. I don't remember which.

Q. Okay. And when you -- it sounds like when you got that, what you're saying, sort of, shortly after reading that, your immediate concern was, I'm concerned that the attorneys in my office are not complying with their ethical obligations?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay.

MR. SCHERZER: That's all of the questions I have.

VIDEOGRAPHER: The time is 12:02 p.m., and we're off the record.
